A country gentleman, newly arrived in town, is greatly struck with the wonders of Cleopatra's Needle. An obliging gentleman, strolling along the Embankment, notices the countryman's astonishment, and kindly points out the objects of interest in the locality. The two become very friendly and walk off together to a quiet part of the Embankment. There they sit down beside a curate who happens to be reading on the seat. The polite gentleman has some wonderful knowledge of gold mines, but before initiating the countryman into the good things he knows, he suggests that they should mutually shew their confidence in one another. He hands the countryman his pocket-book, in which are a number of bank-notes, and remains on the seat while his victim and the curate, who has been previously introduced, walk away together. They speedily come back, restore the pocket-book, and the countryman is asked to show his confidence by giving the polite stranger his pocket-book in turn. The stranger and the curate then walk off together, but they do not come back. The countryman, growing alarmed, calls a policeman and sets off in pursuit. In the meantime, a tramp, who has been watching the proceedings, comes quietly up and makes away with the countryman's bag, which has been left behind in the excitement.

THE NIGGER BOY'S REVENGE

A little Nigger boy reclines indolently in a hammock. But that hammock is wanted for a coloured lady, who comes along in the company of a white gentleman, and the boy is summarily ejected. The black lady is duly installed in his place, and the gentleman who is with her, and is much smitten with her sable charms, sits down beside her and talks of many things, what time a native minstrel discourses more or less sweet music with a banjo. But the little Nigger boy has his feelings also, and they have been outraged by his treatment. Seizing a huge slice of water-melon to comfort himself withal, he quietly climbs the tree from which the hammock is suspended, and at the psychological moment severs the cord with his clasp knife. Tableau!!!

PANTOMIME ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1904-5.

We are prepared to abide by Last Year's Exceptionally Low Offer for Cleaning Pantomime Costumes in Quantities, being determined not to be beaten either in Price or Quality of Work.

XMAS PANTOMIMES.

WE ARE NOW GETTING BUSY CLEANING DRESSES FOR THE ABOVE, but have plenty of room, and, like Oliver Twist, WE ASK FOR MORE.

We are still Cleaning and Renovating Tableaux Curtains and Draperies from London and Country Theatres and Music Halls.

We continue to hold the field as Cleaners and Dyers to the Theatrical and Music Hall Professions. This fact is clearly proved by the unsolicited testimonials we are continually receiving.

Professional Work takes Precedence over all other orders.

By Special Arrangement,

TOURING MANAGERS

can have their Wardrobes Cleaned between Shows, when in or near London.

Phone wire, or write to T. HARRIS.

T. HARRIS, Manager.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS. Look out your Pantomime Dresses at once.

UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL.

Pavilion Theatre of Varieties, Leicester.

Dear Sir,—

Many thanks for things received yesterday at Brixton. We are very pleased with the way in which the work has been done.

We are, Faithfully yours, (Signed) THE GROSVENORS.

Arbeiter	Herr Ludicke

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, OCT. 13.—Play is scarcely the right name, the author thinks, for this work, so he calls it "four scenes from country life in Russia." It is, like most pieces from the Russian, tinged with more than a touch of melancholy, and many of the scenes are too long and wordy. Otherwise there is a good deal of merit in the work, and it met with a reception that was cordial, to say the least of it. A few words will suffice for the plot. A celebrated professor, Gerebrjakoff by name, has married a second wife, Helena, young and fair, while he himself is old, egoistical, and frail. The Professor's daughter Sonja—his first wife's child—lives in a lonely country house which was her mother's property; the farm is managed by herself and her uncle Wojnitzki—uncle Wanja, as he is called. The Professor and his wife come on a visit, and set everyone by the ears. For the first time in his forty odd years of life Wanja is moved by woman's beauty; he falls in love with Helena, who prefers, however, the more brutal passion of Astrow, an interesting doctor, ten years Wanja's junior. Helena is a cold-hearted coquette, her husband an old humbug—a charlatan who has thrown dust in everyone's eyes, except those of Wanja, who sees through him. Sonja loves Astrow too, but she, poor child, loves in vain; he has no thought for her. The climax comes when the egoistical professor wishes to sell Sonja's little property for his own selfish ends. Wanja, driven to the verge of frenzy with hopeless love for Helena and furious at the professor's egoism, shoots his pistol at the elder man. Fortunately for him, there is no serious damage done; he is merely considered mad by the family, and the professor and his wife take their leave ultimately. Wanja, whose life-long energy has raised the farm to its present flourishing condition, remains behind with Sonja, both to take up their work once more in silent resignation. The piece was very well interpreted, Herr Pittschau, in the title-rôle, and Herr Connard as the professor being particularly good. The mounting, too, was most commendable.

As poor a production as it has ever been my lot to witness was Schmuggler-Susi, a so-called operetta, by Victor Albert, book by Benno Jacobson and L. Windhopp, which saw the light for the first time on Saturday at the Central. Which was worst, the music, the libretto, or the interpretation, it would be difficult to say. There is neither plot, nor wit, nor melody in the piece.

THE Royal Schauspiel-Haus company—playing during the alterations at the New Royal Opera—produced a new comedy by Hugo Lubliner last week. Ein Kritischer Tag—such is the title—met with a cordial reception, thanks, principally, to the humorous acting of Herr Vollmer and Frau Schramm in two cleverly-drawn characters. The piece itself is of the mediocre class for which the author has, of late years, become known; its only salvation lies in good acting. There are four acts, but the entire action passes in a single day, the critical day of the title. Within these four-and-twenty hours a young married couple change from spendthrifts of the most frivolous kind to sober, economical, and industrious people, the transformation being brought about by the mediation of a delightful old bachelor, nicknamed "the man of yesterday." The moral of the piece appears to be: Money does not make happiness, but you can't be happy without it. The author was "called" by his numerous admirers, although a few of the audience gave utterance to their dissatisfaction in robust and unflattering manner.

HERR HAUPTMANN has, I am glad to state, almost entirely recovered from his long illness, and is able to be about again. His play Florian Geyer, which has been reconstructed and shortened, is to be produced at the Lessing in a few days. The most important rôle after the name part—that of a blind monk—will be played by Herr Reicher, Herr Rittner taking, as has already been notified, the part of Florian.

A NEW theatre is about to be erected at the West-end by two well-known managers. It is to be a house of first-rate style, as befits its position in Kurfürsten Damm. This makes the fourth new theatre in a year.

"TRAUMULUS" is still in the bill at the Lessing, being given four times this week to a fairly large audience. I looked in again on Monday, but failed to observe any enthusiasm in the audience, although the piece was followed with attention. The over-noisy scene of the elder schoolboys' meeting—held in the cellar of a bakery to discuss liberty and to drink beer—made less impression than at the première, and the same may be said of the tragic conclusion, with the suicide of the erring boy and the mental and physical collapse of the over-trusting schoolmaster. I do not fancy—notwithstanding the praise of some of our leading critics—that the play will hold the boards for long, while an attempt at comparison with Alt Heidelberg is absurd on the face of it.

MADAME SARAH BERNHARDT begins a brief season at the Berliner Theatre next Monday. The first performance is La Sorcière, new to Berlin; La Dame aux Camelias, Fédora, Phèdre, La Tosca, and L'Aiglon form the rest of the programme. Booking—at increased prices, needless to say—has commenced and is very brisk.

THE chief event of the past week was the début of Signor Enrico Caruso at the Theatre des Westens. On his way to London the famous tenor had been captured—wisely enough—by Herr Prasch, and pledged to four performances for the sum of 5,000 marks nightly. Admission prices ranged from three to twenty-four marks—prices almost unheard of here—and yet there was not a vacant place in the large theatre at any of the performances. Rigoletto was the first work given, and many consider the part of the Duke to be Caruso's best rôle. That he sang it magnificently is now a matter of history. The star was excellently supported by the members of the Des Westens company, especially by Herr Nawiaski in the name-part, and Fräulein Stoeller as Gilda. As Alfred in Traviata—which was given on Friday—Signor Caruso had too little opportunity of displaying his exceptional gifts, but another triumph was scored a day or two later by the performance of Lucia di Lammermoor.

IBSEN'S five-act historical drama Die Kronprätendenten has been produced at the Neues with unquestionable success. It is one of the author's earliest works; he was but thirty-five at the time he wrote it, and it has taken long to prove to the world that it is one of Ibsen's most masterly productions. The famous Meiningen Court company acted it for the first time in this country in 1876, and it has been done here but seldom since. The length of the drama is a drawback. Four and a-half hours at a stretch try the patience of the average audience. The representation at the Neues was admirable, and Herr Reinhart, the actor-manager, excelled himself. He gave the rôle of Bishop Nicolas—considered by many critics to be equal to any of Shakespeare's characters—in magnificent style; it was one of the best impersonations ever seen here.

"GASTON'S FRAUEN" (La Dame du Commissaire), farce by MM. De Cottens and Weber, has made a hit at the Trianon, and is running well, supported by a very fair cast.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

ABERDARE.

NEW THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Z. Andrews.—This week the boards here are occupied by Mr T. Arthur Jones's company in Life's Sweetest Sins. Mr T. Arthur Jones is a manly Harold Marston; the unscrupulous Dr. Colbrooke is played with vigour by Mr A. Bartlett Garth; Messrs Geo. Austin and G. Verno Proctor are good as his confederates; the comedy element is well supplied by Mr Arthur E. Andrews and Miss Sara Dudley as Bess Grayson; Miss Amy Rudd charms the house by the sympathy and grace of her Fay Colbrooke; and Miss Madge Morley infuses much pathos into the part of the young heiress, Doreen Rivers.

ABERDEEN.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; General Manager, Mr Eade Montefiore; Acting-Manager, Mr H. C. Cavanah.—Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner is well patronised this week. Mr Thomas Kingston, an actor of talent, appears as Captain Peyton, and is successful; Miss Elly Malyon plays the part of Miss Elizabeth with great charm; and Miss Alys is effective as Mistress Sarah. The other parts are all capably filled.

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Ernest Sheldon.—The Five Foys appear in an extremely amusing farce, The Excursion Depôt; and Mr Walter Stockwell's voice is heard to as great advantage as ever; the Sivronis score a distinct success in their burlesque, Opera Gone Mad; the Ernestine Trio are also popular; and Mr Tom Foy's appreciation of a Yorkshire lad in London is keenly relished. M. Sardou provides a sensation with his cabinet illusion; and among the enjoyable turns are those of Cable and Walker, in a clever comedy act; Mr Bertram Nicol, a tenor of exceptional ability; and Misses Mona M'Donald and Marie Rivers, both sprightly comediennes.

ABERTILLERY.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessees, Messrs Arthur Carlton and Sam Duckworth; General and Resident-Manager, Mr Geo. W. Ventom.—This week we have Mr Herbert Fuller's company in the racing drama Fiends of London. Mr Harold H. Hastings scores a great success as Sir Horace Bream. Mr D. C. King as Captain Crawley makes a most effective villain, being ably supported by Mr H. Evan Gibbon as Peter Shark. Mr Herbert Fuller as Bob Archer gives an effective and manly rendering of the part, and is well backed up by Miss Emily Lewis as Flossie Sprint, her rendering of several songs being much appreciated. Mr Jas. J. Newell and Mr James M'Allister as Matt Christie and Sandy Macduff respectively give capable renderings. Miss Alice Lane plays the old hag realistically; Miss Nelson Ramsay is powerful as Sophie Shade; Miss Violet Bray as Trixie Gilliard (alias the Countess) is especially good; and in the double rôle of Little Tim and Sally Frost Little Gladys is very pathetic. Miss Agnes Collier as Laura Christie, a soldier's daughter, has a pleasing personality.

ACCRINGTON.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr J. E. Barnes.—The Osmond Tearle Shakespearian company is being well received here by packed houses. In a fine representation of Othello Mr Alexander Marsh was particularly successful in his impersonation of the title-rôle, the passion and pathos being cleverly depicted. Mr John Burton played Iago, and his characterisation was at all times remarkable for its truth and accuracy. Mr Cyril Grier was good as Roderigo; Mr W. Lowe submitted a good performance of Brabantio; Mr George Tearle must be complimented upon his performance of Cassio; Miss Carrie Baillie made a tender and innocent Desdemona; and Miss Fannie Chamberlain was responsible for a powerful impersonation of Emilia. The Merchant of Venice, As You Like It, Hamlet, Romeo and Juliet, Julius Cæsar, and David Garrick are also in the répertoire.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr J. Mill.—A good bill here is contributed to by Comical Walker with his local acrobats; Harry Gold, vocalist; Stylo, with his marvellous hoop performance; Miss Beatrice Bonnie, comedienne; George Reeve, eccentric character comedian; Slippere, the wonderful blind pianist; and Reklaw, the clever globe performer. A most sensational performance with lions is given by Miss Ella.

ALDERSHOT.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr George E. Williams).—Under Two Flags is paying a return visit. Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr Mark Blow's company works hard, Mr Blow himself giving a fine interpretation of Bertie Cecil. Miss Laura Walker's Cigarette is a talented portrayal, realism being everywhere associated with her efforts. Mr Reginald Harley-West gives a capital enactment of Barklie, and Mr Charles Brooke does well as Lord Royallieu. As Lord Rockingham Mr Geo. Normanburt is good. Clever comedy work is interpolated by Mr Will Hook, and Mr Sydney Riche (Black Hawk) and Mr Reg. Hunt (Chanrellon) are acceptable. Mr Albert Rogers contributes an excellent impersonation of the Hebrew, Baroni. Miss Celia Gordon as the Countess shows marked ability, and Miss Bertha Kingston's Lady Beatrice is well rendered.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Fairbairn. The musical play, The School Girl, is somewhat belated in its appearance here, but it is none the less welcome on that account. The production is in the hands of Mr Geo. Dance's company, all of whom are well qualified to play creditably the characters entrusted to their care. Chief among them is Miss Ethel Beech, a clever exponent of Lilian Leigh, the "school girl." She is sweet and winning, and full of vivacity and charm, and sings and dances herself into favour. Miss Mildred King as the Mother Superior displays excellent vocal gifts. Not less appreciated by the audience are the skill in delineation of character and charm of manner of Miss Molly Walbran as Mamie, Miss Gracie Sinclaire as Cicely, Miss Nell Hope as the Model, and Miss Gracy Wixon as Mrs Marchment. Mr Leslie Holland, with a fund of dry humour, is responsible for much of the merriment as the elderly lover Sir Ormesby St. Leger; Mr Lister Morrell as Edgar Verney sings himself into favour; Mr Alfred Leslie is remarkably funny as Tubby Bedford; and Mr Cameron Carr as the smart Stockbroker makes his character prominent by the force of his acting. Mr Chas. Adeson as the humorous, explosive General also contributes very materially to the success.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Chas. Revill; Director of Entertainments, Mr F. Willmot.—Visitors to this popular variety hall have no reason to complain of the programme provided from week to week. There are some attractive items this week, not the least of which are the clever feats of the Herculean athletes, the Athlones, in their classical and unique specialitv act. Arthur Stratton proves himself a worthy owner of a big name as a character vocalist; Jack Pleasants is truly a quaint comedian; Fred Carr and Ada Rose are a clever vocal comedy couple; and Selby and Myers, too, furnish plenty of fun as patterers and expert dancers. The gymnastic act and refined ball-punching indulged in by the De Almar Trio and the wonderful shooting act of the Lynches, rifle shots, call forth unbounded applause and laughter. The Hippo Bioscope is still a feature of these entertainments.

AYR.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry W. Day.—Mr J. W. Turner and his English opera company were heartily welcomed on Monday. They opened with The Bohemian Girl. Mr Chas. Le Sueur was the Thaddeus, and made a most favourable impression. Mr John Ridding as Count Arnheim gave a sympathetic interpretation of the character. The Devilshoof of Mr Sidney Clifford was admirable, whilst Mr J. Flint as Florestein acquitted himself well. As the Gipsy Queen Miss Beatrice Hill imbued the part with true dramatic force, and charmed with her very fine singing. Miss Maud Esdale was successful as Buda, and Miss Ethel Locker as Arline acted sweetly, and her sweet, flexible voice drew the unstinted applause of the audience. On Tuesday night the opera was The Lily of Killarney, and Mr J. W. Turner appeared as Miles-na-Coppaleen and Miss Constance Bellamy as Eily. The other operas in the répertoire are Maritana, Faust, The Puritan's Daughter, and The Daughter of the Regiment.

BACUP.

NEW COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Denman-Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr Richard Nightingale.—Mr Frank Lindo's company is here this week with Home, Sweet Home. Mr George F. Black as Stephen Armitage is conspicuously heroic; the sinister traits of Lucas Lyle are vividly depicted by Mr Arthur Rodney; Mr Frank Lindo gives an earnest and virile performance of David Armitage; Capt. Gerald Gambier is responsible for a sound embodiment of the Duke of Ancaster; and as the Hon. Percy Ashfield, his son, Mr W. J. Anson is amusing. Mr H. Grossmith's impersonation of the Marquis of Silvermere is very droll. The part of Dick Redmayne is played with considerable spirit by Mr George Overs. Miss Marion Wakeford makes a charming and acceptable Joan, and Miss Ivy Ellaline Thorne is satisfactory as Sybil Fay. Special mention should be made of Miss Ivy Rochefort, who, as Dora, adds considerably to the success of the production.

BARNSLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr A. C. Mitchell.—Mr Frederick Melville's company in Between Two Women visited here last Monday for the week. Henry, Earl of Millard, is a capital study by Mr Sidney Price; Harry is well presented by Mr Harry Marlow; Mr Albert Ward's delineation of the Rev. Philip Carton is both powerful and clever; James Durwood is well played by Mr Fred Morgan; Mr Tubby Edlin and Miss Sybil Hammersley as Jack Pringle and Polly Popp supply the humour with excellent judgment, Miss Morita Valdar as Carmen De Savereux is very successful; Violet Thornton is made the most of by Miss Marie Robson; and Miss Alice Bowes pathetically plays the blind boy.

PUBLIC HALL.—Manager, Mr Jasper Redfern.—The Ross Combination is responsible for scientific boxing and a humorous sketch; the Brothers Testo are a couple of clever musical comedians; Warde and Wylie supply a good turn; Black Apollo, a man of many instruments, plays them well; Capita is an amusing electric living marionette; and Katie Rora, serio-comedienne; Fred Hudson, with the American song sheet; Charlton Howarth; Bob Downe, patter comedian; and the animated pictures conclude the bill.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr George Stone.—Miss Mary Austen and Mr E. Vivian Edmond's company is here in The Golden Ladder. Miss Mary Austen plays the important part of Lilian Grant with much attractive force and artistic skill; Mr Harry Cullenford is a finely characteristic Rev. Frank Thornhill; and Mr John Owen a capable Samuel Peckaby. Mr E. Vivian Edmonds plays Michael Severn with great subtlety and power, and Mr Graham Winsford makes a capital M. Peranza.

TIVOLI.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi.—Miss Harriett Vernon, who tops the bill here this week, had an excellent reception on Monday. She was in exceptionally good voice. The Vernon Troupe of xylophone experts, dancers, and singers give a delightful turn; Wallau gives a clever juggling act; Achilles, a fine specimen of an athlete, gives a most refined show; Will Letters catches on with his songs and choruses; Charles Somers's quaint humour is a huge success; and Sadie Simpson is a charming comedienne and coon artist.

BATH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr Lewis A. Long.—Sweet and Twenty is paying a welcome return visit, being again introduced by Messrs Murray King and Clark's admirable company. Miss Rosalie Jacobi as Joan Trevelyan wins many hearts by her skilful and clever handling of the part. Mr Lionel Glenister is excellent as Douglas, and in the unsympathetic character of Eustace Mr Robert Milsted is equally successful. Mr George Miller carefully enacts the kind-hearted clergyman the Rev. James Floyd. Mr Murray King himself appears as Prynne, whom he impersonates with much dry humour. You and I is the curtain-raiser.

PALACE THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Trussell.—Pride of position this week is held by Millie Lindon, the talented comedienne, whose return is hailed with delight by her many local admirers. Blake and Granby, comedy sketch artists, create plenty of laughter. Old friends under a new name are Zeta Grey and company, whose singing and comedy sketch The Lancashire Lass gain them much applause. Ruby Winstone, coon comedienne and dancer, is a favourite. Return engagements are also being paid by the Lupino Bros., eccentric comedians; Downes and Langford, comedians and dancers; and Sybil Montague, ballad vocalist. George Hyam, comedian, completes the bill.

BEDFORD.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter R. Wilson.—For the first three nights of this week Mr Ben Greet's company, under the direction of Mr J. Bannister Howard, presented the comic opera La Poupée. Mr Algernon Lee met with an excellent reception as Lancelot; Mr Stanley White gave a capable portrayal of Baron Chanterelle; Mr J. Brüll was excellent as Father Maxime; and the general humour of the play was ably presented by Mr H. Bishop as Loremois. Mr Bert Danson left nothing to be desired as Hilarius, and the part of Madame Hilarius fell to the capable hands of Miss Margaret Ainsworth. Miss Eva Ellis made a good Henri; Miss Cissy Wade cleverly depicted the actions of a mechanical doll as Alesia. On Thursday the boards were occupied by Mr H. Swinerd's company in the musical comedy, Dare-Devil Dorothy.

BLACKPOOL.

HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General Manager, Mr J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr C. Lubbock's company is here this week with A Cherry Girl. The chief honours are due to Miss Ethel Newman, whose portrayal of the Queen is exceedingly pleasurable to behold. Mr Frank Lincoln does well as Moonshine, his topical songs being loudly encored. Good support is rendered by Misses Alice Leon, Connie Loxton, Rosa Ravensberg, May Elliott, Maude Vaughan, and Helen Hart, who play the pierrots. Messrs A. Pendergrast, Percy Oakley, Sidney M'Alpine, and Robert H. Howard constitute the Steinway Quartet, and sing several good part songs.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr T. Sergenson.—The Flood Tide, which is the attraction here, is also supplied by Mr C. Lubbock's company. Mr William Seguin contributes a manly impersonation of Capt. Jack Champion and Mr Maitland Marler sustains with complete satisfaction the part of George Wellington Olip. Mr Alex Flood is seen to advantage as Dick Champion, Mr Horace Pollock is well placed as Lord Sutton, and Mr Graham Wentworth makes an excellent Colonel Corry. Madame De Naucaze as Baroness Pitchioli, Miss Marie Wright as Polly Champion, and Miss Seymour Hodges as Mabel Corry are also good.

BELFAST.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr James M'Cann.—The annual visit of the Royal Carl Rosa opera company is an event that is always looked forward to by local playgoers with infinite pleasure, and it is therefore little wonder that a crowded audience assembled here on Monday. The opera presented on the opening night was Wagner's Tannhauser, in which Herr Julius Walther appeared in the title-rôle. Herr Walther, who was in fine voice, achieved a great success with his delightful singing, and his acting was all that could possibly be desired. The rôle of Elizabeth was sustained by Madame Una Bruckshaw, whose brilliant vocalisation won quite a triumph. Madame Augusta Renard was charming as Venus, and Mr Lewis James, who is the fortunate possessor of a well-trained voice, sang "The Star of Eve" admirably. Mr Arthur Winckworth was in every sense satisfactory as the Landgrave, and other rôles were ably sustained by Miss Ethel Pender-Cudlip (who displayed exceptional ability as the Shepherd Boy), and Messrs Frank Arthur, Albert Felton, and Edward Davies. The augmented orchestra and splendid chorus were under the able conductorship of Mr Eugene Goossens. On Tuesday night Mozart's Don Giovanni was presented with much éclat, the large audience enjoying the unusual advantage of hearing three prima donnas in one opera. On Wednesday Balfe's Bohemian Girl was produced, and during the week Carmen, Lohengrin, Faust, and Maritana have also been performed.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr John P. Beardmore.—The chief attraction here is provided by the Ergotti and King Luis Troupe, whose startling acrobatic feats have created quite a sensation. A capital dog show is contributed by Cabaret, whose animals perform some extraordinary feats, which have been applauded to the echo. The evergreen J. W. Rowley is in fine form with his droll songs, rendered in his own effective style, and much praise is due to the British Quartet (Messrs Donald Keir, J. Russon, Frank Bolger, and Dave Owen). The Fred Cullane Trio (including Miss Florrie Conroy, the lady boxer), appear to immense advantage in their remarkable entertainment entitled The Dude's Dilemma. The Watson Family gain enthusiastic applause for their well-rendered songs, and their manipulation of several musical instruments is distinctly good. Miss Marie Weston is a clever comedienne, and her dancing leaves nothing to be desired. Also appearing are Lew Wells, in his clever comedy creation; Pinaro and Karol, the celebrated comedy duo, in their speciality The Lady and the Tramp; and Mr Fred Spencer, expressionist, who gained deserved recalls on Monday for his realistic imitations.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Brock.—The chief attraction here is provided by the Haytors (Edie, Frank, and Arthur), who produce with much success their laughable sketch, A Hot Time. A deserved welcome has been extended to the bright and clever comediennes, the Three Sisters Sprightley, whose character songs and dancing are responsible for some of the loudest applause. Mr Harry Coates, the original singing navvy, has a fine voice, which has been heard with infinite pleasure; and Mr Phil Herman is a distinctly clever comedian with good songs. Mr Leo Tell's imitations of animals are remarkably realistic, and the Brothers Redmond are exceedingly smart acrobatic comedians. Mr Ben Albert is a comedian of an original type, and Little Ganty, a droll character comedian, repeats last week's success. The Two Graces are charming duettists and fine dancers, and the bill is completed by Miss Marion Scott, comedienne.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Henry T. Downs.—The chief attraction here is Park's Eton Boys, who have been accorded a most enthusiastic reception. Messrs Clifton and Gibson are exceedingly droll eccentric comedians, and a positive sensation has been caused by the gymnastic feats performed by Mr Charles Serra. Mr Billy Williams, Australian comedian, has made a tremendous hit, singing seven songs on Monday, and a good reception has been accorded Mr Jack Charman, the popular vocalist. The coon songs by the charming comedienne, Miss Maud Vera, meet with much favour, and a decided feature of the programme is the remarkably realistic views exhibited by Welsker Brothers' Bioscope. Bretma is a wonderful illusionist, his feats being quite amazing, and Miss Kate Gourlay, coon artiste, is also on the bill.

BILSTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Harry Battersby; Manageress, Miss Grace Battersby.—A change from melodrama is effected here this week by the visit of Mr William Greet's company in The Lady Slavey. Miss Addie Lennard does well as Phyllis, Miss Millicent Marsden is piquante as Flo Honeydew. Mr Harry Walsh as Major O'Neill causes genuine laughter, Mr Allan Morris ably portrays Vincent A. Evelyn, and as Roberts, the Sheriff's officer, Mr Frank Sherlock proves capital. Another efficient character is the Lord Lavender of Mr Walter T. Hybert. Miss Jean Van Dalle as Maude and Miss Ethel Ashton as Beatrice do good work in special dances.

BIRKENHEAD.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—Messrs George Edwardes and Charles Frohman's company, in Are You a Mason? meets with appreciation and success. Mr Anthony Fawcett as George Fisher is the central figure, and his clever rendering meets with hearty recognition. Amos Bloodgood is well played by Mr Harry Ashford, and Frank Berry is capitally enacted by Mr Stephen Wentworth. The prim and precise Mrs Caroline Bloodgood is admirably represented by Miss Harriett Trench; Miss Violet Graham is an efficient Mrs Perry; and Miss Lucy Edwin a suitable Tottie. The comedietta, Hushed Up, has preceded the comedy proper.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—Lingford and Carson's combination are appearing in the interesting play Defending His Honour, with excellent results. Mr John Davidson earns great popularity with an incisive rendering of Douglas Bryce. Mr Clifton Boyne is a good Stephen Gral, Richard Verison is carefully played by Mr Willie Black, and Mr John Hignett earns distinction as Jack Danish. Ethel Bryce is played with much acceptance by Miss F. Melrose Millett, and a capital company also includes Miss Bella Estard and Miss Dienly Dainton. The scenic effects are good.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr D. J. Clarke.—The Original Caledonian Boys' Band constitute a prominent item in an attractive programme. Mr George Gilbey, the popular comedian, is continuing a highly successful visit, and Mr Frank Coyne, the clever comic vocalist, is fulfilling a welcome return engagement. Mr Fred Karno's comedians in Hilarity are again received with undiminished cordiality, and other excellent turns are contributed by Ike Scott and Son, comedians of resource; Miss Carrie Joy, a talented comedienne; Mr Charles F. Best, a smart contortionist; and Mr J. P. Dane, comedian. An interesting display of the Bioscope adds variety to the entertainment. Mr Ernest Denney is musical-director.

BRIGHOUSE.

ALBERT THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr T. Morton Powell; Business-Manager, Mr M. Manley.—A Trip to Rum-Fum, under the direction of Miss Cissie Moxon, is here this week. This musical comedy is clearly a mammoth medley of mirth and music, and has truly been manufactured to make mankind merrier. Miss Moxon is successful in the part of a music hall artiste. The cast also includes very capable artistes in Messrs Willie Garvey, Jim Woods, Charles Russell, whilst the singing of Miss Lily Mayfield is greatly admired.

BIRMINGHAM.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Rodgers, Limited; Manager, Mr J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr Henry Johnston.—Mr John Hare, in introducing Little Mary for the first time to Birmingham audiences, was received with all the fervour that pertains to old and tried favourites. As the Earl of Carlton Mr Hare shines with his natural polish and distinction, and Miss Hilda Trevelyan plays the rôle of Moira with imperturbable sweetness and gravity. Mr Rudge Harding acts in a well-defined manner as the pompous Pike, and Mr Clifford Brooke is successful as his obsequious satellite; while the Misses Kathleen Gordon-Lee, Beatrice Kelston, Miss Helen Rous, and Messrs Carter Pickford, Fred Grove, and Eric Maturin help to complete the success. 'Op o' My Thumb, a one-act play, appears earlier, and provides for Miss Trevelyan another and a genuine triumph as Amanda Afflick.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. W. Turner; Manager, Mr V. Turner.—Sunday is proving a big success here, for with it come Mr Fred Terry and Miss Julia Neilson, who are special favourites. Miss Julia Neilson in the central rôle, Sunday, acts with infinite tenderness, passion, and simplicity as the varying nature of the part demands. Mr Fred Terry is breezy, natural, and expressive in the role of Col. Brinthorpe, and Mr J. D. Beveridge as Tom Oxley yields him fine support. The "protectorate," meaning Towzer, Davy, and Lively, comprises Messrs Rothbury Evans, J. Carter-Edwards, and Horace Hodges, each of whom plays his respective part ably. Mr Alfred Kendrick acts with considerable force and feeling as Jacky.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager Mr Lester Collingwood.—When Woman Hates reveals Miss Nettie Ware in her most intense and interesting moments as Cora Daintry. Mr Oscar Adye as Godfrey Lawton acts with all the outward semblance of a gentleman and the cool cunning of a villain; Mr Jno. B. Shinton conveys a manly and straightforward picture of the hero, Fred Rokeby; Miss Violet Carlyle enlists the sympathies of the house for the much-wronged sister in a marked degree; and Miss Jennie Hughes as the blind wife, Marie, also acts sympathetically. Messrs Percy, Campbell, Wallace, Evans, Little Kathleen, Crook, Olive Lanty, and Ina Cunard support.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Walter Melville; Resident-Manager, Mr J. Hindle Taylor.—Two Little Vagabonds remains a great attraction, such is the reflection borne upon us by the overwhelming success of this well-known drama at the Metropole this week. The performance reflects credit on everyone around, and Miss May Hart as Dick and Miss Dorothy Marsdin as Wally content the audience well. Miss Laura Hansen fills the rôle of Thornton's wife with much ability, and Miss Nell Oliver is successful as Barbara. Mr Alfred Russell as the Gaffer, Mr Wolston Foster as Capt. Darville, Mr J. W. Henson as George Thornton, Mr Frank Gordon as Dido Bunce, Mr Fred Archer as the Cough Drop, and Miss Marie Pritchard as Biddy are all successful, and gain much appreciation.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Owner and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr Ben Sydney.—A Royal Revenge, played by Mr J. H. Clyndes and his company, has inspired the audiences here to great outbursts of enthusiasm. Mr J. H. Clyndes as the soldier of fortune, Esteran Alvarez, and Pedro De Castro, patriot and Prime Minister, acts in a most finished manner, and wins general approval. Mr H. B. Lewis affords a striking contrast as Azad Ben Musid, and Miss Bessie Elma charms the house as Inez. Miss Aimee Gratton figures as the lively Paquita, Mr J. Bigwood shines as her lover, Michael; and Messrs E. Aldworth, Chas. Jordan, Jno. Macfarlane, Arthur Lowry, and the Misses Lizzie Lennon and Evelyn Ommunsden play other important parts.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr Charles Barnard; Manager, Mr Dan Barnard.—A Sailor's Sweetheart is the attraction here, and the company is sponsored by Mr Mark Blow and Miss Ida Molesworth. Hairbreadth escapes by sea and land, amongst a variety of incident, and some clever acting and effective scenery, have kept the audiences engrossed to the end. Mr Alfred Goddard has been applauded as the hero. Mr Robert Faulkner has been execrated as the villain; and Miss Ada Barton has proved one of the very best and sweetest of heroines. The comic element is well sustained by Mr Ernest Millins as Tim Kelly, Mrs J. W. Braithwaite as Mrs Pembury, and Miss Evelyn Shaw as Phœbe; and Messrs Chas. Stafford, Wm. Stoneham, C. A. Johnstone, C. Douglas Carlile, J. Graham, and A. C. Blunt assist.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr A. W. Matcham.—The principal item this week is the sketch Mashing the Missus, which is presented by W. H. Rawlins, Horace Mills, and company. Tom Leamore is well received; a clever acrobatic and hand-balancing act is submitted by the De Kock Brothers; while the Sisters Trentanovi have a smart gymnastic turn. Bard and O'Brien in their comedy wire act and Marba and Verity, comedy acrobatic dancers, are successful. Kitty Wager, comedienne; Cassie Walmer, the dusky princess; and the Sisters Lonnen, duettists and dancers, are all well applauded. Will Cornish has a fine musical speciality, while Fred Poplar and the Wedburns are comedians of merit.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Albert Bushell.—The principal attraction in the bill here is The Belle of the Orient, presented by Joe Peterman's company of burlesque artists. It is mounted on an elaborate scale, and is proving a decided success. The quaint comedian, Dan Conroy, is responsible for plenty of fun, while Harry Zetter is a clever grotesque dancer. The Trapnell Family of acrobats appear with their usual success. Florence and Lilian have a refined drawing-room entertainment. Some excellent banjo selections are rendered by the Sisters Redfern. Harry Weldon, comedian; Bijou Russell, sand-dancer; and a series of animated pictures are most entertaining.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford.—Vesta Victoria is the bright particular star here, and is causing quite a furore. G. W. Leslie and company have a fine sketch in Chums, which is well staged. Rhoda Paul is well received. Mr and Mrs Paul Knox have a refined entertainment. Gilbert and May, Harry Walker, Queen and Le Brun, and Alice Lorette with her dog, come in for a good share of applause. Imro Fox, the illusionist, is responsible for a clever turn.

BORDESLEY PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr Edward Foster.—One of the smartest cycle acts we have seen is that presented by the Selbini Troupe. Mr and Mrs Gene Hughes in their comedy sketch, A Matrimonial Substitute, are well received, and the comedians worthy of special notice this week are J. W. Rickaby, Harrigan and Holt, Stelling and Revell, while the Three Sisters Leigh, Arthur St. George, the Four Figaros, and Hettie Lee add to the success of the bill.

BOURNEMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Sons; Lessees, Mr Mouillot; Manager, Mr Rowland Stewart.—In Dahomey is in possession this week. The burden of the fun falls on the shoulders of Messrs Dan Avery and Charles Hart, as Rareback Pinkerton and Shylock Homestead respectively, and their whimsicalities are an unfailing source of merriment. Hamilton Lightfoot has an excellent representative in Mr Pete Hampton, and the other members of the "syndicate" have able exponents in Messrs Fred Douglas as Dr. Straight, Walter Dixon as Hustling Charlie, and Leon Williams as George Reader. Miss Laura Bowman sings with taste and execution as Cecilia, Miss Stella Hart is good as Mrs Stringer, and Miss Pauline Freeman is successful as Rosetta Lightfoot. The choruses are well rendered throughout, and the cake-walk, with which the comedy concludes, meets with vociferous applause.

BLACKBURN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr Harry Yorke; Business-Manager, Mr Reginald Yorke.—Mr C. St. John Denton's company in Kitty Grey has made its appearance here this week before an enthusiastic audience. Miss Hilda Guiver played the part of Kitty Grey in a sparkling manner. Mr Robert Whyte, jun., was very effective as the King of Illyria, while Mr Robert Selby as Sir John Binfield and Mr Leslie Harris as Lord Plantagenet give good performances. Lady Binfield is well played by Miss Elly Helene, and other parts are in the capable hands of Miss Emily Stevens as Mrs Bright and Miss Constance Hamilton as Sadie De Poulson.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr E. H. Page.—The Indian actress Miss Go-Won-Go Mohawk is paying a return visit here with her successful drama Wep-Ton-No-Mah, the Indian Mail Carrier. She is well supported by Mr C. W. Charles as Colonel Stockton and other members of an efficient company.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr Will Murray; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Drury.—Another excellent company is here this week. The Delbosq Brothers give a clever exhibition of eccentric tumbling, including the performance of a double somersault over the heads of sixteen men. Laurie Wyllie does some clever imitations with his mimicking mannikin. Mr and Mrs Neil Litchfield are good in their comedy sketch Down at Brook Farm. The Sisters Morgan are pleasing duettists. Amongst others may be mentioned the Four Jumels, in their musical act; Fred Dunstone, comedian; Karno Trio, Grey and Welford, and Cullen and Carthy.

BOSCOMBE.

GRAND THEATRE.—Propriotor, Mr F. Mouillot; Manager, Mr Rowland Stewart.—Mr Edward Marris's company is here this week with As Midnight Chimes. Mr Melville Bickford gives a capable rendering of the villain, Luke Dezzard, and Mr Frank E. Petley earns sympathy for his victim. Dave Stannard. Witty Wattie Walton is an immense success as Tat Spavvin, a railway porter, whose drolleries give the necessary comic relief. Mention must also be made of Mr Henry Beaufort as Ezra Gamble; Mr Percy Maitland as Nat Wilson, of the Coastguard; and Mr Arthur Jenner as Warder Blunt. Miss Annie Megson is successful as Suzette; Miss Iris M. Ward appears as Zamora; and Little Davy is represented by Miss Minnie Ethel. Miss Gertrude Price does well as Mary Stannard.

BRADFORD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr John Hart; General Manager, Mr T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Richardson.—Mr Forbes Robertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott had a most enthusiastic reception on Monday, when they commenced a return visit in the delightful play, Mice and Men. Mr Forbes Robertson quite won the sympathy of his audience in his admirable impersonation of Mark Embury, and Miss Elliott carried her audience with her as the winsome and charming Peggy. The support was excellent, Mr George Summers played the genial Roger Goodlake in lusty style, and the Captain George Lovell of Mr Frank Gillmore was a manly and convincing performance. As the spiteful Joanna Goodlake Miss Auriol Lee acquitted herself well, and much praise is also due to Miss Ada Mellon as Mrs Deborah and the other members of the clever company. On Tuesday and Wednesday the play was repeated, and for the remaining evenings of the week The Light That Failed was billed for representation.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Francis Laidler.—The Drury-lane drama, Human Nature, which is being finely staged by Mr Henry Dundas's excellent company, presents a strong attraction here this week, and the scenic effects are very elaborate. Mr Dundas plays Captain Temple and he is an ideal hero; his wife, Nellie Temple, is a capable effort on the part of Miss Bartho-Griffiths. As the scheming Cora Grey Miss Lilian Dundas is effective, and the cunning Matthew Hawker is cleverly played by Mr H. C. Cooper. The capable acting of Mr Reginald Weighill as Joe Lambkin, Miss Esther Carew as his wife, Mr S. Young as Horatio Spofkins, Miss Rose Helene as Maggie Wilkins, Little Daisy Cooke as Frank, and Little Marion Ryder as the waif, Dick, does much in sustaining the strong interest in the drama, the other parts in the big cast being also in capable hands.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr E. Crawford Swann.—Miss Vesta Tilley is the bright particular star here this week, and the clever little lady had a flattering reception on Monday, responding to repeated encores. Otave, an Indian comedy artiste, gave an acceptable turn, and the Lannons were seen to advantage as pedestal dancers. In their sketch, The Cheerful Idiot, the Tribune Trio were diverting; Frank Lynne, comedian, gave an acceptable turn; the Mayvilles were clever in their Lilliputian act; the excellent vocalism of Sybil St. Elmo won hearty recognition; a neat and cleverly executed acrobatic performance on novel lines was given by the Bros. De Wynne; Gilbert Rogers submitted a good vocal turn; and glee singing by the St. James's Quintet proved an acceptable item to the programme, to which the Tourbillion Troupe of bicycle acrobats contributed a sensational and clever performance.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr E Harrison.—That quaint comedian Alf Gibson is here again, amusing as ever in a dry style all his own, and Allis and Cassati entertain the audience well with A Few Funny Minutes. Much strength and skill are displayed by Iben Obed, Oriental balancer, in his turn. The dancing by the Ferrari Duo is acceptable, and the Sisters Adelaide are an engaging pair of duettists and dancers. Bert Lytton is entertaining as "the Swell Comique;" the Villions Troupe of acrobatic cyclists display great cleverness and agility; and G. H. Elliott, the "chocolate-coloured coon," who is retained for another week, is received again with favour.

BROMLEY.

GRAND HALL.—Lessee, Mr W. Morton.—On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of last week Mr Charles Macdona presented the Strand Theatre success, A Chinese Honeymoon. Mr Stearne Louch made an imposing and dignified Emperor; the Lord Chancellor of Mr Louis Ashmeade was a realistic impersonation; and Mr Lindsay Harman was decidedly original and amusing in the character of Hi Lung. Mr Arthur Foote was well suited in the part of Tom Hatherton; Mr Sidney Burt as Mr Pineapple acted extremely well; Miss Mabel Carlton made a vivacious Mrs Pineapple; and the part of Fi-Fi found an able exponent in the person of Miss Ettie Cinders. Miss Adah Lascroft was quite captivating as Soo-Soo, and the Mrs Brown of Miss Gertrude Le Sage was a faithful presentation.

BURY (LANCS).

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling.—Messrs John Hart and H. Armitage are presenting The Never-Never Land here this week. Mr Edmund F. Kennedy as Jack Mowbray has made a favourable impression. Mr Edward Rochelle as Nat Rudder is good. Mr John Hard as Brudds and Mr Simon D. Ord as Raphael Wolff display ability. Miss Caroline Barrett as Sybil Laudale is charming, and Miss Marion Fawcett as Lady Walgrove plays feelingly. Miss Julie Kennard

BLYTH.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr George E. Good.—A Fight for Millions is the title of the American drama that has formed the attraction during the week, and is presented by Mr Robert Perris's company. In the part of Tom Manley Mr Perris gives a powerful impersonation; Mr J. Newton Cowling is good as Hudson Rivers; Mr W. S. Stevenson is prominent as Richard Dudley; Mr Larry Clements as William Neverwork is satisfactory; Mr Fred Acton does well as Solomon Moses, Miss Fannie Williams, Miss Eva Purcell, Miss Evelyn Robson, Miss Winnie Acton, and Miss Gertie Douglas rendering valuable assistance in their respective parts.

BOLTON.

Theatre Royal, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Hermann.—After a long interval Les Cloches de Corneville is again here, presented by Mr E. St. Alban's opera company. Mr George A. Fox is stately as the Marquis De Corneville. He has a good voice, and sings well the items allotted to him. Mr E St. Alban is very good as Gaspard, the miser; Mr Fowler Thatcher plays well the part of Gobo; and the same may be said of Mr W. Cranbourne as Grenicheaux, Mr George Delaforce as the Bailie, Miss K. Farrell as Germaine, and Miss Lucie Fitzroy as Serpolette.

BROUGHTON.

Victoria.—Proprietors, The Broughton Theatres Syndicate, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr Charles A. Wilkes; Manager and Secretary, Mr James M. Hardie, jun.—Miss Millie Hylton, the well-known burlesque artiste, gives much pleasure by her singing; George French, comedian, causes roars of laughter; Lilian Doreen, contralto, renders some pleasing songs; Cyrus and Maude and their performing donkey, in the burlesque of "Dick Turpin's Ride to York," are successful; and Stanley and Tich Bourne, refined vocalists and patter comedians; Maud Venn, chic comedienne; Edward Ind, comedian; Mdlle. Du Roche, operatic soprano vocalist; and the Four Magnets, vocalists, acrobats, and specialty buck dancers, also combine to fill one of the best programmes at this house. Some amusing animated pictures conclude the entertainment.

BRIGHTON.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. Cecil Beryl; Assistant-Manager, Mr Harcourt M. Beryl.—Mr Tom B. Davis's company is here this week with Florodora Mr Daley Cooper is very droll and amusing as Tweedlepunch; Miss Leonora Grieve makes a handsome and charming Dolores; Miss Daisy Byford is a winsome Angela Gilfain; and Miss Rene Steadman is well suited as Lady Holyrood. Mr Charles J. Barber as Cyrus W. Gilfain, Mr Cyril Dare as Frank Abercoed, Mr Derick Knowles as Captain Arthur Donegal sustain their parts very effectively, while the full chorus and augmented orchestra add to the excellence of the performance, the duties of conductor being in the able hands of Mr J. M. Hutchison.

Grand Theatre.—Under the entire control of Mr Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr W. F. Crowe.—Messrs E. Hill-Mitchelson and Harris Fineberg's company opened here on Monday with The Traitor. Mr Wellesley Draper achieved great success in his dual rôle of Prince Rudolf and Colonel Nervi; Miss Theresa Osborne as Zulu, the Avenger, gave a forcible and convincing portrayal; Mr Stephen E. Scanlan submitted a powerful representation as the "Traitor;" Miss Isabel Hunt was sympathetic as the Little Martyr; Miss Hettie Senior was very successful as Elsie Duprey; Mr Frank Sutherland as Jack Boult and Miss Anena Walton as a Japanese girl were very amusing; and other characters were ably sustained by Mr James Abbott, Mr Edward Jenner, and Miss Lily Roselle.

Aquarium.—Manager, Mr W. J. Hardy; Secretary, Mr S. H. Andrews.—Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope still proves attractive here, and Miss Hettie Stallabras, last week's vocalist, has also been re-engaged.

New Palace Pier.—Manager, Mr C. Thompson Ford; Entertainment Manager, Mr Drew Mackintosh.—Under the direction of Mr Charles Williams and Mr Philip Glynn Glittering Gloria occupies the boards here this week. Miss Stanley Ronals gives an excellent impersonation of Gloria Grant; Miss Lilian Williams's Mrs Jack James and Miss Peggy Harrington's Dorothy Kenworthy are admirably played; Mr Haughton Macauley is very effective as Zebedee Posket; Mr John Campbell as Jack James and Mr Stanley Arthur as Archie Toddleby merit warm commendation; and Mr J. Worldley Hulse is well suited as Colonel Gallegher. Mr Charles Williams is very humorous as Mr Griddletop. Roltz's American Troupe of dancers afford much pleasure.

West Pier Pavilion.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr A. D. Norman.—Mr Alfred Tapping, Miss Alice Farleigh, and company are here this week with The School for Scandal. Mr Alfred Tapping gives an admirable impersonation of Sir Peter Teazle and Miss Alice Farleigh makes a charming Lady Teazle. Mr Reginald Rivington's Joseph Surface and Mr C. Leveson Lane's Charles Surface merit warm praise; Mr J. G. Taylor is a capital Sir Oliver Surface; Mr W. H. Staveley as Sir Benjamin Backbite, Miss Claire Pauncefort as Mrs Candour, Miss Beatrice Mervyn as Lady Sneerwell, and Miss Nona Hoffe as Maria greatly add to the excellence of the performance; and the remaining characters are satisfactorily sustained.

BRISTOL.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr James Macready Chute.—A special attraction is provided this week in the performance here for the first time of The Darling of the Gods. The play is superbly staged, and on Monday evening the large audience followed the various scenes with great attention, repeatedly expressing warm approval. The quaint costumes and appointments display a wealth of Oriental splendour, every detail being worked out effectively, while the heavy sets of solid appearance are most realistic. Mr Tree's company is an excellent one all round, the principals being especially suited to their respective parts. Miss Lillian Stafford presents a charmingly interesting exposition of Yo-San. She speaks her lines with exceptional distinctness, and evinces considerable power in the later scenes of the play. Mr Alexander Calvert gives a fine, manly performance of Kara, at once dignified and artistic. Mr G. W. Anson presents an excellent character study of Zakkuri; his make-up is admirably suited to the part, and he is sufficiently powerful throughout. Mr A. P. Kaye is dignified and impressive as the Prince of Tosan; Mr Ernest Stallard does well in the short part of Kato; and Miss Augusta Haviland distinguishes herself as Rosy Sky. The closing scene of the play is very beautiful, depicting the First Celestial Heaven (in the clouds). The augmented orchestra, ably conducted by Mr A. L. Spittle, does full justice to the special music composed by Mr William Furst.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Ernest Carpenter.—Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company is here with The Midnight Mail. The drama is staged in effective style, and it is well played by a competent company. Miss Ada Oakley and Mr George Harvard both act their respective parts of Mary Steyne and Harry Steyne remarkably well; Mr Fred G. Evison gives a clever performance of Billy Brewer; Mr Arthur Gilroy acts well as Hassan Padisha; Mr Alec Alves as Leonard Royle, Miss Nellie Stevenson as Lady Phillis Eustace, and Miss Mildred Carr as Nancy Brewer all do full justice to their respective parts, and the less important characters have all careful exponents. The sensational fight on the full-sized model engine is realistic.

Palace.—Managing Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Resident Manager, Mr Horace Livermore; Secretary, Mr Welchman. — Miss Alexandra Dagmar, burlesque artiste, heads the programme with a pleasing turn; she sings well, and obtains due appreciation. Jake Friedman is successful with his humorous One Man Opera; the Albert and Edmunds Troupe create amusement with their absurdity The Locket; Bobby and Blank are entertaining musicians; Bobby and Blank are entertaining musicians; the Four Herberts amuse with their comic abrobatic act as Californian farmers; Bob Vokes, comedian, obtains appreciation; Miss May Moore provides a smart turn as a piccolo soloist; the Maples are good vocalists and expert dancers; Francisco excels as a juggler and equilibrist; Will Dalton, comedian, has some amusing songs; and an extra turn is provided by a gentleman and a boy and girl in the way of an interesting and pleasing vocal scena. The performance concludes with some good animated pictures. The Thursday matinées continue to be attractive.

Empire.—Proprietor, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—Houdini heads the programme, and frees himself from handcuffs, leg-irons, &c., provided by the audience, and he also introduces his new barrel trick, the performance of his various acts being witnessed with much interest. John Terry and Mabel Lambert do a pleasing turn of song and dialogue; Wal Robbins, black and white comedian, obtains applause; Miss Mabel La Blanche, burlesque actress, pleases; J. H. Scotland sings baritone songs effectively; Miss Daisy Martell is an expert dancer and a pleasing comedienne; Will Johnson, comedian, obtains appreciation; Geraldo juggles effectively with American clubs; the Kimberly Boys are amusing eccentric comedians; Whit Cunliffe, comedian, is successful; and Harry Edson does a clever and entertaining turn with his little dog Doc. The performance concludes with animated pictures. The Wednesday matinées continue to be well attended.

Victoria Rooms. — Maskelyne and Cooke's mysteries are attracting a good attendance here at each performance. Several new acts are introduced, and Mr David Devant presents new magical problems. Music is provided by the Chamounix Alpine Singers and Swiss orchestra.

Colston Hall.—The North American Photo. company has a fine show of animated pictures here. There is also a smart vaudeville company, and the full band of 1st Glos. Royal Garrison Volunteer Artillery plays at each performance.

Drill Hall.—The Home appliances exhibition continues to be attractive. This week we have Lieut. Charles Godfrey's band.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

New Theatre and Opera House.—Proprietors, Messrs Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr John Waller.—Mr John Denton's company, with A Modern Judas, is here for the week. Mr Percy Rhodes submits an artistic rendering of the callous villain, Captain Melbourne. Mr Frank Beresford portrays the hero with verve and manly force. Mr John Denton gives a capital assumption of Elkanah Pearce. Mr Willie Scott is endowed with a never-failing fund of humour as Tom Hopkins, and is ably seconded by Miss Dolly Harcourt, a vivacious Polly. Mr Trueman Towers is sufficiently repulsive as Bennett, a butler and burglar, and the Inspector Goodheart of Mr Louis Hector is a praiseworthy delineation. The suffering heroine as depicted by Miss Violet King is a powerfully dramatic performance, and Miss Kate Walbran displays exceptional merit as the wronged wife. Other characters are ably sustained by Mr Harry Browne and Miss Ada Palmer.

BUXTON.

Opera House. — Manager and Secretary, Mr Arthur Willoughby.—Following a successful three nights of San Toy, The New Barmaid opened on Monday. Mr Harrison Brockbank sang ably in the part of Captain Lovebury; Mr J. B. Montague presented a humorous Bertie White; Mr A. Loftus caused some amusement as William; Mr A. Weston displayed great agility as Mons. Bonsor; and Mr Leslie Austin did well what was required of him as Gussie. Miss Jean Gilmour was a suitable Lady Moulton, and Miss Violet Osmund was well cast as Dora Heather. Miss Gwladys Elvey was in the title-rôle. A pleasing feature is the very pretty scenery.

CARDIFF.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Robert Redford.—A Country Girl is again paying a welcome visit, Mr George Dance's company opening on Monday to a large audience. A charming and tuneful Marjory Joy is found in Miss Kathryn Comber; Miss Nellie Cozens as Nan was a host in herself, her Devonshire dialect being extremely amusing; Mr Harry Buss as Barry acted and sang with characteristic energy and recource; Mr H. C. Morton as Sir Joseph Verity gave a capital representation of a jovial country squire; Mr Francis Ludlow was a particularly smart and dashing Geoffrey Chaloner; and Mr Fred W. Patrick as the Rajah of Bhong was the character to perfection. Madame Sophie has a pretty and vivacious exponent in Miss Rosie Begarnie, and Miss Ernestine Desborough sang with much expression as the Princess Melaneh.

King's Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Bateman; General-Manager, Mr Robert Sawin.—The American sporting comedy-drama In Old Kentucky is being presented here by Mr J. F. Elliston's company, under the direction of Mr Charles Hermann. Miss Amy Hermann as Madge Brierley plays all through with a vigour and dash that evoke loud applause; Mr George F. Steel makes a chivalrous and handsome Frank Harley; Miss Edith Halford is exceptionally humorous as Alethea Harley; Mr Eric Hudson as Jasper Grafton gives a portrayal of the highest order; and Colonel Beauchamp is capitally delineated by Mr Alfred S. Bankes. Miss Beatrice Shirley as Barbara Grafton and Miss Mary Clithson as Mrs Van Astor are excellently suited in their respective parts. A most amusing impersonation of Neb is given by Mr Harry Leander, and the banjo and bone performance of Mr Jimmie James is a considerable attraction.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Lea.—The astounding conjuror Horace Golden is here bewildering and mystifying Cardiffians. This marvellous magician comes to South Wales with a big reputation, but his performance far exceeds the highest expectations. Several favourites appear on the programme this week. Tom Costello is still as popular as ever; no loss successful is Arthur Rigby; Albert Athas and Lizzie Collins make any amount of fun in a new musical act; the Wheelers sustain their reputation as the quaintest of cyclists; Wal Pink and company's sketch Uncle's Wife is laughable; and the remaining turns are given by the Two Bees, in "Hiawatha;" the Baldwin Brothers, in an amusing acrobatic sketch; Frank Maura, foot equilibrist; and Jessie Albini, in clever descriptive songs.

CASTLEFORD.

Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr Chas. Gadsby; Business Manager, Councillor Henry Masterman.—Mr Horace Stanley and company in The 10 30 Down Express is the attraction here this week. Mr Harry T. Wood undertakes the part of Jack O'Mally in first-class style delivering his lines in a powerful manner. Miss Adelaide Clare as Bessie Leigh acts the part in a feeling and tasteful manner. As James Inderwick Mr Scott Leighton is well suited to the character. Mr Horace Stanley is capital as Sam Wagstaffe, and creates roars of laughter by his comical antics. The Peggy Potts of Miss Kate Kilpack is full of spirit, and she is responsible for more than one hearty laugh. Miss Evelyn M. Walton acts with commendable earnestness as Letitia Leigh. Mr Arthur E. Francis's impersonation of Blotherby Baggs is characterised by a careful study and an artistic make-up. Mr Harry L. Day is happily cast as Huntley Mason. Mr Alaric Burton gives an excellent portrait of Cuthbert Leigh, while the old gamekeeper, Seth Coombes, receives satisfactory treatment in Mr Fred C. Roper's hands.

CAMBRIDGE.

New Theatre.—Managing Director, Mr W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—Charley's Aunt arrived here on Monday, to the delight of a good audience. Mr Edwin H. Wynne was very funny as Lord Fancourt Babberley. Jack Chesney and Charlie Wykeham were excellently portrayed by Messrs A. Mallalieu and Mark Wylton. Mr Walter Pemberton successfully handled the part of Stephen Spettigue, as did Mr E. Savery that of Sir Frances Chesney, and Mr Fred Epitaux was most amusing as Brasset. Miss Mary Morrison played Donna Lucia with ability, and Kitty Verdun, Amy Spettigue, and Ela Delahay were charmingly rendered by Miss Fitzgerald, Miss Marie Grogan, and Miss Mary Mallalieu respectively. As a curtain-raiser the one-act play, An Idiot, was given.

CARLISLE.

Algie's Hippodrome.—Proprietress, Mrs P. E. Veitch; General Manager, Mr C. Algie.—For the second week of the season the enterprising manager has entirely changed his programme, and capital business at both houses is the result. Miss Louise Nella contributes a smart equestrian act, which is much appreciated; Miss Blanche Haddon's vocal efforts meet with approval; and Mr H. Sloan's jockey act is voted unusually good. Clyto and Clyta's wire act is both funny and clever, and they also do some smart clowning. A comic bicycle act by the Swift Trio meets with applause, and is an excellent turn. The chief vocal item is the contribution of the Singing Boxmakers (Dolly, Agnes, and Maud), who give a spirited and original performance. The most interesting turn is undoubtedly that of the Sylvester Bros., whose acrobatic and gymnastic act is wonderfully well worked.

CHATHAM.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Messrs C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr Lionel Barnard; Secretary, Mr Geo. G. Ridley.—Record houses appear to be the rule here in consequence of the first visit of Mr George Dance's company in The Duchess of Dantzic. The audiences nightly are delighted with artistes, costumes, and general staging, a conspicuous success being scored by Miss Rita Presano as Catherine, while Mr Frederick Moyes has hosts of admirers as Napoleon I.

Barnard's Palace of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor, Mr L. B. Barnard.—Here we have Miss Carlotta De Yonson and company in a military episode, entitled A Russian Spy. Catherine Miskel, vocalist; Katie Leigh, comedienne; Reilly and Taylor, smart patterers; Harry Mansfield, comedian; Amy Elvira, whose chorus songs "Strolling on the sands" and "My Lady Molly" are taken up by the gods as lustily as ever; Steel and Laing with nimble dances, neat acrobatics; Bonnie Goodwin's Apollo Piccaninnies, who create heaps of fun; and Lacey's Erascope.

CHELTENHAM.

Theatre and Opera House. — General Manager, Mr H. Oswald Redford.—This week we are witnessing a revival of The Red Lamp, with Mr F. H. De Quincey as Paul Demetrius. His is a clever character study. Mr Montague Lane is a refreshing contrast as the fiery young patriot; Mr Balliol Holloway does well as the arch-conspirator; Mr Henry Hargreaves is effective as the American journalist; and Miss Sime Seruya as the Princess and Miss E. Stuart Innes as Olga Morakoff are excellent studies. On Wednesday Richelieu was played.

CHESTER.

Royalty.—Proprietor, Mr Milton Bode; Resident-Manager, Mr H. Burgess Harries.—Mr Gar Kiddie's company on a return visit in a new burlesque entitled A Little Coquette has met with a good reception. Miss Lizzie Payne makes a charming Little Coquette, and Miss Flo Warner is a big favourite as Robin Adair, and sings very sweetly. Mr J. W. Groves is capital as the dame, Ann Teeke. Among the other members deserving of special mention are Miss Nellie Butt, Mr George Hestor, Mr E. H. Bertram, Mr Joe Bell, and Mr J. Clarence, also the Milstead Quartet of lady dancers, who sing and dance in pleasing style.

CHORLEY

Grand Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr G. T. Sante; Secretary, Mr J. Clay.—A welcome visit is being paid by Mr Alfred B. Cross and company in The Manxman. The play is lavishly mounted and excellently rendered. Mr A. B. Cross met with an enthusiastic reception, his impersonation of Pete being artistically natural and impressive. Mr Richard Vane acted the part of Philip Christian with considerable ability, and the character of Cæsar Oregeen was well depicted by Mr Hilton Francis. Messrs E M'Lean, E. Caraell, and Douglas Cottell were appreciated in their respective parts. Kate Oregeen was sweetly and effectively portrayed by Miss Minnie Watersford. Miss Rosie Kearns and Miss Muriel Clay displayed estimable qualities as Nancy and Miss Christian.

CLYDEBANK.

New Gaiety Theatre.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Wilson.—These boards are occupied this week by Messrs Fred D'Arcy and Fred J. Little's company in The Executioner's Daughter. Mr Edward M. Hamilton gives a careful rendering of M. Roche; Mr Wilson Howard is to be commended for his fine reading of Paul Rovel; Mr W. H. Sharpe as Kretch is worthy of high praise for his clever impersonation; Mr George Beverley as the villain is all that can be desired; Mr E. W. Avery makes a capital Tom Holmes; and Mr Sinclair Holder submits a good embodiment of Vivian Ormonde. The heroine is safe in the hands of Miss Dorothy Riddell, whose Annette wins much applause. Miss Carlotta Anson is a successful Felice; Miss May Rosine is highly entertaining as Sally King; and Christina, the crippled youngster, is well played by Miss Bertha Moore.

COATBRIDGE.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietress, Mrs Mary Watson; Manager, Mr C. B. Fountaine.—Mr James Willard and company are here this week with In the Shadow of Night Mr Beresford J. Lovett powerfully impersonates Gordon Allington, Mr Hamilton Deane with great judgment portrays Clifford York, and the Rev. Nathaniel Hope is ably acted by Mr Archie Selwyn. Miss Nellie Shepherd gives an artistic rendering of Mollie Woodstock; Miss May Richardson makes an able Violet Kingston; and the character of Bob, a little tramp, is cleverly looked after by Miss Millie Gordon. The staging and effects are all that could be wished for, and to Mr Ern Carlton as stage-manager is due a word of praise.

COLNE.

Theatre Royal. — Lessee and Manager, Mr G. Harding.—Messrs Silvester and Sansome's company is here this week in Jack's Sweetheart. Mr C. N. Parke as a naval lieutenant is good; the rôle of Captain Dugard is capitally impersonated by Mr M. Yorke; Mr M. Hastings and Mr H. Hanley win unstinted applause; Miss Silvester is capital as Jack's sweetheart; and Miss Clare is seen to advantage as Sally, the housemaid.

CONSETT.

New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr Lloyd Clarance.—Mr F. Edward Ward's company is paying a visit here with Her Fatal Past. Mr Joseph Millas is very good as Mark Desmond; as Leonard Fernside Mr Edward De Vere does well; Mr W. Coleman is efficient in the part of Gilbert Fernside; and Mr T. Edward Ward as Jonathan Buckstone Nobbs and Mr Algie Spalding as Dicky Bird are very funny. Miss Helen Ingleden in the two rôles of Ruth Fernside and Belle De Lara gives entire satisfaction, and as Honor Symes Miss Edith Ward is most effective. Miss Ettie Spalding as Martha Springwell acquits herself creditably. Little Miss Dot Tully Hole is very pleasing as Leonard.

CORK.

Opera House.—Manager, Mr John Horgan.—Mr Mouillot's company opened here in the comedy Old Heidelberg. Mr George F. Tully filled the part of Karl Henrich, and won general appreciation. Miss Irene Laving as Kathie gave a good interpretation of the character. The rôle of Dr. Juttner, the tutor, was well filled by Mr Clifford Bown. Mr Lionel Gadsden as Lutz, the lackey, and Mr Alec Murray as Kellermann, the steward, both filled their parts admirably. As Ruder, the innkeeper, Mr A. Moore gave a capital impersonation. Mr Eric Phillips was Statesminster Von Haugh, and Mr Frank M. Cross Hollmarshall Von Breitenburg.

COVENTRY.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr Wm. Bennett.—Auguste Van Biene, with The Broken Melody, is on a visit to this house, and proves, as it always has done, an ever-attractive piece. On Friday night The Broken Melody was followed by the one-act comedy entitled The First Night, in which Van Biene appeared as an old French actor. Miss Lena Burnleigh appeared as Mabel, and she also ably supports the actor-musician's performance in the part of Paul Borinski.

CREWE.

Lyceum Theatre.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Henry Taylor.—After an interval of about eighteen months we have this week a welcome special return visit of Mr W. H. Kirby's company, in Mr George Dance's musical comedy The New Mephisto, which has evidently lost none of its popularity. Dick Pilgrim is played by Mr W. H. Kirby in his usual quaint manner; Miss Marion Armitage is received with much favour as Becky Pilgrim; Mr W. H. Vernon is again satisfactory as Major Bantam; Dolly is played most charmingly by Miss Lily Cullick; Mr Fred Lyne enacts each of the six characters allotted to him very praiseworthily; Capt. Meredith is well portrayed by Mr H. P. Carr, whose singing is much appreciated; and Mr H. St. John is humorous as Lord Hummingtop. As the three "goey widows" Miss D. Cecil, Miss L. Howard, and Miss M. Keeley contribute some clever dancing and sprightly acting. Mr G. C. Brookes is an efficient director of the orchestra, and Mr W. H. Vernon is a capable stage-manager.

CROOK.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Wallace Davidson.—Mr Douglas Bruce's company in A Girl's Cross Roads has met with a cordial reception here this week. In the principal part of Jack Livingstone Mr Geo. Gaisford has made a careful study of a somewhat difficult character; as Farmer Meadows Mr W. E. Griffiths is excellent; and Miss Ethel Bracewell as Constance, the much-wronged heroine, is extremely good, her fine acting making the part a decided success. In the delineation of Cuthbert Lumley Mr W. Fraser-Brunner displays great histrionic ability, and Miss Kate Walfred flings herself with fine abandon into the rôle of the heartless Nellie. Miss Lily Hammersley is a commendable Barbara, and Mr E. E. Howard is admirably suited to the part of Doctor Weston. Miss Gladys Newcombe (Tilly) and Mr Will Corrie (Toby) both do well in comedy parts.

CROYDON.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr Lawson Lambert; Acting-Manager, Mr Reginald Lawrence.—Mr Robert Arthur's company is here in One of the Best. Mr Stanley Bedwell is a manly Dudley Keppel; Mr E. Bellenden Clarke is powerful as Philip Elsworth; Mr Charles Medwin gives a capital character sketch of Jason Jupp; Mr Herbert Darnley is very funny as Private Jupp; Mr H. F. Maltby is a scholarly Lieutenant-General Coventry; Mr Wilfred Beckworth is perfect as the Rev. Dr. Benrose; Mr George Hart is effectual as Sir Archibald M'Gregor; and Mr W. Templer Powell is a suitable De Gruchy. Miss Helen Haye acts with skill as Esther Coventry; Miss Jeanette Le Gros deserves congratulations as Mary Penrose; Miss Lilla Norman is a lively Kitty Spencer; and Miss Nellie Gilmore is an appropriate Mrs Spencer. The remaining parts are also well played, and the scenery is excellent.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr H. D. Lyle.—Honour Thy Father is being staged here by Mr T. Morton Powell's company. Mr J. W. Evelyn is a host in himself as Gabriel Garth; Mr E. Hartington is commendable as Duncan Bly; Mr Douglas R. Watson is adequate as Jack Halyard Miss Maud Grey is an admirable Violet Wilfred; Mrs Morton Powell deserves praise as Mercy Merry; Miss Lotty Wentworth scores as Gertrude Garth; Miss Mabel Coleman is precise as Lilian Garth; and faithful portrayals of Ned Pennycomequick and Mike Copplestone are given by Messrs W. H. Melrose and Fred W. Graham. Mr Reillie's orchestra is worthy of unstinted praise.

Palace Theatre of Varieties, Limited.—Resident General Manager, Mr Eustace H. Jay.—A big crowd here is attracting full houses, and the legend "free list entirely suspended" is quite justified. Joe Elvin and company keep the audience agog with merriment with droll sketch; the Poluski Brothers create hearty laughter; the Sisters Hula are nimble dancers; Julian Ross is a smart comedian; the Three Rays are excellent acrobatic dancers; Tom Parker, comedian is quaint; Arthur Forrest is a brilliant comic vocalist; the Palace animated pictures are as good as ever; and the remaining turns are up to the average. Mr Fred S. Partridge's orchestra wins favour.

DARLINGTON.

Royal.—Manageress, Mrs T. W. S. Jennings.—Messrs Carson and Granville are presenting the drama A Modern Adventuress here this week. Mr Leonard Aardale displays considerable ability in the rôle of an Italian sculptor. The rascality of Wallace Danton is forcibly delineated by Mr W. R. Winning; Mr Charles Stirling as Harry Delby and Mr G. D. Knight as William Delby give finished impersonations; Mr Evan Roland fills his part well; and Mr G. P. Lester is smart as the Detective. Miss Beatrice M. Anderson enacts with much force and abandon the part of the modern adventuress, Violet Meredith; a sympathetic portrayal of the unhappy Vivette Delby is forthcoming from Miss Alice Defoe; and plenty of amusement is created by Miss Mimi Fisher as Sally Hodges.

DERBY.

New Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General Manager, Mr T. A. Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr Chas. Denley.—Another old stager is here this week in the shape of In the Ranks, presented by Messrs A. Carlton and H. Armitage's company. Ned Drayton is well played by Mr Edward Lloyd, and Miss Edith Blair-Staples makes an attractive Ruth Herrick. As Gideon Blake Mr Herbert Cecil is satisfactory, and the comedy element is ably sustained by Mr Cecil Clayton as Joe Buzzard and Miss Annie Beaumont as Mrs Buzzard. Miss Ella Wilmer is an impressive Barbara, and Mr Walter H. Wilson as the dissolute Richard Belton and Messrs Arthur Palling and A. W. Chappell as Colonel Wynter and Captain Holcroft respectively also deserve special mention. The other parts are capably handled, and the play is creditably staged.

Palace. — Lessee and Manager, Mr T. A. Edwardes.—Captain Alphonso Gerard's lions and tiger-dogs head the bill here this week. Aga, described as the suspended flying maiden, completely mystifies her audience; she is introduced by a gentleman who submits some clever sleight-of-hand tricks. Vernando, in his act The Deaf Guest, gives a smart ventriloquial entertainment; the Two Vervains (Vic and Queenie) are praiseworthy whistlers, vocalists, and speciality dancers; the Two Falcons, clever acrobatic hand-to-hand balancers, are well received; Sam Dalton is worthy of mention as a character comedian; Lilian Travellie is a pleasing ballad vocalist, and Tony and Flo Vernon are clever paper tearers.

DARWEN.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr E. L. Ormsby.—The Sin of Her Childhood is being produced here this week, and the piece is prettily staged. Miss Mary Fulton as Mary Haysel is very earnest and capable; Mr Austen Milroy as Stephen Haysel is exceedingly good as the heavy man, whose villainy is equalled by Maria Haysel, well played by Miss Jennie Hicks; as Captain John Thornton Mr J. A. Campbell proves a capital foil; Mr Charles Fancourt as the Rev. Alan Grey is exceptionally good; Hannah Spry is very well portrayed by Little Dot Moss, whose songs, dances, and banjo playing are remarkably good.

DEWSBURY.

Royal. — Resident-Manager, Mr J. Herbert Asquith. — Very great success is attending the efforts of Mr Fred Karno, with his musical show, Saturday to Monday. It has a good swing, and the humour is of the rollicking style. Mr Tom Wallace as John Willie Jaggs again adds to the decided hits achieved here, and Miss Aggie Morris, another favourite, as Clorinda Blake has a part exactly suited to her charming ability. Mr Austin Lenton as Jagga, jun., is to be commended for his efforts, and Mr Herbert Lewis as Mr Potts makes much of this empty part. Miss C. Blondin does exceedingly well as Aunt Skinner, and Mr Douglas Fox is good as Tom Freeman, especially in his songs.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr Geo. Weldon.—The programme here is contributed to by the following artistes:—Maud Collard, with her canine lions and tigers; Harry Barker, a fine character vocalist; Nellie Lovell, male impersonator; Bros. Leotard, amusing clowns; Tom Beet, banjo expert; Herbert Lodge, an excellent whistler; Kloof and Ramsay, musical artistes; Paddy, in original act; and the Bioscope.

DONCASTER.

New Grand Theatre and Opera House, Limited.—Managing-Director, Councillor J. W. Chapman.—Another excellent variety company has been engaged for this week. O'Connor and Brady, Yorkshire comedians, are very popular; Beattie Bloom, comedienne, is commendable; Wisper, comedy juggler, is smart; Miss Gertie Gitana in "A School Girl's Holiday," is captivating; and Signor Bandoni, the one-man band, is remarkably clever; Edwin Bennett, in character sketches from Charles Dickens novels, provides a good turn; the living lilliputian, Wa Kay, is delightfully entertaining; and Albert Brady, Johnson, and company import a deal of native wit into a sketch entitled Turning the Tables.

DOVER.

Theatre Royal. — Proprietors, the Dover Theatres, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr Fred C. Dew.—A capital representation of that popular drama The Silver King is being presented here this week by Messrs G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company. The part of Wilfred Denver is one which taxes the resources of an actor to the utmost, but Mr Austin Melford proves fully equal to the task. Miss Emilie Polini as Nellie Denver brings a considerable degree of power of expression and intense emotion to bear upon her characterisation. An effective rendering of the "Spider" is given by Mr Charles Levey, who is to be complimented on a thoroughly artistic performance. Mr C. C. Grattan is particularly clever as Daniel Jakes, and plays with all the careful attention to detail that the part demands. Miss Amy Manfeee looks charming and acts prettily and naturally as Cissy. Miss Phillis Dailly shows a good deal of ability in her portrayal of Olive Skinner. Mr James L. Power as Henry Corkett supplies the comedy in a spirited manner, and Mr Arthur H. Rooke's eccentricities as Elijah Coombe never fail to entertain the audience. The rôle of Geoffrey Ware finds an excellent exponent in Mr Arnold E. Palmer, and Mr C. P. Amalia scores heavily as Cripps. Mr Warries Lindon gives a thoroughly painstaking interpretation of Samuel Baxter, and Mr Phil Redmayne is by no means wanting in merit in the character of Frank Selwyn.

DUBLIN.

Gaiety Theatre. — Lessee, Michael Gunn, Limited; General Manager, Mr Charles Hyland.—Mr Silvanus Dauncey and Mr M. V. Leveaux's company occupies the boards here this week with the comedy, Joseph Entangled, which has been well patronised. Mr H. B. Warner is an actor of great ability, and plays the rôle of Sir Joseph Lacy in capital style; and as Hardolph Mayne Mr Stanley W. Ashworth makes the most of his part. Miss Mona K. Oram submits an exceedingly clever and interesting study of the rôle of Lady Verona Mayne, and Mr Horace Lane in the character of Harry Tavender is all that could be desired. The remaining parts are successfully portrayed. As Played Before His Highness, a comedy, in one act, preceded, and was very well received.

Theatre Royal, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr Arthur Armstrong.—A Country Girl is being played here this week by an excellent company of Mr George Dance's. The rôle of Nan is admirably portrayed by Miss Daisy Le Hay, whose songs and dances are greatly appreciated. The Marjory Joy of Miss Maud Boyd is admirably acted, and her songs are beautifully rendered. Mr Charles R. Waleun appears with great success in the character of Barry. His songs and dances are loudly applauded. Miss Maud Prenton is most effective and pleasing as Madame Sophie. As the Princess Melaneh Miss Ethel Negretti sings with great taste. Mr Robert Michaells gives a capital impersonation of Geoffrey Challoner, and his songs win deserved applause. Sir Joseph Verity is ably played by Mr Joe Nightingale, and as the Rajah of Bhong Mr St John Hamund acts his part splendidly. The staging and scenic effects, together with the grand dresses, are very picturesque.

Queen's Royal Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. W. Whitbread; General Manager, Mr Kennedy Miller.—The sensational drama The Mysteries of the Thames is being played here this week to excellent houses by Mr F. Brooke Warren's company. Mr Roy Fortescue cleverly acts the rôle of Richard Brandon, and Captain James Denbigh has an able exponent in Mr Gilbert Hall. Mr Walter Ross plays the part of Jack Hammond successfully, and Mr Elton Morgan capitally sustains the rôle of Bill Bosco. Mr Dan Hardie gives a humorous impersonation of Peter Waggles, and Mr George Thorne makes the most of the part of Ben Lorrimer. Miss Clare O'Sullivan displays much ability as Bertie Fitzgerald, and Mr Robert Vincent does well as Sol Crockett. The dual-rôle of Helen Price and Grace Rochdale is played in an effective manner by Miss Gwynne Warren, and Miss Nellie Palmer is extremely good as Little Doris. Miss Lallah Shelton makes an admirable Kate Brandon, and Miss Flo Norman plays with sound judgment the rôle of Emma Seaton.

Empire.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. S. Figgis.—Heading the bill here this week we have the Davis Trio, whose wonderful cycling act, "Whirling the Whirl," meets with unstinted applause. Hemming and Free, comedy artistes, score a success, as does also Amy Sullivan, comedienne. Arthur Reece is a smart, versatile comedian, and the efforts of the Three Sisters Chester are well rewarded. Woodhouse and Wells, comedians and dancers, are well received, and Silent Watt is going as strong as ever. Lillie Soutter is a pleasing comedienne, and Harry Bickley, comedian, who remains from last week, and the Empire pictures complete a good programme.

Tivoli Theatre.—General Manager, Mr Chas. M. Jones; Secretary, Mr H. A. Murphy.—Lillie Marney is the attraction here this week, and is as popular as ever, her contributions being nightly encored. Another successful turn is Morny Cash, character comedian, and the Boston Twins, in their comedy boxing act, make a decided hit. Mdlle. Aladina and her cockatoos give an interesting show, and Vasey and Ramsey are excellent speciality artistes. V. J. De Henau does some clever painting with his toes, and Ellis and Watts are capital comedians and dancers. Michel and Polo are an acceptable pair of acrobats, and Mattie Crawford, comedienne, and Olive Watts, comedian, are also in the bill.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Manager, Mr John H. Stevenson.—Every evening excellent audiences attend to listen to Herr Kandt's Viennese Band, who conclude their engagement to-night. Several interesting pictures are depicted each night by the Bioscope, which are duly appreciated.

DUMFRIES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr W. E. Potts.—Seldom has the management of our theatre given us a greater treat than that of Monday, when Quality Street was presented here for the first time by the Ben Greet company to an enthusiastic audience. The part of Phœbe Throssell was in the hands of Miss Nellie Bowman, who played in a natural, simple manner. Miss Maud Townsend did well as Susan; Patty was ably impersonated by Miss Violet Vivian; Mr F. Vernon Travers was most admirably suited to the part of Valentine Brown; and Mr Edward Jepheson as Ensign Blake was very amusing. The Biggest Scamp on Earth was announced for Thursday.

DUNDALK.

TOWN HALL THEATRE.—Proprietors, Urban Council.—Under the direction of Mr Payne Seddon Mr Gordon Starkey's company is here this week in A Message from Mars. Mr Cyril Austen Lee as Horace Parker was a distinct success. Mr Wm. Lockhart in the title-rôle played well. Mr Percy Tyler in the character of a tramp acted the part to the life. Mr A. W. Munro as Arthur Dicey was admirably suited, Miss Violet Auberies is eminently fitted in the part of Miss Parker; and Miss Maud Shortland as Bella was all that could be desired. Dr. Chapman (Mr G. R. Peach), the Emperor (Mr Fred Bassie), Mrs Clarence (Miss Florence Heather), and Polly (Miss Tracey), all contributed to the success of the piece.

DUNDEE.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; General Manager, Mr Eade Montefiore.—Lucky Durham, the last play penned by the late Wilson Barrett, is being presented here this week. Mr William F. Grant gives a firm, convincing character sketch of Durham. Mr Paul Belmore as the Hon. Reginald Steighton is a capital exponent of the part, and Lord Mountfallan is cleverly enacted by Mr Henry De Solla.

PEOPLE'S PALACE.—Manager, Mr Will Parker; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr Alf Ross.—Signor and Madame Borrelli make a big hit here with their clever musical comedy sketches; Venie Clements does some smart work in her mimetic entertainment, and dances well; Mr Bert Woodward as a trick cyclist is in every detail excellent; and the Five Wheatleys, in their acrobatic show; Percy Currie, quite an original comedian; Devereux's dogs, the Two Stars, Fred Neiman, Johnnie Walker, Harry Wright, and Nellie Gannon also contribute to a capital programme.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Dundee Empire Company, Limited.—Mr James Stillwell and company are producing Queen of the Night at this house. The company is an all-round success, and the scenery is also very good. Miss V. St. Lawrence is the leading lady, and scores a triumphant success.

GAIETY, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr S. King Alexander.—A variety company holds the boards here this week, and is headed by Messrs Abel and Welsh in their well-known gymnastic performance. Slade Murray gets a capital reception for his well-rendered songs. The other turns include Alec. B. Thorne, the pawky Scotch comedian; Eck Ray's schoolboys, vocalists; Sheila Barret, a fascinating serio; Lizzie Lawrie, a sweet contralto; and Harry Jennings, comedian.

EDINBURGH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Messrs Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Hollister.—An admirable performance of The Earl and the Girl was given here on Monday by Mr William Greet's company. Scenery, dresses, and mounting were all that could be desired, and the principal parts were in excellent hands. Mr William Stephens was eminently suited to the rôle of Jim Cheese, and caused unlimited laughter by his droll acting and clever singing. Mr Percy Carr carried high honours as Dick Wargrave, and scored in every scene, his fine singing being warmly applauded. Mr Will Hindson displayed remarkable volubility of utterance as Downham, the American solicitor, and the popular Mr Tom Redmond as the genial landlord, Hazell, was seen to advantage. Miss Florence Imeson, who is a favourite here, made a charming appearance as Daisy Fallowfield, and had numerous encores for her song, "Sammy." Miss Aimee Grey played delightfully as the American heiress, Elfin Haye, while her share of the music was much admired. Miss Gladys Fontaine was successful as the impulsive Mrs Shimmering Black; and Miss Dot Carey gave a bright and vivacious rendering of Liza Shoddam, a character she played to the very life. The music was a feature of the production, and effective chorus singing and brilliant and elegant ballets added to the attractiveness of the comedy.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs Howard and Wyndham, Limited; General-Manager, Mr G. T. Minshull.—The Darling of the Gods is paying a return visit this week, and was presented by Mr Beerbohm Tree's company on Monday before a capital house. The Japanese environment of the play gives full scope for artistic and richly-coloured mounting, and the glamour of romance over all has made it an especial favourite with the public. Conspicuous among the carefully-selected company is Mr Robert Pateman, who gives a subtle and highly-realistic rendering of the crafty and merciless Zakuri, the sword-room scene being acted throughout with marvellous power. Mr Kay Souper looks and acts the part of Prince Kara well, rising at times to a high dramatic level. Mr Ivan F. Simpson makes a dignified Saigon, and Mr Arthur Vezin fills the part of Tanda-Tauji with much acceptance. Other important characters are all in good hands. Miss Frances Dillon proves herself a capable actress in the trying and arduous rôle of the Princess Yo-San, portraying the joyous and tragic situations with power. Miss Eve Muriel acts with fire and passion as Rosy Sky, and other parts are well filled by Misses Edith Deverell, Alice Gordon, and Rhoda Ray. The production is enhanced by the beautiful and appropriate incidental music of Mr William Furst, ably rendered by the orchestra conducted by Mr Percy E Fletcher.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr H E. Moss.—The star of the week is that prime pantomime favourite, Mr Mark Sheridan, whose genial happy style of comedy is highly appreciated here. Mr Pat Rafferty, Irish comedian, is well received. Miss Florence Esdaile, ballad vocalist, sings charmingly, and Miss Edie King does a sprightly serio turn with success. Smythson's comedy company affords ample entertainment in a clever sketch, and Messrs Tennyson and Wallis also did their best on Monday. Henry Kaiser proves an expert juggler, and the musical turn of the Anartos is cordially applauded. Hulme, Ross, and Lewis give an amusing American comedy act, and Mr Will English, coon comedian, also appears.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Tom Ellis.—The Convent Bell was presented at this theatre on Monday evening by Mr Howell Webb's company. The parts were well distributed, those represented by Messrs Howell Webb, Stanley Carlton, Oliver Birrell, Chas. E. Howell, and J. H. Howard being ably filled. Miss Trissie Humphreys was an effective Christine Valgrave, and Miss Ruby Maude played Marguerite Courier successfully. The piece was picturesquely mounted, and the lighter scenes, with their music and singing, were most enjoyable.

EASTBOURNE.

DEVONSHIRE-PARK THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr A. Standen Triggs.—Miss Ada Reeve and her company are appearing here in Winnie Brooke, Widow. The success of the evening is the charmingly effective performance contributed by Miss Ada Reeve as Winnie Brooke. Her dancing is of the very daintiest, and her fascinating manner and pretty voice complete her work, which delighted the audience. Miss Lucie Caine and Miss Ruth Hazlewood share the honours which fall to them as charming representatives of Gracie and Nora. Miss Janet Hodson is extremely effective as Mrs Garside; Mrs Charles Maltby is an appropriate Hannah; and Miss Drusilla Wills is an excellent Eustacia; very high praise must be accorded Mr Henry Vibart for his able acting as Dudley Mayne; excellent work is contributed by Mr Leon Ashton-Jarry; and Mr Edgar Stevens is an admirable Reginald Frampton. Mr Edward Rigby causes genuine laughter as Hercules; Mr James Stevenson is a praiseworthy Elihu; and Mr Stephen Adeson is a smart, animated Montague Brent.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr Samuel Lloyd.—Mr Walter Melville's excellent company is appearing here in The Worst Woman in London. A very strong and attractive performance is given by Miss Constance Medwyn as Frances Vere. Her pretty face, handsome figure, and musical voice are particularly appropriate to the character. Ruth Milford is very daintily and sweetly played by Miss Lilian Ross; Miss Helen Rigby and Mr George H. Asquin share the work as fun-makers, and they work hard and well as Matilda and Bob; Jack Fenton is ably played by Mr Edwin H. Collins, and he is natural and earnest throughout. As the villain, Vincent Lyle, Mr Paul B. Lewers makes the most of his part; Mr W. Roy Byford is a capital James Melford; and Mr Bernard Mervyn gives a sound portrayal of the rôle of Philip Armstrong. A good character sketch is given by Mr Joe Braceweil as Drayton, and the remaining parts are in good hands.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr George Hayes.—A variety bill takes its regular turn again this week. The Fleury Trio introduce novel and sensational dancing in waltz, mazurka, and other dances. The Dillons are clever and amusing in their acrobatic work on springs. Barlee and Smith cleverly combine music and fun in a musical episode. Miss Emmie Ames delighted the audience with her songs and her way of singing them. Hector and Lauraine provide excellent amusement. The Three Sisters Lee excel as acrobatic and contortion dancers, and thoroughly earn the applause awarded them. Leonsen and Louise are skilled and strong equilibrists; Miss Dorothy Firmin is a bright and charming singer and dainty dancer; and Mr J. Lennol sings and patters well.

ECCLES.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Hague; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr P. Ryan-Smith.—Mr C. P. Leviliy's company is here this week in Amorelle. In the part of Dr. Crow Mr Leon Simkin, a host in himself, keeps the audience in a constant state of hilarity; Mr Arthur Cozens as Jules is full of vitality; Mr Fred Carrington is successful as Dotard, being loudly encored for his song; in the title-rôle Mr Empsie Bowman is most pleasing, singing and dancing with a charm which captivates everyone; Miss Adah Grey is also captivating. Miss Von Bargen as Marina is amusing.

EXETER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr Fred Pollard; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy M. Dunsford.—A hearty welcome greeted Mr Robert Hart's company in My Lady Molly, which is on a return visit here this week. Miss Mabel Lait, a talented actress, in her fine impersonation of Lady Molly Martingale scores both histrionically and vocally. She has an excellent coadjutor in Miss Sybil Thorne as Hester. Miss Maude Thorne's portrayal of Alice Coverdale is as fascinating as it is refined and clever; and Miss Lottie Sargent impersonates Mdlle. Mirabeau with capital results. Mr Arthur Powell is a great favourite as Mickey O'Dowd, his conception of the rollicking Irishman proving excruciatingly funny. Mr George Grundy makes full use of his opportunities as Captain Harry Romney; Mr Frank Stather is a clever and convincing Lionel Bland; and Mr Walter Ashley depicts Sir Miles Coverdale with ease and skill. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr Carlton Mason.

VICTORIA HALL, LIMITED.—Secretary, Mr M. J. Dunsford.—There is practically an entire change in the programme of Gilbert's Circus here. In addition to the smart equestrian feats of Baby Culeen, a dashing jockey act is contributed by Eugene Cooke. Rabbit provides, as usual, considerable merriment; and the gymnastic feats of Helene and Emilon are very popular. The Boy Samson contributes a wonderful exhibition of weight-lifting; the Zannettos come in for a large measure of applause with their juggling act; and Mendel, the blind pianist, in his unique and brilliant performance is a very prominent feature.

FALKIRK.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr Horace W. Ebbutt.—Messrs C. and F. Renad's company in The Swiss Express has this week delighted crowded houses with his musical pantomimical comedy. As the eccentric servants of Dr. Gull (Mr Wilford Bailey), who is on his honeymoon tour, Messrs Charles and Frederick Renad provided a comical repast which more than satiated those who hunger after knockabout business. All of the parts were well taken, the other principals being Miss Marie Millward, Mr George Martin, and Mr Alec Wylie. A series of exceedingly clever and pretty dances was given Misses Rosie Chandler, May Cornish, Dolly Payne, and Hetty Coventry. The mechanical effects which are introduced during the comedy, particularly in the express scene, are skilfully executed.

FARNWORTH.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr T. Morton-Powell.—A welcome return visit of Mr F. S. Gilbert and company is being paid here this week. Monday was given over to Wallace's Maritana, which was performed with great care and tunefulness. Mr Gilbert's fine tenor voice was heard to great advantage in the various numbers of Don Cæsar, and he was frequently recalled. Miss Constance St. Bride as Maritana found much favour by her sweet singing. Mr Albert German was a powerful Don Jose, and Mr H. G Place was pleasing as the King of Spain. The Bohemian Girl, Il Trovatore, Faust, The Daughter of the Regiment, and Lily of Killarney are also in the week's repertory. The band is under the conductorship of Mr Charles Bye.

FOLKESTONE.

PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr H. W. Rowland.—The Moody-Manners opera company is here this week, and has attracted large audiences. The répertoire includes Faust, Il Trovatore, Mignon, Tannhauser, and Carmen. On Tuesday night Il Trovatore was played. Mr Edward Arthur does excellent work as Manrico; Mr T. H. Wood as the Count Di Luna deserves special mention; Mr David Fuller is especially good as Fernando; Mr R Brookes is successful as Ruiz; Miss Van Lachtarp is well placed as Inez; Miss Sarah Berry is a capable Azucena; and Miss Van Leslie scores in the rôle of Leonora.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager, Mr Frank Seabrook.—A good programme is provided here this week, and includes Miss Nellie Tauer, comedienne, who is well received. Mr Joseph Blaschesk, comedian, finds favour; Miss Adela Sutcliffe excels as a solo violinist; and the Ladies' Blue Salon Band and animated pictures evoke applause.

GAINSBOROUGH.

ALBERT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Robert Kirk.—Miss Rose Faith's company appeared here for three nights last week in No Cross No Crown. Mr J. M'Bride gives an admirable rendering of Sir Francis Luttrell, and Miss G. Stewart is pathetic in the dual rôle of Lady Margaret and Mistress Gray. Miss Rose Faith as Clare and Mr L Darra as Austin Blake are successful in the villainous element. Mr C. George gave a good character sketch of Rawson Haines, and Mr Herbert Clifton and Miss Maude Elliott were amusing as Dr. Ashby and Dame Priscilla respectively. Dresses good, scenery excellent.

GATESHEAD.

METROPOLE THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr J. Straughan.—A strong variety bill is headed by the musical comedians Simms and Simms, who provide a most interesting turn. Atlas and Vulcana, the society athletes, submit one of the best shows of its kind; the child comedienne Wee Mona is responsible for a most interesting turn; in a sketch, entitled Brother for Brother, Messrs King and Rose provide plenty of amusement, as do also Hill and Cox in a comedy act. Other good turns are contributed by Rowland Hill, comedian; Louis Kerno, vocalist and dancer; the Wallys, comedy jugglers; and Shang Hia, mystifier.

GLOUCESTER

THEATRE ROYAL.—Owners, Messrs C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr W. H. Weller.—Miss Emma and Mr Percy Hutchison's company in A Country Mouse is a capital attraction. Miss Dido Drake gives a fine performance of the demure Angela, and as the Hon. Archibald Vyse Mr Sidney Sterling is responsible for a smart and clever impersonation. Miss Dorothy Drake makes a charming Lady Sylvia Bowlby; John Bowlby is sufficiently austere in the able hands of Mr Charles Harley; Violet Aynsley is meritoriously enacted by Miss Eve Erskine; and Mr Wilson Lumley is eminently satisfactory as Lord Robert Wykeham. Mr Arnold Lucy contributes an excellent rendition of the Duke of St. Kitts, and Miss Emily Levettez as the voluble Mrs Cropper is highly humorous. The comedy is preceded each evening by His Landlady.

GOOLE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr John E. Tomlinson.—Messrs J. K. Murray and J. M. Dawson's company in Driven From Home opened a week's engagement here on Monday. Mr J. K. Murray sustains with distinction the rôle of Anthony Raybrook; the Walter Hatherleigh of Mr Jack Dawson is faithfully interpreted; Mr Cyril Harrison is an accomplished Geoffrey Waring; Mr C. Stanhope scores as Adam Morley; and Mr Stanley Douglas does well as Jabez Thomas. Mr Aylmer J. Williams as Dick Saunders gives a good presentment of their respective parts; Mr Jack M'Kenzie makes a clever and humorous John Anderson, and has an able seconder in Miss May M'Kenzie as Margaret Ballie. A word of praise is due to Miss Lydia Donovan for her excellent portrayal in the dual-rôle of Laura Raybrook, and Walter Hatherleigh, jun. Miss Alice Metcalf plays well as Barbara Ashdown.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. W Nightingale.—Mr Charles Harrington and company are paying a return visit with Uncle Tom's Cabin. Mr J. Carr gives a natural and sympathetic rendering of the rôle of Uncle Tom; Mr Harrington is excellent as Phineas Fletcher; Mr John Henry Rogers is a sufficiently cruel Legree; Miss Zerlina Zerbini is effective as Cassy; Little Eva is prettily played by Little Minnie; Miss Hettie Johnson is successful as Eliza Harris; and Topsy is capitally represented by Miss Sylvia Stella.

GREENOCK.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the Executors of the late Mr Alex. Wright; Managers, Messrs A. B. Wright and J. J. Wright.—Miss Marie Dagmar and Mr Fred C. Somerfield's company is paying a visit here this week with the drama A Life's Revenge. Mr Fred C. Somerfield is excellent as Prince Strogoff, and Mr Walter Roberts acts Michael Orloff satisfactorily. Mr John Traynor does well as Paul Starovitch, and a capable exponent of Maurice Trevor is found in Mr Pringle Roberts. The part of Colonel Tumbleoff is well played by Mr Chas. E. Warne; Mr Sidney Ernest is good as Nicholas; and Mr Percy Brown fills the rôle of Clarence Chesterfield with distinction. Mr Edwin Cheetham gives a fine portrayal of General Mikhaloff; Mr Martin Bigham plays Lieutenant Smalloff in a way that earns approval; and Petroff finds a careful representative in Mr George Playfare. Miss Catherine Eckhart is well received as Marcia Vittoria; Miss May Davis does good work as Daphne Dashaway; Miss Amy Hughes is all that could be desired as Acoulina; and Miss Marie Dagmar gives a finished rendering of Princess Vanda Ivyala.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. L. Skivington.—A capable company is here this week, and includes the Marconis, the electric wonders, who give an interesting demonstration. The Sisters Marion, dancers and cake-walkers, get a hearty reception; Alice Cassidy, comedienne, sings well; Ethel Rosford and Gerald Hunt, the Australian comedy duo, are funny; the O'Malleys are retained for another week, and continue to amuse; Walter Emerson, comedian, does well; Tom Cuthbertson, baritone vocalist, uses a fine voice with effect; Richardson Taylor is a clever ventriloquist and whistling imitator; and Mueller and Coyne give a first-class variety turn.

GRIMSBY.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—A new drama, A Path of Thorns, under the management of Hardie and Von Leer, has been presented here this week. Mr Claude King appears as John Edmunds, and realises that character admirably. Miss Violet Luddington does not fail to win the approbation of the audience as Bessie. Mr Cyril W. Mackay creates a favourable impression as the Rev. Frank Selby. Messrs Cecil Du Gue and G. M. Cook as the partners Jonas Deane and Edward Langley fulfil all requirements. The burglars Jem Price and Ratty Gabbitt are realistically portrayed by Mr J. H. Booth and Mr Forrester Harvey. Miss Mary Raby and Miss M. Stanley Burt are each well suited to the characters of the sisters, Constance and Nellie. Sam Hallett, an amusing Lancashire individual, is well played by Mr Alfred Lester, and Miss Amy Rogerson makes a thoroughly satisfactory Jane Adelaide. The part of Lucy is prettily taken by Little Mabel May.

HIPPODROME.—The performance given by the Akimotos Troupe at the Hippodrome this week has been as interesting as it is comprehensive. The artistes, who are Japanese, number five, and perform feats of jugglery and equilibrium of a widely varied character. A miniature circus has been presented by Clown Alfred Barker and Miss Roziska. Their troupe of animals comprises dogs, monkeys, a donkey, and a diminutive pony, which are trained to accomplish a number of novel tricks. Les Sprays have introduced a novelty in the way of dancing, described as the Waltz Tourbillon. Laffan B. Jolly, an appropriately named comedian, has contributed some amusing laughing songs. Flo Challis, contralto, has sung some pretty ballads; good songs have also been rendered by George Foyle, character vocalist. Rennie has provided a capital ventriloquial turn, and a display of up-to-date animated pictures has completed an excellent programme.

HALIFAX.

GRAND THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling; Acting-Manager, Mr Norman Robinson.—Mr F. R. Benson is always sure of a warm welcome in Halifax. His répertoire of Shakesperean plays this week includes The Merchant of Venice, Hamlet, Merry Wives of Windsor, Othello, Richard II, and Macbeth. Mr Benson's Shylock is a very artistic performance, and he was warmly received throughout, being well supported by Messrs A. Whitby, B. A. Pittar, Cyril Keightley, George Buchanan, H. O. Nicholson, Clarence Derwent, and Misses Gertrude Scott, Mabel Moore, and others. Mrs Benson's performances are of a very high order of merit. The plays are very well staged.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr Steuart Cecil.—Heading the bill this week is Charles Aldrich, a versatile and exceedingly clever artiste, whose performance must be seen to be understood. Sanford and Lyons are a hard-working couple of comedians, and enjoy a deserved popularity. Fyne and Hurley do a good comedy turn; Lillie Lassah excels as a danseuse, and has a chic style in her songs; the Jalvans submit a smart equilibristic act; the Brothers Harlem are responsible for a good turn that includes acrobatics and bâton and musket manipulation; Talbot and Douglas are seen to advantage in a speciality act; and the Sisters Charnley are attractive.

HASTINGS.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr George H. Gaze.—Mr George Rollit's sporting farce, The Money-Makers, was played here on Monday for the first time by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr Percy Hutchison's company. The acting of Miss Muriel Ashwynne as Dot and Miss Lorna Lawrence as Mabel thoroughly realised the naïveté of those characters, and kept the house in a roar of laughter. Bella was well rendered by Miss Francis Davie. Miss Mary Griffiths' Mrs Bannerman was good, and Mr Frank Lacy as Captain Archie and Mr Edward Bonfield as Charles Clifton were natural. Praiseworthy work was done by Mr Edward Sidney as Fred, Mr Allan Thomas as Mathew M'Dougall, and Miss Violet Ley as Baby Berkeley. Two in a Trap preceded, and was well acted by Miss Violet Ley and Mr Frank Lacy.

ST. LEONARDS PIER PAVILION.—Local Manager, Mr Elvey Thomas; Entertainment Manager, Mr Drew Mackintosh.—Messrs W. T. Elworthy and J. H. Buckley's company is presenting A Pair of Spectacles. The contrast of character in the two brothers is wonderfully exemplified by Messrs Brember Wills as Benjamin Goldfinch and Mr W. T. Elworthy as Gregory. Miss Bertha Elliott takes the part of Mrs Goldfinch in a natural and convincing manner; Miss Kathleen Maitland as Lucy submits a neat performance; Mr Harold Standing as Percy does very well, and Dick is a manly and true representation given by Mr Escott Robson. Mr Norman Aveling takes the part of Mr Lorrimer.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Harold Penny.—Miss Lilian Rigby is an attractive singer and dancer; Eugene and Willie introduce a clever turn with violins; the Sisters Vine cause great amusement in their Kitchen rehearsal; Mr Herbert Shelley, actor-vocalist, is well applauded; Kitty Clover and company's sketch, Mistaken Identity, creates immense laughter; the Leonards (Bob and Jennie) are a great success in their original creations; Mr Joe Peterman's song sheet, supported by Miss Nellie Lewis and a coon chorus, is a much appreciated turn; Charles De Camo introduces his highly trained canine marvel, Cora; and the Bioscope is an interesting conclusion to a good entertainment.

HEBBURN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr W. A. Jackson.—The excellent variety company here this week is headed by the Sisters Phillips and the Brothers Lorenzi, in their funny pantomical absurdity The Cook's Birthday. Prince Fee Lung, the Chinese juggler, meets with success in his mystifying manipulations; York, Mack, and York submit a clever and amusing comedy act entitled Widow Mac's Troublesome Boys; and Mr Charles Valvo, a ventriloquist of great ability, submits an altogether novel and pleasing sketch, introducing life-sized walking figures. Marie Katusha, chic serio-comedienne; Beatie Foster, descriptive vocalist; Codge, the whistling street arab; Teddy May, eccentric comedian; and Wallace Whitney, comedian, complete the bill.

HORWICH.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Arthur Sandiford; Acting-Manager, Mr Alfred Holles.—Mr Fred Bulmer's company in Sentenced for Life is the attraction here this week. The piece is admirably staged, the scenery and mechanical effects being very realistic. The company, an exceedingly good all-round one, includes Mr Ernest Vaughan, who depicts Captain Paul Derrick in appropriately lurid colours. Mr Richard Bosco makes of Sir Wallace Stillwell a fine old aristocrat; Mr Harry Lloyd is a fine, manly Lieut. Roy Stillwell; Mr Chas. Whitlock as the Rev. Martin Orriss is a capital specimen of the "cloth;" Mr E. D. Allen as Percy M'Gentle submits a clever and amusing study of another type of cleric; and Mr A. Marchant and Mr Edward Finley as Bill Sharkey and Toby the Tadpole, two convicts, keep the audience convulsed. Miss Georgina V. France as Adele Gray gives a very sympathetic rendering; Miss Madge Douglas plays Kate Rennel, the discarded mistress of Derrick, with great feeling; and Miss Mary Dalby's Lady Stillwell is a fine performance. The songs and dances by Miss Douglas and Mr Allen receive full recognition.

HOYLAND.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Owner, Arthur Carlton; Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Geo. S. King.—Mr Harry Foxwell and company played The Shadows of a Great City to a crowded audience on Monday. Tom Cooper was admirably represented by Mr Howell Travis; George Benson was cleverly undertaken by Mr Charles Vivian; Arkwright, the detective, was in the capable hands of Mr Arthur A. Tomlin; Jim Farren was drolly represented by Mr Neuton Pearce; Miss Nancy Mitchell as Nellie Standish gave a fine performance; and Miss Sheila Walsh as Biddy Roonan captured the hearts of the audience by her easy and rollicking style.

HULL.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr W. Morton; Local Director, Mr W. F. Morton.—An exceptionally strong attraction for the Fair Week is The Fatal Wedding. The Bridget of Miss Hassell and the Toto of Mr Ed. Morgan are full of humour. Miss Gertrude Harrison makes a conspicuous success as Cora Williams. The mounting is very good and the reception accorded to the play gratifying.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; Local Manager, Mr Wyn Miller.—My Lady Molly returns again to the scene of her former triumph. The tuneful music and striking setting of the opera are to the public taste. In the name rôle Miss Beatrice Edwards has a part that fits her admirably.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Sole Owner, Mr W. Morton; Manager, Mr Geo. Morton.—The Fair production at this house is Her Second Time on Earth, a play which when last here created a great furore. Miss Hilda Beverley is a distinguished member of the company, and maintains a good reputation. The heroine in the hands of Miss E. Vanburgh is capable. The scenic effects are excellent.

PALACE THEATRE.—Moss Empires, Limited; Manager, Mr A. Graham.—The Kellinos are a striking hit. Their speciality act is novel and meets with abundant applause. As a monologue artist Mr R. H. Douglas is pre-eminently successful.

ALHAMBRA.—Resident-Manager, Mr C. J. Bartleet-Perry.—W. J. Churchill, with some smart patter and songs, tops the hill. Another good turn is Will Godwin, actor-vocalist. Ida Gladstone, comedienne, with a good voice, is rapidly forging ahead in popularity. The Bob Hanlon Troupe of trapeze artistes are a welcome addition. The New York Comedy Four are both humorous and harmonious. T. W. Royal, the clog dancer; the Sisters Selwyn, a trio of attractive singers and dancers; and the Waltons, Chinese equilibrists, render a good account of themselves.

CIRCUS.—Resident-Manager, Mr E. Emerson.—The New Century Animated Pictures are making a welcome reappearance.

HUDDERSFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy G. Arthur.—Mr George Dance's company opened on Monday with The Girl from Kay's. The merry musical play went with a rattle from start to finish. The chief laughter provoker was Mr Johnnie Schofield as Max Hoggenheimer, his portrayal of the vulgar millionaire being intensely humorous. Miss Lily Lingard looked very fascinating as Winnie, Miss May Marton sang and acted with distinct ability as Norah, whilst Miss Polly Prim made an excellent pert maid Ellen. Mr Garnet Wilson was peculiarly well suited as Harry Gordon, and won repeated encores with his clever rendering of the song "I don't care." Mr Tom Shelford did not spare himself in his very diverting antics as the Hon. Percy. Mr Charles Goold showed smartly the little foibles of the highly self-estimated hall-porter Joseph. Mr Sam Lysons as Quench, Q.C., and Mr T. Reynolds as Chalmers gave adequate support. A trio of pierrots submitted an artistic rendering of "Under the bamboo tree," which was doubly encored. The chorus, clever and alert, sang briskly and tunefully.

HYDE.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Joseph W. Maloney.—Large houses are being attracted here this week by Mr J. Gar Kiddie's A Chinese Idyl company. An abundance of humour is extracted from the part of Tang-a-Lang by Mr Dawson Dewick, who also scores as a vocalist. Mr Fred Danvers as the Viceroy is also responsible for much hilarity. Mr J. G. Maine submits a clever character sketch of Ching Foo, and Mr F. H. Dundas makes a manly Lieut. West, and sings his numbers in a musicianly manner. Pitti Pat has a charming exponent in Miss Mabel Mainwaring, who warbles very tunefully; a vivacious Princess Stephanie is Miss Emmie Milsted, who is nightly encored for her coon songs and dances; and Miss Bessie Frank makes a pert Belle Brighton.

IPSWICH.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. G. Fisk.—The Medal and the Maid has been played here during the week by Mr Tom B. Davis's company. Mrs D. Rita Leonhardt showed herself to be a capable actress in the rôle of Merva Sunningdale, her songs and dances being much appreciated; while Miss Cissie Sefton as the Schoolmistress and Miss Maud Lake as Josephine were both at home in their parts. Mr Tom Fancourt was capital in the chief male character; while others that rendered effective assistance to the cast were Messrs Tom Graves as Levanter, Campbell Bishop, William Bland, Cecil Kingsley, Miss Zettie Leroy, and Edith Blanché.

HIPPODROME.—The new turns at the Woodbridge-road place of entertainment this week include:—The Imperial Boys' Orchestra, Tom Stuart, a clever personator of Dickens' characters; Kyoto, Japanese balancer; Clyo and Rochelle, comedian; Fields and Acres, duettists; and the Olympian Quartette, a band of pleasing vocalists.

KETTERING.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Payne.—Mr Henry Eglington's company is here in When the Lights are Low. Mr Horace Booth is a capable Guy Goldsworthy, and Mr Edward Avinal gives a powerful study of the villainous nature of Roland Goldsworthy. Mr Tom Seymour is admirable as Ikey. Mr Dick Seddon as Willie Wilkins, Mr Fred Carlton as Tim Wilkins, and Mr J. P. Marsden as Donald Macpherson contribute some excellent fun in their respective characters. Nancy Christie is charmingly portrayed by Miss Adelina Mercandalli, and Miss Kate Froude is successful as her unscrupulous sister, and Miss Maude Leonard is highly appreciated as Kathleen Kerry. The clever acting of Miss Cissy Williams as Stella is deserving of the warmest praise.

KIDDERMINSTER.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr R. C. Gudgeon, jun.—Mr Lawrence Brough's company is providing excellent dramatic force here this week. The Lady of Ostend was played on Monday and two following nights. Mr Harry Hampson ably portrays the character of Dick Whortles, while Mr Percy Marshall is equally as good as Joseph Carbury, his father-in-law. Baron De Longueville is safe in the hands of Mr Lawrence Brough. Miss Kate Milford is charming as Dorothy Whortles. The scenic effects are realistic. On Thursday and Friday the nautical farcical comedy, entitled The Cruise of the Saucy Sally, was produced.

KING'S LYNN.

NEW ROYAL THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, J. Bannister Howard; Business Manager, Herbert Leonard.—The Belle of New York is paying a return visit here. On Monday the play was presented by Mr Ben Greet's No. 1 company, under the direction of Mr J. Bannister Howard, and, as on previous visits, the piece is attracting good business. The company is exceptionally powerful, including Mr Mack Ollive, a local favourite, who as Blinky Bill did full justice to the part; his whistling was much appreciated, Mr A. Ricketts as Ichabod Bronson achieved a success; Mr H. Wardroper was good as Harry Bronson; Violet Grey, the Belle, was charmingly represented by Miss Mona Hersee, who sang sweetly and tastefully; Miss Helen Rose as Fifi deserved praise; Miss Ida Grandison scored as Cora Angelique; and Karl Von Pumpernick, the polite lunatic, was capitally played by Mr Walter Emro. A feature of the evening was the singing of "Sammy" by Miss Florence Hersee, a vivacious Mamie Clancy. The chorus is exceedingly good, under the direction of Mr J. Sainton. On Thursday and following night Charley's Aunt was staged.

Odol is used by Dentists themselves.

By the authorities on modern Science Odol has been proved the Best for cleansing Mouth and Teeth.

KILMARNOCK.

King's Theatre.—The Ben Greet company, under the direction of Mr J. Bannister Howard, is here for this week with The Belle of New York and Florodora. The company is an all-round strong one, but Mr Edward Chester as Ichabod Bronson, Mr Edward Crosland as Harry Bronson, and Miss Adele Roze as the Belle are all worthy of special mention.

LANCASTER.

Athenæum.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Hy. Wilkinson.—We have this week a capital attraction in A Message from Mars, which is well played by Mr Gordon Starkey's company. Mr Cyril Austen-Lee gives a well-thought-out impersonation of Horace Parker; Mr William Lockhart is impressive and dignified as the Messenger; Mr Percy Tyler's rendering of the Tramp calls for special mention; and Mr Alan Birch as the American is successful. Miss Violet Auberies is most effective in the rôle of Aunt Parker, and Miss Edith Cuthbert is a captivating Minnie. A Kiss in the Dark is the curtain-raiser.

LEAMINGTON.

Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Manager, Mr R. Taylor.—Mr John F. Preston's company is here with Lady Godiva, Nell Gwynne, and Jane Shore. Miss Grace Lester plays the title-rôles in each of the pieces, and Mr Edward Beecher and Mr Lewis Leslie are the representatives of the principal male characters.

LEEDS.

Grand Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart, General Manager, Mr Fredk. Vincent.—The house was crowded in every part on Monday when Sir Henry Irving and his company opened with Shakespeare's comedy The Merchant of Venice. Sir Henry's dramatic portrait of the crafty and vindictive Shylock is familiar to all, and loses none of its power, for the great audience was kept intensely interested throughout the performance. A new Portia appears in Miss Edith Wynne Mattheson, a young actress of considerable ability. Mr Gerald Lawrence submits the part of Bassanio with great success; the merchant, Antonio, has a capable exponent in Mr James Hearn; and the feminine parts of Jessica and Nerissa are satisfactorily done by Mrs Cecil Raleigh and Miss Grace Hampton. Mr Chas. Dodsworth and Mr T. Reynolds are distinctly good in the comedy parts of Launcelot Gobbo and Old Gobbo. Sir Henry responded to the numerous recalls with a few words expressing thanks and gratification. The remainder of the week is taken up with the usual répertoire—Becket, The Lyons Mail, Waterloo, and The Bells.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr R. Ernest Liston.—The return visit of Max Goldberg's racing drama Rogues of the Turf is a big attraction at Mr Macnaghten's popular theatre. The company presenting it is Mr John F. Preston's, with Mr Preston himself giving a strong lead as Joe Flaxman, the trainer. The two rogues are effectively presented by Mr George R. Montford and Mr Harry H. Rigould; whilst Mr Stanley May, Mr W. Hartley, and Mr A. Newman are noticeable for good work in big parts. Miss Gertrude Godart fills a leading feminine rôle with many aliases in creditable style; Miss Hilda Shirley capably acts the part of Nellie Flaxman, the trainer's daughter; and good assistance is also rendered by Miss Mabel F. Barlow.

Queen's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs Dottridge and Longden; General Manager, Mr C. H. Longden; Acting-Manager, Mr Chas. Bush.—That veteran actor Mr Henry Neville is to be seen here this week in the two immensely popular plays The Ticket-of-Leave Man and The Two Orphans, which, though seen here many times, still continue to attract interest. On Monday Mr Neville played the title-rôle of the former with all his old power, and was ably supported by a strong company, which includes Mr William Devereux as James Dalton, Miss Evelyn Weeden in a capital portrayal of May Edwards, and Miss May Congden as Emily St. Evremond. The latter part of the week has seen the presentation of The Two Orphans by a powerful cast.

Empire Palace.—Moss Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr T. Gerald Morton.—T. E. Dunville, the popular eccentric comedian, leads the way here, and though his items include nothing new, a goodly reception is secured. Fred Ginnett's highly amusing equestrian sketch Rejected Remounts is again a successful line, whilst the comical business of Brown and Le Clerq is provocative of much hilarity. Rafayette's performing dogs are again in the bill; that smart comedy couple, Rita and Roma, again have a pleasing act; whilst Maxwell and Francess are popular contributors in a similar line. Some clever acrobatics are done by the Three Georges; a pantomimic sketch by the Densmores is well received; and we are further entertained by Harry Dent, comedian, and the Cora Sisters, speciality artists.

Tivoli.—Proprietor, Mr Thos. Barrasford; General Managers, Messrs Chas. Weldon and Edgar O. Waller.—Richard Sawade's fine animal show remains here a second week and is again a big attraction. There is also a remarkably fine array of comedians here, including such stars as Austin Rudd, J. W. Hall, Dave Marion, and Tom Lloyd, and it would be difficult to pick out the favourite, for every one has hosts of admirers. A fine musical entertainment by Nellie and Nora receives due appreciation. Jenny Hartley, an accomplished soubrette, gets a good reception. Alf Aubyn presents his coon song and dance speciality with success, and the rest of the programme is subscribed by the Three Prestons, in a comedy sketch, and Chas. R. Whittle, comedian.

City Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr F. W. Wood; General Manager, Mr J. C. Whiteman; Acting Manager, Mr S. Jones.—Arthur Lennard, the popular actor-vocalist, is the bright particular star at this hall. Another strong turn is that of the Brothers Artois, comedians and expert acrobats. Clever items in the comedy sketch line are done by Edgar Forrest and company, and also by Ray and Calden, a smart comedy duo; whilst the Brighton Boys are not far behind in their efforts to please. The Sisters Hall sing and dance effectively; Georgie May secures considerable plaudits for her vocal efforts; and J. H. Aitken, comedian, and Lizzie Fletcher, comedienne, complete the bill.

LIMERICK.

Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr Robert Fogerty.—Mr Henry Johnston's musical comedy company is presenting The Houp-La Girl here this week. Mr Thomas Barry is a capital Prince of Felsenberg; as Lieutenant Lampton and Major Davenport Messrs Launcelot Usher and Eric Dalmere are very good; and Mr Jack Durant is a clever and artistic Frank Saville. Olga, the Duchess of Stadt, has a clever interpreter in Miss Harland; Miss Bella Fossette is an amusing Miss Matilda Berkins; as Isobel Miss Madge Fraser is good; and Miss Edith Haley is a bewitching Dick. The leading rôle of La Belle Rosiere is well played by Miss Florence Brandon; the Rosie Rice Quartet of dancers fairly win the applause of the delighted audience; and the chorus and orchestra are under the able bâton of Mr George Sheldon.

LOUGHBOROUGH.

Town Hall Theatre.—Proprietors, the Corporation; Lessees, Messrs W. Payne Seddon and George Robertson.—Capital houses witnessed three nights' performances of Under the Russian Flag, presented by Messrs Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's very capable company. Mr Howard as Captain Demetrius pleased immensely. Miss Ellen Snow played Luka Marischka with telling effect, and Miss Ada Champion elicited sympathetic cheers for her interpretation of Vera Vassiloff. The performances were considerably enlivened by Mr Alfred Bennet as Alexis Skopolopki, Mr Halford as Peter Poluski, and Miss Agnes Howard as Ogarita—characters in the lighter vein. The mounting of the drama was one of the features of the production.

LEICESTER.

Royal Opera House.—Sole Proprietor, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; Acting-Manager, Mr C. D. Leigh.—Large audiences are expressing their delight here with that evergreen and attractive musical play, A Chinese Honeymoon, which is being presented in admirable style by Mr George Dance's No. 1 company. As usual with companies sent out by Mr Dance, everything is done to make the performance a thorough success. Mr Martin Adeson, as the amorous Mr Pineapple, has a most congenial part, in which he is conspicuously successful. Mr Philip Hayden as Hang Chow, Mr Ernest Laws as Chipple Chop, Mr Fred Payne as Hi Lung, and Mr Frank Crimp as Tom Atherton, all give impersonations of their respective parts that evoke the highest praise. Miss Vera Vere is a mirthful and clever Fi-Fi, and as Soo-Soo Miss Madge Temple is delightful. Miss Eva Bevington is all that can be wished for as Mrs Pineapple. Miss Holford Beringer makes a capital Mrs Brown. There is an attractive chorus and augmented orchestra, which are under the direction of Mr A. Romilli. Mr J. Alban Newton is the courteous manager for the company.

Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; General Manager, Mr John H. Clarke.—The boards are held this week by Mr J. Rice Cassidy's company in the interesting romantic musical play, Dan the Rake. Mr J. Rice Cassidy as Dan Donnelly is throughout seen to considerable advantage, and Miss Lilian Clare as Madge is also to be complimented on an excellent performance. Mr Norman Hall is good as the French cook, Archille.

Palace Theatre, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Leonard Vidal.—At the head of this week's excellent programme is Mr Fred Karno's comedians, who are presenting for the first time in Leicester an entirely new and original travesty on the modern music hall, entitled Mumming Birds. The laughter is loud and incessant while these clever comedians occupy the stage. Max Renard makes a first and most successful appearance with his marvellous statuary dogs. As a trick cyclist Alexander stands in the front rank, his show being very clever. Florrie Gallimore, who is a favourite in Leicester, gets her usual warm welcome. Austin Boyd and Trixie Gilfain are as clever and amusing as ever. Miss Lilian Lowe, a sweet singer, delights every part of the house with her excellent vocalism. Fanny Erris, character comedienne, is well received for her well rendered songs. The Brothers Durant, comedy trapeze artistes, who introduce their airship, give a clever and amusing show. The animated pictures on the American Bioscope are all fresh to Leicester.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Lapworth.—Oliver Conroy, a quaint, clever, and clean comedian, who stars this this week, repeats his usual big success; Stern and Stern, comedians, duettists, and acrobatic dancers, give a smart and popular turn; Johnny Holland and company, who are retained over another week, cause much hilarity with their absurdity, The Boat Builder; the Four Trees, duettists and dancers, are on a successful return visit. Other artistes entertaining are Carne Curre, in a comedy act, introducing dog, banjo, and story; Brothers Lavelle, comedy acrobats; Lydia Dudley, comedienne; and the Brothers Ralston, characteristic duettists.

LEIGH.

Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Dewhurst; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Dewhurst.—The new farcical comedy, Why William Lied, is being presented here this week by the author, Mr Paul Clifford, and company. Mr Clifford in the rôle of William Jackson, who lies so glibly, invests the part with a breezy and amusing effrontery. Mr George Percy as Charlie Smythe, who "fixes things so nicely," is successful; Mr Theodore Jones as Colonel William Jackson plays the part with much vigour; and Mr Edward Coutts and Mr Leslie Pryce Hamer as Dr. Jack Gordon and Dick Morris respectively are well placed. Miss Alice Hunter as Mabel Dean makes a charming widow; Miss Lilian Piercy is a typical Chicago heiress; and Miss Kathleen Clifford is very pleasing as Dorothy Dean. Jerry and a Sunbeam is the curtain-raiser.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. H. Dunlop.—Mr Chas. Morritt, illusionist, tops the bill here this week and astonishes all by his sleight-of-hand performance. He also introduces a blind man, who proves to the audience what a remarkable memory he has. Messrs Halsey and Bowers, comedians and patterers, create roars of laughter with their catchy ditties. Master George, boy soprano, has a sweet voice, and soon wins admiration from all. Mr Will M'Cormac, comedian, is also amusing. Miss Violet Beatrice, vocalist, also finds plenty of admirers. The Hippodrome pictures complete an attractive programme.

LINCOLN.

Royal.—Manager, Mr Frank King.—When London Sleeps is being presented by Mr C. Finch Hatton's company, and is meeting with great favour. Mr Tom Ronald is very good as David Englehart; Miss Ella Sennett does well as Queenie Carruthers; Mr R. S. Trelawney is forcible as Haynes; and Miss Grace Baring is an effective Hilda Carrode. The chief comedy parts are in the able hands of Mr Darcy Kelway and Miss Barnley Clarke as the circus artists, Mr Charles Digby as Bertie, and Miss Daisy Clifford as Maudie.

Palace.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr Sydney Arthur.—This week's bill includes Mr Harry Tate's company, in the farcical sketch Motoring, which causes constant roars of laughter. Dolly Harmer's turn goes strongly. Doody and Wright pay a most welcome return visit, as does Horace White, whose act is very artistic and decidedly smart. Bertha Winder's dancing is one of the big features of the show, and other capital turns are given by the Mezondos, Bennett and Martell, and Max Sterling.

Central Hall.—H. D. Roberts' Animated Photo. company are here for a week, and opened on Monday to a house packed from top to bottom with a very good show of pictures and variety turns.

LLANELLY.

Royalty Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr John Tully.—Messrs E. H. Knight and Geo. Denham's company is here this week in The Grip of Iron, Mr Fred Powell giving his clever impersonation of Simmonet with great success. Mr George Denham (who, by-the-by, is a Llanelly boy) takes the part of Paul Blanchard well. Messrs Harry Agar Lyons and John Brittain as the rival detectives are both good, and merit applause. Mr Andrew Liston scores as "the Smiler." Mr J. Wilton Richards as Lorentz De Ribas and Mr John Coghlan as De Beaudin are both most capable. Miss Georgie De Lara is praiseworthy as Cora. Miss Nellie Grant is a charming Sophie Blanchard. Miss Hilda Baynton as Marie is also worthy of mention.

LONGTON.

Queen's Theatre.—Manager, Mr H. S. Howard.—Mr Frank M. Thorne is presenting Napoleon the Great here this week. The play is both staged and dressed in an excellent manner. Mr Hugh Montgomery as Napoleon gives a cultured impersonation. Mr Charles Halling as Jules Meuron, the persecuted hero, plays carefully. Mr Henry Earlesmere invests the part of Colonel Lavarennes with sufficient force to call forth the opprobrium of the audience. He has a good supporter in Mr Louis Edmonde, who takes the part of Monsieur Fouché, Minister of Police. Mr C. W. Spencer is suitably brusque as Sergeant Choupin, and, with Mr Frank M. Thorne as Pierre and Miss Marie Harcourt as Marcelle, causes no little merriment in the lighter moments of the action. Miss Maud Russell plays in sympathetic manner Leonie Marbœuf, and Miss Chrissie Dunbar as Marie Walewska is most successful.

LIVERPOOL.

Royal Court Theatre and Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr Arthur Lawrence.—A welcome return visit of The Orchid has during the week been enjoyed by the habitués of the leading Liverpool theatre. Mr George Gregory, the Meakin, provokes uproarious laughter; Mr Lawrence Grossmith shares honours with his Hon. Guy Scrymgeour, earning several encores; Mr Ellis Ogilvie plays with credit the part of the Minister of Commerce; a commendable performance is that of Miss Coralie Blythe as Lady Anstruther; Miss Gertrude Gilliam is a neat Josephine; and Miss Irene Verona is cordially greeted for her Caroline Vokins.

Shakespeare Theatre, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr J. M. Hardie; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Gaffney.—On Monday Halévy's The Jewess was revived here by the Moody-Manners company, and every praise is due to the performers and orchestra for the manner in which they handled this difficult work. Mr Joseph O'Mara was the Jew, and sang with grand effect; Mr Charles Manners was superb as Cardinal Brogni; Madame De Vere acted and sang admirably as Rachael; and other characters were in good hands. The remainder of the week saw Mignon, Carmen, Lily of Killarney, La Traviata, and Maritana. The chorus was powerful and rich in tone, and the augmented orchestra acquitted themselves with credit. On Thursday afternoon Mr Charles Wyndham and Miss Marie Moore occupied the stage with David Garrick.

Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Lessee and General Manager, Mr J. H. French.—A Trip to Chinatown has drawn fairly large audiences here during the week. Mr Chas. Seguin was the "dying man," and created great amusement; Miss Harriet Fawn filled the part of the humorous Widow Guyer, and received good support from Miss Dorothy Vicott as the maid. Mr Jerrold Manville as the bachelor, Ben Gay, was extremely funny, and Mr Leslie Norman, who is responsible for the company, did well as Rashleigh Gay.

Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr M. Montgomery; Licensee, Mr J. G. Howard; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Montgomery, jun.—The Best Must Win is being played here by Messrs Charles Draycott and H. B. Peppin's company. Mr Charles Draycott in the principal rôle of the Panther displayed much dramatic force. In the hands of Mr Fred Aldworth the character of the old blind soldier, Sabretache, was rendered with much feeling and effect. A tender and tasteful type of womanhood was shown by Miss Lilian Watson Loyde, and Miss Ethel Vinroy was a success as Lucille.

Lyric Theatre of Variaties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Henry C. Arnold; Directors of Entertainments, Messrs T. Barrasford and F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Coles.—An excellent programme is topped by the Six Brothers Luck, who create roars of laughter in their pantomime Hotel Grande. The Patty Brothers give a decidedly original act. The Great Wilfred is a marvellous contortionist; the Four Andys are clever acrobats; the Sisters Warner are good dancers and singers; Tom Owen is an amusing comedian; Benson and Geoffreys create a deal of laughter in their sketch, Spoofed; the Wiers are good comedians and dancers; and Charles Mildare greatly interests the audience with his imitations of a parrot. The Lyric Bioscope adds much to the evening's enjoyment.

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr H. Fineberg; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Simmons.—The Rich and Poor of London is being presented here by Messrs Preston and Doherty's company, at the head of which are Miss Dora Dench and Mr Sidney C. Cranston; the latter has played Gussy Lamb over 1,200 times. Miss Dench as May Braithwaite, a hospital nurse, displayed much tenderness and a sympathetic demeanour; Little Arline T. George did credit to her part of the heiress; Mr Jay Laurier was extremely humorous in the rôle of Spider Jack; Mr Andrew Money was a good Mark Stanley; and the striking character of an adventuress was well portrayed by Miss Belle Tilbury. Miss Sybil Viney as the flower girl contributed ably to the lighter part of the play.

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs Carson and Granville; Manager, Mr Fred Granville.—This week we are introduced to A Victim of Villainy, from the pen of Mr Walter Howe. As given by Messrs John A. Atkin and Walter Howe's company the play was received with cordial applause on Monday. The author enacted the part of Frank Manton with distinction; Mr Sydney Arnold was acceptable as Stephen Cavanagh, and among the lady artistes who occupied important positions were Miss Mariette Hyde, Miss Helena Walbran, and Miss H. E. Russell. The Bioscope between the acts is a good feature of the evening's entertainment.

Empire Theatre, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr H. E. Moss; Acting-Manager, Mr T. A. Cook.—The big item on this week's bill is Chung Ling Soo, a marvellous conjuror, who, among other equally clever tricks, catches marked bullets fired from guns. His performance has created general wonder. Selma Braatz provides some exceptionally neat juggling, one principal feature being the use of lighted lamps. The Hoopers are in the same line of business, but introduce a certain amount of humour, which adds to the pleasure of the exhibition; Staley's Novelty Transformation company, with their quick-change actions, put in another week; Carrie Laurie's Juveniles are still a source of enjoyment; Nellie Coleman is as popular as ever; Eight of Hearts give novel and up-to-date songs and dances; the Max Welson Troupe present a clever act upon the hanging ropes; Ernest Rees is a droll comedian; and others in the programme are Miss Georgina Leonard, burlesque actress; Josh Dixon, comedian; Dome, comedy clay modeller; and the Olive Trio of comediennes.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—Heloise Titcomb, the South American singer, is in big type here this week, and was greeted very cordially on Monday. An interesting turn is given by Mr and Mrs Ed. H. Lucas, who present incidents from the works of Charles Dickens. Percy Honri gives a pleasing performance on the concertina, his efforts being very creditable; Jules Keller, the human enigma, is able to walk about and dance as well on his hands as on his feet; Mdlle. Clothide makes her cockatoos and parrots go through some interesting tricks; Fred Cary as a comedian is possessed of a large amount of humour; Mons. D'Musto is an eccentric contortionist; and the remainder of the evening's entertainment is supplied by Mr Arthur Boyne, humourist; Miss Marie Blythe, vocalist; Mr A. G. Spry, comedian; and Madge Grey, comedienne.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr F. O'Toole.—The Liverpool favourite, Miss Mabel Thorne, is at the top of the bill here this week with her latest successes. Cheevers and De Monti give one of the best turns of the evening with their trick skating and chair jumping; Chant and Chant are a couple of quaint comedy artistes; Miss Hetty King, the "society gem," renders several pleasing songs; and others in the programme are the Sisters Terry, duettists; Fred Lincoln, comedian; and Rhoda Hood, comedienne and dancer.

New Parthenon.—Proprietor, Mr Edwin W. Smith.—This week we have the Great Northern Troupe of international dancers, whose reception is a very hearty one. Another big name on the bill is that of Harry Taft, the American whistling comedian, whose powers of raising laughter are great; Miss Bertha Duckett, a gold medallist of London, is a charming child vocalist and graceful dancer. She gives every promise of attaining a foremost position in her particular line. James Fanshaw is a vocalist and comedian; Lil Hartley's singing is very pleasing; and Curran proves himself a whimsical comedian. The Bioscope shows a new set of capital pictures.

Paddington Palace, Limited.—General Manager, Mr James Kiernan.—A series of living pictures shown here have proved a great attraction, as has the exhibition of snapshot photographs of people taken in the street, five shillings being given to any of the audience who recognises his or her likeness. Miss Flo Everette controls a dog's orchestra, which is very amusing; the Darrell Trio give a refined musical act; Mr George Mack renders several humorous ditties very pleasantly; the Esdale Bros. are cordially received for their funny patter; and George Edney scores a success with his imitations of some of Charles Godfrey's character sketches. Norman Russell, the musical schoolboy, gives several smart vocal imitations of animals and instruments.

Westminster.—Proprietor, Mr M. Montgomery.—Good attendances have been the order of the day here to witness Henri Abbey's canine circus on its first visit to Liverpool. The exhibition is pretty and clever. Mdlle. Marvelle gives an exhibition with her performing cockatoos and macaws, who show careful training; the Warlocks provide a humorous sketch, entitled Provoking; a picturesque turn is that of the Marblesque Trio; Professor Stark is an eccentric magician; the Two Eltons execute some clever manœuvres on the triple horizontal bars; and others who appear include H. G. Prosper, comedian, and Alexander Royal, burlesque artiste.

Park Palace.—Director, Mr James Kiernan.—Gerald Mount is at the head of the bill here this week, and pleases everyone with his vocalism and mimicry at the piano; Agnes and Arthur Lynch, American song illustrators, give several descriptive songs with success; Pollard and Grey submit an amusing sketch The Missing Will; George and Edwards are a pair of smart comedians and dancers; and other good turns are by George Bernard, actor-vocalist; the Dunvilles, with their comedy musical act Mansion Domestics; Arthur Elvy, comedian; and Chris Bern, eccentric banjoist.

LONDONDERRY.

Opera House.—Sole Proprietor, Mr W. Payne Seddon.—The New Housemaid is being staged here this week by Mr Oswald Brook's company. As the Hon. Bertie Rashleigh Mr Ralph Roberts fills his rôle with great spirit; Peter Pinkerton, impersonated by Mr Somers Bellamy, is very well played indeed; the part of Marmsbury Doom is cleverly handled by Mr Pan E. Draco; Caroline is powerfully handled by Miss Madge Haines; and Miss Ethel Caryllon is a delightful Dulcie.

LUTON.

Grand.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr E. Graham Falcon; Assistant-Manager, Mr Louis J. Beard.—Mr Henry Swinerd's Dare Devil Dorothy company, under the direction of Mr J. W. Cordiner, paid a welcome return visit the first three nights this week. Miss Marjorie Cecil is well placed in the title-rôle. Mr Wm. F. Green scores as Capt. Harold Fielding; whilst Mr Henry C. Ward does well as Captain Dudley. Messrs Arthur Verne as Silas Crump, Wilfred Carr as Featherstone Haugh, and Miss Nellie Harcourt as Judith cause much laughter. Miss Kathleen Garnon is a suitable Ruth Montrose. Mr Ben Greet's company in La Poupée was here on Thursday and Friday.

MACCLESHIELD.

Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr W. K. Gatley.—The attraction here this week is Messrs Beaudyn and Livesey's strong company in A Beautiful Fiend. Miss Sidney Crowe figures to advantage in the title-rôle, her clever and telling delineation being much admired. Mr M. Beaudyn is a powerful Ivan Paulovitch; Mr R. Foulis as Malachi and Mr C. Kean as Crackles supply the comedy element and receive good assistance from Miss Annie Clunn as Patty Woodlands. Miss Irene Munroe as Nadine Karateff does very well.

MAIDENHEAD.

New Pavilion.—Proprietor, Mr G. Gude; General Manager, Mr Arthur Aiston.—This week's programme is an attractive one. Miss Abbie Hayler is well received in her character songs; Miss Cissy Trent is encored for a neat and cleverly executed turn as a lightning quick-change artiste; and the Manikens are applauded for their novel performance. Arthur Royce and Sid Stanto entertain with musical sketches. Leslie Digby appears as comedian and dancer, while Messrs Newland and Nash cause amusement with song and patter. Zidney does an acceptable turn as equilibrist and speciality artist.

MAIDSTONE.

Corn Exchange.—Manager, Mr Beesley.—The attraction here this week has been Mr Eugene C. Stafford's comedy company with Jane, which has delighted large houses nightly. Miss Dora Gray in the title-rôle was charmingly successful, and Mr W. Hargreaves as Mr Kershaw was a powerful character. Great praise is due to Mr Wilfrid Compton, who as William Tipson did excellent service; while Mrs A. Davis made an equally vivacious Mrs Chatwick. The other characters were in the competent hands of Mr Fred Inwood as Charley Shackleton, the much-married man; Mr Vivian Gilbert as Claude; Miss Mary E. Deverell as Lucy Norton; and Miss Cecily Wade as Mrs Picton; and Mr R. Chester as Mr Picton. A dramatic comedy Good for Nothing was given each evening as a curtain-raiser.

MANCHESTER.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr Edmondstone Shirra.—Miss Olga Nethersole and her company are here this week in a trio of attractive plays. The first of these, The Second Mrs Tanqueray, was given on Monday evening to the satisfaction of a large house, Miss Nethersole being seen to great advantage in the difficult rôle of Paula Tanqueray, which she rendered with fine taste, judgment, and individuality. Mr G. S. Titheradge was conspicuously successful also as Aubrey Tanqueray, and Mr Berte Thomas played Cayley Drummle in a light and pleasing spirit. Other characters contributed the necessary piquancy to the representation. On Tuesday Sudermann's fine play, Madga, was given, Miss Nethersole's rendering of the title-part being exceedingly well defined. She was admirably supported by Mr G. S. Titheradge as Leopold Schwartze, Mr Berte Thomas as the pastor of St. Mary's, Mr Edward Fielding as Dr. Keller, and by the Misses Frances Ivor and Rosalind Ivan as Augusta and Marie respectively. Wednesday's performance of Sapho added another to the long list of Miss Nethersole's achievements in the title-rôle of this attractive drama. Each of the plays is well mounted and brilliantly dressed.

Prince's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr George Lee.—Mr Charles Macdona's company in Three Little Maids occupies the boards here this week. This is a very pleasing musical play, which the company in question is able to render quite satisfactorily to the average audience, a fact which was evidenced by the frequent and hearty applause of the house on Monday evening. The three maids of the title are vivaciously impersonated by Miss Janet Reeve, Miss Gertrude Melville, and Miss Nora Guy, and the three men are Mr Haddon Cave, Mr Alec Chantrens—an agreeable singer—and Mr Arthur Longley, the latter an efficient comedian, suitably cast for the part of Lord Cheyne. Miss Kate Forster is again successful as Lady St. Mallory, and much amusement is contributed by Mr Gus Oxley as Cupid and Miss Laura Wright as Gretchen. A full chorus and augmented orchestra are under the direction of Mr Julian Rutt.

Royal Osborne Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr W. H. Broadhead; Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—A big attraction is here this week in the shape of Clarence Burnette's drama When a Man Hates, which is played by a company under the direction of Miss Olga Audré and Messrs Travis Green and Arthur Hinton. Mr Arthur Hinton gives a fine depiction of Pietro Danelli. Mr A. S. Baron is really excellent as the half-witted Paul. Miss Vere Mosley works admirably as Olga Gwynne, the woman with a past. Other good parts are well played by Mr Chas. Cairns, Mr Ploens Gains, Miss Lilian Earle, Mr Tom Taylor, and Miss Marie E. Robertson.

Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr H. M. Thorburn.—A decided treat is provided for patrons here this week in the engagement of Mr Edward Terry and a capital company in a répertoire of plays including Sweet Lavender, The House of Burnside, Love in Idleness, The Passport, and other pieces of minor importance. A large house witnessed the first-mentioned play on Monday, in which Mr Terry and Miss Beatrice Terry sustained the principal parts in delightful style. Tuesday's performance of The House of Burnside was remarkably good also, a very fine character sketch being given by Mr Terry as Richard Burnside, and Miss Daisy Murch sustaining the rôle of Marion, his erring daughter-in-law, with admirable sympathy and emotion. Mr Arthur Cornell also deserves high praise for his natural rendering of Robert Parminter. Bardell v. Pickwick was a capital conclusion to the evening's entertainment. All the plays are admirably staged.

Metropole Theatre.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—The quality of the programme at this popular house is well kept up this week, the principal turns being Rosemont and Clarke's Philadelphians, a vaudeville company of American coloured artistes, and Fred Southern and company in an amusing sketch. Capital turns are submitted also by the Brothers Lloddge, athletes; Novellos, society acrobats; Hart and Rudd, comedians and dancers; Harry Grey, Australian comedian; Reed and Glenny, in a farcical comedy; Bliss and Bliss, patter comedians; Private Clarke, the soldier vocalist; and T. W. Johnson, dusky comedian and sand dancer.

Grand Junction Theatre.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—An interesting sensational drama, Her Forbidden Marriage, by Frederick Melville, is presented here this week by a clever company, under the direction of the author. One of the sensations of the piece is the introduction of a motor-car. The principal parts are excellently rendered by Mr Horace Hunter, Mr Gilbert Heron, Mr Charles Carte, and Miss Emily Hughes, while Mr Harry Elliston, Miss Isla Garnett Vayne, and Little Alice are also seen to advantage in interesting rôles. The scenery is good, and the general performance leaves nothing to be desired.

Queen's Theatre.—Manager, Mr Richard Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Berry.—That powerful attraction, Sherlock Holmes, occupies the stage here this week, an excellent performance being given by Mr Charles Frohman's capable company. Mr H. A. Saintsbury is in the title-part, which he renders irreproachably; while a strong impersonation of Moriarty is given by Mr W. F. Stirling, and Mr Leslie Carter makes a decidedly effective Larrabee. Among the remaining members of the cast, Master Cedric Walters is conspicuous for a smart impersonation of the boy Billy.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—Dinah Morris and her troupe of Southern State artistes are here this week in a sketch entitled The Lost Coon, in which songs and cake-walks are introduced, not the least entertaining feature being an excellent concertina solo by a blind collier boy. The Schaffers are an exceedingly clever trio of muscular performers, and are deservedly applauded. Jack and Evelyn give an entertaining turn in song, burlesque, and sand-dancing; and Robins and Collier cause much laughter in a capital absurdity. Very amusing and well received are the turns of Jack Hylton, the eccentric; Martin Conway, of "walk round, Martin," fame; and Will Ellerslie, comedian. Others who appear with success are Frank Staley, actor-vocalist; Florrie Bray, comedienne; Alex. M'Nulty, pleasing juvenile vocalist; and a series of animated pictures complete.

Queen's Park Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—An excellent all-round entertainment is offered here this week, chief amongst which must be placed the Imperial Russian Troupe of national singers and dancers, whose efforts are received with the utmost satisfaction. Special mention should also be made of the globe walking performance of Mdlle. Florence, which is decidedly clever and graceful, and of the lightning sketches in oils executed by Mons. Vandinoff. The droll songs of George Prince, described as the "crazy comedian," evoke much laughter, as does also Larry Lewis with a couple of songs, rendered in an unusually quaint manner. Much amusement is also caused by the Ten Stilt-walkers, who promenade the stage in grotesque costumes. Some remarkably clever feats of "foot equilibrium" are contributed by Hannas and James; J. P. Carroll is expert with the tambourine; the Sisters Aindow offer a delightful musical act; the Pender Troupe appear in a pantomime extravaganza, entitled Hands Up! Texas Bill gives an exhibition of American sharp-shooting; and animated pictures are also shown.

Tivoli.—Managing Director, Mr Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr Arthur B. Wilkes.—A capital entertainment is provided by the current programme here, the bill including no fewer than three star turns; to wit, Billie Barlow, the charming burlesque actress; F. V. St. Clair, the famous descriptive singer and extempore vocalist; and James Fawn, a popular comedian, who is always heartily appreciated by Manchester audiences. Other clever and enjoyable turns are Solo and Mayo, burlesque artistes; the Dorothy Quartet of speciality dancers; Charles Woodward, character comedian; Alma Jones, contralto vocalist; Pattie M'Carthy, South African comedienne; and Tom Jones, character comedian.

Grand.—Lessees, Messrs Thomas Barrasford and Will Sley; Manager, Mr H. C. Arnold, jun.—A big attraction here this week is Marie Lloyd, who makes a decided hit, particularly with her songs, "The Coster's Wedding" and "The Tale of the Skirt." Carola's miniature circus introduces some well-trained ponies and dogs; Vansart, "the man with the grip of iron," appears in athletic poses and gives a capital exhibition in feats of strength; Clark and Argyle are excellent national dancers; and Arthur Albert is a first-rate comedian, who comes in for a good reception. Good turns are also provided by Hurman, a smart hoop manipulator; Mark Tapley, comedian, with good patter; Bogg and Bogg, decidedly comic conjurors; and Ella Lane, vocalist. The animated pictures are particularly interesting.

Palace.—Manager and Secretary, Mr Peter Watson; Assistant-Manager, Mr J. H. Stringer.—Miss Ada Blanche and company are here this week in a new comedietta, entitled Becky Bounder, the Laundry Girl, produced by Mr Robert Courtneidge. For a music hall sketch, it is much above the average. The excessive affection shown by Mr Tomkins to his wife is the cause of the trouble. She tells her brother, Bob Perkins, a naval officer, that she is weary of it all. To cure her he gets Becky Bounder to feign falling in love with Mr Tomkins, on the understanding that Bob shall set her up in a greengrocer's business, in order that she may marry her "young man." Mr Tomkins is susceptible, Mrs Tomkins becomes jealous—climax, explanation, and all ends well. As Becky Miss Ada Blanche is particularly vivacious, and excellent support is rendered by Messrs William Morgan and Norman Partriege and Miss Sylvia Morris. The scene, which is laid in Tomkins's house, is very good. Remaining from last week are George Lashwood, as popular as ever; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, the clever trick and comic cyclists; and Ada Cerito, comedienne. A most enjoyable item is that of Sam Mayo, the "Immobile" comedian, who is most amusing. The charming Daisy Dormer, comedienne, is a first-rate acrobatic dancer, and Stella Stanley is a pleasing comedienne. Conan and Doyle, comedians, dance well; Gilbert Gerard is a clever animal and sound imitator; Tatten Hall is a good vocal comedian; and others who contribute are James Grant and Walter Munroe, comedians. The overture to Tannhäuser is excellently rendered by the orchestra, and a series of interesting animated pictures completes.

ARDWICK EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Will Collins.—The chief attraction here this week is Mdlle. Madeline, whose Looping the Loop incident is highly sensational. The Manhattan Comedy Four are excellent glee-singers, and also create some amusement. A marvellous and graceful gymnastic performance is gone through by the Mascotte Trio, who are deservedly loudly applauded. Laughter-making turns are contributed by Charles Austin, a capital eccentric comedian; Palles and Cussick, comedians; and the Mackweys, on and off the wire. Other good turns are Norah Emerald, a dainty song and dance artiste; the Sisters Maginel Mullini, who make a big hit as "triumphal trumpet virtuose;" Brown and Robinson, good vocalists; Charles Vincent, a popular comedian; and animated pictures shown on the Bioscope.

MARGATE.

GRAND THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr F. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr C. F. Bawtree.—Mr Fred J. Kirke has during the week been presenting his musical comedy The Naval Detective. Mr Arthur Hickman is very successful in the part of Lieut Jack Beresford, of H.M.S. Terrible, with with which part he duplicates those of the Rev. Frequent Nipper and Pat M'Guinness. He sings both comic and sentimental songs ably. Mr Robert Gilbert is excellent as Dr. Schreiner, the villain, and Mr H. Griffiths is good as Captain Hustle. Mr Walter Langford has been deservedly popular as the Hon. Bertie Fairlox, and Miss Louie Fountaine works hard and achieves distinct success in the triple rôle of Phyllis Leslie, Mam'selle Lucette, and Bill Mainway. Miss Edith Claus has been very amusing as Susan Scrubbs, the maid-of-all-work, and afterwards as the barmaid. Miss Iris Banfield plays well and sings coon ditties charmingly as Lulu Kaufmann, and Miss Lily Seymour acts excellently as Rebecca Gentle. Miss Florence Hayes is good as Maud Mashem, and the Misses Mamie Walsh and Elsie Paul introduce several smart dances. The songs are bright, the music catchy, and some speciality turns go remarkably well.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr E. Macknight; Business-Manager, Mr Charles E. Hardy.—Mrs Hy. Mayhew and Mr Charles Herrick's company has been playing here this week in the modern French drama, The Triumph of Truth. Mr Edward E. Louis sustains with effectiveness the rôle of Capt. Jack Eversleigh, an English officer, and Mr J. A. Keogh does well as Sir Charles Eversleigh. Mr T. Renaud Lockwood gives plenty of point to the part of the Count Raoul D'Orville. Mr Charles Herrick acts with subtle skill the rôle of the avenger in Vitto Mascagni, and Mr Johnny Clegg as Tommy Woodhead is responsible for most of the fun which lightens the piece. Capable work is done by Mr T. Arthur Elliston as Inspector Danvers. Miss Marie Auckland is particularly successful in the dual rôle of Violet and Lilian Anstruthers, twin sisters. Little Nellie Kenneth plays sympathetically as Lena, the little martyr. Miss Lily Rogers is capital as Katie Bright, an English girl, who is proud of her nationality. Miss Lilian Ramsdale is good as Coralie, an artist's model, and Miss Rosabel Dodd as Blanche De Croix is also praiseworthy. Other parts are capably sustained—Mr Henry Benson, Gaston De Brave; Mr Felix Leigh, Gustave; and Mr P. Baldwin, Adolph Guillem.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr Will Smithson.—Messrs Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company opened here on Monday with The Village Blacksmith. Mr Sam Livesey submits a striking portraiture of John Strong, the village blacksmith; Miss Ethel Kay enlists the sympathies of the audience by her sympathetic treatment of Kate Strong; as Captain Leo Mr Joseph Carter is a cool and polished villain; Miss Maggie Edwards is successful in her embodiment of Kut; Mr Frank Harrison is well placed as Lucas Marler; Jeremiah Parkins and Sal Parkins are well looked after by Mr Thos E Marshall and Mrs T. C. Livesey; Miss Edith Giddens is a lively Mopps; and Mr George V. Campbell ore tes roars of laughter by his impersonation of Billy Twigg. The sensational wrestling match in the final act is received with deafening applause.

MEXBOROUGH.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. H. Melton.—Messrs Beaudyn and Livesey's company is this week presenting A Traitor Prince. Mr G. Montanini plays powerfully in the title-rôle; Mr A. Mortimer gives a good rendering of Lieut. Derrick; Mr G. E Hall is well placed as Cara; Mr A H. Longford creditably fills the dual-rôle of Richard and Colonel Vane; Mr E. C. Livesey (Billy Bright) and Mr T. G. Vane (the Hon. Dalymple) are responsible for excellent comedy; Miss Lilian Rosebury is graceful in the character of Lola Vane; the Vashti of Miss Beatrice Western is a highly capable effort; and the Geisha acrobatic dancers are decidedly smart.

MIDDLESBROUGH.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Directors, Messrs George and Charles Imeson.—Messrs Armadale and Warren's company, in the sensational drama The Face at the Window, is occupying the boards here. Mr Hoggan Armadale appears in his original creation of Le Loup, which has been portrayed by him some 1,500 times. Mr Armadale submits a powerful representation of his character, and Mr Alan Hineson gives a fine study of Le Blanc. Lucien Cortier is in the capable hands of Mr Alfred Richards. Miss Jennie Dempster gives an excellent impersonation of La Pinau, whilst as Marie Brisson Miss Marie Florence is charming, and much praise is due to Miss Lizzie Chambers as Babette.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, the Middlesbrough Grand Opera Company, Limited; Licensee, Mr T. Hopcutt.—Mr W. S. Gilbert's play The Fairy's Dilemma is here this week. The company is under the management of Messrs Silvanus Dauncey and M. V. Leveaux. Mr Frank Stanmore as the Rev. Parfitt submits a most amusing study, and as Colonel Trevor Mauleverer, Bart., Mr Charles V. France keeps the house in merriment. Mr C. Herbert Hewetson is capital as the Demon Alcohol, and Mr Frank Collins pleases everyone as Mr Justice Whortle. The scenery is beautiful and lavish, and the transformation scene adds much to the success of the play. There is a curtain-raiser entitled The Conversion of Nat Sturge, which is done full justice to.

EMPIRE.—Managing Director, Mr John Brill; Manager, Mr J. W. Thornborrow.—At the Empire this week Wood and Bates, eccentric musical comedians, top the bill, and come in for a good meed of applause. The Tally-Ho Trio meet with an excellent reception. They sing some favourite songs with great expression, and their antics provide much amusement. Howard and Collinson, "The Porter and the Parcel," provide much amusement, and Neil Kenyon, comedian, submits some amusing patter, which is enthusiastically received. Charles Norton is a popular mimic, and Flo Wood sings good songs. La Belle Nello, contortionist, and Fred Keeton, comedian, are good. Some amusing films are shown on the Bio, including the great Irish eviction.

OXFORD.—Lessee, Mr Wm. Peacock; Manager, Mr Wm. Ainsworth.—The Dayton Family of Risley acrobats head the bill here, and are enthusiastically received. Charles Vandyke and company, in Nicodemus, create much laughter; Tony Iveson, a Middlesbrough favourite, meets with a good reception; and Gus Harris is as successful as on his former visits to Teeside. Keen and Walad give a smart acrobatic turn, and the Three Sisters Selwyn are clever dancers. Gladys Mavius, Canadian coon; Flo Hill, burlesque actress; and the Bio complete the programme.

MIDDLETON.

PARDOE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr William Pardoe.—Mr Charles Phelp's company, in the play One Woman's Wickedness, is attracting good audiences this week. Mr Phelps plays an escaped convict with effective earnestness, Mr Arthur Ferris is an amusing amateur detective, and Miss Louie Davis, Miss Ethel Ashbury, Miss Florence Lloyd, and Miss Florence M. Daly earn praise.

MOTHERWELL.

NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident Manager, Mr W. Gillespy.—This week we have at this theatre Dr. Bodie and his varied company. As expected, Dr. Bodie gives a grand exhibition of hypnotism and mesmerism. The Sisters Lyle's singing and dancing, and the Garden Troupe of dancers are extremely pleasing; and Mr Gerald Lopez, the dandy coloured coon, gives a good display.

NEWPORT.

LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Sidney Cooper.—Mr C. Lubbock's company is producing here this week The Cherry Girl to appreciative houses. The Queen, who masquerades as Pansy, is played with much spirit by Miss Elsie Molloy; Moonshine is cleverly impersonated by Mr H. Herbert; and Miss Kitty May makes a sweet Pansy. Miss Dorothy Frostick, a clever child, appears in her original part of Mdlle. Pas Bas, singing brightly and dancing very prettily; Miss Julia Vivers as Sylvia sings in a charming manner; and Mr St. John Medley acts admirably as Starlight. The Avondale Quartet render beautiful glees in each act, and Miss Lottie Stone's troupe of dancers form a special feature.

EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr O. Stoll.—A meritorious programme is being placed before patrons here this week. The Brothers Ethairien are extremely funny; Ernest Shand, an old favourite, is much appreciated; and "the Woman in White" sings some pleasing songs, illustrated by charming pictures. Tom Edwards, with "Curly," the original newspaper boy, is clever; the Harvey Boys give an amusing performance; the Three Laurels, in their skill, gracefulness, and daring have been rarely equalled; the Ohms present a novel and pleasing performance, in which they introduce clever ponies, dogs, and bears; and Nina Martino, chanteuse, has an excellent voice. Destiny, a new historical scena, is very ably rendered by Miss Maud Mortimer.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

TYNE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr Fred C. Sutcliffe.—The coming of The Cingalee has been eagerly awaited, and crowded houses have derived plenty of enjoyment from the performance of Mr George Edwardes's successful production. A capital part is that of Chambhuddy Ram, in which Mr Frank Danby appears, and ebullitions of mirth are constantly engendered by this smart comedian's humorous performance. Mr Leedham Bantock in the familiar rôle of an Oriental potentate of limited intelligence scores his usual success, and Mr F. Pope Stamper acts and sings agreeably as Harry Vereker. Mr W. J. Manning submits a sound performance as Sir Peter Lofcus, and Mr Jack Cannot as Bobby Warren is encored for his song concerning the ladies. Miss Anna Hickisch, whose incursion in the domains of musical comedy has been attended with the happiest results, again sings splendidly as Lady Patricia Vane. An emphatic success has been achieved by Miss Eva Sandford, who displays all-round ability of a high order as Peggy Sabine, and the merit of her performance has been fully recognised. Miss Florence Smithson acts and sings with charm as Nanoya, and both Miss Claire Marsden as Naitooma and Miss Claire Pradelle as Sattambi are successful. Mr Harold Vicars directs the augmented orchestra and chorus.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr F. Teale Lingham.—That bright musical play, The Girl from Kay's, made an excellent impression when first presented in this city, and the success then achieved is being repeated this week at the Royal, where it is performed by Mr George Dance's company. Mr H. C. Barry has seldom had better material than is afforded by the part of Hoggenheimer, and his humorously exaggerated sketch of the money magnate who does not hide his light under a bushel is as clever as it is amusing. He introduces some laughable business into the song concerning acrobats, and in this effort praise is also due to Mr Leslie Roy Cathie, who, as Percy Fitzthistle, has a mania for unconventional attire. A flattering reception is accorded Miss Simeta Marsden, who endows the title-rôle with all the requisite knowing qualities, and her song "The Customers at Kay's," which is repeatedly encored, serves to display her cleverness to the best advantage. A pleasing representative of Nora Chalmers is found in Miss Alice Russon, and her sobbing song is capitally given. The two numbers which fall to the lot of Miss Florence Plunket as Ellen are rendered in taking style. Mr Charles Hanbury repeats his very meritorious performance as the dissatisfied bridegroom, Harry Gordon. Mr Fred Rolph contrives to be amusing as the hotel hall-porter. Mr Victor Champion is in charge of the musical forces.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr T. W. Rowe.—The play of "heart interest," When London Sleeps, is again being performed here by Mr Lester Collingwood's company. Miss Maude Hastings, who speaks her lines capitally, makes a commendably spirited and earnest Queenie Carruthers. Hilda Carode, with "a past," has a capital exponent in Miss Mary Brammer. Mr Franklyn Graham submits an excellent performance as Captain Rodney Haynes. Mr Wm. H. S. Sams cuts a fine figure as the circus gymnast David Engleheart, and acts forcibly. In the comedy scenes Mr Victor Mason's gag is "Sorry I don't suit," but this is scarcely applicable to his impersonation, which suits admirably, and he is well assisted by Miss Effie Macintosh as Carrie Jones, while Miss B. Power is a warm-hearted Signorina Jonesio. Miss E. M. France, Messrs Ernest C. Edwards, F. E. Thomas, and Fred J. Waller are also prominent and successful.

NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Director, Mr Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr E. Leslie Conroy.—May Edouin and Fred Edwards are appearing here in their popular playlet, A Bachelor's Dream, in which Miss Edouin impersonates a variety of characters very cleverly, while her laughing song evokes a storm of delighted applause. Winifred Hare has a capital budget of songs, and her tasteful rendering thereof secures for her a full measure of well-deserved approval. The Wartenburg Brothers' speciality is foot juggling, in which they are very expert, and Baker and Balfe are applauded for their xylophone performance. Les Voces are well named, as they are vocalists of merit, and the Sisters Iris please in song and dance. The Werner-Amoros Troupe figure to advantage in their entertainment, which is styled An Artist's Studio. Entertaining musical comedians in the Brothers Webb are well received, and approval is also bestowed on the efforts of Espinosa and Neilson, marvellous dancers. The Alaskas, in their refined comedy act; Bert Dansie, humorous and descriptive vocalist; and My Fancy are also on the bill. The last-named remains for another week, and shows us what it is possible to do in the way of sand-dancing.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr Ernest W. Bacon.—The programme is headed by Heeley and Meeley, two clever eccentric acrobats and dancers, whose turn is a big success. Hanvarr and Anna Lee give a wonderfully clever and entertaining juggling act entitled "The Golfer and the Maid." Mr Dan Thomas, an eccentric comedian well known here, sings and dances in his own clever style; Miss Ruby Bijou, a dainty dancer, is very smart; and other good turns are those of Reed and Lerne, the novel comedians; Lil Esplin, comedienne; Fred Bronte, actor-vocalist; and the Sisters Morrison, comediennes.

OLYMPIA THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Thornton and Bacon; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr Nelson Barry.—The popularity of The Silver King knows no bounds, and this week, performed by Messrs G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company, it is crowding this place of entertainment nightly. Mr Lauderdale Maitland appears as Wilfred Denver with the best results. His wife, Nellie Denver, is sympathetically enacted by Miss Lilian Bethell. Mr W. V. Garrod gives full effect to the villainy of Captain Skinner, and his accomplices, Henry Corket and Elijah Coombe, are well portrayed by Mr Philip Renouf and Mr Arthur Wright respectively. Miss Lorna Treherne does well as Olive Skinner. Mr John Hood makes a capable Geoffrey Ware, and Mr Bryon Pedley is a satisfactory Samuel Baxter. The performance would not seem complete without Mr E. J. George, who again gives his well-known impersonation of Daniel Jaikes.

PAVILION THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr W. H. Boardman.—We are having a visit from Captain Woodward's performing seals and sea lions, and the marvellously clever performances of these animals prove a source of wonderment to large audiences. Lottie Siegenberg is a protean artiste of marked abilities, and scores in her vocalism. Mirzah, the "man in green," performs on banjoes galore, his entertainment being both original and amusing. A gymnastic pot pourri is contributed by the Sisters Merkel, who are very daring in several of their tricks. Carl Reinsch is responsible for a sporting act in which a horse and dogs are very prominent. Russell Wallett is a society entertainer who is repeatedly encored; Miss Minni Letta's Sporting Girls are here for a second week; and the series of walking handicaps for which prizes are offered by the management is proving a great attraction. Included in the programme are also Bert Leslie, comedian; Dora Martine, gymnast; Troba, juggler; Dion Wade, comedian; and the animated pictures.

NORTHAMPTON.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr W. J. Andrews.—A record of success has been obtained this week by the company organised by Mr Louis Calvert in that clever play entitled Sunday. Miss Nita Faydon in the title-rôle thoroughly enters into the spirit of the part, and her acting throughout is of the highest order. Special mention must be made of the part so excellently played by Mr J. Edward Pearce, Col. Brinthorpe.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Fred H. Anderson; Acting-Manager, Mr Robert Burton.—Miss Ada Fawn is one of the principal attractions of this week's programme. Edith Muir and Hubert Bartlett give a clever turn in their comedietta, entiled The Lady and the Lunatic; C. Milner, M. Henderson, George Daunton, are well-known artistes; Long Amos is an artist of great ability; Miss Ethel Frayne and Miss Frances Haskoll's turns are well received. Wednesday was the anniversary of the popular proprietor's opening night, and a crowded array of patrons of both houses testified their thorough appreciation of his endeavours to please them and their enthusiasm was unbounded when a pleasant surprise was sprung on him, and amid enthusiastic cheers a gentleman of long standing in professional matters, after a few descriptive words, presented to Mr Anderson an illuminated address, subscribed to and signed by some of the most prominent tradesmen of the town. Mr F. H. Anderson thanked the big audience for the way they had rallied around him, not only now, but on previous occasions, and with their further support he would endeavour to cater to their healthful amusements. Here the band and audience chimed in with "For he's a jolly good fellow." The cream of the local talent gave some excellent turns.

NORTH SHIELDS.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Arthur Jefferson; General Manager, Mr Horace Lee; Secretary, Mr Gordon Jefferson.—Messrs F. A. Scudamore and Arthur Richmond's company, with The Beautiful Avenger, has been warmly greeted here this week. As Cyrus Telford Mr Algernon Syms is a pronounced success, playing the part in a very acceptable manner, and Mr Arthur Richmond is a capable Jim Jhams. Mr Lionel Gillette is good as Zadok Foxbane; Mr William Diamond makes the most of Herbert Foxbane; and Mr William Ames scores as Peregrine Patch. Miss Nannie Meade as Vashti Volta is highly efficient; Miss Mabel Scudamore is responsible for a good character study of Edna Volta; Miss Carrie Podmore is seen to advantage as Baldie Mansfield; Miss Lilian Harkins does well as Arabella Binks; whilst the remaining characters are in able hands, and the drama is well mounted.

BOROUGH THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Arthur Jefferson.—Mr Henri Cazman, in "Le Café Chantant," tops the bill, and is heartily received. Texas Hattie, tight-rope artiste, is clever, and Miss Fatmah Diard renders her songs in good style. The Royal Victorian Trio of International dancers are entertaining, and Mr Harry Nelson, Tyneside comedian, has lost none of his popularity. Mr George Collins, comedian; Miss Florence Yaymen, comedienne; Mr Harry Tomlinson, vocalist; the Padleys, Continental eccentrics; and Mr Wal Croft, Scotch comedian, are also billed.

CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr William Mould.—Mr Tom White's Arabs are proving a great draw here. The Four Arizonas, acrobats, &c., perform some difficult feats, and Mr Will Percival, comedian and clog dancer, has made a great hit. Mdlle. Bartenelli, lady bender, presents a graceful show. Messrs Law and Norman, in their comedy act On Active Service, are clever. Mr Ted Wooton, baritone and descriptive vocalist, is good. The Boultons shine as musicians and dancers, and the Bio-Photoscope completes an enjoyable bill-of-fare.

NORTHWICH.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—Proprietress, Mrs S. Golden; Manager, Mr Percy Webb.—The New Sapho Syndicate, Limited, has occupied the theatre here this week and presented the play of Sapho, with Miss Annie Bell in the title-rôle. Difficult and trying as the character is, Miss Bell was quite at home in it, proving herself to be a decidedly clever emotional actress and handling the part with much grace and tact; as Jean Gaussin Mr Horatio Sinclair shows that he is well schooled in his art; Mr R. A. Greene as Paul Dechelette submits a cleverly natural character study; Mr G. Antley gives a true rendering of Cesaire; Mr Archie Helsby is seen to great advantage in the small part of Eugene Flamant; Mr H. Langford as Caoudal is a decided success; Mr J. A. Storey presents a careful reading of the drunken Father Legrand; Miss Laura Ray plays Machaume with telling effect; and Little Miss Lottie Ray handles the part of the child Joseph in a manner that would do credit to one of maturer years.

NORWICH.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Manager, Mr Fred Morgan.—Mr George Edwardes's excellent company in San Toy is here this week. Miss Don Harradine is excellent both in singing and dancing as San Toy; Miss Mabel Lavelle makes a charming Poppy; and Miss Florence Arnold a sprightly Dudley. Miss Beatrice Valnor deserves praise as Ko Fan, and Miss Beatrice Gradella as Rose Tucker is applauded for her clever dancing. Mr Edmund Sherras as Captain Bobby Preston sings with much ability. Mr Alfred W. Clarke is humorous as Yen How, and Mr Alfred Beers is highly diverting as Li. Mr G. J. Williams is good as Sir Bingo Preston; Mr Adam Gordon deserves mention as Sing Hi; and Mr Cliffe Davies ably represents the Emperor.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr F. W. Fitt.—An excellent programme is provided here this week. The Karnos, in their pantomimical burlesque Early Birds, give a sketch of London life which is full of fun; the Bodina Trio are excellent musicians; Little Dando, "the smallest comedian on earth," is received with appreciation; Mdlle. Haydee's electric mannikin theatre is a very pretty show; and Charles J. Lever as a tramp comedian is decidedly amusing, his juggling being very clever. The Haywards as vocalists and dancers are entertaining. The Hippodrome Bioscope exhibits some attractive pictures, and Capt. Selby's band enlivens the evening's performance.

NOTTINGHAM.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr Howard Finney.—The advent of Miss Lena Ashwell and her company drew a large audience on Monday to see this talented lady in Marguerite, an adaptation from the French play, La Montansier. Miss Ashwell won instant favour by her treatment of the rôle of Marguerite. Her work in the love scenes was artistic and true, and in the lighter passages her acting compelled the warmest approbation. Mr Frank Mills played Neuville with conspicuous force and fervent expression. Mr Charles Groves as St. Phar, the old theatrical hand, submitted an admirable rendering full of spirit and polished elocution. Mr C. A. Doran gave point to the implacable and relentless nature of St. Just, Mr Harry Halley made a droll figure as Barelle, and Mr Thos. Holding successfully showed the fickleness of Phillipe. A delightfully piquant performance of Mme. Senedar was offered by Miss Sydney Fairbrother, and Miss Marie Hudspeth was a capital Madame Brunet. Other parts are well sustained by Misses Helen Macbeth, Hilda Dick, Mabel Aldridge and Beryl Mercer, and Messrs Edward Knox, H. Pellew, G. Drayton, and L. Race Dunrobin. By special desire, Mrs Dane's Defence was given on three nights.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Chas P. Cooke.—The Christian is paying another visit here. The staging is complete in every detail, and Mr Wentworth Croke's company acquits itself with distinction. Miss Grace Chalmers plays Glory Quayle with a delightful freedom from mannerisms, and in the pathetic parts realises this complex character with fidelity and sympathetic feeling. Mr Harry Scott has an arduous task in depicting John Storm, but throughout his reading is earnest, natural, and convincing. Father Lamplugh finds an able exponent in Mr Stanley Radcliffe, and the pompous, self-righteous Archdeacon Wealthy is correctly described by Mr Charles E Dering. The easy morals of Lord Robert Ure are powerfully expressed by Mr Charles B. Bedells, and Mr Wilfred Blumberg is capital as Brother Paul. Miss Lily Crammonde plays Polly Love with delicate taste and emotional expression, and the warm-hearted Mrs Callender is well presented by Miss Clara Nicholls.

KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr A. W. Bull.—The Scarlet Woman forms an undeniable attraction here, and its thrilling situations are eagerly watched by good audiences. Miss Rosalind Scott-Watson plays the name-part with a verve and feeling that affords striking evidence of her abilities as an artist. Mr Reginald Fox is well qualified to sustain the genial and honourable Richard Marchant, while the scheming villainy of Will Raymond is strongly presented by Mr David M'Farlane. The brothers Cartwright, an unmitigated pair of scoundrels, are well portrayed by Messrs T. E. Cowell and Tom Wheeler, Mr Bryce Methvin is effective as Philip Gordon, and the humorous element gains in its interpretation by Miss Salla Cowell (Fanchette), Mat Melrose (Samuel Hopkins), and James Thompson (Jacob Isaacson). Valuable help is also given by Misses Muriel Allyne, Ruby Hamilton-Belasco, and Gracie Walker.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Hatton Wharton.—The histrionic ability of Mr Bransby Williams is given ample scope in his new sketch entitled "The Veteran's Birthday." Conscientious in detail and artistic to a degree, Mr Williams never fails to rouse his audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm, and his visits here are always eagerly looked for. Harry Ford is an entertaining comedian, whose methods evoke hearty merriment. A capital sketch, Hooked by Crook, brings out the capabilities of Marguerite Keeler, Homer B. Mason, and Henry Travers, and causes unlimited amusement. Die Schutzenlieserl'n Quartet provide an enjoyable vocal turn, which meets with well deserved applause, and the Bandurria Quintet of mandolinists display much ability. Miss Marguerite Broadfoote renders her songs with delightful freshness that calls forth unanimous praise. Barrére and Jules submit a clever performance on the parallel bars, and the Brothers Cavallini are rewarded for their eccentric parodies. Albert Whelan is a siffleur of no mean ability, and Juno Salmo demonstrates the flexibility of his body by many remarkable positions. Belle Braham, pictorial songstress, adds to the general enjoyment.

OLDHAM

EMPIRE, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr Ernest Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr Hulme.—Mr Walter Melville's combination is here in the play entitled A Girl's Cross Roads. Mr Wingold Lawrence gives a capital portrayal of Jack Livingstone. Miss Beatrice Homer as Barbara Wade depicts her part with a naturalness that would be hard to excel. Mr Edwin J. Wilde submits an excellent impersonation of John Meadows, whose daughter Nellie Meadows is ably represented by Miss Octavia Noel. Miss Violet Barton Astor scores as Constance Cornell; Mr Charles Terry is successful as Dr. Weston; and Mr Leonard Rouse acceptable as Cuthbert Lumley. Mr J. Hitchins as Toby Turvey and Miss Emily Custance provide an abundance of fun.

ROYAL.—Proprietors, Oldham Theatres, Limited; Manager, Mr Ernest Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr George Knowles.—O'Gust occupies premier position here. The Bros Lloyd are well received for an original rope performance; the Katos, the "komical kidgets," cause roars of laughter; Fraser and Mac are duly appreciated in their new act, "Creation;" the Stuart Quartet do well in songs and dances; W. Matthews, champion jumper, is remarkably clever; and W. H. Fox, comedian; Steve Cooke, and Malcolm Scott complete an attractive variety programme.

GAIETY.—Proprietors, Oldham Theatres, Limited; Manager, Mr E. J. Dexter.—The variety company here this week includes Francis Harrold's combination in My Son's Wife. Kathleen Gray is a clever burlesque artiste; H. Rule is an artiste of merit; Barney, the comedian from Scotland, receives due appreciation; Master Henri, the boy juggler, is loudly applauded; the San Remo Girls are very attractive; and Raymond's Bioscope still maintains its popularity.

PONTYPRIDD.

ROYAL CLARENCE THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Milton Bode; Business-Manager, Mr Rex Dooley.—On Monday the attraction at this theatre was Messrs Alf Paumier and Walter Howard's company in Under the Russian Flag. Chief interest was centred in Mr Walter Howard's assumption of Captain Demetrius; Miss Ellen Snow contributed an able impersonation of Luka Marischka; General Romanof was admirably portrayed by Mr Charles Reyne; Mr George Arthur as Michael and Mr F. W. Freeman as Ivan distinguished themselves; Mr Alfred Bennett's interpretation of Alexis Skopoloski was worthy of praise; Colonel Souvaroff was in the able hands of Mr W. Wilson; Doctor Keroff was well sustained by Mr William Rivers; Mr Hal Ford was successful as Peter Polunski; and Miss Ada Champion did well as Vera Vassiloff. Miss Agnes Howard was a charming Ogarita.

OXFORD.

NEW THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr Thomas Lucas, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr C. C. Dorrill.—Mr George Dance's company is paying a welcome return visit with A Chinese Honeymoon, which was received on Monday night by a full house with as hearty favour as on its first visit. The company is headed by those old favourites Miss Gwennie Harcourt, whose Fi-Fi is such a quaint and delightful performance, and Mr Gus Wheatman, whose Mr Pineapple keeps the house in roars of laughter right through the play. Mr Helier Le Maistre scores a big success as the Emperor Hang Chow, and his fine voice does full justice to his songs; Mr T. Warren Foster is an effective and natural Tom Hatherton; and the Lord Chancellor and Lord Admiral find excellent exponents in Messrs R. Kloss and L. Barry. Miss Nellie Wigley makes a charming Princess Soo-Soo, Miss Dot Stephens is a bright and fascinating Mrs Pineapple, and Miss Elsie Carew fills the part of the official mother-in-law with due dignity and weight. The chorus is strong and of excellent quality, and the dresses and mounting are all that can be wished.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr Albany Ward; Acting-Manager, Mr H. G. P. Wells.—The comic opera The Fisher Girl is proving a great attraction here this week, and deservedly so, for the company is strong in song and dance alike. Mr J. M. Jones makes an interesting figure of Vanderdecken; Mr C. Innes-Bowen sings and acts well as Kasper; Mr F. Couch is a droll innkeeper; Mr W. Champney amuses as Baron Ficklestein; and Nickel and Klaus find two most humorous representatives in Messrs W. Raymond and J. C. Forde; while Mr Fisher sings sweetly and acts well as Hendrick. Miss Alma Evelyne scores as the innkeeper's wife; Miss Marie Rita makes a delightful Elsbeth; and Miss Maud Desborough is bright and chic as the maid Hannah. A strong chorus and some clever dancers add to the attractions of the opera.

PAISLEY.

PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. H. Savile.—The Sign of the Cross is being played here with the success which has attended previous visits. The company, that of Mr William Greet, under the managership of Mr W. A. M'Neill, is strong and trustworthy, the performance being given with artistic finish. The two characters which hold special prominence in the play, Marcus and Mercia, are finely interpreted by Mr F. B. Woulfe and Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, who each receives the unstinted applause of the audience by powerful and sympathetic acting. Mr A. Bernhardt Turner gives an effective rendering of Nero; faithfully portrayed are the Tigellinus of Mr Charles Aldred and the Lucinius of Mr J. Wetherall; Mr Frank Wood furnishes an amusing embodiment of Glabrio; Philodemus is sufficiently accounted for by Mr C. Arthur Fairfax; Mr L. Winning renders good service as Viturius; Mr Robert Hare is excellent as Favius; Titus is acceptably acted by Mr E. J. Carlin; and other commendable impersonations are those of Servilius by Mr Haydon Clifford, Strabo by Mr Harry Jones, and Melos by Mr R. Crossin. Miss Cissie Carlton plays Dacia with charming freshness and spontaneity; the subtle ways of Berenice are capitally portrayed by Miss Alma Bolton; as Poppæa Miss Ethel Land performs satisfactorily; Miss May Fairclough depicts with efficiency the part of Ancaria; and Stephanus is vividly and thrillingly depicted by Miss Ivy Millais. The songs by Miss Tessa De Alberti and the dances by Miss Violet Holland are to be commended.

PERTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Aldridge.—Mr Thomas Thorne and company, under the direction of Mr M. Russell Rosse, is engaged here this week in Our Boys. Mr Thorne as Perkyn Middlewick and Mr M. Russell Rosse as Sir Geoffrey Champneys are decidedly the masculine props of the comedy, and are loyally assisted towards success by Mr Wilfred E. Brandon as Talbot Champneys and Mr Charles A. Stephenson as Charles Middlewick, the respective "boys;" whilst Mr Alfred Harding makes an excellent Kempster. Miss Ethel Verne's Violet M'Irose is commendable, and Miss Celestine Brandon soon becomes quite a favourite as Mary Melrose. Miss Lucie Evelyn in the rôle of Clarissa Champneys, Sir Geoffrey's sister, is seen to much advantage; and Miss Ethel Hesketh elicits hearty approbation as Belinda. The comedietta A Silent Woman precedes, in which Mr Wilfred E. Brandon, Mr C. Otter Hind, and Miss Ethel Verne ably take part.

PETERBOROUGH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr A. Darville Vernon.—We are favoured this week with a return visit of Mr Edward Marris's company, in The Dandy Doctor. Miss Lizzie Primmer is a successful Ivy Pendred; Miss Holden is an excellent Miss Amanda; and Miss Florence Smithers makes a great hit as Jane. Mr James Salter is a capital Melchizadek Brown; Mr Walter Nugent scores as Arthur Vandyke, M.D.; Mr James Danvers does well as Colonel Pendred; and Mr W. N. Gilmore is responsible for an amusing Bertie.

PLYMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Langdon Lee.—In The Duchess of Dantzic this week Mr George Edwardes's London company has been delighting enthusiastic audiences. Miss Evie Greene's beautiful voice is much admired. A meritorious performance is that of Mr Holbrook Blinn in the part of Napoleon, and another artistic conception is that of Papillon, by Mr Courtice Pounds. A pretty and petite Renne is Miss Adrienne Augarde, and Mr Leonard Mackay acts and sings well. The rôle of the Duke is ably presented by Mr Herbert Clayton, and Miss Mabel Lovell is a dignified Empress.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Williams. Richard Lovelace, with Mr Laurence Irving in the title-rôle, is the attraction here this week, and good business has been the order. This clever actor gave a realistic presentment of the interesting and picturesque character, and was well supported by Miss Mabel Hackney, who achieved complete success as Lucy Sacheverell. As Colonel Hawley Mr W. E. Ashcroft made a decided hit, and as Alderman Sacheverell Mr Henry Crocker won high encomiums.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton.—A Soldier and a Man has been drawing crowded houses this week, the piece being written round the doings of the 2nd Devon Regiment, now stationed in the locality, in the Zulu War. Mr A. Clifton Alderson, whose company is appearing in the play, impersonates the hero in a very effective manner, and powerful acting is forthcoming from Mr H. F. Wright, who impersonates Jim Farron. Miss Billie Doyle, the hero's wife, is very popular with all parts of the house, and Mr F. Powell, who is responsible for the chief criminal part, does not exaggerate.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr J. Field; Acting-Manager, Mr Carlton.—This week Donaldson Brothers and Ardel company top the bill, and their zoological comedy is funnier than a pantomime. Harmonised songs contributed by the Three Sisters Jonghmans catch on well, and another acceptable turn is that provided by Miss May Lilian Levey, a sprightly comedienne. Those eccentrics Adrim and Oram give daring acrobatic feats, and the M'Connell Trio, retained from the previous week, appear in a new and taking sketch. The singing and dancing of May Milbourne and Edy Adair are exceptionally good, and a comedy act by Collins and Rice deserves commendation. "Pictures in the Fire," the latest success of Alix Lukor, proves a very popular item.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE GRAND.

On Monday, Oct. 3, the Drama, in Five Acts, by the late Paul Meritt and George Conquest, entitled "FOR EVER."

Twenty-two years have passed since For Ever was produced at the Surrey. This thrilling drama enabled the lamented George Conquest, the finest pantomimist and animal actor of the century, to display his wonderful talent as the man-monkey, Zacky Pastrana. On that memorable occasion (Oct. 2, 1882) the actor-lessee was supported by Mr T. F. Nye as Julian Daremount, Mr A'gernon Syms as Jasper Daremount, Mr Charles Cruikshanks as Abel Rockley, Miss Bella Titheradge as the hapless Ruth Rockley, Miss Alice Raynor as Phyllis, Miss Lizzie Claremount as Mrs Patcham, and Miss Harriet Claremont as Polly Patcham. On the first representation the piece lasted from half-past seven until twenty minutes to one the next morning. It is a bewildering conglomeration of crimes ranging from poisoning to throat-cutting, of wonderful escapes and terrific struggles, and the whole is leavened by the grotesque and the horrible. The character of the man-monkey dominates the drama, and the part affords great opportunities to the actor capable of playing it. Fortunately for Mr George Davey and Mr Oswald Brand they have found Mr Fred Conquest, a son of the originator of the part, who may be said to be saturated with the family traditions and who exactly fits the character. The climbing and leaping propensities of the ape are preserved in Zacky, and the young Mr Conquest's prehensile activity must first be recognised. His "phantom flights" are remarkable exhibitions of agility combined with acrobatics. But the acting opportunities of the part are not inconsiderable, and Zacky's ferocity and strength of will are no less clearly defined than his ape-like walk and manners. In the murder scene in St. John's-wood the malignity and human passion of Zacky are powerfully limned, and the repulsiveness of the character is very clearly presented. To Miss Helen Bancroft is assigned the strenuous and difficult part of Ruth Rockley. Poor Ruth is sincerely to be pitied; for she is practically forced into the arms of the curious creature that gives the drama its raison d'être, and her abhorrence of such an alliance is one of the most natural things in the part. In the many trying situations, Miss Bancroft is sympathetic and expressive, and though Ruth's despair and distress are largely brought about by her own misdeeds, they appeal very strongly to the Islingtonians, who have a very warm corner in their hearts for this very favourite actress. Mr Ernest Leicester, who for some years was leading man at the Surrey, is another fortunate engagement of the Islington management. His fine presence, his sonorous voice, and his breadth of style give all the importance necessary to the character of Jasper Daremount, who is cheated of his rights through the machinations of villainy. The forces at the disposal of vice are headed by Abel Rockley, a part which is particularly well handled by Mr Arthur Estcourt; and Mr Joynsen Powell is duly sinister and callous as Julian Daremount. Mr Hal Collier is responsible for a drolly conceived representation of the showman Potkins, and Mr George Elliston also revels in the lighter vein as Tim Tiffany. Miss Kate Brand is sweet and commendable as Phyllis, and comes through the trying ordeal of tribulation triumphantly. Miss Winnie Wood is an effective Mrs Patcham, and Miss Winifred Leeson does well as Polly Patcham. The coiners, Ben Hackman and Dick Sparrow, find adequate representatives in Mr J. Baines and Mr T. Tripp respectively. In the character of Sparrow, it will be remembered, Mr C. W. Somerset made one of his earliest appearances on the London stage. Mr Frank Dudley is duly professional as Dr. Coldways; Mr Frederick Trevor is a sufficiently dignified Justice Wigney; and smaller parts are carefully handled by Messrs Cecil Grey, Henry Pierce, Charles Fisk, J. Seymour, F. Keith and F. Jackson. The piece is most elaborately mounted, and Mr Oswald Brand has produced it with remarkable completeness. The early comers to the theatre are entertained by some fine pictures on the Biograph.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Comic Opera, by Maurice Ordonneau and Arthur Sturgess, Music by Edmond Audran, entitled "LA POUPÉE."

An enthusiastic audience welcomed the first visit here on Monday of Audran's attractive comic opera La Poupée, supported by an admirable company of artistes, under the management of Mr C. P. Levilly. Continuous merriment and applause accompanied the performance, and most of the numbers had to be repeated. The opera is mounted in a costly and elaborate manner, the scenery being excellent, and the picturesque costumes a revelation of colour and good taste. Alesia is cleverly rendered by Miss Stella Gastelle, who comes in for a great amount of praise for her excellent singing. Mr Eric Thorne as Hilarius gives a most grotesque and diverting performance, and soon becomes an established favourite with the audience. He invests the character with such humorous business that the house is convulsed with laughter whenever he is on the stage. Mr Gerald Clifford admirably personates the timid novice Lancelot, and has a good conception of the part, while his fine voice is heard to great advantage, and Mr Newton Ide submits a capital portrayal of Father Maxime, his singing evoking well-deserved and hearty recognition. Mr Fred Seymour scores a genuine success as Baron Chanterelle, his efforts being ably seconded by Mr William Griffin, who gives an amusing character study of Loremois. Mr Vernon Read is a first-rate Balthazar, Mr Maurice Carlton a praiseworthy Notary, and Mr Maurice Head a satisfactory Basilique. Miss Kitty Cavendish is smart as Henri and Miss Madge Avery efficient as Madame Hilarius. Miss May Bradbury is a charming Guduline, and Miss Nellie Knight as Jacques and Miss Louise Stuart as Marie show considerable ability, whilst capable work is done by Mr W. J. O'Sullivan as Agnelet, Mr J. Leroni as Benoît, Miss Rose Lytton as Maid, and Miss G. Chadwick, Miss A. Courtenay, and Miss A. Knight as the Dolls. The chorus is numerous and deserve all praise for their able assistance, and the augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr Harry Rushworth, is well balanced and plays excellently. The stage-management is in the experienced hands of Mr Fred Seymour, and Mr Herbert Ralland is the attentive business-manager for Mr C. P. Levilly.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Melville, entitled "THE FEMALE SWINDLER."

This play of Mr Melville's bids fair to follow in the wake of all its predecessors from the same facile pen, which is equivalent to saying, "instantaneous success wherever staged." It would be indeed hard to point out the superior of Mr Melville in his method of arranging a piece, packed with stirring situations, for the harder the task the more he seems to revel in it. As Jack Coulson Mr W. S. Hartford, just back from his successful season in South Africa, was responsible for a sound, meritorious impersonation, and his efforts received frequent plaudits from a delighted house. Mr Rule Pyott was the Jew receiver Abraham Mikestein to the life, and Mr Luke Forster evoked much genuine laughter by reason of his skilful handling of Billy Binks, assisted at times by various disguises. The villainies of Geoffrey Warden, alias Captain Stanton, were realised by Mr Weldon Atherstone, who worked hard throughout, in telling fashion; whilst Mr A. Kenyon Gray did the little he had to do as James Oliver in good style. Mr George Unwin was efficient as Harold Travers, and Mr Harry Foxwell was good as Dr Fossett. Miss Violet Elliott as the female swindler Lu Valroy quickly worked on the feelings of the house, scoring a decided hit by reason of her capable way of presenting a rather trying part. Miss Ada Maud did well as Mary Ann Mee; and that sprightly actress Miss Florrie Kelsey was most pleasing as May Andrews. The play was well mounted and dressed, and altogether Mr Tom H. Taylor's company was a most satisfactory one. Mr Henry Wright, jun., is the courteous acting-manager.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Comic Opera, "MY LADY MOLLY."

This charming lady is paying a visit here this week, and should be fully satisfied with the reception accorded her. In the title-rôle Miss Edmee De Dreux sings delightfully and makes a most dashing imposter when she dons male attire, her dual scene being most amusing. As Alice Coverdale Miss Zoe Gilfillan was in good voice, and her acting and dancing are alike excellent. Miss Mabel Carr as Hester (Lady Molly's maid) looks exceedingly well, and gained a deserved encore for her dance with Mickey O'Dowd. Mdlle. Ebba Darcier plays the part of Alice Coverdale's French governess with success, her French accent being very good. As the hero, Captain Harry Romney, Mr Leicester Tunks proves himself the possessor of a really fine voice, and in every respect makes a gallant and handsome suitor for Lady Molly's hand. As Alice Coverdale's suitor (Lionel Bland) Mr Stewart Alexander gives a capital impersonation; and as Sir Miles Coverdale Mr H. Godwin Hunt is successful in giving a lifelike portrayal of the self-willed and unreasonable squire of old days. As Mickey O'Dowd, Captain Romney's Irish servant, Mr Stephen Fitzgerald is the most amusing specimen of an Irishman imaginable, and the whole time he is on the stage the audience is kept in a roar of laughter. Mr Dan O'Regan scores as Reuben Oats, the landlord of the Coverdale Arms, and Miss Violet Lingard and Miss Kittie Holmes are dainty as two serving maids. Miss Minnie Blanchard dances well, and the minor parts are suitably filled. The dresses are pretty and effective and the play is handsomely mounted.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, Oct. 10, "THE MIKADO."

On Monday the D'Oyly Carte opera company commenced a very welcome return visit here, and The Mikado, which was billed for the opening performance, proved an immense attraction, for this commodious house was filled to the utmost, and Mr Leslie Hughes was hard pressed to find room for all his patrons. The cast is almost the same as on the last visit. Mr C. H. Workman again appears as Ko-Ko, and gives a capital rendering of this delightful creation. None the less entertaining is Mr Fred Billington, whose Pooh-Bah is a capital piece of work, and is too well known by now to need further comment. Nanki-Poo is ably embodied by Mr Pacie Ripple, who sings his various songs in good style. Mr Albert Kavanagh submits a delicious rendering of the Mikado, Miss Norah Maguire charms everyone as Yum-Yum, and Miss Jessie Rose and Miss Mabel Burnege are captivating as Pitti-Sing and Peep-Bo. Katisha is played in capital style by Miss Theresa Rassam, whose singing and acting are both excellent. Mr Fred Bawater does good work as Pish-Tush. A really excellent chorus greatly adds to the enjoyment of the performance, and the orchestra is under the bâton of Mr T. Silver. During the week Iolanthe, The Gondoliers, Yeomen of the Guard, and H.M.S. Pinafore were all marked for presentation. Mr Fred A. Leon stage-manages, and Mr H. E. Bellamy is the business manager of the company.

THE KING'S, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Play, in One Act, entitled "FOR VALUE RECEIVED."

Sir Reginald Burroughs..	Mr Frank MacDonnel
Captain Burroughs	Mr Langhorne Burton
Robert Dornton	Mr Arthur Grenville
Maid	Miss Ilene Hamilton
Florence Dornton.....	Miss Margaret Damer

As a prelude to the representation of Captain Marshall's farcical romance, The Duke of Killicrankie, at Mr Mulholland's beautiful Hammersmith Theatre, on Monday night was given the play, in one act, For Value Received, the author of which elects to remain unknown. The story treats of the barriers of caste, and is quite sad in its tone. Florence Dornton, a music hall singer, has fascinated Captain Burroughs, who is engaged to her, and intends to marry her. His father, Sir Reginald Burroughs, hearing of the infatuation of his boy, calls at Florence's flat to propose terms. The marriage he considers impossible, and he has other views for his son. Florence listens to him patiently and is even interested in him; for he recognises in the portrait of her mother on the mantelpiece his old sweetheart to whom he was on the eve of being married when he was ordered to India. Her indignation overcomes her, however, when he offers her a cheque for £3,000 to give up her lover and never speak to him again. In peremptory tones she shows him the door; but before he departs he leaves the cheque on the mantelpiece. Scarcely has he gone when the melancholy reflections of the heart-stricken girl are disturbed by the arrival of her brother Robert, who is in great distress of mind. He has gambled away the money entrusted to him by his bank, and he would kill himself rather than face a criminal charge. Florence snatches the revolver from his hand and learns the terrible truth by degrees. Robert must find £2,000 before his firm discovers his defalcations. She will save him, and tells him so. But how to break the news to her lover, who now arrives, and meets the unhappy Robert. When he hears from the lips of the woman he has so fondly loved that he has been supplanted in her affections, the young soldier—who offers to make her his wife before his departure for Africa—is astounded. But astonishment gives way to anger when he discovers his father's card attached to some roses that had been brought to Florence by Sir Reginald. The captain, putting the worst construction on the evidence of his father having called, accuses his fiancée of treachery and deceit, and overwhelms her with reproaches. Seated in an armchair Florence thinks for a moment of the greyness of her future life, and gazes at the cheque. As it flutters to the floor she falls in a dead faint, and the piece ends. It is little more than an episode, but is written with an eye to dramatic effect, the dialogue being also appropriate. Miss Margaret Damer, an actress of considerable sensibility and charm, made a very favourable impression as Florence Dornton, and the regular stage has had to sweeter representative of the music hall profession. Mr F. M'Donnel was duly authoritative and dignified as Sir Reginald, and Mr Langhorne Burton gave forcible effect to the justifiable anger of the Captain. Mr Arthur Grenville portrayed most effectively the desperate and reckless Robert Dornton. There was some applause at the conclusion of For Value Received, but the author or authoress—as the case may be—was not called for, and did not appear. The witty dialogue and amusing situations of The Duke of Killicrankie kept the house in fits of laughter and hilarity during the clever presentation of that farcical romance by the company organised by Mr Charles Frohman and Mr Arthur Chudleigh. Mr Langhorne Burton in the title-rôle, after he had conquered the nervousness which afflicted him during the first act, played with a buoyancy and subtle delicacy that were wholly admirable. He revelled in the opportunities of the part, and played with ingenuousness, freshness, and humour. To Mr Arthur Grenville, who in the original cast played the part of Mr Ambrose Hicks, the newspaper correspondent, is now assigned the important rôle of Mr Henry Pitt Welby, of which character Mr Weedon Grossmith gives such a really funny rendering. Mr Grenville improved very much as he went on, and became exceedingly funny in the second act, when the abductors and abducted dined together at Crag-O'-North Castle. His persistency was always whimsical and his behaviour extremely droll when he was metaphorically sat on by Mrs Mulholland. This most important part found an excellent representative in Miss Alda Jenoure, who has developed into a first-class representative of middle-aged ladies given to downright utterance and a certainty of manner. The scene at the dinner table at the Castle, where Mrs Mulholland and Lady Henrietta score off each other, went with what in theatrical parlance is known as a bang on Monday evening. The appreciation shown by the Hammersmithians for the smartness of the lines in this particular scene was largely due to Miss Doris Templeton, whose unconscious delivery of her cutting speeches was positively delicious. The more sympathetic side of Lady Henrietta's character was winsomely realised also by the actress, who made an undoubted hit in the part. Mr Howard W. Cochran in the small part of Mr Ambrose Hicks, the special correspondent with a camera, made the most of his opportunities. Mr Guy B. Watson and Miss Helen Kay Robertson as Mr and Mrs M'Bayne did well in those slight parts; and Misses Ilene Hamilton and Clarke, and Messrs Guy Newall and J. F. Anson completed the cast.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Drama entitled "SERVING THE QUEEN."

A delectable entertainment is being provided at the Elephant and Castle Theatre this week in the shape of a revival of the popular drama Serving the Queen. The play is too well known to need a detailed description, but its popularity remains undiminished, if the excellent houses attracted to the theatre each evening are any criterion. Mr Ernest E. Norris undertakes the onerous and difficult rôle of Harold Ainsworth, and gives a sincere and painstaking study of a part that requires skilful and delicate handling throughout. Mr Norris brings all his natural and virile force into prominence, and gains the warmest appreciation of the onlookers for his distinctly clever acting. Mr George Conquest, jun., is eminently successful as Mossy Samuels, a solicitor, and no greater compliment could be given than to say that the part fits him like the proverbial glove. A debonair scoundrel is Captain Blake as portrayed by Mr J. C. Aubrey, who treats the character in a very realistic fashion, and makes the most of his opportunities to gain his despicable ends, only to meet with his just reward eventually. Mr Charles Langley as Mr Justice Ferrars acts convincingly, and renders the part in a dignified and befitting manner. Mr Harry Paulton, jun., works unflaggingly as Private Bill Stickers, and speedily succeeds in exciting the risibilities of the audience. Mr Bernard J. Lieli is good as Sergeant Beckwith, and Mr Norman Clark is effective as Colonel Villiers. Mr Jo Monkhouse in the rôle of Reuben Gartley gives a strong reading of the part, and deserves every consideration for the able manner in which he succeeds in overcoming a somewhat difficult task. The character is one that presents many pitfalls for the inexperienced, but to Mr Monkhouse's credit he steers clear of anything likely to be an exaggeration. Mr W. H. Terry speaks well as Dr. Hamilton, and Mr Paige Lawrence gives a clever impersonation of Verger Poota. Mrs Bennett essays the part of Madge Villiers, and a very pleasing and natural performance is the result. In all the scenes requiring a special effort Mrs Bennett's acting was of a high-class order, and the house was not slow in bestowing the hall-mark of approval upon her efforts. Miss Agnes Paulton makes a smiling and bright Betty Bunce, whose vivacious and cheerful manners as delineated by Miss Paulton would be sufficient to create an impression not only upon Private Bill Stickers, but upon quite an army of soldiers. Margaret Ainsworth is sympathetically played by Miss Judith Kyrle, and Miss Blanche Jordan acts the part of a flower girl very pleasingly. The general mounting of the drama was excellent.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Play, in Four Acts and an Epilogue, by Arthur W. Pinero, entitled "LETTY."

Mr F. W. Purcell this week places a special attraction before his patrons in the shape of a visit from Mr Charles Frohman's company, in Mr Pinero's play Letty, in which Mr H. B. Irving and Miss Irene Vanbrugh are appearing in the parts originally sustained by them at the Duke of York's Theatre. Although the parts of Nevill Letchmere and Letty Shell give neither of these clever artists an opportunity of being seen at their best, their work was rewarded with the unanimous approval of a full house on Monday night last, their splendid treatment of the scene which brings the fourth act to a close compelling the raising of the curtain several times. The bucket shop proprietor, Bernard Mandeville, is an effective if somewhat highly coloured sketch as drawn by Mr Scott Craven. Of the parts of Ivor Crosbie and Coppinger Drake the most is made by Messrs T. V. M'Causland Stewart and Vernon Steel respectively, and clever little character studies of Ordish, the insurance agent, and Neale, the commercial traveller, come from Mr Tom Heslewood and Mr Charles Froode. Mr Lealie Victor as Richard Perry, the photographer who eventually marries Letty, gives a highly creditable performance, and a typical maitre d'hôtel is found in Mr Lichfield Owen, who appears as Frederic. As good as anything in the piece is the Hilda Gunning of Miss Eleanor Souray, whose clever and finished performance of the shop assistant is entirely free from exaggeration and artistic to a degree. Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson is a very sweet and womanly Marion Allardyce, her playing in the fourth act being especially good. Miss May Blayney is an engaging Mrs Ivor Crosbie, and makes the utmost of her somewhat scant opportunities, and the cast is completed by Messrs Clayton Greene, W. H. Haigh, and Walter Hack and Miss Mott in subsidiary rôles. The mounting and effects are as at the Duke of York's. Mr W. Hann's scenery being most complete and effective.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Wednesday, Oct. 12, Shakespeare's Comedy, "TWELFTH NIGHT."

Malvolio	Mr William Haviland
Orsino	Mr Reginald Ian Penny
Sebastian.....	Mr V. L. Granville
Antonio	Mr E. A. Warburton
A Sea Captain	Mr Arthur Machen
Valentine	Mr Herbert Bunston
Curio	Master Harold Stevenson
Sir Toby Belch	Mr Eardley Turner
Sir Andrew Aguecheek ..	Mr A. E. Anson
A Priest	Mr Allan Wilkie
First Officer	Mr J. C. Taylor
Second Officer	Mr Kenneth Blackmore
Fabian	Mr Arthur Bruce
Feste.....	Mr Charles Bibby
The Countess Olivia.....	Miss Margaret Halstan
Maria	Miss Cicely Richards
Viola	Miss Constance Collier

No better proof of the merit of Mr Beerbohm Tree's Shakespearian company, which has been appearing with great success at the Marlborough Theatre this week, could be furnished than the excellent all-round rendering of Twelfth Night which it gave on Wednesday. In listening to the delivery of the dialogue by these earnest and able artistes, it occurred to us that one of the points which might be impressed on aspirants by Mr Tree's lectures is the importance of what we may call the "vocal angle" in acting. The words of a play have to be spoken in what is practically a box with one side out; and they have to be delivered so as to be heard by each person in another larger semi-circular box adjoining. Waves of air have to pass between the lips of the speakers and the ears of the listeners; and, besides pronouncing distinctly, it is necessary to keep the face always more or less turned towards the audience. In cases in which the necessities of the scene prevent this the pronunciation must be exaggeratedly distinct, and the voice must be raised. We shall be reminded, perhaps, that M. Antoine, at the Theatre Libre, acted much with his back to the audience. In that case, either he allowed for his position, or the author's dialogue was more or less suppressed. With this general hint we proceed to warm praise of the performance as a whole. Miss Margaret Halstan's Olivia must be truly delightful to all students of Shakespeare. She has just the required delicacy and style for the impersonation of the gentle lady, and her keen intelligence enables her to give full meaning to each sentence of the part. She is essentially feminine, and entirely, though quite amiably, aristocratic. In seeing her Olivia, we are reminded of the distinction drawn by Ruskin between the fine lady and the commoner woman. Miss Halstan's reading is exquisitely refined, yet without the least morbidity or affectation. There is plenty of feeling and frankness in her reading of the rôle, and her melodious voice, the gracious dignity of her bearing, and her tallness and easy carriage, are all of immense assistance to her in her very successful impersonation. Miss Constance Collier is similarly fortunate in her personal gifts as Viola. It is true that Viola is only masquerading as a youth; but Miss Constance Collier's Viola is a lass who might easily practise such a deception; a black-eyed, rather sportive, and delightfully humorous young person. Miss Collier plays the part with a kind of modest boldness and half-hesitating archness which are quite fascinating; and her free, resonant delivery is entirely acceptable. Mr Reginald Ian Penny's Orsino is a well-considered and careful embodiment; and Mr V. L. Granville is a manly yet sensitive Sebastian. Mr E. A. Warburton's Antonio is rugged honesty itself, and Mr Eardley Turner plays Sir Toby Belch in a rich unctuous vein of genuine comedy, embellished by an amount of physical fun which has its justification in the roars of laughter which it evokes. Mr A. E. Anson works heartily and well with Mr Turner, and plays Sir Andrew Aguecheek with a solid stupidity which is very effective. Mr Kenneth Brice is entirely efficient as Fabian, and Mr Charles Bibby is an alert and active Feste, and sings the songs allotted to the clown sweetly. That always competent and clever artist, Miss Cicely Richards, is brimfull of fun and frolic as Maria, and does not overdo the espièglerie of the waiting-maid. The scenery—by Messrs Joseph Harker and Hawes Craven—is admirably artistic; and the incidental music by Paul Rubens and Andrew Levey sounds very well as rendered by the Marlborough orchestra under Mr Norman Bath. The smoothness of the performance does great credit to the efforts of the stage director, Mr William Haviland, and of the stage-manager, Mr Leonard Buttress, who is ably assisted by Mr George Robertson. Mr Fred Pemberton is the polite and active business-manager of the company, which has won golden opinions at the Marlborough this week.

SHAKESPEARE, CLAPHAM-JUNCTION.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Drama, by Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck, entitled "TOMMY ATKINS."

The welcome return visit of Mr Milton Bode's company is meeting with an enthusiastic reception this week at this handsome and commodious theatre. The scenery and staging are effective, and of the company we cannot speak too highly. Mr Frederick Ross as Harold Wilson, who renounces the Church for the army, gives an excellent rendering of the part, and Mr George C. Doughty as the villain, Captain Richard Maitland, plays that double-dyed traitor most satisfactorily. Miss Lola Patey as Ruth Raymond shows genuine pathos, and Mr Maurice Drew as the unforgiving and inflexible father, Stephen Raymond, leaves nothing to be desired. Mr John Nolan as Sergeant Paddy Molloy and Miss Ethel Tinsley as Kate Perkins contribute most of the fun, although the Ebenezer Skindle of Mr Billy Harman is exceedingly funny. Miss Kitty Omer is good as Rose Selwyn, Mr Fred Barclay makes a manly Arab chief, Master Philip Priddis as the boy Jack displays much promise, and Mr Reginald Holmes is effective as Captain Robert Sparrow. The minor parts are all sustained in an intelligent manner.

NEW EALING THEATRE.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the New Naval Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, by Edward Mervyn and St. Bernard Wyntour, entitled "THE NEW COMMANDER."

This new play met with a hearty reception on its presentation at the New Ealing Theatre on Monday by Miss Grace Warner and company. Some of the music is very good indeed, the motor chorus in the first act being enthusiastically redemanded. Miss Grace Warner works hard as the heroine, Violet Flintheart, and scores well with her songs. Mr George Gordon as Lieutenant Frank Harding makes a manly lover, and is possessed of a good voice, which he uses to much advantage. Mr George Handel as Lieutenant Jack Tremingway does all that can be expected with a difficult part, and Mr St. Bernard Wyntour as the fiery Sultan of Ramjamjah creates much diversion and amusement. As Tittums, a hotel waiter and would-be comic songwriter, Mr Miller Anderson scores heavily, and the Midshipmite of Miss Maud Warburton is all that can be desired. Miss May Dallas as Vivette, the hotel chambermaid, plays the part in a very piquant manner, winning all hearts by her brightness and vivacity; she dances well, and has a pleasing voice. The Primrose Quartet of dancers gain much applause, and several of their dances have to be repeated.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Romantic Musical Drama, by F. Marriott-Watson, entitled "WHAT A WOMAN DID."

The members of Mr William A. Armour's company find plenty to do in the drama What a Woman Did, which is being played at the Dalston Theatre this week. Mr William A. Armour takes the part of Conrad De L'Orme, to whom the audience are first introduced when he is an honest villager, and they follow his adventures as a gamester and join in mutually expressed congratulations when at length he rejoins the wife from whom he has been estranged and there is a possibility of his career being "happy ever after." Mr Kenneth Smith as the Marquis De Viray makes an impression on the audience as a smooth-tongued villain. The principal victim of his villainy, Elise De L'Orme, the wife of Conrad, is represented by Miss Phyllis Atherleigh, who brings a good deal of natural grace and charm to bear upon a character calculated to secure the sympathy of an audience. It is not every actress who could appear to such artistic advantage in the Studio scene in the last act as does Miss Atherleigh. Mr Will Simpson appears as the cousin of Elise, and the grotesque character of the hunchback, Pitou, is sustained by Mr Owen Edwin. Mr Cyril Dundas as an itinerant quack doctor and Miss Louie Lonora as the Cricket, his assistant, provide humorous relief to the more serious parts of the play. Miss Nita Imeson as Nanette and Miss Blanche Delroy as La Papillon each act well, and the cast also includes Miss Emmie Beauclerc, Miss Violette Vivienne, Miss Elsie Day, Mr J. H. Stewart, Mr Victor Gordon, Mr Ivan Leslie, Mr Herbert Aston, and Mr Vincent Hayes.

OPERA HOUSE, CROUCH-END.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Costume Drama, in Four Acts, entitled "MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE."

The return visit of Mr Lewis Waller's company on Monday proved that this play has lost none of its popularity. The Duke of Winterset had a clever and convincing exponent in Mr F. Stuart Wilson; Mr Herbert Cornish played Major Molyneux with energy and determination; Captain Badger was effectively rendered by Mr F. Ramsey Forman; and Beau Nash found a capable impersonator in Mr H. A. Young and Mr Bantison. Miss Millie Hamer furnished a skilful and telling embodiment of Lucy Rellerton; Miss S. Izzard was pleasantly prominent as the Countess of Greenburg; Mr Norman M'Owan in his delineation of the title-rôle specially distinguished himself; Miss Violet Sterne is responsible for an earnest and pathetic rendition of Lady Mary Carlisle, and with Mr M'Owan was several times recalled.

TERRISS THEATRE.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled "DANGERS OF LONDON."

Sensational drama apparently appeals to the Rotherhithe theatre-goer, and on Monday evening the above play drew a very large audience, who followed the performance throughout with rapt attention. M. Lionel D'Aragon is again seen in a leading part, on this occasion that of Frank Forrest, whom he portrays with much ability, fully meriting the applause which is bestowed on him. Mr Henry St. Leger gives further proof of his versatility as the old father of the hero, Walter Forrest. The blind Raymond Stanhope receives effective representation from Mr Campion Abbott, while Mr Frank Wilmot presents a good sketch of Percy Weir. No more capable exponent of histrionic villainy could be found than Mr Felix Pitt, whose rendition of Dick Royal is all that could be desired. Mr Newman Maurice contributes another amusing performance as Shadrack Brander, again receiving able assistance from Miss Hulo Hodgson as Letty, and a good reading of Nimrod comes from Mr Fred De Vere. Miss Rosemary Rees is always a charming heroine, but she gains further laurels as Mary Stanhope. The adventuress, Gertrude Weir, is played with conspicuous success by Miss Marie M'Aulay, and Miss Gertie Rosalind is eminently satisfactory as Margaret Cloud. The variety world is this week represented by Florence White, American comedienne, and Alber and Amber, in their speciality act, "The Tramp and the Waiter."

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Drama, in Five Acts, by Theo. Kremer, entitled "THE FATAL WEDDING."

Patrons of the popular parts of the Borough Theatre have a piece after their own hearts this week, and have mustered in full force to witness the many stirring incidents and thrilling situations with which The Fatal Wedding abounds. The entertainment contributed by the juvenile members of Mr Bert Coote's company in the third act comes in for especial recognition, and is a pleasing and prominent feature of the performance. Mr Wilfred Payne contributes an earnest and highly effective embodiment of Howard Wilson; and Mr Leyton Cancellor portrays the villainous Robert Curtis on thoroughly natural and entirely unexaggerated lines. Mr Charles H. Kenny extracts unlimited mirth from the idiosyncrasies of the French butler, Toto; Mr Fred Dobell is decidedly good as Peter Schwartz; Mr Arthur Welbeck fulfills all requirements as the policeman, O'Reilly; and Mr Arthur Law Raynor acts with expression as the Rev. Dr. Lanceford. Miss Marie Houseley is tender and sympathetic as Mabel Wilson; Miss Beatrix De Burgh plays with directness and intensity as the despicable Cora Williams; and the Hibernian cook, Bridget, as portrayed by Miss Harriet Clifton, is a personage of high popularity with the audience. Much interest centres round Miss Ida Valli's performance as Jessie, "the little mother," which is as fresh, bright, and natural as ever, and the young actress is a prime favourite with everybody. The piece is capitally staged and dressed.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled "MARINERS OF ENGLAND."

The visit of Mr Ernest R. Abbott's company, in The Mariners of England, is proving highly acceptable to the habitués of the Stratford Theatre Royal this week, and excellent business is resulting. Able interpretation is rendered by a well-balanced cast, and the dressing and mounting leave nothing to be desired. Mr Ernest R. Abbott makes-up remarkably well as Lord Nelson, and his acting always carries conviction. Mr W. T. Riley is a buoyant and manly Harry Dell, a character highly popular with the audience. Mr W. H. Garbois as the sinister and scheming Captain Lebaudy is eminently successful, and a grim and well-defined portraiture of Marston comes from Mr W. H. Davis Brown. Mr Edwin Keene is responsible for plenty of mirth as the voluble Tom Tripp, Mr John Lester does exceedingly well as Capt. Hardy, and Mr Clifford Clifford is a dignified and convincing Admiral Talbot. Miss Ada Abbott plays with sympathy and charm as Mabel Talbot, Nelly Dell is appropriately played by Miss Linda Riley, and Miss Isabel Singleton is a vivacious Polly Appleyard. Other parts are all in capable hands.

GREENWICH THEATRE, S E.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Play entitled "IF I WERE KING."

Mr Frank Fenton is appearing here this week with his company in the romantic play, by Justin M'Carthy, entitled If I Were King. Mr Frank Fenton scores a considerable success as François Villon (originally played by Mr George Alexander. Mr Clive Currie gives a very fine performance of Louis XI. Mr Fred Garrett is good as Tristran L'Hermite. Mr Ernest Marsh is excellent as Oliver Le Dain. The remaining male parts in the long cast are exceedingly well filled, and the general performance gives great satisfaction to the large audience. Miss Marion Grey must be congratulated on a delightful portrayal of Katharine De Vancelles. Miss Louise Vanstitter is remarkably good as Huguette Du Hamel, and her death scene is well played. Miss Violet Monckton as the Queen is acceptable. The other female characters are well acted by Miss Una Gilbert, Miss Mary Marshall, Miss Noney Seabrooke, Miss Lillian Blaces, and Miss Magda Willdenburg.

GRAND, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled "THE CITY OF MILLIONS."

This week we have had Miss Madge Girdlestone here with her company in The City of Millions. The rôle of Rosa De Valois, a "woman of the world," affords Miss Girdlestone ample scope for the display of her undoubted talents; nor is she slow to avail herself of the opportunities thus provided. During the course of the play Rosa runs through the whole gamut of the human passions, and love and hate, rage, scorn, and despair were severally portrayed in intense and powerful fashion. In a performance of such all-round excellence it is difficult to single out particular scenes, but Miss Girdlestone was perhaps at her best in the scene where Rose attempts to win Stacey's love, and again when she compels her former accomplice to write a confession under threat of being summarily shot. The last-named character, Capt. Wilfred Dread, found a capable exponent in Mr Martin Sabine, who succeeded in giving a life-like representation of a man of almost incredible villainy and callousness. Miss Agnes Verity gave a sympathetic and convincing rendering of Jessie Townsend, the girl's misery at the thought of losing her lover and her final happiness being well indicated. As Herbert Stacey (who, by-the-way, was consistently called "Jack" on the stage) Mr Vernon Sansbury played in a straightforward manner, his earnest and somewhat formal style of acting being well in keeping with the character. Miss Gladys Vernon contributed a bright and vivacious sketch of Kitty Taylor, a housemaid, and Miss Audrey Canning was sufficiently foolish and garrulous as Mrs Chesney. The low comedy element is a feature in the play, and was largely entrusted to Mr Sam Wilkinson, who as a dustman, with the help of Mr Clarmont Gaskell, was responsible for much laughter. Mr Grahame Herrington also caused considerable amusement by his clever portrayal of the fatuous Benjamin Boodle. The play was well mounted and staged, and the numerous handsome frocks worn by Miss Girdlestone were the envy and admiration of the feminine portion of the audience.

"THE GIRL WHO LOST HER CHARACTER."

A Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Melville,
Produced at the Standard Theatre, Bishopsgate, on Monday, Oct. 10.

Rev. Robert Everton	Mr FRANK LISTER
Jack England ..... / Private Johnson.....	Mr FREDERICK MELVILLE
Dick Punch	Mr ANDREW EMM
George Purvis	Mr JOHN WILSON
Flo Davis	Miss SALLY BATES
Georgie Winter.....	Miss JESSIE EDWARDS
Dolly Clarke	Miss MARY PHILLIPS
Nellie Carter.....	Miss JOAN TAYLOR
Isabella Jones	Miss EVA DARE
Marian Franklyn	Miss OLGA AUDRE
Capt. Geoffrey Caversham	Mr FRANK ADAIR
James Sutton	Mr JULIAN CROSS
Detective Weathersby ..	Mr CYRIL VERNON
Stewart	Mr JACK CLARKE
Jimmy.....	Master WILLIE CRISP
Red Cabbage	Mr ALICK MACMILLAN
Lucy Vere	Miss NELLIE BRUNTON
Rose Seymour	Miss M. STEWART DREWRY
Moll Vernon	Miss MAUD HILDYARD

The female interest is invariably strong in Mr Walter Melville's dramas, and his latest play, The Girl who Lost her Character, is no exception to the rule. The story of a woman's life is again depicted in graphic style, and the excusable fury which seizes a young girl when she finds herself betrayed and deserted by a heartless villain leads to the most sensational scene in the drama. Mr Walter Melville is now a practised hand in the writing and production of thrilling melodramas, and all his usual skill is shown in the development of this story of betrayed innocence and man's villainy. The promise of the first act was amply fulfilled in those which followed, and some time before the curtain fell upon the last scene success was unmistakably stamped upon the new production. It was a bad day for Molly Vernon when she met Captain Geoffrey Caversham, a man of unscrupulous character who does not hesitate to indulge his unbridled passions at the cost of any innocent girl whose acquaintance he may chance to make. Poor Molly, like so many of her sex, chooses the base metal when she might have the genuine gold. In other words she rejects the honest love of a young clergyman, the Rev. Robert Everton, and listens to the false promises of Geoffrey Caversham. But when she finds a fashionably dressed woman concealed behind a screen in the captain's quarters in barracks she naturally demands an explanation, whereupon Caversham assures her that the visitor is only his sister. As a matter of fact the lady is an adventuress named Marion Franklyn, who assists the captain in his nefarious schemes. By accident the woman has discovered that James Sutton, alias Charles Fletcher, who has served his time for forgery, is living at a quiet town in Essex. His past is unknown and he has been elected to the office of churchwarden, the vicar of the parish being the Rev. Robert Everton. With James Sutton resides Rose Seymour, his ward, who is heiress to a fortune left her by her father. Marion Franklyn informs the captain of her discovery; and it is agreed that Caversham shall become the suitor of Rose, and if he succeeds in marrying the girl the fortune bequeathed her shall be divided between the two accomplices. Jack England, the son of a rich man, but disowned by his father on account of some youthful indiscretions, has joined the army under the name of Johnson, and he is sent by Captain Caversham to deliver a letter to James Sutton. He executes the commission, and meeting pretty little Rose Seymour, who adores a red coat, the young people fall in love with each other at first sight. In the meantime Dick Punch, the captain's soldier servant, purloins several bank notes belonging to his master, but becoming conscience stricken he replaces the stolen money in the pocket of an overcoat which he believes the captain has just thrown off. The coat belongs to Jack England, and the mistake gives Marion Franklyn an opportunity of denouncing Private Johnson as the thief. She was formerly in love with Jack, but on finding out her true character he gave her up; hence her desire for revenge. The tardy admission of Dick Punch that he is the thief saves Jack from arrest on a false charge. Marion meeting Molly alone does not scruple to reveal the real character of her friend the captain, also disclosing the fact that she is not his sister. Dolly appeals to the captain and tells him it has become absolutely necessary that he should make her his wife. He tells her he can never marry her, and offers her bank notes to tide her over her trouble. The deceived girl becomes for the time being a mad woman, and after attacking her betrayer, who goes for assistance, she breaks up the furniture, smashing tables, chairs, vases, mirrors, and windows, in ungovernable fury, until the room presents the appearance of a perfect wreck. The unhappy Molly is arrested and suffers a term of imprisonment. Next we see her on a winter's night wandering with her child in her arms near St. Martin's Church. Captain Caversham passes. She appeals to him, but he treats his victim with brutal indifference. To her assistance, however, comes her old lover, Robert Everton, who brings her and her child into the presence of the captain. So enraged is the minister at Caversham's callous conduct that he fires at and wounds him. Of course, the scheme of the conspirators to compel Sutton under threats of exposure to bring about the marriage of Rose and Caversham comes to nought, as Jack England inherits a fortune left him by his father, and he and his sweetheart are made happy. The adventuress dies from the effects of poison, which she had intended for the soldier hero.

The Standard company is a very strong one. Miss Maud Hildyard was seen at her best in the part of Molly Vernon, giving a powerful embodiment or the wronged girl. Her pitiful trust in the scoundrel who betrays her; her awakening to the brutal realities of her position and her denunciation of the man who has deceived her were prominent features in a sound piece of acting that delighted the crowded house. Excellent also was the Marian Franklyn of Miss Olga Audre, who as an exponent of the adventuress class of character has few rivals. The bold self-confidence, the contempt for her rival, and the deep-seated distrust of her confederate in crime were convincingly portrayed, and altogether this clever and accomplished actress fully upheld her high reputation. Mr Frederick Melville played quietly but none the less effectively the part of Jack England, the soldier hero, and Miss Maude Stewart Drewry was a young and charmingly ingenuous Rose Seymour. Mr Frank Adair realised to the fullest extent the villainous character of Captain Caversham, whose cold-blooded rascality was throughout cleverly depicted by this experienced actor. Mr Frank Lister gave an admirable embodiment of the Rev. Robert Everton, gentle and sympathetic in his conduct towards the girl he loves, and righteous in his wrath towards her seducer. Mr Julian Cross was a dignified representative of James Sutton, the repentant forger, and showed strong feeling at the proper times. Mr Andrew Emm was brisk and alert as Dick Punch, the soldier servant, whose sweetheart, Isabella Jones, a dressmaker, had a very merry and vivacious exponent in Miss Eva Dare. Mr Cyril Vernon deserves a word of praise for his capital impersonation of Detective Weathersby, and Mr Alick Macmillam scored as Red Cabbage, a London street salesman. Minor rôles were safe in the hands of Mr John Wilson, Mr Jack Clarke, Master Willie Crisp as a newsboy, and Miss Nellie Brunton as a maid servant. The staging of the new play gave complete satisfaction, and at the close the author came before the curtain in response to the applause of a thoroughly delighted audience.

"THE CHEVALEER," at the Garrick Theatre, was played for the fiftieth time on Monday.

THE Prince and Princess of Wales witnessed the performance of The Catch of the Season at the Vaudeville Theatre last Monday night.

A BLIND ACTOR.

APPEAL FOR MR. HENRY CRISP.

"If your eyes were blocked with pitch and you were buried twenty feet under the ground you would see just as much as I do."

These pathetic words came from Mr Henry Crisp, a well-known and experienced actor who has had the misfortune to become totally blind. Two years ago last January he suffered from a little inflammation of the left eye; but previous to that, although always somewhat short-sighted, his vision had troubled him but little. Mr Crisp went to see a doctor in Longton, who was a director of the theatre where he was playing. The doctor in question found that it was a malady he could not deal with, but he gave the actor a letter of introduction to Dr. Foker at the North Staffordshire Infirmary. The latter gentleman advised Mr Crisp to go into the hospital at once, and he did so. After having been an in-patient for six weeks, Mr Crisp was informed that the case of his left eye was absolutely hopeless, that he would never be able to see with it again, and that in all probability, if it were not removed, the sight of the other eye would be affected. He consented to have his left eye taken out, and a glass eye put in its place. For a time his powers of seeing seemed to improve, although he only had one eye left. He resumed his part of Stephen Spettigue, in Charley's Aunt; but one morning in August of last year, while appearing at Eastbourne, there came an unpleasant revelation. Rising about half-past eight or nine o'clock, when the sun should have lit up the room with the brilliance of its rays, and probably did, he saw no light—it was all mist. He remarked to his wife that he could not see across the room. In his anxiety he called upon Dr. Rook, of Eastbourne, who immediately recommended the treatment of the well-known eye-specialist, Dr. Brookbank James, who paid a weekly visit to the town. Dr. Brookbank James proved exceedingly kind, for he declined to take a fee, and attended to Mr Crisp on several occasions. This went on until the beginning of November, when the specialist obtained a bed for Mr Crisp in the Westminster Hospital. Mr Crisp has been totally blind since January of this year, and, as the funds at his command are exceedingly limited, we invite the co-operation of the profession in an appeal on his behalf.

In the destruction of his eyesight he has lost something more than merely the means of livelihood. All that is beautiful in nature to the clear-sighted will be for ever a blank to him. Think of this—his Day has been turned into Night. And his Night is blacker than the night we see, for it is as if a dark curtain had been drawn across the inverted stage of the sky and had blotted out from his vision the wonderful mystery play provided by the twinkling of the stars and the broad glare of the moon in a scene set high in the firmament. It is to

MR. ZANGWILL ON THE DRAMA.

MR ISRAEL ZANGWILL, the President of the Playgoers' Club, took the Chair at a house dinner held in the Club Rooms on Sunday, and, in responding to the toast of his health, said the first interest of playgoers was, of course, the play; therefore, the promotion of better plays was the most natural thing the playgoer should seek after. There seemed to have been about twenty years of talk of how to get good plays. The present position of the stage was rather worse, he believed, than it was twenty years ago. He had no personal objection to the genus musical play. We had come to these hotch-potch productions, which were nothing but a series of music hall turns. Half the theatres of London were now turned into music halls; they had abandoned the drama, and when the music halls wanted to produce the drama they wanted to prosecute them. He wanted to know what was going to become of the poor old drama, driven from its last resting-place, the music hall? In the music hall they had the drama with tobacco and without censorship, whereas in the theatre they got it without tobacco and with the censorship. It appeared to him that the drama had to be either expurgated or fumigated. Playgoing was an epidemic. It was not a rational desire to go and see a play; it was an absolutely contagious thing. The vital difference between the drama and every form of art was that the drama must make an immediate appeal to the populace. The question then was whether there was any way of getting inoculated against going to see bad plays. The right way was to cultivate a good sound mental state, in which the microbe did not catch them. The success or failure of a play was absolutely irrelevant to its merits. It was simply a test of psychology of the people who went to see it. Was our taste, then, worse than that of our ancestors? He had come to the conclusion that they were not justified in saying that. He had come to the conclusion also that play-writing was a branch of politics. The moment a man left his comfortable desk and went play-writing he became mixed up with a lot of worldly things. Just as in America the best people did not associate themselves with politics, so here the best writers kept away from the theatre, and no writer of any distinction, in his experience, had ever had anything to do with theatrical people without being jarred in every nerve. Nevertheless, it was the duty of writers, instead of keeping aloof from it, to get a footing in it, and try gradually to leaven it up. As to play running, it was a form of gambling, or, at least, of highly speculative business. Did they think Lloyd's would ever insure a play against failure? Theatrical managers were the only men of business who never tried to enlarge their market, who never tried to cater for new markets, and who were always satisfied with their present market. He could not see at least why one theatre in London should not cater exclusively for clever people. What a rush there would be if that were the case. How were they to get a theatre of beauty and truth that was so much desired? The only thing that could produce this better stage was absolutely a good dramatist. The drama could only be saved by the dramatist; the genius must be born. His hope for the British drama lay in the education of the people and in the gradual growing union between literary men and the drama. They must try to educate their millionaires so that those who gave books so lavishly might see that it was just as good to give people plays as books.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MR. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN.

Like many others in the profession Mr Fewlass Llewellyn commenced his career in that excellent school for beginners Messrs Roberts, Archer, and Bartlett's "fit-up" company. Excellent, no doubt, it was, as will be seen by the names Mr Llewellyn can quote of ladies and gentlemen he met in that company in a brief twelve months, viz., Miss Alice Beet, Miss Minnie Carlton, Miss Minnie Clifford, Mr Sydney Stirling, Mr J. C. Aubrey, Mr Malcolm Dunn, and Mr Fred Volpe, all of whom are a credit to their profession to-day. In this engagement The Harbour Lights, In the Ranks, The School for Scandal (which was put up by the management at the request of the "boys and girls" for the sake of experience), and a pantomime Whittington represent the work done during the year 1890. This was followed by a short stock season at the Parkhurst Theatre, under the management of Mr G. R. Phillips, at which The Two Orphans, She Stoops to Conquer, Uncles and Aunts, In the Ranks, Harbour Lights, Don Cæsar, Adrienne Lecouvreur were the principal attractions during a very hard-working, but most enjoyable, time. It was during this engagement that Mr Llewellyn essayed stage-management, The Harbour Lights being his first venture. A twenty weeks' tour as Ciro Panitza, in My Jack, followed, after which came another stock season at Northampton, and then a twelve months' tour as stage-manager with Mr W. Calder's Span of Life company, followed by a short tour in a piece called Money Mad. A season of five nights at the Opera Comique came next, which in its turn was followed by a short tour as General Belisarius, in Theodora, which terminated rather dramatically at Glasgow, and Mr Llewellyn, being in consequence rather short of coin of the realm, came back to London viâ the North Sea. He next rejoined Mr Calder's Span of Life company for another year, after which he played Jean de Lussac, Hands Across the Sea company, the heavy part in In Old Kentucky company, and Jim Dixon, in The Fatal Card. Then followed another stock season at the Princess's, Glasgow, in which he sustained such parts as Jim Dalton, in The Ticket-of-Leave; Dr. Cenerl, in Called Back; Kyrle Daly, in Colleen Bawn; Roy Carlton, in Jack-in-Box; Jim Garth, in Shall We Forgive Her? Geordie Rorbertson, in Jeannie Deans; and others. Shortly after this Mr Llewellyn had the pleasure of appearing in some special performances as Tom Quiny in the late Dr. Aveling's charming one-act play, Judith Shakespeare. About this time he played in a special matinée of a new farcical comedy, An Amateur Wife, at the Criterion Theatre, which subsequently gained for him an engagement from Mr (now Sir) Charles Wyndham. Two years as stage-manager and Sir Archibald M'Gregor, in One of the Best, followed. Then came an autumn tour as Sir George Ferrers in How London Lives, and the same part in the revival at the Princess's

MR. FEWLASS LLEWELLYN.

Theatre almost immediately after. Mr Llewellyn next went to Wyndham's Theatre and played in Cyrano de Bergerac, after which he was retained to play Brown, in David Garrick, and Dr. Johnson, in the one-act play of that name. A season at the Garrick, under Mr Arthur Bourchier, in The Wedding Guest was followed by a spring tour as Baron Heintz, in The Swashbuckler, and an autumn tour as Archdeacon Wealthy, in The Christian; a season at Drury-lane as the Centurian, in Ben Hur; a suburban tour in the old position in One of the Best, and stage-management of pantomime at the Coronet Theatre. He stage-managed and appeared as the Bishop, in Mrs Ryley's charming play, The Altar of Friendship, at the Criterion; also as Bill Blacksmith, in Miss Annie Hughes' version of Lorna Doone, and Sir Charles Vandrift, in An African Millionaire. The production of Forty Thieves at the Camden Theatre last Christmas secured him a contract to stage-manage the pantomime at Covent-garden next December, which undertaking, however, is relinquished owing to "barring out" clauses, &c. Mr Llewellyn was the First Stranger in Mr Leigh's production of Timon of Athens this year, and is at present engaged by Messrs Harrison and Maude to understudy at the New Theatre. It is interesting to note that on the 24th of the present month a new drama called The Coal King, of which Mr L. is part author, will be produced at the Elephant and Castle Theatre by the stock company.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the Musical Play, by James T. Tanner, entitled
"THE ORCHID."

A crowded audience, unbounded laughter, and generous applause greeted the endeavours of Mr George Dance's company in the above popular play on Monday. As Lady Violet Anstruther Miss Ethel Bryant distinguished herself; notably in "Little Mary" and other smart ditties. Miss Irene Desmond was a charming Josephine Zaccary, playing the pupil teacher demurely and naturally. Miss Madge Lucas as Caroline Vokins won instant favour, delivering her lines and songs with all point and spirit. Miss Poppy Wilkinson was a graceful Thisbe. Zelie Rumpert as portrayed by Miss Eva Melville was a convincing adventuress, and the Countess Anstruther had a handsome representative in Miss Ida Chichester. Mr Bertie Wright was a most admirable Meakin, his by-play and business evoking incessant laughter. Mr G. Davy Burnaby was excellent as the Hon. Guy Scrymgeour, and was, with Meakin, loudly encored in the duet "When will justice be done." Mr Ernest Derrell was a distinguished Aubrey Chesterton, of orchid fame. Mr Arthur P. Hemsley as Zaccary was greatly to the liking of the audience, and his dancing was something to wonder at. Mr Edmund Hollick was good in the small part of Dr. Faussett, and Mr Edmund Page was diverting as the Count De Cassignat. The chorus singing was excellent, under the able direction of Mr T. Tunbridge.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"LE JALOUX,"

Play, in Three Acts, by M. Antoine Bibesco.
Produced at the Théâtre de l'Œuvre, Oct. 9.

Hélène Marsanne.....	Mdlle. DEVOYOD
Jeanne Saujat	Mdlle. STELLA VIARNY
Georges Martel.....	M. HENRY BURGUET
Moritzogue	M. G. SAILLARD

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, OCT. 13.—The Théâtre de l'Œuvre has given us three novelties, two of which are psychological studies, somewhat sketchy, but full of observation. In the first piece, Le Jaloux, M. Antoine Bibesco has undertaken a formidable task in depicting a jealous lover. The scene is laid in the theatrical world. Georges Martel, a young dramatist, is in love with Hélène Marsanne, one of his exponents. Georges is jealous of everybody and everything, of the girl's very past. He suspects all visitors, he reads all her letters, and even the flowers and the applause showered upon her rouse his anger. Hélène realises the sufferings he undergoes, sufferings for which there seems to be no remedy. But she loves him, and she patiently reasons with him, trying to cure him of his insane suspicions. It is all in vain. After a violent scene Georges leaves Hélène; he becomes the lover of Jeanne Saujat, who has never ceased to fan his jealousy, and he writes infamous articles against his former mistress. The broken-hearted Hélène, tries to drown her grief in a life of dissipation; yet we foresee the moment when she will return to Georges, and both will once more know the torture of jealousy. In M. Henry Burguet the jealous Georges had an able exponent. Mdlle. Devoyod impersonated the suffering Hélène, and Mdlle. Stella Viarny the treacherous Jeanne Saujat.

M. JEAN JULLIEN, the talented author of Le Maître and La Mer, has been less successful in his one-act novelty Les Droits du Cœur. He has created a most dramatic situation, but instead of developing his idea he has given us the mere outline of a piece, a kind of scenario, which ends in a childish fashion. At a ball Henry De Meyrargues makes violent love to a young girl, Anne Lehautier, and he kisses her passionately. Two of the guests have witnessed this incident, and the girl has overheard one of them remarking that "the apple does not fall far from the tree," words which convey a secret meaning. Her old friend, the family doctor, happens to be present. So she asks him for an explanation, and, receiving an evasive reply, walks up to her father and enquires whether her mother has been guilty. The man starts, and says, "She has explated," whereupon the fearful truth dawns upon her. Her mother has sinned, and it is her husband who killed her. A jury has acquitted him; but the girl does not pardon, and the father stands with bowed head before his child who has raked up the terrible past. He anxiously awaits his fate, and we also wonder what course she will pursue. She however, lets him down gently. She will not ask her father's consent to marry the man who kissed her, and the curtain drops. Mdlle. Gladys-Maxhence, who last year secured a first prize in comedy at the Conservatoire, played the difficult rôle of Anne with much grace and tact.

"LE PROPHETE," by MM. F. Toussaint, is so enshrouded in mystery as to become almost incomprehensible. All we know is that a Spanish maiden loves a poet, and that for an unknown reason she becomes mad.

THE cast of Monsieur Polichinelle, the new piece to be produced at the Théâtre du Chatelet, comprises MM. Paul Fugère, Pougaud, Bertin, Daragon, Etievant; and Mesdames Dallet, Maud Amy, Reynaldy, and Feugère.

"LE TRUC DU BRESILIEN,"
Vaudeville, in Four Acts,
by MM. Nancey and Armont,
Produced at the Cluny Theatre, Oct. 12.

Bernard	M. J. PONCET
Pombagin	M. DORGAT
Saint-Gapour	M. DURAFOUR
Gustave	M. ARNOULD
D'Ambleteuse	M. LUREAU
Merluchon	M. WAGMANN
Gabrielle	Mdlle. ALBA
Mathilde	Mdlle. ANDRAL
Madame Cocoche	Madame FRANCK-MEL
Leontine	Mdlle. BERTRY

It looks as if the little Cluny Theatre has at last struck oil. The new vaudeville has certainly caught on, and is likely to have a long and prosperous career. The management of this playhouse, instead of applying to some well-known dramatist, whose work rarely comes up to his reputation, have produced the maiden effort of two unknown playwrights. And they have acted wisely. It is not a complicated plot, but it is intensely funny. Bernard has married Gabrielle without having taken the precaution of ridding himself first of Nichette, his former mistress. In a weak moment he has promised Nichette never to leave her unless she proved faithless. Unfortunately, Nichette has principles. She remains true to him, whereupon the distracted Bernard hits upon the plan of disguising himself as a "gentleman from Brazil," to try to drag the lady from the path of righteousness. And then the unforeseen happens. The frail Nichette is proof against the Brazilian's fascinations, whilst his own wife, the virtuous Gabrielle, succumbs, and Bernard is made cocu by himself. His position is by no means an enviable one, for he has now three parts to play—i.e., he has to act as Nichette's lover, as his wife's lover, and as the latter's husband. He finds it rather a large order. But his troubles come to an end when he discovers that his wife has known from the start that Bernard and the fascinating Brazilian were one and the same person, and that she only wanted to teach him a lesson which he will not be likely to forget. Among the episodical personages are Madame Cocoche, Nichette's mother, a dreadful creature, who has a violent dispute in a restaurant and throws a turbot at the head of one of the guests. Then we have Bernard's uncle, just returned from America, where he has made an enormous fortune in a "Wet Nurses' Trust," and other queer types who help to keep the house in constant laughter. The Cluny Theatre cannot boast of a first-class company, but the artists worked with a will, and contributed a fairly good ensemble. M. Poncet gave a good account of the dual rôle of Bernard and the Brazilian. M. Dorgat successfully impersonated the uncle from America, and M. Arnould supplied a rather amusing sketch of the old parasite, the Baron De Wimereux. The women's rôles in the piece are of less importance, and the artistes showed a decided tendency to "over-acting." This was specially noticeable in Madame Franck-Mel, who piled on the agony in making Madame Cocoche more unpleasant than necessary.

M. MAURICE DONNAY has read to the artists of the Renaissance his new play with which this theatre intends to inaugurate the season towards the middle of next month. The principal rôle, that of a scientist, will, of course, be taken by M. Lucien Guitry. The title of the work has not yet been decided upon.

AT the Ambigu La Fille du Garde Chasse will disappear from the bill to make room for the revival of Le Tour du Monde d'un Enfant de Paris, a fairy piece, which has been produced already more than a thousand times. In the meantime the first novelty at this playhouse, Le Crime d'Aix, will be put into rehearsal.

MR LEONARD RAYNE has acquired the South African rights of Mr James Bernard Fagan's fine play, The Prayer of the Sword, which is running so successfully at the Adelphi.

MR GEORGE DANCE'S No. 1 A Country Girl company played to phenomenal business last week at the Cork Opera House. At ordinary prices it beat all previous local records for musical comedy by £250 on the week.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr Arthur Wing Pinero's doll in A Wife Without a Smile, which was produced at Wyndham's Theatre on Wednesday, has been the dramatic sensation of the week. The doll trick is an old one, and is frequently seen at French fairs. It is a great pity that a man of Mr Pinero's marvellous ability should have written such a silly play. The pleasant memories of Mr Pinero's great dramatic successes make it painful and distressing that a dramatist of so much genius should have descended to such childish work.

Mrs Brown Potter's handsome and artistic drawing-room furniture has been brought up from Bray Lodge, Maidenhead, to decorate the stage in the scene for Forget-Me-Not, which she will produce with Cavalleria Rusticana at the Savoy Theatre to-night. In the revival of Cavalleria Rusticana Mascagni's "Intermezzo" will be played by an orchestra of seventy, under the bâton of Mr Raymond Roze.

Mr George Grossmith, in consequence of the serious illness of his wife, has, we are sorry to hear, been compelled to cancel all his immediate provincial engagements.

Sir Henry Irving will arrive in Sunderland on Thursday, the 27th inst., and will be honoured by a demonstration on Saturday, the 29th, when he will be entertained at luncheon in the Town Hall by the Mayor and aldermen, the Members of Parliament, clergy, and an influential committee of citizens, and will be presented with a beautifully modelled silver and gold casket, bearing his own portrait in enamel, and providing a record of his original appearance at the old Lyceum in 1856. The casket is ornamented with statuettes symbolical of various phases of dramatic art, and contains a eulogistic address. In the evening a performance of Becket will be given at the Avenue Theatre, at which the Mayor and members of the Corporation will be present.

Mr Stead's first impression of the drama has been favourable. In writing in the Review of Reviews of his visit to The Tempest at His Majesty's Mr Stead says:—"It is only just to say a word of grateful recognition of the services which Mr Tree and his company have rendered to the community by such honest, laborious, and, on the whole, successful effort to represent one of the most famous of Shakespeare's plays. It is a national service, and well deserves national recognition. If all plays are like this play, then the prejudice against the theatre is absurd."

Mr Beerbohm Tree, in regard to Mr Stead's criticism of The Tempest, in the Review of Reviews, remarks:—"I suppose dramatic criticism requires some sort of training. But it requires, in addition to intelligence, an artistic instinct, which in Mr Stead's case has lain dormant for fifty-five years. Mr Stead found the shipwreck unconvincing. To me, with all my long experience of the stage, the illusion is as powerful as if I were still a boy. Should I be alarmed to hear that Shakespeare had come to life again and was among the audience at His Majesty's? No, not alarmed, for I should have complete confidence in his largeness of mind."

A burglar who was sent to Sing Sing Prison five years ago for stealing jewels from Miss Cecilia Loftus's room in an hotel wrote to her from gaol saying that he only wanted to steal one of her photographs and asking her to send him a signed one. He has now written from an Illinois prison saying that he has again been sentenced this time for twenty years, concluding:—"Dear Miss Loftus, forgive my presumption and think only of my hideous position. I want you to give me another of your portraits. I have one already that I treasure above everything else. Do write me a letter telling me about your new play. Hoping and praying for an answer, I am, yours sincerely, Cecilia Loftus's Burglar." Miss Loftus sent the desired letter and photograph.

Miss Dorothea Baird took her place for a short time on the Bench at North London Police-court on Thursday. When she had sufficiently studied the manners and customs of the Court, Mr E. S. Fordham, the presiding Magistrate, saw Miss Baird to her motor.

The theatre hat difficulty may now be overcome. The Paris milliners are bringing out small bonnets and caps, ornamented with lace or jewels, to be worn by ladies in theatres. M. Pedro Gailhard, of the Paris Opéra; M. Carré, of the Opéra Comique; and M. Porel, of the Vaudeville, have signified their approval of the novelty, and at the Gymnase there is to be a special notice posted over the desks of the ticket-takers, relative to the wearing of the new head-gear in the stalls.

"Taps," the military play now running at the Lyric Theatre, New York, has had its dénouement changed in deference to public opinion. In the early representations a Sergeant-Major was shown as so imbued with military discipline that, instead of shooting the Lieutenant who had wronged his daughter, he shot the girl herself. Now he shoots the Lieutenant, and the audience goes home satisfied.

Amongst those present at the production of Mr Pinero's new play, A Wife Without a Smile, at Wyndham's Theatre on Wednesday night, were Mr J. M. Barrie, Mr Egerton Castle, Judge Bacon, Mr Marcus Stone, Lord Granby, Sir George Chetwynd, Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr Theodore M'Kenna, Lady Lewis, and Mrs Pinero.

"I think I never saw Mr Hollingshead in the front of the house to receive a guest but once," says a gentleman who had been actively associated with him for the last half-century or more. "That was when Charles Dickens paid us a visit during a performance. Mr Hollingshead's admiration for the great novelist amounted almost to veneration, and he was a proud man the evening he welcomed 'The Master' to the Gaiety."

Mr George Bernard Shaw's one-act play, How He Lied to Her Husband, has provoked as much newspaper discussion in New York as did the same author's Candida. It was hinted beforehand that the piece would prove a surprise to New York playgoers; and it certainly did. The audience enjoyed the piece immensely on the first night, and recalled Mr Arnold Daly until he was forced to make a speech, which he prefaced by reading from the prompt book Mr Shaw's last note on the manuscript:—"Hisses, manifestations of disapproval. Calls for the author. The manager appears and is pelted from the stage."

Mr George Alexander will put on in front of The Garden of Lies at the St. James's Theatre on Tuesday a new one-act play, by Mr Joshua Bates, entitled The Decree Nisi, with a cast including Mr Charles Fulton, Mr Leslie Faber, Miss Barbara Hannay, and Miss Madge M'Intosh.

Many members of the original cast of Trilby have promised their services at the matinée on behalf of the Actors' Benevolent Fund which will be given by Mr Tree at His Majesty's Theatre on Nov. 8. Mr Tree will sustain his old part of Svengali, Mr Edmund Maurice will be the Talbot Wynne, Mr Lionel Brough will be the Laird, Mr Gerald Du Maurier will appear as Dodor, Mr Gayer Mackay as Lorimer, Mr Holman Clark as Manager Kaw, Mr Herbert Ross as Zouzou, and Miss Rosina Filippi as Madame Vinard, Miss Viola Tree playing the shapely footed heroine.

Sir Henry Irving's visit to Birmingham at the Prince of Wales's Theatre was brought to a close on Saturday last in a strikingly demonstrative fashion. Waterloo had been retold and The Bells was concluded when the long pent up feelings of the mighty, throbbing house found vent and expression in a volume of sound the like of which had probably never been heard in the theatre before, and anon Sir Henry stepped forth to acknowledge the ovation. Here the audience literally rose to him, and moments passed ere Sir Henry could speak. It was, he said, his privilege to thank them, though it was impossible to thank them adequately, for their kind and generous welcome. He thanked them for his comrades and self, and he thanked Mr Graham and the staff of the theatre for the manner in which they had helped to put the work before the public. He had given himself two years more, and he should look forward with more than common pleasure to the great privilege of meeting them once more. He should be glad if it were twice more, but he would not promise more than he felt able to perform. He had stored in his memory many kindnesses of the past, and he carried away with him a fresh sheaf that night. He referred to the coming guest, for it was, he said, a great pleasure to him to know that those boards would be occupied by a very valued and dear friend of his, John Hare, whom he characterised as one of the most incomparable artistes on the stage, one of the best of friends and best of men. He thanked the Press for their generous, eloquent, and inspiring reference to his work in "this Birmingham, this Warwickshire, the heart of the English stage," and the scene, which touched the hearts of all present, terminated amid renewed cheering, Sir Henry thanking everybody for their "most gracious and sweet courtesy." "'Beggar that I am,'" he said, "'I am even poor in thanks,' but I do thank you from my heart and from my lips."

Miss Ada Reeve, who is appearing with her company, in Winnie Brooke, Widow, at the Park Theatre, Eastbourne, has been lending a helping hand in the cause of charity. Mr Samuel Lloyd organised a special matinée on Thursday, and the proceeds will be given for the benefit of the widow and orphans of the local fishermen who lost their lives off Folkestone in the recent gale. Other members of Miss Reeve's company assisted at the performance, and Mr Walter Melville's Worst Woman in London company also gave substantial help. The Pier Company has also given half the proceeds of the Wednesday's matinée to the same charitable cause.

Mr C. E. Hamilton has engaged Miss Marie Dainton to play the title-rôle in Patrick Bidwell's and Signor Esposito's new musical play, Peggy Machree, in which Mr Dennis O'Sullivan will make his reappearance. Mr Hamilton opens with the piece in the provinces on Nov. 7, and it will be seen in London in January. Also engaged are Mr Stanley Pringle, Mr Marc Maodermott, Mr Shiel Barry, Mr Grahame Campbell, Miss Freda Bramleigh, Miss Millicent M'Laughlin, and Miss Nessie Walker. The scene of the play is laid in Ireland in the time of George I.

Mr Bernard Shaw's new play, John Bull's Other Island, to be produced at the Court Theatre on Nov. 1, will be performed by Mr Louis Calvert, Mr J. L. Shine, Mr Percival Stevens, Mr Nigel Playfair, Mr Granville Barker, Mr Graham Browne, Mr Charles Daly, Mr F. Cremlin, Mr Wilfred Shine, Mr A. E. George, Miss Agnes Thomas, and Miss Ellen O'Malley.

Mr Israel Zangwill, the author of Merely Mary Ann, left on Wednesday by the Teutonic, of the White Star Line, for New York. He is accompanied by Mrs Zangwill. His intention is to gain the sympathy and support of the wealthy New York Jews for the Zionist movement, with special reference to the proposed Jewish colony in British East Africa.

Mrs Brown Potter's cast of Forget-Me-Not at the Savoy Theatre this evening will include, besides herself, Mr Frederick Kerr, Mr Herbert Dansey, Mr Richard Boleyn, Miss Amy Ravenscroft, and Miss Kate Wingfield. In the revival of Cavalleria Rusticana she will be supported by Mr Jerrold Robertshaw, Mr W. Lawson Butt, Mr Richard Boleyn, Mr Bridges, Mr Sidney Hamilton, Miss Sarah De Groot, Miss Elsie Chester, Miss Anna Inglitt, and Miss Wilde.

At the recent annual general meeting of the Dramatic Debaters, the president, Mr J. T. Grein, and the vice-president, Mrs De Courcy Laffan, were unanimously re-elected. Mr V. F. Warschauer is the new secretary, and the duties of treasurer devolve on Mr E. F. Mehrer. At the first meeting held on Sunday at the Queen's Hotel, W., Mr F. D. Bone read a paper on "Criticism."

Mrs Mulholland, in The Duke of Killicrankie, has been played by Miss Helen Ferrers since Capt. Marshall released Miss Illington from her engagement as the delightful widow to appear in Mr Pinero's new piece. Miss Ferrers is, as everybody knows, the sister of Miss Fortescue, and has been on the stage for about ten years. She was in Mr F. R. Benson's company long enough to be numbered in the great army of Bensonians, but most of her work has been done in London, His Majesty's having been the theatre where she has appeared most frequently. At the end of the run of King John—in which she played Lady Falconbridge, and, while Miss Julia Neilson was out of the bill, the more important part of Constance—Miss Ferrers went across the road to the Haymarket and stayed under Mr Harrison and Mr Maude's management for two years, having worn some of the prettiest "creations" in Frocks and Frills, and helped to emphasise the humour of The Second in Command. She returned to Mr Tree for Resurrection, The Gordian Knot, and Flodden Field, and then supported Mr Willard in his season at the St. James's. After playing in Captain Dieppe, Miss Ferrers joined The Duke of Killicrankie at the Criterion, where she will play Mrs Mulholland till the end of the run.

Miss Ferrers is very fond of animals, her pets including a collie, a toy Pomeranian, and several birds. The Pomeranian was presented to her on the day of the production of The Gay Lord Quex, so he bears the name of Quex, and proved a successful beggar at the big concert that was given in the summer at Queen's Hall in aid of Our Dumb Friends' League, one enthusiastic dog-lover offering to pay half-a-crown for the privilege of holding him in her arms for a few minutes. Miss Ferrers can appreciate the good qualities of a "thoroughbred mongrel" just as much as the beauties of a dog with a long pedigree. One of the latest "strays" for which she found a home was a cross between a Dachshund and a fox terrier, but she overlooked his ugliness for his faithfulness.

Apropos of dogs, a friend of Miss Ferrers's is the proud possessor of a most peculiar-looking mongrel that attracts attention wherever he goes. The two ladies were having tea together in Bond-street a few weeks ago, and the dog was observed with great interest by a party of Americans, one of whom, after a while, walked across the room and spoke to Miss Ferrers and her friend. "I have never seen such a lovely dog," she said, "He is so verry quaint! What kind of dog is it?" The owner of the lovely animal hesitated, and then gravely replied, "He is an Australian bush poodle." The American thanked her cordially, made a note of the name, and said she would certainly purchase an Australian bush poodle before leaving the old country. It is to be hoped that she has found one.

The cast of The Master of Kingsgift, to be produced at the Avenue Theatre on Monday, includes Mr Wilfred Forster, Mr Frank Cooper, Mr Conway Tearle, Mr R. Henderson Bland, Mr Maurice Mancini, Mr R. P. Hamilton, Mr Walter Maclean, Mr Edwin Palmer, Mr J. M. Troughton, Mr Barnford, Mr Johnstone, Mr Rowe, Mr A. Munro, Miss Helen Palgrave, Miss Lillah M'Carthy, Miss Dora Barton, Miss Ruby Chester, Miss Marion Sterling, and Miss Winifred Sadler.

Messrs W. W. Jacobs and Louis N. Parker's little play, The Monkey's Paw, adapted by M. Nunes, was successfully produced at the Théâtre Antoine, Paris, on Thursday. M. Antoine as White, the old man whose son is killed by the mummified paw, made a decided hit.

Mr E. Vivian Edmonds writes:—"Where do all those authors with good plays to dispose of hide themselves? One hears so much of 'authors' grievances,' but the grievance is on the manager's side—he cannot find the good authors. I am afraid these gentlemen do not read their Era weekly. I have advertised many times. The provinces want good plays, and nowadays London will receive 'provincial successes;' so why not advertise in the 'Authors' Column' and give managers a chance? During the past twelve years Miss Austin and myself have had to obtain our plays from such well-known authors as George R. Sims, Wilson Barrett, Arthur Shirley, and Frank Harvey."

The autumn tour of If I Were King, under the direction of Mr Frank Fenton, has been so successful that he has decided to run the piece through Christmas instead of starting his spring tour in February, as he originally intended. The provincial press has spoken in terms of unqualified praise of the acting, dressing, and staging, and at the Shakespeare Theatre on Oct 24 Mr Fenton hopes to have this appreciation endorsed.

The Licensing Committee of the Administrative County of London will sit at the Sessions House, Clerkenwell, on Nov 2 (for north of the Thames), and on Nov. 11 at the Sessions House, Newington (for south of the Thames), for the purpose of hearing applications for licences in order to report to the County Council, which will sit at the County Hall, Spring-gardens, on Nov. 25. The Theatres and Music Halls Committee has issued a list of notices of applications, and this is divided into "renewals," "transfers," "removal, &c., of restrictions," and "new licences," the total showing applications for 347 licences in respect of 330 places.

Everyone interested in the employment of children on the stage should send three stamps to the publishing offices of The Era for a copy of the Act which came into force on Oct. 1.

Mr D. Lyn Harding, the new Prospero at His Majesty's, was a dramatic reciter before he thought of going on the stage, and his knowledge of plays and players was very limited. The late Edward Fletcher, a tragedian of the old school, took a personal interest in the young actor, and asked him to play Antonio in The Merchant of Venice, followed some years later by the offer of the part of Camillo in A Winter's Tale, in which he scored a notable success. The performance that may be said to have laid the foundation of his present position in London was the leading part in Mr Richard Ganthony's play called The Prophecy, that was produced at Fulham. It was then that young Lyn Harding was recognised by West-end managers as a "possibility." His success in A Snug Little Kingdom, at the Avenue last year, made him a "certainty," and he is now one of the most promising and popular actors whom Mr Tree has gathered together.

The following true story is a proof of Mr Lyn Harding's skill in making up. A well-known actor, having seen him as the romantic Captain Starlight, in Rolf Boldrewood's Robbery Under Arms, suggested his name to a certain provincial manager for the part of the hero in the first tour of a London success. The provincial manager seized the first opportunity to see for himself whether Mr Harding was as good-looking, energetic, and talented as his friend declared. Unfortunately Robbery Under Arms was no longer in the bill, and the provincial manager saw the young actor in the part of an old man. His opinion was frankly stated in the following curt note:—"I want a man to play juvenile lead, not a doddering old imbecile!"

Mr Fred Bowyer was to have written the pantomime which it was at one time proposed to produce at Covent-garden next Christmas, but the project was, for various reasons, relinquished; and Mr Isaac Cohen has secured the services of Mr Bowyer to write the book of the Christmas piece for the Crown Theatre, Peckham. Mr Bowyer is the author of five successful pantomimes at the Coronet Theatre, and if the Peckham annual is as original and bright as these were, the patrons of the Crown will assuredly have no reason to complain.

Before Judge Woodfall, in the Westminster County Court, on Wednesday, Miss Singleton, an actress, was sued by Mr Brough, manager of a theatrical touring company, for damages for breach of contract. Miss Singleton was engaged to play in the touring company with The Lady of Ostend, at £3 10s. a week. She received £2 on account, but subsequently broke off the engagement, and sailed with a travelling company to Australia. Mr Brough claimed a fortnight's salary, as was the custom, for a breach of contract. Judge Woodfall made the award.

"Der Tote Lowa" (The Dead Lion), the play by Herr Oscar Blumenthal, the performance of which was prohibited in Berlin by the Police Censor, on the pretext that, although its plot is laid in the Middle Ages, it in reality portrays events connected with recent political history, was produced at the Hamburg Schauspielhaus on Wednesday evening. The house was crowded, and the piece was very favourably received.

A mural tablet, erected in the Church of St. Stephen, Walbrook, by the London section of the Incorporated Society of Musicians in memory of John Dunstable, was unveiled on Saturday afternoon. The monument is a beautiful specimen of glass mosaic. In the upper panel there are three figures of angel musicians against a starry sky, symbolising the greatness of Dunstable both as a musician and as an astronomer. Dr. Cummings, on behalf of the Incorporated Society of Musicians, requested the rector and churchwardens to accept the memorial, which was then unveiled by the Rev. R. S. De C. Laffan.

The O.P. Club, in view of the interest aroused by the production of Mr Pinero's play, A Wife Without a Smile, at Wyndham's Theatre, will on Friday, Oct. 21, in the clubroom discuss "Mr Pinero, the Poet Laureate, and Indelicate Pirouetting," with special reference to Mr Alfred Austin's recent remarks on the Drama, when he deplored that it is largely given over to "indelicate pirouetting."

We can give an emphatic denial to the persistent rumour that Madame Réjane intends returning to the Paris Vaudeville. Even if the misunderstandings between this talented actress and her husband are smoothed over it is most unlikely that she will ever join again M. Porel's company. The latter has now made all his arrangements, which the presence of a "star" would upset. Altogether M. Porel objects so much to "stars" that he has induced Madame Suzanne Desprès to cancel her engagement with the Vaudeville.

Mr Sterling Mackinlay has just returned to London from a long tour with a concert party called the Bohemian Singers. Son of the late Madame Antoinette Sterling, he has always lived in the atmosphere of music and art, but his own career as a vocalist was started in a most hap-hazard fashion. He is an Eton boy and an Oxford man, and was intended for the Bar, but one day his mother heard him singing, and it struck her for the first time that he possessed the promise of a remarkably fine voice. She took him to Signor Manuel Garcia. The veteran master advised him not to sing a note for a year, and then consented to give him lessons. Mr Mackinlay has himself developed into a very successful teacher.

One of Mr Mackinlay's would-be pupils sent him the following unconsciously funny letter the other day:—"Sir in answer to yours Mr B. as had an engagement offered which he has except and left London on Wensday thanking you (signed) Mr B." Mr M'Kinlay has been appointed professor of singing at the Highbury Academy of Acting. He also gives lessons twice a week at the Highbury Athenæum. His only sister, who is an actress, was given her pretty Scotch name, Jean, in honour of her poetess godmother, Jean Ingelow, her two godfathers having been equally distinguished—Dr. George Macdonald and Sir James Dewar. Sterling M'Kinlay's godfather was the late Lord Mount-Temple, by whom he was presented with several interesting mementos, including a medal struck at the coronation of Queen Victoria, and a handsome silver vase engraved with a design of ferns. The young singer went in for sculling when he was at Oxford, and holds several prize cups and the oar that tells of his college's success in the Torpid Races of 1897.

Mr Mackinlay possesses a very valuable collection of autographs, including two letters in the powerful scrawl of Lord Nelson, and there is hardly a distinguished man of the last century whose name is not to be found in the huge black book of which he is so justly proud. In nearly every case the value of the autograph is enhanced by the addition of a word of greeting, a witticism, or a long letter. Mr Mackinlay's chambers are full of interesting pictures, furniture, and curios. He has a fine old sixteenth century chair, a set of stamped velvet cushions from Whistler's famous peacock-room, two early sketches by Lord Leighton, a couple of pictures that belonged to Dante Gabriel Rossetti, the little song-book (bound in black) that his mother used to hold on the platform, and a silver bowl that was presented to her by Queen Victoria, Roman coins that were found in the Baroness Burdett-Coutts's grounds, a tiny French watch (the size of a nut), enamelled with a map of the world; rare old silver spoons—these are only a few of his treasures.

Mrs Lewis Waller has desired her solicitor to state that we were in error last week in attributing the authorship of the English version of Vilma to Mr Paul Berton.

The Nordseeland Railway Company's new line will cross the reputed "Grave of Hamlet," near Marienlyst, a place of pilgrimage visited by thousands of tourists.

A series of matinées of the Hippolytus of Euripides will be given at the Court Theatre during this month, commencing on Tuesday, with a cast including Miss Eleanor Foster, Mrs Gwendolen Bishop, Mr Alfred Brydone, Mr Ben Webster, Mr Granville Barker, Mr A. E. George, Miss Edyth Olive, Miss Rosina Filippi, and Miss Tita Brand.

Miss Eleanor Robson will stay in London till the end of December. She will appear in St. Louis in Christmas week, and her place in the very successful Merely Mary Ann at the Duke of York's Theatre will have to be filled.

At the annual general meeting of the Playgoers' Club on the 7th inst., the following officers and committee were elected for the ensuing year:—Mr I. Zangwill (president), Mr Kenneth Havers (vice president), Mr F. Hees (hon. treasurer), Mr L. Harfeld (trustee), Messrs Max Beerbohm, Norreys Connell, Osman Edwards, B. W. Findon, M. Faraday, W. Sparks, A. F. Spencer, and A. B. Walkley on the committee, Mr Hannaford Bennett (hon. secretary), and Mr James Sharpe (assistant hon. secretary.) The hon. treasurer announced the number of members to be 1,344.

Three of the Hutchison companies visit the suburban theatres next week—The Money-Makers at the Marlborough, Cousin Kate at Brixton, and A Country Mouse at Crouch-end.

The London section of the Incorporated Society of Musicians was held at 20, Hanover-square, on Saturday last. Dr. Cummings presided, in place of Sir Frederick Bridge. Mr F. H. Hankins, the hon. secretary, submitted his annual report, which stated that the attendance at the monthly meetings had increased. The Saturday afternoon "socials" had been a decided success, and many vocalists and instrumentalists had received engagements through being heard at these gatherings. The members numbered about 600. On the motion of Mr C. Gardner the report was adopted. The chairman, referring to a correspondence which had taken place in one of the musical journals, stated that the Society did its charitable work unostentatiously. The Royal Society of Musicians had given away hundreds of pounds to help people who had no connection at all with their organisation.

Mr Jerrold Robertshaw, who is cast for Turriddu, in Mrs Brown Potter's revival of Cavalleria Rusticana at the Savoy, has been a great traveller, and made a success of business before he went on the stage. He fences well, and used to practise—at all events to study—mesmerism. He is a Yorkshireman, made a hit in Cyrano de Bergerac, and is generally to be found in one or another London play-bill.

In each town visited by Fred Melville's Her Forbidden Marriage company Mr Melville offers to present to the first couple entering the early door on Monday evening a 22-carat gold wedding ring, providing the marriage takes place during that week. On Monday evening, Sept. 26, at the Colosseum Theatre, Oldham, the ring was claimed by Thomas Sterndale and Mary Claber, they being the first couple to enter the early door, and who were to be married on the Saturday following. Mr Frank Mundill, general manager for the company, announced that he would formally present the ring to the couple on the stage the following evening, on behalf of Mr Melville, which he did before a crowded house, the lady being previously provided with an order on a local jeweller to select a ring of a suitable size. The wedding took place Oct. 1 at Christ Church, Chadderton, and in the absence of Mr Mundill the ring was finally handed over by Mr Gilbert Heron. Her Forbidden Marriage, Mr Fredk. Melville's latest success, is now in the eleventh week of the second tour, and is playing to crowded houses everywhere.

Mrs Cecil Thurston, who writes under her full name of Katherine Cecil Thurston, has dramatised her latest novel called "John Chilcote, M.P." It originally ran as a serial in Blackwood's Magazine, and Mr George Alexander has secured the acting rights for England and America. The latest woman playwright is Irish, and came to London from Cork four or five years ago. She has been exceptionally fortunate from the beginning of her literary career, scoring a success with her very first book, "The Circle." Mrs Cecil Thurston is quite young and very pretty, with no suspicion of an Irish brogue in her soft and pleasing voice.

A special matinée of Othello will be given at the Court Theatre on Wednesday, Nov. 16. Two well-known artists, who have been too long absent from the boards, will enact the principal characters—viz., Mr F. J. Nettlefold and Miss Agnes Ingreville. Should the matinée prove successful, it will be the starting-point of a National Drama Society, run on much the same lines as the Stage Society. Mr F. J. Nettlefold is a National Drama enthusiast, and is just the gentleman to pioneer such a society to success.

Mrs Sarah Hawkins, who has just passed away at the ripe old age of ninety-six, was grandmother of Mr H. Willoughby Hawkins, secretary of the Cardiff Chamber of Commerce, and widow of the late Mr Willoughby Roselle Hawkins. The late Mr Willoughby Roselle Hawkins was lessee for some time of the Cardiff and Swansea theatres. Mr Percy Hawkins, one of his sons, now an accomplished artist, was the great child actor, Percy Roselle, who used to play Hamlet, Shylock, Macbeth, and Richard the Third. Mrs Willoughby's daughter, Miss Amy Roselle, also achieved fame, and another daughter, Miss Julia Roselle, starred the States with Sothern. A grandchild of the late Mrs Willoughby, playing under the name of Daisy Aubrey, appeared recently at Cardiff, in The Medal and the Maid.

In connection with the forthcoming visit to the Grand, Glasgow, of the Osmond Tearle Shakespearian and Classical Répertoire Company, a ballot is now being taken of the inhabitants of the city as to the plays to be presented during the company's stay. Twenty thousand voting papers have been distributed, each person having seven votes, and the seven plays receiving the greatest number of votes will be selected from the programme for the week, which will include a special Saturday matinée under the ægis of the University, the local colleges, and literary societies. The répertoire submitted comprises Hamlet, Othello, Merchant of Venice, As You Like It, David Garrick, She Stoops to Conquer, Richard III, Julius Cæsar, Romeo and Juliet, School for Scandal, Lady of Lyons, Virginius, and Macbeth. The organisation of a ballot on such a large scale has entailed a great amount of work on Mr Herbert J. Montague, the general manager of the company, but the result of his enterprise promises to more than repay him.

Mr Granville Barker, who is to act a part with the single name Keegan in Mr Bernard Shaw's new play, John Bull's Other Island is himself a playwright of some promise and a peculiar style of his own. His Weather-Hen, written in collaboration with Mr Berte Thomas, was much discussed at the time of its production about four years ago. He is a prominent member of the Stage Society, and has also done good work in connection with the Elizabethan Stage Society. Mr Barker is the only son of Mrs Albert Barker, who was well known at one time as a reciter.

The annual meeting of the O.P. Club was held on the 7th inst. in the club room at the Piazza, Covent-garden, Mr Alfred F. Robbins in the chair. The hon. treasurer and founder of the club, Mr Carl Hentschel, submitted the balance-sheet for the year, the profit being nearly £114. He said some twenty-one functions, i.e., lectures, dinners, concerts, &c., had taken place. The members had every reason to congratulate themselves on the successful year, both financially and socially, under the presidency of Mr Robbins, and he looked forward with confidence to the continued prosperity of the club. The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:—President, Mr Algernon L. Collins; vice-president, Mr J. M. Freshwater; hon. treasurer, Mr Carl Hentschel; trustee, Mr Guy Repton; secretaries, Messrs J. Davis Smith and Stanley Greig.

Although Miss Madge Lessing, who made such a hit on Tuesday night, in Sergeant Brue, is such a typical American comedienne, she was born in London, but has lived nearly all her life in the United States. She started her career in a New York chorus, but was rapidly promoted to playing parts. It is said that The Belle of New York was written specially for her, and it will be remembered that she succeeded Miss Edna May when it was revived at the Apollo Theatre.

Mr Auguste Van Biene, who has just arranged to make a tour of the world, under the management of Mr George Musgrove, tells an interesting little story of how he came to compose the melody that he has now played thousands of times in The Broken Melody. It suddenly came into his head as he was travelling in the train from Brighton to London, after many days of unsuccessful striving. He was talking with some friends at the time, but as the melody slowly shaped itself in his brain he could think of nothing else, and seized the first opportunity to write it down.

The Theatre Royal, Eastbourne, will cease to exist as a theatre after Oct. 29. Extensive alterations will be commenced at once after that date, and this place of amusement will reopen its doors about the second week in December as a Hippodrome.

Miss Lena Cross, daughter of Julian and Sophie Cross, sailed Oct. 8 on the Armadale Castle for Cape Town, where on the day of her arrival she is to be married to Mr Everard White, architect. After fulfilling a year's engagement with Mr Leonard Rayne, she left South Africa last October engaged to Mr White, but she insisted that he should wait a year. He has done so, and now she has gone back. It is her intention to leave the stage.

Mr Charles Macdona's principal company will appear at the Grand Theatre, Croydon, next week, in Three Little Maids, which was recently so successful at Kennington.

The Scenic Artists' Association, recently formed under the presidentship of Mr Hawes Craven (for so many years associated with the famous Lyceum productions), and the vice-presidentship of Mr Joseph Harker, has elected as a council of management for the present year Messrs Walter Hann (chairman and treasurer), E. G. Banks, J. J. Markwell Davis, Richard Douglass, W. Harford, W. T. Helmsley, H. W. Owen, W. Raphael, H. W. Robinson, W. B. Strong, and George Tweddell, with Mr Stafford Hall, of Liverpool, as provincial representative.

Mr Isaac Cohen will commence on Monday at the Pavilion Theatre, Mile-end-road, a six weeks' stock season. No new productions will be given, but the period will be devoted to revivals of some of the popular dramas, beginning with The English Rose.

"Miss Mischief," a new musical comedy by Dr. F. Osmond Carr and Reginald Bacchus, will be produced by Mr Godfrey Lamplugh's company on the 31st inst., at the Royal West London Theatre. Included in the cast will be Mr Fred Eastman, Mr T. E. Conover, and Miss Evelyn Hughes.

Mrs Walter Bentley has acquired the theatre rights of Three Little Hearts of Gold, a musical drama by R. L. Cavendish and Stephen E. Blythe, and will tour the piece after Christmas.

Miss Carrie B. Jones, aged twenty-one, a prominent member of the Seth Weeks Troupe, passed away on Sept. 24. The remains were fittingly laid to rest in Kensal-green Cemetery, and the grave was surrounded by many friends of the deceased, including all the members of the In Dahomey company, Messrs Goggin and Davis and their families, Grant and Grant, Gauze, Billy Farrell, Seth Weeks, and others.

"A WIFE WITHOUT A SMILE."

A Comedy in Disguise, in Three Acts,
by Arthur W. Pinero,
Produced at Wyndham's Theatre, on Wednesday, Oct. 12.

A little read but often alluded to literary work is entitled "The Diversions of Purley." A Wife Without a Smile, which was produced at Wyndham's Theatre on Wednesday, may be described as a Diversion of Pinero. It gives one the impression of being the facile work of a clever writer. It is curiously varied—now really witty, now almost fatuously "obvious;" at times humorously pathetic, and at others quite unworthy of the author's reputation. A single detail will give an idea of the tone of the entertainment. A gentleman bores a hole in the ceiling of a room and passes through it a cord. One end of this cord is attached to a sofa in an apartment above; and a doll is tied to the other end, and hangs in the lower room at a height of about seven feet from the floor. By this simple detective apparatus, the amount of love-making which takes place on the sofa can be gauged to a nicety. The device is, to say the least, in very bad taste; and we were more than surprised that Mr Pinero should have descended to introduce it. The story which he has to tell is as follows:—Seymour Rippingill is a weak-minded individual who believes himself to be possessed of a great sense of humour. He has married en second noces a young woman of middle-class ancestry, who only accepted him for monetary reasons, is bored to death by his jokes, and has a private inclination towards a young artist of the name of Vivian Trood, who, with a literary man named Haynes Webbmarsh and his wife, is a guest at Rippingill's boathouse at Taplow. Mrs Rippingill is deeply depressed by her husband's "humour;" and he consults a comely widow, Mrs Lovette, as to how to cure his wife of her density. Mrs Lovette is puzzled; and Rippingill calls to his aid a friend named Pullinger, a partner in a big firm of biscuit makers, who is always recommending to his friends certain particular shops and appliances. Pullinger suggests that if Mrs Rippingill could be subjected to some depressing shock, the reaction might send her into a fit of happy laughter. It happens that Rippingill has neglected to apply for the decree nisi which he had obtained against his former wife to be made absolute; so that Avice, his second "selection," is technically a spinster, her marriage with Rippingill being void. It is resolved that she shall be informed of the fact, with the object of administering the curative "shock." Instead, however, of dissolving into tears when she hears the news, Avice burst out laughing and runs out, the violent agitation of the doll immediately afterwards showing that she is celebrating with Trood, on the sofa on the first floor, the recovery of her liberty.

In the last act she introduces the artist to her husband as her fiancé, and Rippingill, advised by Pullinger, pretends that he is engaged to Mrs Lovette. When Avice hears this she throws over Trood, and comes back in a fit of jealous rage to oust the usurping Mrs Lovette. A farcical scene takes place between the two women, in which Rippingill has his head rapped and slapped by both of the disputants in the energy of their altercation. Avice, having reinstated herself, turns Mrs Lovette, the Webbmarshes, and Trood politely out of doors; and prepares to rule her husband with a rod of iron. Left alone, he ascends a ladder, and sadly detaches the detective doll from its string.

The piece was played admirably all round. There is no actress on the stage who can give more point to a "good line" than Miss Marie Illington can, and her acting as Mrs Lovette was irresistible in its self-important comicality. She played throughout with admirable humour and emphasis, and her embodiment was one of the successes of the evening. That delicate and distinctive comedian, Mr Dion Boucicault, was unerringly tactful and discriminating as the painfully funny and weak-willed husband, and the little touches with which he developed his idea of the rôle were entirely artistic. Mr C. M Lowne as the uxorious reviewer, Haynes Webbmarsh, hit off the type exactly, and Miss Dorothy Grimston put plenty of Irish characterisation into her performance as Mrs Webbmarsh. Mr G. M. Graham's Vivian Trood could hardly have been improved upon; and Mr Henry Kemble was simply irresistible as the corpulent, solemn, and silly Pullinger. Mr T. Ryley was intelligently efficient as Foley; and Miss Lettice Fairfax acted with vigour and keen appreciativeness as the pretty and spirited Mrs Rippingill, Miss Nellie Moore doing good and useful work as Bates. As a prelude to the piece of the evening, Miss Fanny Wentworth, one of the very cleverest of our female entertainers, gave one of her delightfully droll and immensely entertaining monologues. It is difficult to classify A Wife Without a Smile. The only thing to be decided about it is that it creates laughter amidst a certain class of playgoers. Mr Pinero, it is evident, has but a poor opinion of the intelligence of the playgoing public.

CHILDREN ON THE STAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—It is not generally known that the new Act, which came in force on the 1st inst., makes it a criminal offence for anyone to Cause, procure, or allow any child under the age of sixteen to be in any place for the purpose of being trained for any performance which, in its nature, is dangerous.

What would be the effect if the King's trainer were proceeded against for allowing at least thirty lads (all under sixteen) to be on his premises with the object of being trained for jockeys? There are nearly 4,000 horses in training at Newmarket alone, two-thirds of which are ridden in their gallops by apprentices learning the art of race-riding. A conviction would mean that English jockeys, as far as light weights are concerned, would become a thing of the past. This Act slipped through without any opposition, and it now stands as a most formidable weapon for any of the fanatical brigade to use with impunity and in almost any way their "down-with-everything" natures suggest.

Yours faithfully, HARRY S. M'CALLA.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD.

The literary and theatrical world of London has lost one of its most notable members by the death of Mr John Hollingshead, which occurred at his residence in Fulham on Monday morning. He had been for some time in declining health, but the immediate cause of death was failure of the heart. Mr Hollingshead was in his seventy-eighth year, having been born in Hoxton on Sept. 9, 1827. He was the son of the late Henry Randall Hollingshead, at one time under secretary to the society which administers the estates of the City of London in the North of Ireland. He was educated at a school in Homerton with a view to devoting himself to commercial pursuits, and at an early age was placed in the office of a soft goods merchant in the neighbourhood of Cheapside. Having served this firm in the capacities both of clerk and traveller, he eventually started in business on his own account as a cloth merchant, but the venture did not turn out a success. He then decided to abandon business altogether and to devote himself to journalism, after which he had long had a secret hankering. He had, indeed, already been an occasional contributor to Mr Disraeli's newspaper, the Press, and to a magazine called the Train, which was then being conducted by Mr Edmund Yates, and soon after he had finally adopted literature as a profession he had the good fortune to receive the active support and encouragement of Charles Dickens. This was brought about by the remarkable success of his early contributions to Household Words, the most striking of which, entitled "The City of Unlimited Paper," appeared during the great financial crisis of 1857, and attracted an unusual amount of attention. He was invited to dinner at the office of Household Words, in Wellington-street, and there met Dickens for the first time. He thus described this memorable gathering:—

"It was the day, in January, 1858, on which the Princess Royal was married. London was crowded with visitors, and at night the whole town was illuminated. The party consisted of Wilkie Collins, Mark Lemon, Mr Wills, the Honourable Mr Townshend, Charles Dickens, and myself. The master, dressed in a velvet smoking coat, as part of his dress suit, received me in a very friendly manner, and made me a companion in five minutes. I noticed, as I thought then, a slight lisp, the deep lines on his face—almost furrows, and the keen twinkling glance of his eye. The room we dined in was on the upper floor.

"Our dinner was simple and good. We began with oysters, brought in fresh from Old 'Rule's' in Maiden-lane, near to where Congreve lived when Voltaire visited him, and told him he came to see an author, not a coxcomb. The principal dish was a baked leg of mutton, the bone of which had been taken out, and the space supplied with oysters and veal stuffing. I always understood that this was an invention of Dickens, who, without being a gourmand, was fond of eating and drinking. As I was helped twice to this novel delicacy, I remembered some of the master's descriptions of humble but savoury dishes in two or three of the Christmas books. He saw I was enjoying myself, and appeared to be delighted.

"Theatrical matters were touched upon, and Dickens, complaining of the star system, and the spread of scratch companies, said he almost regretted that he took a leading part in the abolition of the patent theatre monopoly. Dickens's principles were sound, but they were not deeply rooted, and he was swayed by every breath of feeling and sentiment. He was a Liberal by impulse, and what the 'Dryasdust' school would have called a 'wobbler.'"

When Mr Hollingshead visited America some years ago, his known connection both with Dickens and Thackeray evoked much examination-in-chief. He says in his book, "According to My Lights," that he "had to describe the two men, their appearance, their tastes and habits, and their points of resemblance, which were very few. Thackeray was an exceptionally tall man, with very long legs. These gave him his height of 6ft. 3in. or more. He was rarely seen without his spectacles, which rested on the flat bridge of his nose. This bridge had been broken in a youthful fight at the Charterhouse School. He was quiet and deliberate in his manner and fond of putting one hand in his trousers pocket. He was a moderate playgoer, preferring the dinner-table with congenial society. He was essentially a clubbable man. His favourite night resort was 'Evans's' supper and singing rooms in Covent-garden Market—a man's music-hall. He smoked and drank 'grog' in moderation, and listened to the part-singing by the choir-boys with manifest enjoyment. He was always more or less in pain from an internal disease, and this temperate recreation, according to his own account, relieved him. 'Evans's' at that time (in the fifties) was one of the three West-end cellar music-halls beginning business at eleven o'clock at night, after the theatres. The other two were the 'Coal Hole,' in the Strand, now the site of Terry's Theatre, and the 'Cider Cellars,' in Maiden-lane, Covent-garden, now a night club.

"The characteristics of these three places in the thirties had been described in the 'Newcomes,' by Thackeray, who thoroughly knew his midnight London. With the extension of Evans's by the opening, in 1854 of the new concert room, built over the back garden where the cottage stood in which the Kembles lived, the programmes became more refined, as ladies were now admitted to the right hand gallery, screened with wire gauze like nuns at a convent. The singers, all men, were in most cases the same—Sam Cowell, Penniket, Sharp, Jonghmanns, Ross, Von Joel, Sam Collins, and others; but the songs were very different from those heard by Colonel Newcombe in the 'Cave of Harmony.' The music hall, as we know it now, was just coming into the world to compete on equal terms with the theatres, and not to act merely as their recognised grill-rooms. The sturdy generation of those days took its steak, chop, baked potatoes, and stout, in place of going to bed, immediately after its tragedies, farces, or comedies. The law allowed them, and they obeyed the law. Mollycoddling legislation had not been invented."

Mr Hollingshead was for some years a prominent contributor both to Household Words and to its successor, All the Year Round. He also wrote a good deal for the Cornhill Magazine, then under the editorship of Thackeray, as well as for the London Review, Good Words, Once a Week, and other publications. In 1861, which was long remembered as the "Famine year" in London, Mr Hollingshead undertook an important engagement for the Morning Post, going as Special Commissioner into the destitute districts of the East-end, and writing a series of impressive articles on the condition of the people. These papers were afterwards reissued in a single volume entitled "Ragged London." A year later Mr Hollingshead was officially employed by the Commissioners of the great International Exhibition of 1862 to write the historical introduction to the Exhibition catalogue. For some time prior to this he had been more or less actively associated with the drama, having written the successful farce called The Birthplace of Podgers, which is so closely associated with the name of Mr Toole. The popular comedian was introduced to him by Edmund Yates, and how the farce come to be produced is thus related by its author:—

"He came up to my house a few nights after at Bland-place, Regent's-park, and I read him the little piece, and gave him my idea of the leading character—a stolid working man, with few ideas and limited powers of speech, brought into contact with literary enthusiasts, whom he naturally regarded as maniacs. This part of Tom Cranky was not what a low comedian would call a 'fat' part, and therefore Mr Toole is entitled to all the credit of seeing its value as a sketch from life. He took the farce, and produced it at his benefit at the Lyceum in March, 1858, and has played it ever since—a period of thirty-six years."

For several years Mr Hollingshead was dramatic critic for the Daily News and several other journals. He also made the acquaintance of Henry Irving. This happened in Edinburgh, and the date was 1859—"On the stage of the old Theatre Royal I was introduced to a tall, thin, interesting, gentle young man, who was Mr and Mrs Wyndham's 'walking gentleman' and 'general utility' actor; this was Mr Irving. We all had quarters at a Temperance Hotel, and the next day was Sunday. We were moderate men, but not total abstainers, and what we wanted we obtained without any difficulty by cash payments. The decoration of the room we were in was peculiar—like the first dawnings of æstheticism in upholstery. The following morning, when asked to write our names in the 'Visitor's Book,' I attached the following lines to my signature:—

Is this a Temperance Hotel, where wine is never vended?
Or, is its temperance a sham—its tea with brandy blended?
Though drinking tea, I think I'm drunk; my eyes and brain seem reeling.
The Turkey carpet's on the wall—the floor-cloth's on the ceiling!

It was owing to an agitation carried on by Mr Hollingshead and the late Dion Boucicault that a Parliamentary committee was appointed to inquire into the vexed question of "dramatic free trade." In 1865 Mr Hollingshead became the stage-director of the Alhambra, but he relinquished that post in 1868 in order to undertake the management of the Gaiety Theatre, which had just been erected in the Strand by Mr Lionel Lawson. Of the taking of the Gaiety the following story is told:—Meeting Mr Lionel Lawson accidentally Hollingshead said "I hear you are building a theatre." "Quite true," was the reply. "I should like to take it." "All right. Got any money?" "Not much; about £200." "No matter, you can get more," and so the bargain was completed.

For many years the policy Mr Hollingshead pursued was one of constant variety. Shakespeare, old comedy, farce, burlesque—nothing came amiss; and when anyone ventured to criticise either principle or detail of the management Mr Hollingshead was always ready with a slashing letter to the public press to vindicate his own ideas. Phelps and Charles Matthews were both frequently to be seen at the Gaiety Theatre; and it was Mr Hollingshead who, having introduced a Belgian and one or two French companies to English audiences, succeeded at last, in 1879, in bringing over Bernhardt, Got, Delaunay, Bressant, and other members of the Comédie Française. The difficulties were enormous, but the financial success of the enterprise helped to make him the wealthy man that at one time he was. He was the first English manager to produce a play by Ibsen, and Thespis, the first work in which Mr Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan collaborated, was staged at the Gaiety.

In 1877 he produced his own successful adaptation of MM. Meilhac and Halévy's La Cigale, under the title of The Grasshopper. In 1882 he started burlesques in two acts, his company including such favourite artists as J. L. Toole, Edward Terry, E. W. Royce, Nelly Farren, Kate Vaughan, and Connie Gilchrist.

During the period of his management, between 1868 and 1886, he was responsible for the production of close on six hundred pieces, ranging from serious drama to the lightest of burlesques. Nor were these ventures unprofitable, for Mr Hollingshead himself has told us that his capital when he went to the Gaiety Theatre was £200, and he left it with £120,000, while the gross annual takings during his eighteen years' management amounted to £40,000. His last publication had also for its subject the theatre whose fame he had established. It was in the form of a handsome and beautifully illustrated souvenir entitled "Good Old Gaiety," which was presented to each members of the audience on the occasion of the last performance in the Old Gaiety on July 4, 1903.

While still conducting the affairs of his theatre in the Strand, Mr Hollingshead took an active part in a number of other theatrical ventures, undertaking the management at different times of the Globe, the Empire, the Opera Comique, and other London theatres, as well as of the principal theatre at Manchester. He was for some time treasurer of the Theatrical Fund, and was a member of the Dramatic Authors' Society and of the French Society of Men of Letters. Somewhere about 1882 Mr Hollingshead turned the Gaiety Theatre into a small joint stock company, but it was wound up in 1885. In that year he organised what was practically a new burlesque company, with the late Fred Leslie and Nelly Farren as its leading members, the first piece selected being the successful burlesque by Messrs Stephens and Yardley, entitled Little Jack Sheppard. Before the production of the piece, however, Mr Hollingshead went into partnership with Mr Geo. Edwardes, and in the summer of 1886 he finally retired from the Gaiety management, leaving to his late partner the sole control of the theatre.

Mr Hollingshead's later years were spent in comparative retirement, and some time ago his circumstances were such that the "profession"—always generous in such ways—organised a great benefit on his behalf. This took place at the Empire on Jan. 30, 1900, and the proceeds amounted to £1 600. Mr Hollingshead was also on this occasion presented with his portrait painted in oils.

Among the innumerable stories of the stage which Mr Hollingshead could tell was his account of the strange way in which Balzac's Mercadet was played in English at the Lyceum. On a Saturday morning the first mail brought the French text of the drama to London. It was given to George Henry Lewes, who translated it as fast as he could to a body of shorthand writers. This version was sent on, slip by slip, as it was transcribed, to the stage, where it was studied and rehearsed. All Saturday, Sunday, and Monday the rehearsals went on, and on Monday night the play was produced before the public. Yet, with such an experience behind him, Mr Hollingshead has been heard to ask, in connection with latter-day managerial ambitions, "What's the use of being a Napoleon?" "The thing is," he said, "to run one house, make a success of it, and stick there."

THE LATE MR. JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Mr John Hollingshead took place yesterday afternoon at Brompton Cemetery. The cortége left the residence at 270, Fulham-road, about half-past one, but long before that time a quiet and orderly crowd had assembled outside the house as well as on the opposite side of the road. Binds were seen to be drawn in the neighbouring residences and shops, the people in the immediate district uniting to show a mark of respect for the dead journalist and theatrical manager.

The chief mourners were Miss Ethel Hollingshead, niece of the deceased; Mr W. Griffiths, nephew; Mr W. H. Cole, nephew by marriage; Dr. Edward Philip, the deceased's medical attendant; all of whom occupied the first carriage. The second carriage contained Mr Julius Kahn, Mr G. Jacobi, Dr. Churchill Sibley, and Mr T. Blair. In the third carriage there were Mr W. Shanklin, Mr J. H. B. Compton, of the Empire; and Mr Stuart Conover. The fourth carriage, as well as the hearse, contained a number of very handsome wreaths, sent by prominent members of the theatrical profession and other people who were more or less intimately acquainted with the deceased.

From the residence to Brompton Cemetery, where the remains of the late John Hollingshead were interred, was but a short distance. In the cemetery chapel the funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Arthur Veysey, the chaplain attached to the Brompton Cemetery. A fairly large crowd assembled at the graveside to witness the lowering of all that remained of John Hollingshead into the grave. Prominent in the crowd were Mr Beerbohm Tree and several other old friends of the late Mr Hollingshead. The coffin, which was of plain light oak, bore a brass plate on which was engraved the words:—

JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD,
Died October 10, 1904,
Aged 77 years.

After the remains of the deceased gentleman had been set down in their last resting-place, the beautiful wreaths from the widow and Miss Ethel Hollingshead, the niece, were placed upon the coffin. Many aged people, including some of his old servants were noticeable standing around the graveside, and some of these were unable to restrain their emotion as the funeral service proceeded. It is interesting to mention that Mr Hollingshead's grave is not more than twenty yards from where the late Sir Augustus Harris lies buried, and those who desire to pay a visit to the cemetery may be glad to know that Mr Hollingshead's vault is situated in what is known as the "big circle."

Among the wreaths sent was one from Mrs Hollingshead, the widow, who was unable to attend through illness. It was a round wreath, consisting of lilies, white roses, and other flowers. Miss Ethel Hollingshead, niece of the deceased, sent a heart of white heather, lilies and chrysanthemums. Other wreaths were received from Mr and Mrs Cole (nephew and niece by marriage), and from Mrs Garnon (sister-in-law); from Sir Henry Irving, Mr J. L. Toole, Mr George Edwardes, Mr H. E. Moss, the Artists of the Gaiety Theatre, the members of the Knights' Club, Mr Robert Soutar, Miss Phyllis Broughton, and Miss Alma Stanley. A cushion came from Mr Julius Kahn bearing, inscribed on a satin ribbon, the words "Rest in Peace;" Mrs D'Oyly Carte sent a particularly beautiful wreath, and Mr Tod Heatly, Mrs Holla Margues, Mrs Riviere, Mr Gaston (of Paris), Mrs Horace Neville, Mr H. H. Wells, Mr D'Chastelaine, Madame Belle Cole, Lady Burnand, Mr G. C. Hoare, Mr and Mrs Rock, Miss Rachael, Mr Hand, the Alhambra Staff, the London Entertainments Association, Mrs Walton, and many others also forwarded wreaths.

ROYAL GENERAL THEATRICAL FUND

A special meeting of the Royal General Theatrical Fund was held at the St. James's Theatre on Thursday afternoon for the purpose of making an additional clause to the "N.B." of Rule 10. The present "N.B." of Rule 10 reads:—"No notice to be given to defaulters; the possession of a copy of the rules being deemed and declared sufficient notice;" and the proposed addition is:—"But the directors are empowered, in their discretion, to suspend the operation of the clause respecting arrears and the non-payment of fines, in any deserving case, for so long and on such terms as they shall deem fit."

In the absence of Mr George Alexander Mr Charles Rock occupied the chair. There were also present Messrs F. Percival Stevens, Chas. K. Cooper, T. F. Dillon Croker, H. Ralph Kimpton, George Trollope, Miss Stella Leigh, Miss Caroline Ewell, Mrs Alfred Welch, Mr Theodore Lumley (hon. solicitor), and Mr Chas. J. Davies (secretary). The SECRETARY read a letter from Mr George Alexander stating that he was sorry he was unable to be present, as he had to attend the funeral of a very dear friend.

The CHAIRMAN proposed the suggested addition to the rules, and in doing so said that the committee felt that such changes in theatrical affairs had taken place since the rules were drawn up as to make it essential that the committee should be more generous in their dealings with members of the Fund whose subscriptions were in arrears. In the old days there was little excuse for failing to keep up the payments, but nowadays they never knew how long their engagements would last. The proposed addition would not entail any loss to the Fund, but would allow members more time in which to pay up arrears. He was sure that the directors would deal with applications in a generous spirit.

Mr CHARLES COOPER seconded the resolution, and pointed out that notice of the alteration had been sent to all the members, and there was not a single dissentient.

MR THEODORE LUMLEY said that the meeting was entirely within the law, and he agreed with the justness of making the alteration. He was quite sure that the decision of the committee would be for the benefit of the recipients and for the institution.

The resolution was carried.

The CHAIRMAN proposed a vote of thanks to Mr George Alexander for the use of the theatre, and to Mr Theodore Lumley for attending the meeting.

Mr LUMLEY acknowledged the compliment, and this brought the proceedings to a close.

THE library of Mr W. Sharp Ogden, of Rusholme, Manchester, which Messrs Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge will sell on Nov 14 and two following days, includes one lot (No. 218) which will excite a wide amount of interest. It is a copy of the Bible, printed by R Barker, 1613, with the New Testament of 1611 bound up with it. The Bible lacks all before page 2 of Genesis and some leaves at the end; its interest lies in the fact that it has the signature and date "William Shakspeare 1614" on the reverse of the title to the New Testament, and again on the end cover, "Willm Shakspere off S.O.A. [i.e., of Stratford-on-Avon] His Bible, 1613." This volume was discovered near Manchester about the year 1850 by the present owner's grandfather, William Sharp, a well-known collector of books and prints. Mr Sharp bequeathed the above-mentioned Bible to his only daughter at his death in 1881, and at her death in 1890 it passed to the present owner, her son. It originally cost Mr Sharp a few pounds only, but when its interest became known (Mr Corser and other famous collectors having examined it), the owner was offered £150 for it, but refused to part with the volume.

BESIDES the Shakespeare signature on the last cover there is also the following inscription:—"John Fox off Warwick was the owner of this Bible Anno. Dom. 1633." It will be seen, therefore, that the volume was in Shakespeare's county only seventeen years after his death. From Fox's hands it passed into the possession of the Bradshaw family, and it has an inscription, "William Bradshaw, son of John Bradshaw, is the true owner of this Bible, Anno 1666," and there are accounts of the death of his father John, his brothers John, George, Thomas, and Henry, all of whom died before 1664, after which it again changed hands and belonged to Thomas Hall, and has this inscription, "Thomas Hall is the true owner off this Bible, Anno 1727," and also, "James Hall 1743." These signatures are of curious interest, for Shakespeare's daughter married a John Hall. It also bears the inscriptions and dates of John and Mary Dawson, 1702, and John Holt, 1801. The Bible was lent to the Tudor Exhibition held at Manchester in 1891.

MISS GERTRUDE BURNETT has been engaged for the part of Elizabeth in Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner, with Mr Lewis Waller at Brighton.—Miss Florence Smithers completed her 1,000th performance of Jane in The Dandy Doctor on Thursday last, at the Theatre Royal, Grantham. She has not been absent from a single performance since its original production.

WE are glad to learn that Miss Dora Price has quite recovered from her recent serious illness, and has been able to leave the Royal Infirmary, Liverpool, where the operation was performed. Miss Price hopes to resume her part of the Woman, in What a Woman Did, shortly.

IN connection with the last Belfast Theatrical Gala the accounts have been audited, and there is a balance of £85 for distribution. Mr Fred W. Warden, hon treasurer (who was most indefatigable in his efforts), will apportion the sum as follows:—Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast, £25; Mater Infirmorum Hospital, £25; Actors' Orphanage Fund, London, £10; Actors' Benevolent Fund, £10; and Music Hall Benevolent Fund, London, £15.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Oct. 10, the "Uncomfortable Play," in a Prologue and Three Acts, by J. M. Barrie, entitled "LITTLE MARY."

A big audience assembled at the Kingston playhouse on Monday and succeeding evenings to witness the production there for the first time of this quaint and amusing work, which was received with the most cordial approval in all parts of the house. It was presented by a company captained by Messrs Addison Bright and Walter Maxwell, of whose efforts it is impossible to speak in terms of too great praise. Mr Arthur Holmes-Gore appeared as the Earl of Carlton, a part which he filled with conspicuous ability. Miss Christine Silver, a young actress of much promise, appeared as Moira Loney. Her assumption of the rôle of the artless young "mother" was one of the prettiest pieces of acting that have been seen at the riverside playhouse for a long time. A capital character study was that of Sir Jennings Pyke, which was impersonated by Mr George Mudie, and Mr Ean Macdonald was successful as his confrère, Dr. Topping. The parts of Lord Rolfe and of the Earl of Plumleigh were most ably filled by Mr Arthur Kightley and Mr A. W. Bascomb respectively, the latter of whom also acquitted himself well as the Irish chemist, Terence Reilly. Miss Elspeth Dudgeon was a charming Countess of Plumleigh; Miss Evelyn Neilida was equally successful as Lady Molly; and Miss Faith Reynolds made a piquant and attractive Eleanor Gray. The play, which was preceded by the comedietta, The Bugle Call, was admirably mounted.

THE supernumeraries at the Paris theatres have gone on strike. The middlemen, or chefs de figuration, are denounced as exploiters, who enrich themselves by employing outsiders, and the managers are asked to replace the existing super-masters by "old dramatic artists." The supers also claim a nightly wage of one franc for men and double that sum for women.

REAR-ADMIRAL JEWELL, commanding the United States European Squadron, and Mrs Jewell, together with the officers of his command, attended the Prince of Wales' Theatre, last Monday evening, on the invitation of Mr Frank Curzon, to witness the performance of Sergeant Brue.

MRS BANDMANN-PALMER is paying a return visit to the Theatre Royal, Worcester, this week, and on Monday was accorded a hearty welcome in the title-rôle of Mary, Queen of Scots, in which this clever actress displayed her great abilities with conspicuous success. Queen Elizabeth was well impersonated by Miss Katharine Herbert, who portrayed the varying moods of the jealous monarch with considerable power. Mr Sydney Bland gave a forceful and dignified rendering of the part of Lord Burleigh, and Mr Wm. Trant was good as Sir Edward Mortimer. The other plays produced during the week were Sapho, Hamlet, East Lynne, Nell Gwynn, The School for Scandal, and Jane Shore.

THE licensed ticket speculators in New York have encountered new obstacles at two of the leading playhouses since the present season opened. At the Garden Theatre, where The College Widow is playing to packed houses, several stalwart Negroes warn the public through megaphones that tickets purchased from speculators will be refused at the door. At Weber and Ziegfeld's Music Hall the tickets are placed in sealed envelopes after the purchaser has seen them, and have to be presented that way. The speculators threaten to bring damage suits against the managers.

AN extraordinary general meeting of the Touring Managers' Association will be held at the Tavistock Hotel, Covent-garden, on Wednesday, at twelve o'clock, to discuss the advisability of establishing a permanent head office in London of the Association, where members can interview artists, write and receive letters, and generally transact their theatrical business. The advisability of providing a telephone and piano for the use of members will also be considered.

MR M. J. LANDA, a London journalist and a gentleman well known in dramatic debating circles, was married on Tuesday afternoon at the Great Synagogue, St. James's-place, Aldgate, to Annie Gertrude Gordon, daughter of the Rev. A. E. and Mrs Gordon. The bride is a young authoress who has shown that she possesses considerable ability, and she has published an interesting novel entitled "The Case and the Cure." The Rev. Dayon Hyamson, assisted by the Rev. M. Hast, conducted the wedding ceremony, and there was a special choir of the precentors of the Metropolitan Synagogue, who rendered in fine style Lohengrin's "Bridal March" and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." Among those present were Mr George R. Sims, Mr Ben Nathan, the Mayor and Mayoress of Stepney, Mrs Gertrude Massey, the miniature painter, Mrs De Courcy Laffan, Mr Sam Gordon, the novelist, and Mr Councillor Gordon, the two latter being brothers of the bride. There were over 300 presents, and the happy couple left London on Tuesday night for Venice, where the greater part of the honeymoon will be spent.

NEW YORK has another new theatre. It is situated in East 86th-street, which runs through the section of the city known as Yorkville, so the new house is appropriately named the Yorkville Theatre. Mr M. R. Bimberg, who built the West-end Theatre, is the proprietor and manager. The balconies are on the cantilever plan, and the house is thoroughly modern in its equipment. Miss Henrietta Crosman in Sweet Kitty Bellairs opened the new house on the 3rd inst.

On Monday, Oct. 10,
"THE PRIVATE SECRETARY."

Mr Eugene C. Stafford's company is playing the ever-popular comedy The Private Secretary is paying a farewell visit to this theatre. Mr Donald Price Evans as the Rev. Robert Spalding, the private secretary in question, is extremely amusing, and makes all his points with unfailing effect. Mr Raymond Chester is excellent as Mr Marsland, M.F.H., and Mr Vivian Gilbert is equally good as Harry Marsland. Mr W. Hargreaves as Mr Cattermole could scarcely be improved upon, and his scenes with the Reverend Robert create immense hilarity; Mr A. Austin-Leigh is successful as Douglas Cattermole; while Mr Wilfred Compton gives a finished rendering of the part of Mr Sydney Gibson, the Bond-street tailor, with an ambition to "soar" into high society. Mrs Alfred Davis is fully equal to the part of Miss Ashford, the spiritualistic chaperone of Edith Marsland, a maiden charmingly represented by Miss Dora Gray. Miss Mary E. Deverell is a fascinating Eva Webster, and Miss Cecily Wade a most effective Mrs Stead. The mounting of the play is commendable, and it is preceded by the pretty little curtain-raiser entitled Good for Nothing.

MR WILLARD and company are at the Theatre Royal, Hanley, this week, in The Cardinal and Tom Pinch. On Monday Mr Willard presented Mr Louis N. Parker's work, The Cardinal. The piece is sure to draw splendid business, judging by the cordial reception it was accorded. The mounting is most elaborate, and Mr Willard has evidently spared no expense to present his pieces to provincial audiences in a manner but rarely seen. The Cardinal Giovanni De Medici, impersonated by Mr Willard, is a really wonderful piece of acting; he has a beautiful voice, and his facial expressions are most true and natural to the part. Miss Maud Hoffman as Filiberta displayed much ability, and her representation of the part was all that could be desired. Mr A. S. Homewood acts cleverly as Guiliano, and the Strozzi of Mr William Sauter is a performance of much excellence. The Cardinal's mother finds a praiseworthy exponent in Mrs Russ Whytal. Mr Alick Burke does well as the bell-ringer. Chigi is seen to advantage in the hands of Mr Chas. H. Fenton. Mr Walter Edmunds as Baglioni and Miss Edith Tombes as Honoria contribute considerably towards the success of the play.

MR WORTON DAVID—the author of Mr Ernest Shand's latest hit, "Short Stories"—has been appointed general business manager of the Theatre Royal, Windsor, and took up his duties there on Monday last.

MR JOHN WAINWRIGHT and his powerful company in Charles Reade's great drama, It's Never too Late to Mend, has been delighting Crystal Palace audiences this week. Tom Robinson was admirably played by Mr Wainwright, his brisk and cheerful style proving quite acceptable. Mr Alf. Calver impersonated the young farmer very masterfully. Peter Crawley was well embodied by Mr Henry Lee. The Rev. Francis Eden was ably enacted by Mr Hornby Warburton. The part of Meadows had an excellent exponent in Mr Harold Webb. Jackey was very amusingly played by Mr Fred Owen, who evoked roars of laughter. Mr Chas. Carlton deserved great praise for his performance as William Fielding. Miss Kitty Carew was sweet and charming as Susan Merton. Mr Edwin Davies as the old Jew was worthy of warm commendation. Mr M. Wilson as the prison governor was strong, and Miss Millie Milton as Josephs and Mr W. R. Weldon as Mr Merton merited mention for admirable work.

MISS ANNIE HUGHES is delighting the frequenters of the Broadway Theatre this week by her charming impersonations of Angela Muir, in A Country Mouse, and Alexandra Victoria Bellchamber, in A Bit of Old Chelsea. In the latter play she is as successful as ever, and is ably supported by Mr Charles Esdaile, Jack; Mr George Trollope, Phil; Mr George Ingleton, Raymond; and Mr Charles Parker, Dixon. As Angela Muir Miss Hughes makes a great hit; her performance is admirable throughout, a particularly well-played scene being that with Lady Sylvia Bowlby, delightfully acted by Miss Madeline Maude. Miss Ida Richardson's Violet Aynsley is a pleasing and artistic performance. Miss Adie Boyne is exceedingly good as Mrs Cropper. Mr Charles Esdale gives an excellent impersonation of the Hon. Archibald Vyse. Mr John Nesbit submits a powerful interpretation of the character of John Bowlby. Mr George Traill is clever and amusing as the Duke of St. Kitts. Mr George Trollope is a remarkably good Lord Robert Wykeham. Mr Henry Bute is excellent as Jephcott. The smaller parts are well acted by Mr George Salver and Mr Charles Parker.

MR T. LANGTON-LANE, who was playing at the Stratford Theatre in Messrs Gatti and Charles Frohman's Quality-street company, was proceeding in a hansom along Mile-end-road about 7 15 on Monday evening, when the horse suddenly fell, throwing Mr Lane violently out upon his head, and rendering him unconscious. He was carried into a local surgery, where happily it was found that no bones were broken. After an hour's rest Mr Lane partially recovered, and insisted on going on to the theatre and fulfilling his task, although suffering much from shock and bruises.

"THE BELLS OF HASLEMERE" is being played at the Brixton Theatre this week, and this popular Adelphi play has proved as attractive as ever. Miss Harrietta Polini is an admirable representative of Evelyn Brookfield, the heroine of the story, whose many troubles win the warm sympathy of the audience. Miss Mary Hardacre gives a capital portrayal of Mary Northcote, and Miss Florence Chandler does well as Norah Desmond. Miss Stafford Smith is a vivacious exponent of Dorothy Tremble. Mr Leonard Yorke has to be credited with a thoroughly successful embodiment of Frank Beresford, and the chief villain of the piece, John Silkstone, is ably depicted by Mr Montague Turner, and Mr Charles A. Chandler is amusing as the adventurer, Captain Vere. Mr Douglas Hamilton scores as Mathew Brookfield, Mr Fred F. Allen is successful as Joseph Thorndyke, and Mr Charles Cecil as Reuben Armstrong brightens the play by his richly humorous treatment of the character. Mr Charles Clark as Patrick Desmond and Mr Powell James as Captain Salem make good use of their opportunities; Mr Ted Stone is a praiseworthy Benjamin Tremble; Mr George Roberts is comical as Toby, the Negro; and Mr J. G. Jelly as Seth Thomas and Mr Harry James as Abe Jeffs are satisfactory. Other minor parts are safe in the hands of Mr H. White, Mr W. Stevens, and Mr James Bode.

PENTRE.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Owners, Messrs Carlton and Duckworth; Manager, Mr Sam Duckworth; Resident-Manager, Mr Eugene Hardie.—An excellent bill is placed before large audiences this week. First and foremost is the inimitable Cruikshank, whose quaint sayings and appropriate parodies fairly convulse the house. The Three Sisters Anderson in their equilibristic turn are exceedingly clever; Cliff and Kean introduce some smart songs and patter and also high-class dancing; Les Valdos are clever eccentric acrobats; Florrie Vongar is much appreciated in her serio numbers; Fanny Humber, soubrette and instrumentalist, deserves praise; Tom Collins is a character comedian of the first water; and Beattie Kent is a charming dancer.

PORTH.

POOLE'S OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr W. Bynorth.—On Monday Mr Stanley S. Gordon's company presented the romantic drama entitled For the Woman He Loves to a good house. Mr Stanley S. Gordon gave a fine rendering of the part of Philip Meredith; Mr Wilfred Protheroe is seen to advantage as the villainous Silas Bradley; Miss Nina Vaughton gives an effective rendering of Mrs Mary Vernon; and Miss Eva Lyndhurst is well placed as Virginie. Mr Walter Manfree is decidedly successful as Hannibal Cæsar Muggleton; Miss Ida Bell is lively as 'Tilda Muggleton; Mr Dacre Baldie is a capital representative of Charles Dean; and Mr Harry C. Momber as James Stilton and Miss Sallie Adelstone as Bessie Bramble keep the house in good humour.

PORTSMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Bell.—The Belle of New York is with us this week, and with regret we must write it is a farewell visit. Mr George Musgrove has a very able company for his last presentation, including Mr Frank Lawton. Miss Beatrice Lamotte makes a capable and charming Violet Grey; Miss Lillian Digges is chic and dainty as Fifi Fricot; the Cora Angelique of Miss Winnie Brown is imposing; Miss May Angus-Young as the Pell-street girl, Mamie Clancy, does very well; Mr Harry A. Meymott as Ichabod Bronson is diverting; Harry Bronson is well rendered by Mr Philip Leslie; the polite lunatic, Karl Von Pumpernick, is admirably portrayed by Mr Max Copland; Mr Cecil Burt's representation of Doc Sniffkins is very good; and Mr Frank Lawton receives hearty encores for his capital whistling and bone solos.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr T. E. Agate.—The patrons of this house have the opportunity this week of giving their verdict on the romantic play Why Men Love Women, presented by Messrs Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company. The plot is interesting, and the company is quite up to its requirements. Mr Alfred Paumier, in the part of Gerald Fielding, has the lion's share of work, which is admirably done. Serge Stanloff is powerfully presented by Mr S. Herbert Humber; Violet Livingstone is carefully played by Miss Annie Saker; and Mr Harwood Roberts as Orlando Figgins and Miss Mary Glynne as Matilda Figgins are responsible for lots of fun.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Secretary, Mr W. Pratt.—The bill here is topped by Arthur Prince, a clever ventriloquist, and his cabin boy Jim; the Boccaccios, Italian singers and instrumentalists, with Signor Francia, mandolinist, give every satisfaction; Mdlle. Ongar, in her sensational aerial trapeze act, gets a hearty welcome; Lee and Kingston, in their laughable sketch, Practical Joking, are highly diverting; George Neno, whistling and Tyrolean comedian, is well applauded; Adelina, lady facial artiste, is favourably received; the Three Sisters Vincent, expert speciality dancers, are very good; and also appearing are Florrie St. Clair, comedienne and danseuse; and T. C. Callaghan, character comedian.

PRESTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr Stephen Pritt.—Mr Geo. Edwardes' company, on a return visit with The Toreador, provides a welcome attraction here this week. Mr Lionel Victor gives an amusing impersonation of Sammy Gigg. Mr W. H. Powell's energetic and clever embodiment of Pettifer gains hearty applause. Mr T. W. Volt fully realises the inane Sir Archibald Slackett. Mr Fred Allandale makes the most of his opportunities as Augustus Trail. Carajola has a commanding and spirited representative in Mr John Donald. Mr Fred Fowler is a dapper Governor of Villaya, Mr E. Nainby a fearsome Rinaldo, and Mr A. W. Ashdowne capably depicts Moreno. Miss Nellie Bouverie infuses the necessary go into her acting as Mrs Malton Hoppings. Miss Alice Oppitz is handsome and vivacious in the rôle of Donna Teresa. Miss Nancy Langtyre and Miss Daisy Wallace are seen to advantage as Nancy and Dora respectively, and Miss Daisy Wallace is a pleasing exponent of Susan. Chorus and orchestra contribute acceptably to the success of the performance.

PUBLIC HALL.—A most enjoyable entertainment is provided here by the W. Hamilton's "Excursions." In addition to the picturesque diorama with which Hamilton's is always identified, there is a fine display of the latest animated photographs, and the programme is agreeably interspersed with several good variety turns.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Sawyer and Woodruff.—Messrs Carson and Granville's company, in The Drama of Life, is here this week. Mr Jerrold Ord in the rôle of Harry Beech proves himself to be a clever actor; Mr John J. Hooker portrays the villainy of Walter Beech successfully; Mr Owen Remonde as Sir Dobson Wilde causes much amusement; Jack Lawton (Mr Bulwer Pitt) and Dave Crane (Mr Leonard Thackeray) play their parts exceedingly well; Richard Brenton is effectively delineated by Mr Walter Steele; Miss Cissie Bellamy acts Sylvia Beech in convincing style; Miss Marie Murray impersonates Master Robert Beech in a praiseworthy manner; and Mr Edward Birker as Count De Foi, Mr Cal Hunt-Mortlake as Police-constable Morley, and Miss Nellie Daly as Betty Black also merit praise.

RADCLIFFE.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Geo. T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr Jas. Boothman.—Mr Fred Karno's celebrated company is paying a welcome return visit here. Mr Harry Roxbury as Sergeant Lightning delights the house with his clever patter. Mr Frank Morton as Lord Easem is seen to advantage; Mr George Claremont is very energetic as Miffin; Mr Gus Le Clerq is a good exponent of Mr Minks; Mr Harry Howe scores as Selina; Miss Florence Melville as Miss Manley is praiseworthy; and Miss Florence Burns is entitled to praise as Lady Maud Easem.

RAWTENSTALL.

GRAND THEATRE.—Co-Proprietors and Lessees, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr J. Ellis Miller.—Miss Emma Litchfield and company are here with A London Actress. As Hilda Mannering Miss Litchfield displays exceptional talent, her interpretation being a most powerful one, and she is ably supported by Mr Stuart Cleveland as Clive Crawford, who displays great ability in the part. Mr Charles E. Leicester also proves a thoroughly capable actor, his artistic rendering of Lieutenant Kingston being very fine. Miss Alice Capel as Phyllis Crawford gives a womanly and sympathetic impersonation, and as Biddy Maloney and Mrs Skinner Miss Louise Millward and Miss Nellie Eglen cause roars of laughter, their fighting scene bringing down the house. Mr Sam Wilford is a good low comedian, and his songs and dances are well rendered and received.

RAMSGATE.

AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General Manager, Mr Henry Bowman.—Mr John Tully's company has been giving popular performances here of Uncle Tom's Cabin. Mr Fred G. Kay acts well as Legree, and Mr J. Palmer is a capital George Harris. Miss Florence Ventmore does well as Eliza Harris, and as Eva little Marie gives evidence of being a promising actress. Mr Kora Deanrajah appears with good effect as Uncle Tom.

ROYAL VICTORIA PAVILION.—Proprietors, Ramsgate Corporation; Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Herbert Jay; Business Manager, Mr G. B. Richter.—To an excellent variety programme provided here this week entertaining turns have been contributed by Payne's Little Vagabonds; Amy Bellwood, serio and dancer; Ben Nevis, comedian and dancer; Helm and Cozens, sketch artistes; Musical Rosina, expert instrumentalist; Amandus, facial mimic; Ailsa Douglas, the Lancashire soprano; and Carlton, the "World's Worst Wizard."

READING.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr W. E. Barnett; Secretary, Mr Reginald Taylor.—A Stranger in a Strange Land, a farcical comedy, is being played here this week by a clever company under the direction of Messrs C. W. Somerset and Lionel Rignold. As Charles Dudley Mr Rignold scores a signal success, and as a curtain-raiser Mr C. W. Somerset gives a costume dramatic recital of "Eugene Aram's Dream" with much ability.

ROCHDALE.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr W. Robinson; General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr Charles Clucas.—A Chinese Honeymoon is the attraction here this week. Mr Frank A. Wood makes an imposing Emperor Hang Chow. Mr R. Allerton Turner is effective as the lugubrious Chipple Chop. Mr Leonard May as Hi Lung is diverting. Mr Percy Yorke is heard to great advantage as Tom Hatherton, and Mr Harry Brayne is highly amusing as Mr Pineapple. Miss Jose Collins makes the most of Mrs Pineapple. Miss Alice Drummond is effective as Mrs Brown. Miss Marie Adair charmingly acts the part of Soo-Soo, her rich voice and graceful dancing quite captivating the audience. The success of the performance is Miss M. Sadle, whose mimicry and burlesque in the part of Fi-Fi fairly convulses the house with laughter.

ROTHERHAM.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr W. Manning.—Messrs George Harris and Fred Terriss and company are here this week with Why Woman Sins. Mr Wallace Campbell is a manly Lieut. Harry Maxwell; Mr George Harris is highly amusing as Cecil Spencer; Mr Fred Terriss as Captain Herbert Carlton gives a well thought-out rendition of the part, being ably assisted by Mr Lionel Ellis as Jim Rainbird; Messrs Bob Herrick and F. Newburn are deserving of mention as Sam Spavins and Bobby Beans respectively; and Mr Charles Herberter scores as Oliver Desmond. Miss Georgina Thomas as Jack Smith gives a natural portrayal; Miss Effie Bartlett is very pleasing as Nell Desmond; and Miss Marie West is deserving of mention as Nancy Nibble. Miss Gussie Everett proves a capable exponent of Ida Valette, and Miss Winifred Preece gives a sprightly rendition of the rôle of Lily De Vere, her songs being well received.

RUGBY.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Kingsley.—Mr W. H. Hallatt's company is here this week with Two Little Sailor Boys. Mr W. H. Hallatt as Capt. Noel Tregarthen is spirited and effective; Mr Leonard Booker gives a vivid reading of the part of Lieut. Redstone; Miss Blanche Steele as Lola Yorke plays the part with dramatic intensity; and Miss Mabel Daventry is charming and sympathetic as Mildred Gray. Miss Hilda Taylor is smart and amusing as Lucy Wilson; Mr Sid Cotterell as Ben Baxter submits a clever and humorous rendering; Mr Oscar Romer is manly and robust as Jack Jolly; and Mr Ambrose Horton is good in the part of Jim Royston; Miss May Day as Cyril and Miss Ethel Frances as Tom, the two little sailor boys, are remarkably good.

RUNCORN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr H. W. Caddick.—We are again favoured with a visit from Mr J. H. Morton's company, in The Rajah of Ranjapore. Mr Alvin Sawyer gives a highly entertaining interpretation of Horatio Chick, being ably assisted by Mr Bert Harrow. Mr Chas. E. Linney as Ernest Travers is successful vocally and histrionically. Mr Arthur Reid as Captain Hertage is responsible for capable work, and Mr H. Conwell is well placed as Mr Stubbs. Miss Nell Ascot is a pronounced success as Primrose, her singing being a special feature; and Miss Marion Walker as Eliza is effective.

RYDE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Bannister Howard.—An excellent company under the direction of Mr Herbert Greville, played The New Clown on the first three nights of the week. Mr Stanley Cooke, in the title-rôle, is excellent, and he is well supported by Mr Herbert Greville as Mr Dixon, the circus proprietor. Mr Fred Paul is a manly and handsome Capt. Jack Trent, and Mr Fred Lake g

ENDOWED MUNICIPAL THEATRES. TO LOVERS OF SHAKESPEARE. Dear Fellow Students, That the attitude of "The British Empire Shakespeare Society" towards the theatre should be misunderstood is manifestly impossible, seeing that its president is Sir Henry Irving; but with regard to myself personally, it grieves me deeply to find that some unaccountable misapprehension has arisen. I wish, therefore, most emphatically to declare how no one is more conscious than I myself that the mere reading of a play (especially one written by Shakespeare purposely for the stage) is a very poor substitute for an actual theatrical representation. Though I am very happy and gratified to see the pleasure derived by many from our platform recitals, it is only the infrequency (owing to obvious practical reasons) of adequate performances of our greatest dramatist's plays that renders necessary a society such as the one I serve, which would cease to be required were we fortunate enough to possess endowed municipal theatres for the ensured support of shakespearian drama, a state of affairs for which no enthusiast can pray more earnestly than. Yours truly, GRETA MORRITT, 17, Southwell-gardens, S.W. Oct. 1, 1904.

Price 3s. 6d. Post Free 3s. 10d. THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER, BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. Published at "The Era" Offices, 49, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

Chapter I. COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT
Chapter II. PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III. INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV. MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V. INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr Albert A. Strong's new work entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee, July 28th, 1901

Mr A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes" which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette, Aug. 2d, 1901

HOLLINGSHEAD AND THE DRAMA.

The death of the late JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD removes from us a remarkable personality, and a man who, in his way, did a great deal to improve the theatre. In estimating HOLLINGSHEAD'S career we must not forget that he was the first to abolish box, booking, and other fees. For eighteen years, at the cost of about eighteen thousand pounds, he kept the promise which he made when he opened the Gaiety Theatre in 1868, to charge no fee for booking and make no charge for programmes or for taking care of cloaks, coats, or hats. He expressed a wish indeed, that "No fees" should be cut at the head of his tombstone. He was also the pioneer of the practice of commissioning an artist to design the dresses for a spectacular entertainment. We can hardly imagine nowadays what sort of persons the attendants at the London theatres were in the early sixties. We may gain some idea, however, from the fact that WILKIE COLLINS, after a visit to the old Gaiety in HOLLINGSHEAD'S time, wrote to express his delight, saying that the people employed to open boxes and take coats were so unobtrusively useful and civil that he walked into his box "wondering whether he was awake or dreaming." JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD also deserves grateful remembrance for his spirited opposition to all "grandmotherly legislation." When the Strand magistrates almost unanimously refused a licence to the Gaiety restaurant, he appealed to the Middlesex Sessions, with the result that the licence was granted by a large majority. He always proclaimed himself as a pioneer, too, in the direction of cleanliness and comfort in the theatre. He originated the practice of presenting "Souvenirs," which took the shape of Gaiety Valentines; and he brought the first modern electric light produced by steam to London and England and displayed it outside the Gaiety Theatre. He also instituted matinées in which other pieces and companies than those presented at the Gaiety in the evening appeared. He produced Mr W. S. GILBERT'S first comedy, An Old Score. Though a foe to the ordinary "deadhead," he frankly announced that his free list for any bonâ-fide members of the literary, artistic, and scientific professions was never suspended at the Gaiety. In 1869 he secured Mr HENRY IRVING to play Mr Chevenix, in Uncle Dick's Darling. He was one of the first to do away with the "carpenters' scenes," when cloths were dropped while the set behind was being slowly and laboriously nailed up; and, in Uncle Dick's Darling, his direct change from a blacksmith's shop to an old village green was looked upon as an astounding innovation. He did a great deal towards the abolition of the Lord Chamberlain's order which closed the London theatres on Ash Wednesdays. He produced Thespis, the first piece in which Mr W. S GILBERT and Mr ARTHUR SULLIVAN collaborated. He accepted a play from CHARLES READE. He engaged CHARLES MATHEWS and other great actors. He was strong on the question of dramatic copyright, and fought the copyright case of TOOLE v. YOUNG most vigorously, publishing the opinions of many distinguished authors on the question of dramatising novels. He bought Mr FORBES ROBERTSON'S portrait of PHELPS as Cardinal Wolsey, which eventually became the property of the Garrick Club. He was chairman of Mr CHARLES MORTON'S benefit in 1891, which yielded about £1 000; and he organised benefits for BENJAMIN WEBSTER, BUCKSTONE, JOHN PARRY, PADDY GREEN, and E. W. ROYCE, which earned for the bénéficiaires thousands of pounds. He defied the "tea-board thunder" of The Times, which, HOLLINGSHEAD complained, was cultivating a "certain tooth-pick-after-dinner style of criticism." He suggested, if he did not introduce, the "queue" at the doors of playhouses. He first introduced electric light in connection with a costume worn on the stage. He dispensed with advertisements, except those in the press. He revived, for purposes of comparison, a number of plays of the alleged "palmy days" of the British drama. He insisted on every seat in his theatre supplying a fair view of the stage. And he was the president of the United Theatrical Cricket Club established in 1882

JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD should be gratefully remembered by the profession for all these things. If the best of him is in danger of being forgotten, and the second-best remembered, it is from his own fault. He was never tired of sneering at the idea of a theatre with a continuous art policy, a standard of its own, and a reputation. He proclaimed himself on the house-tops as a "dramatic shopkeeper," a cheesemonger-manager. The comparison was not exact, for the better class of tradesman sticks to his own line and does not vend miscellaneously. JOHN HOLLINGSHEAD'S policy rather resembled that of the "stores." He cared nothing for what he passed over his counter, as long as it paid. We cannot feel for his career the same sympathetic interest which thrills us when we think of those of HENRY IRVING, the BANCROFTS, and the KENDALS. Indeed, it was the fact that so many of our actor-managers were then only in the embryo stage of their development that gave HOLLINGSHEAD his chance. As soon as actor-management became the rule, the non-actor-manager had to compete with equal enterprise in accommodation, &c, plus the personal attraction and affection which a leading actor and actress of fame always exercise. HOLLINGSHEAD was essentially a pioneer; and, his work of pioneering done, he retired on his laurels. As he used to say, the Gaiety in his prime was a house of variety. But, with the increase of theatres and of actor-managers, it became impossible to run the house on the old lines The authors and composers whom he had encouraged, the actors and actresses whom he had engaged, struck out for themselves. The bewildering succession of attractions, the kaleidoscope quality of the old Gaiety, could not be kept up But when we think how many good ideas he originated, how many reforms he effected, and how much he did to pave the way to the general introduction of the modern theatre, with all the comforts and conveniences which we now take as matters of course, we recognise that the debt of the profession to "Practical John" is a very large and important one. His management of the Gaiet only failed because he gave so much of his time and energy to literary labour

THE annual distribution of diplomas, certificates, and book prizes to the students of the London College of Music took place on Wednesday. Since its establishment the college has made great progress. The Committee of Management in a report says:—"The general quality of pianoforte and violin playing has so considerably improved that it would seem there is not likely to be any lack of either amateur or professional musicians in the future to sustain the reputation of the college and extend the work it has carried on for some years." The college has local centres for examination throughout the United Kingdom, and the scope of its work has covered the length and breadth of Australia, India, and South Africa, besides penetrating into Canada, Belgium, China, and the West Indies. The proceedings opened with an excellent performance of a selection of intrumental music by diplômés of the college—the violinist being Mr L O'Neill and the pianists Miss L. M. Wodhams, Miss Dorothy Baucutt, and Miss Hilda Cooper. Dr. F. J. Karn, the principal, introduced Sir Frederick G. Banbury, M.P., who said that before he presented the diplomas and prizes to the students he desired to congratulate the principal and his able staff on the progress which the college had made. He understood from Dr. Karn that the work of the students during the year had been highly satisfactory. In the year 1903 the increase in the college examinations over the year immediately preceding it was 474, and this year the increase over 1903 was 1,768. Sir Frederick then proceeded to distribute the diplomas and certificates.

AT a meeting of the Trustees of Shakespeare's Birthplace, held in the Town Hall, Stratford-on-Avon, on Wednesday, Mr Sidney Lee, President of the Executive, reviewed the history of the Horneby cottages in Henley-street, and moved a resolution to the effect that the property be retained and renovated at a cost not exceeding £400. Sir Theodore Martin said the purposes of the trust were to maintain the estate and additions thereto as a permanent memorial of Shakespeare, and to acquire any house or lands of national interest as being associated with the life of Shakespeare, his wife, or parents. The two cottages did not come within the language of the Act. They were not property known or believed to have belonged to Shakespeare, his wife or parents, and they had no right to spend a shilling on alterations there. Mr Carnegie generously gave the cottages that all danger of fire might be removed from the birthplace. They had no earthly power to spend any money in maintaining those cottages, which had no more connection with Shakespeare than any ordinary house in Stratford. If money were so expended they would be incurring serious risks as trustees, and he protested against it. There was no historical value attaching to the cottages, which were horribly plain. For the sake of a few rotten beams, full of insects and microbes, it was absurd to spend money on them. As a trustee, he objected to exposing himself to a challenge hereafter of having wrongfully expended the Trust money. The meeting decided by ten votes to eight to retain the cottages and to carry out the scheme of preservation formulated by Mr Cossins.

MR AUGUSTUS LITTLETON, presiding at the seventh ordinary general meeting of Novello and Co., held in Berners-street on Tuesday, remarked that the music pirate was still allowed to be at large, and the country's laws did little or nothing to aid the composer and publisher in protecting their interests. Until the stealing of brains was placed on a level with the pilfering of pocket-handkerchiefs, watches, and purses, the position was not likely to improve, and the pirate would continue to flourish. Messrs Novello had not suffered directly from the depredations of the thieves to the extent that other publishing houses had done. But the harm inflicted on the local music-sellers all over the country was equally cruel and unjust, and in the end everybody was injured and defrauded, even down to the small boy employed in the bonâ fide production and selling of music.

SALFORD.

PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr Harold Goulden.—The Master Criminal, by Henry Merriman, on Monday afforded a large house plenty of sensation, mixed with amusing incidents. Mr Robert Forsyth forcibly impresses the audience by his clever performance as Lestage; Miss Nellie Thearle as Cecile makes excellent use of her opportunities; little Miss Marjorie Lawrence plays the little Winifred Manners in a captivating manner; Mr Alfred Guyon as Philip Manners and Mr Julius Wright as Ben Beaunday are eminently successful, Mr T. Squires as Tommy Dale, Miss Kitty Terris as Peggy Perks, and Miss Bessie Armytage as Mary Murphy, are responsible for the comedy business. Mr S. Hope as Gentleman Jim, Miss Enid Edoni as Mabel Manners, and Mr H. Harrington as James Dawney give good support. The staging is good.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford; Licensee, Mr James M. Hardie; Secretary and Manager, Mr C Shayler.—This week's programme is a credit to the management De Biere the Mysterious heads the bill, and his illusions are greatly marvelled at. The performances of De Gracia's elephants are thoroughly enjoyed. Wayne and Lamar are a couple of amusing contortionists and acrobatic dancers. The Durvals do a smart horizontal bar act. Merton and Rydon give a good vocal speciality; and the Brothers Kragg, fine gymnasts; Arthur Slater, sifflеur and mimic; Professor Welsen, equilibrist; and Walter Bellonini, the wonderful juggler, with the animated pictures, are also very entertaining

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr Wm. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy B. Broadhead.—There is a good all-round combination of talent and a consequent good attendance of seekers of enjoyment at both houses. The Frolics in the Café Garden by the eccentric Paulastos are highly amusing. Happy Attwood's comic singing and mimicry are irresistible. Will Hebden's songs are appreciated; and other turns are given by Avon and Cress, in a comedy act, A Little Bit of This and a Little Bit of That; Sisters Sivado, clever cyclists; Forest and King, acrobatic dancing and speciality; Lulaine Darrell's unique Roman ring artistes; Wynford Brothers, champion barrel jumpers; Winnie Scott, and Marie Winsome, male impersonator. The animated pictures are good.

SEACOMBE.

IRVING THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr James Kiernan.—Mr Milton Bode's company is proving a most successful engagement here this week, in Gentleman Joe. The title-rôle is enacted in excellent style by Mr Kennedy Allen, whose interpretation of the part is natural and clever. Mr Harry A. Gribbon is irresistibly comic as Mr Pilkington Jones, and Mr Robert Vincent presents a well-studied and gentlemanly Lord Donnybrook. Miss Edith Benson scores well as William, her rendition of the musical numbers being excellent. Miss Elda Burman presents a dashing and vivacious Miss Lalage Potts, and the Misses Pilkington Jones are ably represented by Miss E. Russell, Miss M. Linscott, and Miss M Hayden respectively. Mrs Ralli-Carr is played with due dignity by Miss Hebe Bliss, the Hon. Mabel Kavanagh being suitably presented by Miss Mabel Kerridge. Mr George Wyley as Mr Hughie Jacqueson and Mr W. H. Moore as Mr Ralli-Carr are both good in their respective parts, and Miss Maude Marriott as Emma sings and dances in a highly commendable manner. The scenery and music are both highly satisfying, and the smaller characters are all well placed.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr A. C. Harrison. — Mr C. Finch-Hatton and company are here this week in the three-act comedy-drama, From Scotland Yard. Mr Hatton as the detective depicts various characters with much humour. Mr T. Arthur Ellis is clever as the swindler, Dean Fordyce. Richard Drake is capably drawn by Mr Jack Armitage. Miss M. Lewis Cluer does well as Mabel; Miss Josephine Lee is effective as Sybil; and Miss Renee Glendower is powerful as Mad Marie.

SHEERNESS.

TRANSFIELD'S HIPPODROME — Sole Proprietor, Mr T. G. Transfield; Secretary and Manager, Mr Chas. Melvin.—The premier attraction for this week is the production of the equestrian and dramatic sketch, Fra Diavolo, which has proved immensely popular. Appearing also with success are Mdlle. Vezzey and her musical dogs; Duncan, in a juggling entertainment entitled "Ten in a Ring" also scores; Rosie Bartlett, hand balancer and equilibrist, presents a clever performance; W. Tudor, with his miniature circus, is decidedly good. The remaining items deserving of special mention include Will Newman, comedian; J. C. Morris, eccentric comedian; Meltono, vocalist and dancer; and those two mirth-provoking clowns, Little Valdo and Little Bishop. Friday night was set apart for the complimentary benefit of the popular and esteemed manager Mr Chas. Melvin.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr P. Reymend.—The Calden Combination still continue their successful career here, the production of the dramatic sketch, A Traitor in the Camp, being equally successful as either of its predecessors. Amongst other contributors to the programme are H. C. Boon, comedian; T. W. Queen, comedian and dancer; and the Sisters Ashley, duettists and dancers. The programme concludes with the laughable farce For One Night Only.

SHEFFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL —Sole Owner and Manager, Mr F. W. Purcell; Acting-Manager, Mr T. S. Carter. —Why Smith Left Home is again causing hearty laughter. Mr Horace Lingard, to all appearance as youthful and buoyant as ever, revels in the part of John Smith, and easily secures the goodwill of the public whom he has amused for so many years. Mr Joseph Hudson is alert and characteristic as Major Duncombe, and Mr Herbert Dixon as General Billet-Doux, Mr Robert Grey as the Count, Mr Harry Punter as James, Mr Henry Grey as Robert Walton, Miss Hilda Stericker as Mrs Smith, Miss Marie Vereas Julia, and Miss Mary Bates as Madame Billet-Doux keep the fun going. The farce is well mounted.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; General Manager and Treasurer, Mr J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr J. M. Barrie's delightful comedy Quality-street began a welcome return visit to Sheffield on Monday, when the charming love story, the quaint dresses, and the clever all-round acting of Messrs A. and S. Gatti and Charles Frohman's company gave refined pleasure to a large audience. Mr David Glassford deepened the good impression made by his acting on the former visit to Sheffield by his careful performance of the character of Valentine Brown, and a graceful and naïve representative of Phœbe was Miss Grace Armytage Noble, who wore her quaint costumes with graceful ease. Mr A. Carlaw Grand was first rate as Ensign; Mr George Tompkins had quite the tone of the period as the bold recruiting sergeant; and Mr Arthur T. Hill as Lieut. Spicer, and Mr T. Langton Lane both did effective work. Miss Lizzie Scobie was a humorous Patty, and Miss Evelyn Mills as Miss Turnbull, Miss Rollo Deas as Miss Willoughby, Miss Bertha Woolcote as Priscilla Willoughby, Miss Alma Reeves-Smith as Charlotte Parrant, Miss Daisy Lee as Arabella, Miss Mabel Wynne as Harriett, and Miss May Whitty, an admirable Susan, all earned the approving regard of the audience.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr C. W. Ramsay.—For over twenty years that clever concoction of pantomime, musical farce, and comic ballet d'action called Frivolity has been paying annual visits to the Alexandra Theatre, and it turned up again on Monday, rejuvenated with new songs, dances, and up-to-date business, and kept a crowded house in roars of laughter. The Brothers Leopold were the acme of irresponsible drollery and acrobatic agility, and they received loyal support from the members of their company.

EMPIRE PALACE.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. W. Young.—The successful dramatic episode entitled Drummed Out is the pièce de résistance here this week. Mr A. C. Lilly again acts with force and manliness as the disgraced soldier, and he receives valuable assistance from the members of his clever little company. The following artistes also contribute to the programme:—Minnie Cunningham, a pretty and chic comedienne; Lily Burnand, a comely and talented burlesque artiste; Flo Burris, a favourite serio vocalist; Lieutenant Travis, the popular ventriloquist; the Venola Bros., comic gymnasts; Johnny Dwyer, eccentric comedian; Newhouse and Ward, cyclists; Dot Hardy, comedienne; the Onllaw Trio, wire performers; and the clever drolls, the Bros. Griffiths, in a new comic act.

GRAND PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—Here are appearing the Bros. Ashley, comic duologue artists; Ted Young, a funny exponent of the comic side of life; Ada Twibell, an old Sheffield favourite; Onda and Artell, novelty artistes; the Bransbys; and the Langdons.

ALBERT HALL.—Manager, Mr Auguste Lyons.—Mr Edgar Granville and comic concert party are here this week.

SHREWSBURY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Business Manager, Mr W. C. Dornton.—Mr Hare's company is here this week with The Girl from Chicago. Mr Buckstone Clair, an old Shrewsbury favourite, was amusing and clever as Judge Hussel; Mr Edwin Dodds made the best use of his opportunities as Billy M'Guffin; Mr Henry Hare acted with ability as General Boomer; Mr Douglas Vigors was droll and capable as Percy Montmorency; Mr Clarence Ibbotson was the life and soul of the piece as Mother Obadiah Caccles; Mr James Quinn was good as Sam Slappitt; Miss Lucy Beaumont merited praise as Mrs Sweetlove, singing most effectively; Miss Nelly Vicott acted creditably the part of Lucretia Flatfoot; Miss Lily Beverley was vivacious as Flora Bloomer; and the Misses Nelly James, Lena Adams, and Madge Shaw were a trio of graceful and smart dancers.

SOUTHAMPTON.

GRAND.—Messrs Addison Bright and Walter Maxwell's company is this week presenting Quality Street for the first time. Mr George A. Brandram as Valentine Brown gives a dashing performance, and Miss Florence Jackson's embodiment of Miss Phœbe Throssell is delightful. Another ladylike portrayal is Susan Throssell of Miss Grace Edwin, and Miss Gwynneth Galton is a most amusing Patty.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Mr William Bourne's world famous Man to Man is proving an exceptional draw here. The company is an admirable one, the villainous deeds of Richard Ellerton being skilfully brought into prominence by Mr Ellis J. Preston, a capable actor. Mr Frank Liston gives a capable impersonation of the parson, and Mr Chas. Boult as George Gordon is a manly hero. Miss Maud Buchanan plays Ethel Maythorne in a sympathetic manner, and Mr Arthur Rich achieves his usual huge success as Bill Burkley. The comedy element has capable exponents in Mr Will Clement and Miss Eva Griffiths, whose renderings of Samuel Plumtree and Miss Lavinia Dove respectively create hearty merriment. Miss Amy Vennimore also does well as Gipsy Madge. The scenery and mechanical effects are remarkable good.

PALACE.—Captain Woodward's wonderful sealions head the bill here and achieve their usual remarkable success; Bernar, king of marionettes, presents a truly wonderful show; Harry Conlin, John E. Coyle, and Bob Baxter are a trio of capital comedians, who cause hearty laughter; and the programme is further contributed to by Spry and Monti, Alma Obrey, and Katie Butler.

PHILHARMONIC HALL — Poole's Myriorama opened here for a short season on Monday under the management of Mr Fred Mayer. Good houses rule, and in addition to the usual excellent pictures, so ably described by Mr Nat Abatt, there is a capital variety show. The Westwoods excel as trick cyclists, and Mdlle. Orbassany's performing cockatoos are as popular as ever. Another old favourite is Mr Felix Somers, the facial king, whose entertainment "People We Know" is deservedly popular. The Veronas dance gracefully, and Miss May Finch is a comely comedienne. The animated pictures and the orchestra also add greatly to the evening's enjoyment.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr F. W. Marlow; Manager, Mr F. Marlow.—Comedies are always appreciated by Southend audiences, and this week Mr Fred Nelson's company is delighting all with a capital representation of the farcical sketch, Trooper Hunt's Widow. Mr Howard Gridland, in the dual character of Trooper Hunt and Widow Hunt, proves himself a genuinely humorous artist of originality, and is responsible for a vast amount of merriment; Mr Cecil Flowers' impersonation of the small grocer, Nathaniel Sapp, is in every way excellent. Among the female portion of the cast Miss Ella Kitson as Mrs Jane Weston, a wardrobe dealer, proves herself to be an actress of a high order. The piece is preceded by a pleasing comedietta.

PIER PAVILION. — Monday being the last day for Herr C. Adolf Seebold's tenancy, a grand farewell concert was provided by the lessee in the evening, when a good audience had a really first-class programme before them. The Chamounix Orchestra gave further proof of their talents in a creditable manner, giving no less than nine turns, the descriptive piece entitled "Die Waltparade Kommt," being perhaps the best.

THE KURSAAL.—Manager, Mr J. Sydney Childs. —Great local interest is evidenced this week in the cake-walk competitions, when the semi-finals and final takes place on Friday and Saturday evenings respectively. Some of the competitors give a really good display of their talents, and Mr Barnett is to be congratulated upon his endeavours to please. The Bioscope well maintains its reputation, and dancing nightly is greatly enjoyed.

SOUTHPORT.

OPERA HOUSE (WINTER GARDENS).—General Manager, Mr Alfred Hemming.—The local patrons of the stage are this week favoured by a return visit of those clever and popular exponents of histrionic art, Mr and Mrs Kendal. A Scrap of Paper was presented on the opening night, in which Mr Kendal gave a brilliant and life-like rendering of the part of Colonel Blake; whilst Mrs Kendal delighted the audience by her natural and artistic impersonation of Susan Hartley, the two principals being ably assisted by their excellent company. The répertoire for the week includes The Elder Miss Blossom, Still Waters Run Deep, and Dick Hope.

STALYBRIDGE.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr H. L. Rooke. Messrs Marston and Buckstone's company is giving representations of The Silver Cross, and meeting with much success. Mr Syd Bazley finds scope for eccentric acting in the part of Tomkyns Quinton; as Arthur Merton Mr Cliff Allen sings and acts meritoriously; and Mr Harry Glenny as the villainous Philip Frewin succeeds in bringing upon himself the disapproval of the gallery. Miss Maud Western represents Ida Adams in a sympathetic manner; Miss Cissy Glenny is effective as Laura Beecheroft; and Miss Poppy Danby is successful in her singing and dancing.

SOUTH SHIELDS.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs J. and F. Coulson.—Mr Julian Malvern's company in I Defy the World is providing a befitting attraction to lovers of melodrama here. The piece is by Arthur Shirley and E. Hill-Mitchelson. The plot is woven around the doings of Leon Darville, a much-wronged man, who seeks consolation by viewing the sufferings wrought by him upon his enemies. The part is powerfully treated by Mr Lewis Gilbert, who at times is dramatically intense. Miss Lina Nazeby in the thankless part of Blanche, Darville's faithless wife, acts in excellent style.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Resident Manager, Mr Geo. F. Thompson.—The protean actor, Mr R. A. Roberts, is scoring a signal success here by his admirable interpretation of Lucinda's Elopement. Howard and St. Clair are smart comedy artistes. A funny sketch, entitled The Brown Cow, by Burg, Haud, and Wise, meets with approbation. Austin and Cowan are entertaining vocalists, and a charming soubrette is Ida Brophy. Other popular items are Max Merlin, the boneless wonder; Bert Weston, swell comedian; Jack Foley, eccentric comedian; and the Sisters Ely, duettists and dancers.

TIVOLI. — Proprietors, Councillor J. K. Hall and Mr Jos. Sweeney.—Heading the bill this week are the Gladenbecks, who give a clever acrobatic and silver chain performance. The witticisms of Willis Walton afford pleasure, and another able comedian is Fred Casburn. Renson and Waite are diverting comedy artistes; Valey and Sinclair find favour by their operatic duets; E. J. Wilkes and his speciality dog, Woof, score; as also do the male impersonations of Flo Hilton. Rosie Morn, comedienne, has many admirers.

SPENNYMOOR.

CAMBRIDGE THEATRE —Lessee, Mr Harding Thomas; Resident Manager, Mr Herbert Vere.—Mr Henry Furnivall's company is here this week, presenting The Harvest of Sin and Lost in Paris. The former was staged on Monday night. Mr Chas. H. Lester appeared to advantage in the dual-rôle of Harold and Arnold Mainwaring; Miss Pattie Hastings was very attractive as May Mainwaring; and as Grace De Brisionere Miss Louisa Peach submitted a sterling performance. Messrs Edward Valentine, Sidney Compton, W. Garrett, and Fulton Fuller appeared successfully as Paul De Brisionere, George Mainwaring, St. John Houghley, and Silas Logan. As Gladys Mainwaring, Marjery Gray, and little Harold, Miss K. Willoughby, Miss Alice Oliver, and Miss Maggie English gave a good account of themselves.

ST. HELENS.

THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LIMITED. — General Manager, Mr M'Leod Loader. — After a long absence Mr Edmund Tearle, supported by an exceptionally clever company, has possession here this week. The répertoire includes The Three Musketeers, Virginius, The Merry Wives of Windsor (by desire), Macbeth, and Jeannie Deans. The acting all round is excellent, the mounting fine, and business is good.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs T. Barrasford, Will Sley, and F. Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr A. V. Carnell.—Mr John Lawson holds the premier position here this week with his episodes, Humanity and Sally in Our Alley, which satisfy the most exacting lovers of sensation. Others appearing include Charles Craston, comedian; Sibb and Sibb, trapeze acrobats; Stewart and Morgan, excellent vocalists; Miss Maggie Rimmer, a clever comedienne; Dwight and Son, comedians; and Vincent, table expert.

STOCKPORT.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Wm. Revill.—Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company in A Woman's Pluck is attracting large audiences to the popular parts of this theatre this week. Mr James Willard gives an able impersonation of Dick Darrell; Mr Charles P. Wentworth cleverly portrays the part of Sir Noel Fordyce; Mr Edward Ashby is a pleasing Winston Dale; and Mr J. P. Dryden as Mark Scanlon and Jim Daremont is excellent. Mr Harry Emmerson as Roger Pippin, supported by Miss Agnese D'Aragon as Ophelia Pippin, is amusing, as also are Mr Cecil Raymond as Sir John Daredevil and Miss Tina Shaw as Bertie Daredevil. Miss Jessie Yatman acts delightfully as Jessie Pope, and as Grace Daremont Miss East Robertson displayed marked power and ability.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietress, Mrs Weldon Watts; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr R. G. Elder. — Miss Ida Millais and company are here in the thrilling drama No Man's Land. As the hero, Harry Oaklands, Mr Henry Herne is admirable; Mr Fred Conyers as Silas Moore is a success; and Mr Claude Haviland's Dr. Buxton is cleverly conceived. Mr Alfred Byron's dual-rôle of Gilbert and Norman Bathurst is done in good style, and Mr William Matthews's Mat Marsden is endowed with much realism. Good comedy is shown by Mr Sidney H. Morton's Soloman Jacobs and Mr Alfred Burrows's Thompson Poodle. Miss Dora Hilstrom's Bessie Poodle is a vivacious impersonation, and Miss Ida Millais as Mary Bathurst acts very acceptably.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr John Batty; Manager, Mr W. Batty.—A capital bill is provided here, and includes Edie Anderson, vocalist and dancer; Brothers Obo, comics and patterers; the Crown Trio, speciality vocalists; Barton and Franklin, in their refined musical act; and Payne's Bioscope, with fresh films. Barnard's Marionettes are here a second week with a new répertoire; Brown and Nevarro, quick-change artistes, are successful; and the dexterous juggling of Prince Kokin is quite a revelation in that art.

STOURBRIDGE.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—Manageress, Miss Maude Lynton.—Mr T. Morton Powell's company, with Greed of Gold, met with a cordial reception on Monday. Mr Wilson Summers as Arthur Errol was seen to advantage; Miss Daisy Halling did well as Dora; Mr Carthage Caldcleugh as Harry Hood proved clever; as did Mr Walter M. Cameron as Cull Sing. Miss Katie Lever as Patty Mayfield and Mr Hyland Shea as Conn Creamer were entertaining. Mr B. Fox deserves a special word for his effective portrayal of Tom Wolstead, the dumb man.

SWINDON.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Responsible Manager, Mr Alfred Manners.—The Girl from Japan is paying her first visit to this town through the medium of Mr Frederick E. Philpott's company, under that gentleman's personal direction. Charming dresses, attractive scenery, combined with a powerful chorus and augmented orchestra under the bâton of Mr Colet Dare, are among the leading features of this bright and refined musical comedy. Miss Madie Scott played the part of Maui with remarkable freshness, being equally successful in her vocal and terpsichorean efforts. Miss Nellie Jackson by her brightness and vivacity proved herself a charming exponent of Polly Perkins, and Miss Nellie Valentine undertook with exquisite grace and finish the part of Violet Meadows. Mr Chas. L. Ludlow, a comedian of unusual versatility, revelled in the part of Bingle, and Mr Ernest Spalding as the Rev. John Smith was simply irresistible. Mr S. Lockridge as Lord Allenbury was seen to distinct advantage, his songs being well received, and Mr Percy Baverstock gave a droll conception of the pompous General Baugh. Mr Alfred Wood made the most of the rôle of Sir Mulberry Flippington, and Mr Tom E. Sinclair and Miss Nellie Parker Dent did excellent work in their respective parts. The speciality dances given by the Misses Violet and Lillie English were deservedly applauded.

MUSIC HALL GOSSIP.

Mr Arthur Wing Pinero has said some hard things concerning the music halls, and has talked glibly and alliteratively of their sketches, in which he avers that the wit of the wash-tub runs riot with the pathos of the pantry. But he has never found fault with the ingenuity and ability shown in many of the speechless farces that now form such an attractive feature of many variety entertainments The authors of these are sometimes accused, nevertheless, of plagiarism of theatre pieces, but we should be much surprised if the Pinerolc doll incident, that is a principal feature in the witty author's latest farce at Wyndham's Theatre—A Wife Without a Smile—is ever annexed by any writer for the halls.

Some years since, in the early days of the London County Council, some indiscreet remarks were made by one of its prominent members concerning some marionettes at the Aquarium, and Mr Josiah Ritchie very properly brought an action for libel against the individual, and gained a triumphant verdict with heavy damages thrown in. We wonder what the Puritan party in London's governing body would have to say to the holder of a music hall licence who produced on the stage of his establment a similar incident to that so cleverly exploited at Wyndham's by the brilliant writer of The Second Mrs Tanqueray, Iris, and Letty?

At a board meeting of the Palace Company, held on Thursday, Mr Charles Morton's voluntary resignation, consequent upon the serious condition of his health, was received and most reluctantly accepted, the directors feeling bound to admit that his long-continued indisposition necessitated complete immunity from the arduous duties inseparable from the post he has filled for so many years with such conspicuous ability. After nearly sixty years spent in the world of entertainment, it is regarded by many as only fitting that some crowning farewell tribute should be rendered to him, and a testimonial performance on an elaborate scale has been projected to take place at an early date. Full particulars of the contemplated function, in which every representative artist of the theatre and music-hall stage would like to take part, will be published shortly. In the meantime, all communications in reference to the Charles Morton farewell matinée should be made to Mr Alfred Butt, Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

On inquiry at Mr Morton's residence in Oval-road, Regent's-park, on Thursday, we learnt that the veteran was "resting," and that he was being devotedly nursed by his wife and daughter, Mrs Ernest Meads. Though he has not left his bed for some days, there is nothing to cause alarm in his condition.

Mr Harry Tate on Monday presented a new comic scena to a large audience at the London Pavilion. The novelty has been written for him by Mr Wal Pink, and it is entitled Fishing. In a shady backwater, cleverly painted by Mr W. T. Hemsley, the josser angler seats himself in a punt and listens to stories from his professional assistant—known as George Washington—that would raise the dorsal fins ot any self-respecting roach or jack. He also throws his line in the wild, aimless way that one would expect, and catches the hook in various portions of his person. He is taught a lesson in the gentle art by a nipper on the bank, whose method is to cast snuff on the waters, and then to settle the fish when they rise to the surface to sneeze by knocking them on the head with a thick stick. The refreshment department is not neglected in Mr Tate's fishing excursion, for enough liquor is brought on the stage to stock an ordinary pub. There is much humour in the new skit, and it affords all the requisite opportunities for its exponent's development of his comedy powers.

Mr George Robey on Monday last played at football for Millwall against the Old Reserves of 1901, for the benefit of Elijah Moor, the groundsman. Play ruled fairly even for the first half, but just before the interval Graham scored for Millwall from a pass by George Robey, who figured at inside right. After changing ends the Old Reserves gave a fine display, Frost being conspicuous with several good shots. From a free kick, however, Bradbury obtained, and after running almost the length of the field, transferred to the "prime minister of mirth," who scored with a fast grounder, Millwall winning by two goals to nil.

Mr Robey is really a strong and effective footballer, but his efforts on the field are but rarely taken seriously by the crowd, as the following incident will prove. Once when he was playing the ball was in the air in front of the goal. George was looking at it, waiting to shoot it with his head. The goal-keeper was also looking at it, waiting to punch it with his fist. The ball came down, and so did Robey. The man at the posts had missed it, but his fist had landed on the jaw of the comedian, who was precluded for the moment from uttering any patter. The crowd yelled with delight. They thought it very diverting. Said some of the quidnuncs who professed to have an intimate acquaintance with him:—"George is very droll, you know, and is always trying to invent funny business, even when off the stage." As an athlete, however, George does not wish to be mistaken for a knockabout artiste, as he says he hasn't a ghost of a chance in this line of business with many of the clever gentlemen in the profession.

Mr Edgar Hyman is sailing for South Africa to-day, and there will be not a few friends to journey down with him and Mrs Hyman in special saloons to Southampton, where he will board the liner Norman. The young variety entrepreneur of our new and old colonies in the Dark Continent was able, fortunately, to combine business with pleasure during his tour in America in the early spring of this year, and in the course of his travels he has met with some of the most popular American, English, and Continental artistes. He has visited also during the last nine months every town of note in the United Kingdom, and his tour on the Continent has taken in the chief cities of France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, Hungary, and Belgium. Mr Hyman has made a large number of friends during his trip, and he hopes to renew his pleasant experiences in this country some time in 1907. He has made contracts with artistes for South Africa until 1910.

Miss Godwynne Earle, who retired temporarily from the stage on her marriage a few years since, will be renewing pleasant reminiscences of her earlier career in the character of Cinderella. She has been engaged by Mr F. W. Purcell to play the part of the cinderwench heroine in his Christmas production at the Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington. We may expect a delightful embodiment.

Mr Henry Tozer, of Brookdene, Ravensbourne-park, S.E., the well-known director of the Oxford, Tivoli, Metropolitan, and other halls, was married—en secondes noces—on Saturday, at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Trafalgar-square, to Miss Constance Janette Fry, daughter of the late Mr Thomas Fry, of London and Ilfracombe. The wedding was strictly private, and the honeymoon is being spent on the Continent.

Mr Jesse Sparrow is to be accorded his annual complimentary benefit at the Camberwell Palace on Tuesday, when a crowded audience will do honour to an excellent entertainment provided by one of the most up-to-date and hardworking variety managers. Fifty artistes have placed their services at his disposal, and among them are Dan Leno and Marie Lloyd.

The directors of the Blackpool Winter Gardens and Pavilion, Limited, after transferring £1,000 to the reserve fund and writing off stock £1,600, recommend a dividend of four per cent. for the year ended Sept. 30.

Mr Richard Thornton, resident director of the Empire Palace, Newcastle-on-Tyne, when recently approached as to buying a site in the vicinity of Newcastle for the purpose of erecting another hall, replied that his knowledge of the music hall world at present was such that instead of buying sites he would much prefer to be a comic singer.

The Ipswich New Coliseum is now making rapid progress, and the opening date is finally fixed for Dec. 5. The proprietors are the Ipswich Hippodrome Company, who are erecting a new hall at Coventry to be called the Coliseum, and one at Rugby. The same company have two temporary structures being erected in the neighbourhood of Ipswich, which will be opened end of November. The directors have had the offer of support from two well-known proprietors.

The Victoria Theatre, Broughton, has this week again undergone a change of management, Mr James M. Hardie, jun., the secretary of the Syndicate, again taking the place of Mr C. Smith-Wilkes, who has resigned. Although the bi-nightly variety entertainments of excellent quality have been well attended since July last, when dramatic performances were discontinued, it has been decided as soon as the present engagements will permit to return to the dramatic performances, which the inhabitants of the district would seem to favour.

The Salford Council had laid down emphatically the principle that there must be no intoxicants sold at theatres at which variety performances are given, but on Monday the Watch Committee recommended the Council to vary its decision in the case of the Victoria Theatre, Broughton, on the ground that an undertaking had been given to substitute dramatic for variety performances within six months. The arguments used in favour of the resolution were that engagements had been made by the management for many months ahead, that whilst they were agreeable to return to the drama they could not do so immediately without sustaining heavy losses, and that even if they were given six months to make the change the loss would be very considerable—one speaker put it at £1,500. The recommendation was adopted by 22 votes to 18, so that the Victoria Theatre will get its excise licence pending the change.

Messrs Broadhead's Hippodrome, at Bury, was opened with a matinée on Monday. The whole scheme of converting what was known as the Phillips Hall into a place of public entertainment, such as this modern and up-to date Hippodrome now is, has been undertaken by the well-known Manchester theatre owners mentioned above. The cost of the alterations is estimated at between £3,000 and £4,000, and there will be seating accommodation for about 2,000 people. Around the hall is a commodious circle, the frontage of which has been artistically finished in fibrous plaster. The ground floor is well arranged into pit and stalls. The ceiling has been panelled, and the decorations give the building a bright and attractive appearance. The whole of the seating has been done in old gold plush, and the stage curtain is of the same material. Every precaution has been taken against fire, and the building is well supplied with hydrants. The cinématograph case at the rear of the building is stated to be absolutely fire-proof. There are three pay entrances, and four additional exits, all into Garden-street, so that the hall can be very quickly emptied. The building throughout is fitted with electric light.

The acting-manager is Mr Percy Broadhead, and the musical director is Mr Arthur W. Parry. The opening performance drew a large audience, and everyone present was delighted with the excellence of the arrangements made, not only for their ease and comfort, but also for their entertainment. The items are announced by means of the electric light thrown on figures behind a glass screen. The entertainment was contributed by Billy Richardson, the favourite stump orator; the Okito Family, with a wonderful performance; the Itrams, in a perch act; Miss Cordite, lasso manipulator, from Buffalo Bill's show; the Sisters Lytton, well-trained vocalists; Mr and Mrs Clifford Bronte, in a comedy sketch, Saucy Maud; Post Mason, American baritone; Tell and Tell, comedy acrobats; Johnson and Bert, comedians; and Harry Maxim, comedian. Animated pictures also formed an attraction.

Mr Richard Thornton, of the Newcastle Empire, did a good stroke of business when he secured the Hebburn Colliery band to appear at both performances on Tuesday. As is well known this band was successful in winning the £1,000 trophy and championship at the recent big contest held at the Crystal Palace, and the appearance of the victors on the night in question attracted crowded audiences, who gave the band an enthusiastic reception. They played the test piece which won them the championship, and as an encore gave a Scotch selection. At the conclusion of their performance the president of the band announced from the stage that Mr Thornton had given a donation of £5 towards their funds, for which he desired to thank him, as well as for his great kindness to the members of the band when in London.

Mr Will H. Boardman since coming to Newcastle to take over the resident-management of the Pavilion has made himself very popular with all sections of frequenters of the favourite hall, and more particularly with cyclists and members of athletic clubs. He is president of a well-known local cycling club, the Adelphi to wit, and recently gave a handsome silver challenge trophy for competition. This is known as the Boardman Cup, which was presented to the winner at a smoking concert held in Newcastle on Wednesday. Mr Boardman intended to take the chair on this occasion, but was prevented from doing so, as on that particular evening he was being initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry.

On Saturday last the second annual contest for the Yorkshire Humourists' Challenge Shield and Gold Medal took place in the Drill Hall, Rotherham. The entrants numbered thirty-four, twenty-two of whom took part in the contest. Mr W. Pickles, of Rochdale, occupied the onerous position of judge, and his awards were as follows:—First, Arthur Bearle, Manchester, shield and gold medal; second and third divided, Harry Morris, Hightown, and Tom Downey, York; fourth, Fred Taylor, Harpurhey; fifth and sixth, divided between A. B. Millard, Manchester; and Will Douglas, York. Of the others, special mention must be made of Joe Clarkson, Maltby, and Charles E. Ernest, Manchester.

Recently in the Southern Police-court, Dublin, before Mr Drury, a young man named Valentine Harte, described as a student, and giving an address in Upper Rathmines, was charged at the instance of Mr Charles Jones, manager of the Tivoli, Dublin, with having conducted himself in a disorderly manner at this theatre. The accused endeavoured to upset the queue system of admission to the theatre, and when remonstrated with he violently assaulted Mr Jones, pulled a cigar from his mouth, and cut his lip. Mr Drury said the queue system of admission to the theatres would be upheld by the court, as it was a great assistance to the police. Mr Jones said he had been manager of the theatre for the past five years, and this was the first case he had in court. Mr Drury considered this very creditable. He fined the accused £1.

The summonses against the Oxford came on for hearing, before Mr Kennedy, at Marlborough-street police-court on Tuesday, the accusation being that a sketch called The Belle of the Orient was produced there without letters patent or licence from the Lord Chamberlain. Mr Bodkin prosecuted on behalf of the Theatrical Managers' Association; and Mr J. P. Grain and Mr Walter Payne defended on behalf of the London Entertainments' Protection Association.

Last week Mr Kennedy decided that the piece was a stage play, and adjourned the hearing to consider the amount of the penalty to be imposed. In giving his decision, Mr Kennedy said other cases previously heard gave him no guide as to the amount of the penalty, each one depending on its merits. In this instance the proceedings were against a wealthy corporation, and the fine would be fixed at £5 for each day concerned, amounting in the aggregate to £120. He made no order for costs. There will be an appeal.

Mr Will Spearman, the popular manager of the Islington Empire, has been somewhat disconcerted during the week at the crowds of young ladies—some very young—who have laid claim to female beauty. They have thronged the wings, and have invaded the stage in large numbers in order that their pretensions to loveliness of feature might be adjudicated upon by their neighbours among the audience. Some of those entering the competition are mites of four or five years of age. All of the ladies are led on to the stage by Mr Spearman, who puts them under the limelight, in order to give those in front the necessary opportunity of expressing their opinions as to the merits of each candidate. Mr Spearman has to gauge the strength of the popular vote by the volume of the applause, and his is certainly no enviable task. But he has his reward in the immense business done through the Islington beauty show, which is exciting great interest in the neighbourhood.

The late Mr Benjamin Webster, of the Haymarket and Adelphi, was among the earliest prosecutors of the music halls for the production of sketches — or, rather, we should say, for the infringement of the Theatres Act, the nominal prosecutor being Mr Horace Wigan, a brother of Alfred Wigan. In his day, says the late Mr John Hollingshead, in his book, "My Lifetime," farces "like The School for Tigers, at the Adelphi, and Lend Me Five Shillings, at the Haymarket, though provocative of mirth to the verge of apoplexy, were disfigured by gags that could only be excused on the ground that they suited the taste of the period." The chief offenders in these pieces were Wright and J. B. Buckstone.

Mr Dan Leno, who was absent from the London Pavilion on Monday and Tuesday, returned in capital form on Wednesday. It is understood that Mr Leno's particular friend and relative, Johnny Danvers, is engaged for Drury-lane pantomime in the place of the lamented Herbert Campbell. Leno and Danvers have been associated before in comedy and farce many a time and oft, and the engagement is a decidedly happy one.

Miss Harriett Vernon was unable to appear through indisposition three nights of last week at the Empire, Belfast. Mr Wm. Gibson, the well-known Belfast comedian, deputised with much success, being such a favourite that Mr Brock retained his services for the remainder of the week.

Miss Edith Muir and Mr Hubert Bartlett have this week completed a run of 104 weeks with their répertoire of comedy duologues with only one week vacant. During this period they have successfully produced three duologues, and on their return to London in three weeks' time, they will put on a fourth.

A new kettle act will be introduced by Messrs Cochran and Co. at the Royal, Holborn, on Monday next, and this latest bouilloire magique is said to vary its programme slightly from the performances seen elsewhere. Messrs Cochran, by the way, are responsible for the introduction to England of the new Hippodrome sensation "Zutka."

Mr George Leyton has been specially engaged to appear at the Lyceum, at Christmas, in a sketch that has been specially purchased for him by Mr Thomas Barrasford. The subject is one that has never been exploited on the variety stage before, and will therefore give the popular actor-vocalist an entirely new experience. The music is by Mr Bennett Scott.

Speaking of Mr George Leyton we are in a position to state that the sums obtained at the various halls through the sale of his songs have been given to individual Crimean veterans in dire poverty, and have not been sent to any general fund for the relief of necessitous heroes of the campaign before Sebastopol.

Miss Nita Clavering and Mr Charles Conway gave a show turn of their new quick-change sketch, Joining the Company, by Neville Lynn, at the Empress, Brixton, on Tuesday evening, and were such a success that they were immediately booked by Mr Nelson Francis for the whole of the week. The sketch, which is far above the average, is admirably played, and gives Miss Clavering ample scope for some delightful comedy acting and vocalism, which proves an excellent foil to the varied and clever quick-change impersonations presented by Mr Conway.

"The Pierrot's Romance," a tragedy in a nutshell, that was produced at the Alhambra on Monday night, gives the Italian pantomimist, Signor Rossi, a great opportunity to show the perfection of his art. His first London appearance was in the Carmen ballet, and he has remained at the popular house in Leicester-square ever since. The son and grandson of actors and dancers, Signor Rossi was born in Rome. He has travelled in all parts of the world, and is a noted ballet master. In face and figure he is particularly well suited to the whimsical character of Pierrot—agile, passionate, and quaint. His facial expression is always excellent and his make-up is not at all exaggerated.

Miss Julia Reeves, who plays the little French milliner, in The Pierrot's Romance, has been engaged at the Alhambra since she was a child, having made her first appearance in the ballet called Chicago. She left the Alhambra some time ago to appear in pantomime, but returned to her old "home" after an absence of two years.

The many friends ot Mr George Mayo will be sorry to hear that he is lying very ill in Newcastle Infirmary, in the Newcastle Ward, where he would be pleased to see or hear from them.

Messrs Jordan and Harvey, who open on Monday at the Foresters', have a good reputation as Hebrew character impersonators. They only arrived in England last week, after having concluded a most successful engagement at Keith's, Union-square, New York, and throughout the Keith circuit. Mr Jules Jordan, one of the partners, appeared at the Duke of York's Theatre, with Hoyt's Stranger of New York company, in 1898.

Messrs. A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott have every reason to be gratified by the demand for their special pantomime songs, particularly Tom Costello's pretty Jap love song, "Farewell, my little Yo San" and "Have you seen my girl?" The latter has an irresistible lilt, and bids fair to rival in popularity the same authors' ubiquitous ditty, "There's a girl wanted there."

The Licensing Committee will sit on Wednesday, Nov. 2, 1904, and the following day, if necessary, at the Sessions House, Clerkenwell, at 11·0 a.m. on each day, and on Friday, Nov. 11, 1904, and the following day, if necessary, at the Sessions House, Newington, at 11·0 a.m. on each day, for the purpose of hearing applications for licences, in order that a report may be made thereon to the Council, sitting as the licensing authority, at the County Hall, Spring-gardens, on Friday, Nov. 25, 1904, and the following day, if necessary, at 10 0 a.m. on each day.

Applications in respect of premises situated on the north of the Thames will be heard at the Sessions House, Clerkenwell, and those in respect of premises on the south of the Thames at the Sessions House, Newington, but the committee reserve to themselves the power to hear any particular application at either of the above places, or at such other place as they may hereafter determine upon.

Among the new licences applied for on the North side of the Thames the most important are those sought by Mr Oswald Stoll and Mr Thomas Barrasford. The former asks for a music and dancing permit for the London Coliseum in Chandos-street and St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross, which is expected to open just before Christmas; and the latter requests the Council to grant the necessary permission for the running of the New Lyceum as a variety theatre, which is now rapidly rising on the site of the historic house consecrated for years to the dramatic art of the chief of English-speaking actors, Sir Henry Irving. Tempora mutantur!

In the large district south of the Thames Mr Temple De La Pole Temple West is making application for a music and dancing licence for the Surrey Theatre, which it is proposed to call the Surrey Empire and Palace of Varieties. Mr Jack De Frece, having changed the character of the entertainment at the Metropole, Camberwell, wants the privilege of smoking. He is also applying for a music and dancing licence for the Grand Theatre, Fulham. The site of the new music hall projected by Mr Walter Stephens at Lewisham is at the junction of Limes-grove and Lewisham High-street, and as application is made for the necessary licence we may take it as the present intention of the promoters to open it before the dawn of another licensing session.

A link with the past is snapped by the extinction of the licence of Gatti's, Charing-cross, known also as the Arches. Formerly it was called the Hungerford Palace, and flourished until a couple of years since as the "favourite family resort." The alterations required by the County Council and the safety requisitions demanded by that body could not be carried through, owing to the structure being mainly composed of a railway arch, and therefore the owners have perforce closed it as a place of public entertainment. On its boards many of the present stars of the variety firmament have gained their earliest experiences. It was a house in which the chorus song had a great vogue, and some of the most popular refrains of the day were heard on its stage. The audience at Gatti's always adopted a familiar attitude towards its favourites, but it was the familiarity that bred esteem.

Miss Marie Lloyd returns from a tour in the provinces to-morrow, and will make her reappearance, to the delight of her hosts of admirers, at the Tivoli on Monday. We need not say that the effervescent and widely popular comedienne will have the heartiest of welcomes.

The 376th meeting of the executive committee of the M.H.A.R.A. was held on Tuesday afternoon, Mr Harry Mountford presiding. The secretary reported that eighteen new members had joined during the past week, making the total number enrolled since the commencement of 10,614. The procedure at the general meeting was again considered, and other matters were dealt with, after which the meeting was adjourned.

We would remind members of the M.H.A.R.A. that the eighth annual general meeting will be held on Tuesday next at 11 30, at Gatti's, Westminster-bridge-road, Mr Harry Mountford will be chairman. Admission can be secured only by the presentation of green cards of membership.

The Water Rats paid a flying visit on Tuesday to the Brighton Hippodrome, to which establishment their matinée performance attracted a very large audience. Among the extra turns given was one by Mr George Fuller Golden, who is a prominent member of the White Rats organisation of America. During the interval Mr Phil Ray, on behalf of the Water Rats, spoke a few grateful words in recognition of the kindness of Mr Tom Barrasford in lending the house to the fraternity, whose charitable funds are largely drawn upon by distressed members of the profession.

"The Mad Sick Kettle" is the title of the skit on the exhibition of Mr Ralph Dean at the Palace, which has been exploited by Messrs Walton and Leater, who have scored a great success therein. The parody is quite a laughing stimulant. Whether the trick of the "world's worst wizards" is explained scientifically, with chemical reasons and laws, is what we hope to find out shortly.

Mr Eric Calcott (who, with his charming wife, Miss Amy Leggett, has just produced a clever musical act, to be exploited under the name of the Calcotts) is a worker of indefatigable energy, and as a proof may be mentioned the fact that he is the author of an invaluable book to architects and engineers which has just been placed on the market by Messrs Simpkin, Marshall, and Co., the London agents for the printer and publisher, Mr W. C. Coles, of Cirencester. High encomiums from professional men of repute have already been bestowed upon Mr Calcott regarding the general usefulness of the work in question. Mr Calcott has just made arrangements with his publisher regarding a second book, which will be placed upon the market within a few weeks.

Messrs James and Caselli, a couple of banjoists new to London, have been getting encores at the Alhambra this week with long, classical duets. Their répertoire includes selections from Carmen, William Tell, and one of Liszt's Rhapsodies. While they do not dispense with the loud and showy effects obtained by the use of the plectrum, they go in for "picking" the banjo in all their finer work. Mr Caselli is a brother of Miss Cora Caselli, the dancer, whose high-kicking used to be the feature of her performance. He went into partnership with Mr James last June, and they made their début in Birmingham. They have wisely resisted the temptation of "strengthening" the turn by wearing grotesque clothes or introducing humorous business, and their music is appreciated none the less for the unassuming manner of the young banjoists.

Miss Ethel Walker, the charming society entertainer, at a popular concert on Tuesday, in the King's Hall, Fulham, had an enthusiastic ovation for her humorous songs at the piano, and at the close Chieftain Ranginia, of the Maories, N.Z., personally came forward to offer his congratulations and shook hands warmly with this promising young artist, expressing a hope that he would be hearing her again before his return to his native colony. On Monday next Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, is to open a two days' Continental Bazaar at the Victoria Hall, Ealing, and the Mayoress of the borough has secured the services of this young lady to give her refined humorous entertainment at the piano for both of the afternoon concerts.

Everyone interested in the employment of children on the stage should send three stamps to the publishing offices of The Era for a copy of the Act which came into force on Oct. 1.

Miss Millie Hylton returns to town for the season Monday next, after a tour of ten weeks, and will make a stay in London of six months.

Mr A. F. Parnell, the new assistant-manager at the London, Shoreditch, is the son of Mr Fred Russell, the well-known ventriloquial humorist. Previous to coming to Shoreditch four months ago, Mr Parnell was for four years connected with Collins's, half of which period was spent as secretary to Mr Jack De Frece.

Members of the M.H.A.R.A. are informed that the revenue account for the past year is now ready, and can be obtained from the offices of the Association, or it will be sent on receipt of stamped addressed envelope.

Mr Clifford King (Mr Walter Gibbons's recently appointed general manager) was presented by Mr Georges Hackenschmidt, prior to the latter's departure for an Australian tour, with a valuable thirty-hour carriage clock, having a massive solid silver case and morocco handle and support suitably inscribed.

Will H. Fox, "Paddywhisk," was compelled to cancel his appearance at the Theatre Royal, Oldham, this week on account of illness. Mr Fox is confined to his bed at his Brixton residence, but hopes to resume his engagements shortly.

Caicedo, the king of the wire, finished his engagement at Barcelona on Sunday, and goes direct to Paris. He opens at Oldham on the 17th, following on a provincial tour.

The executors of the late Mr Gilbert Hastings Macdermott have been directed by the Court of Chancery to sell the long-established agency business, carried on at 6, Upper St. Martin's-lane, W.C., including the assets, the goodwill, and the book debts. Intending purchasers are invited to communicate with Mr W. H. Pannell, 13, Basinghall-street, one of the executors.

Mr Chas. Melvin, for the past three years manager and secretary to Mr T. G. Transfield, has resigned his position to accept an offer from Mr T. C. Dorling as general manager of what has been known as the Victoria Palace, Sheerness. It has been rechristened the Coliseum, and it is intended to reopen it in November as a variety hall. It has a stage 40ft. deep and a 30ft. opening, and is capable of holding nearly 2,000 persons. Structural alterations are taking place, and when these are finished the house will be one of the finest halls in Kent. It speaks well for the good feeling existing between Mr Transfield and Mr Melvin when it is announced that Mr Transfield has kindly granted his late manager a complimentary benefit, which takes place on the 14th inst.

For the enlightenment of all who are interested in the details of the French conquest of the hitherto unbeaten mare Pretty Polly there is at present being shown on the Urban Bioscope at the Alhambra a particularly fine picture of the race for the Prix du Conseil Municipal. The series includes scenes in the paddock (with many striking photographs of famous French and English sportsmen), the start, the racing, and the finish.

At the Alhambra there will be shown for the first time on Monday a film the production of which has been the result of many months of elaborate preparation. Far more extraordinary as a fantastic conception than the well remembered "Trip to the Moon," the new film has not yet been named, and the difficult task of finding a suitable title of not more than three words is to be submitted to the public. Visitors to the Alhambra during next week will be furnished with coupons which they will be invited to fill in with a suggested title and place in boxes provided for the purpose. To the sender of the selected title a prize of ten guineas will be awarded.

Miss Fanny Fields has added several new stories this week to her turn at the Tivoli and the Oxford, and she is now "going" with all her accustomed laughter and applause. There is one sentence in the little American's patter that is rather neatly put. "What is an idea?" she asks in her comic Dutch way, and answers the question herself—"An idea is the same as a dream, but you don't wake up!"

Miss Reba Kaufman, the tiny American toe dancer, who made her appearance at the Alhambra last Monday, wears a particularly pretty and cleverly-made frock. It is turquoise blue chiffon, clings to the figure, but gives the impression at the same time of a constant flutter and movement. It is covered by a sparkling silver gauze, and a simple knot of blue ribbon in her curly hair greatly adds to the effect.

Messrs C. W. Murphy and Dan Lipton have written for John E. Coyle a special number for his Palace engagement. There is also a big demand for their droll song entitled "Bed," which is being sought for on all sides for pantomime. The music hall rights of this song are held by Mr Morny Cash, who has been exploiting the number with great success all over the provinces.

The new sketch presented on Tuesday evening at the Tivoli, for the first time in London, derived its chief importance from the fact that Miss Maggie Moore made her début on the London music hall stage in the chief part. The sketch was called The Chinese Question, and though it has nothing to do with that matter as it has arisen in South Africa, still it deals with the supply of domestic labour—a problem that afflicts New York in a greater degree than it does London. An irascible old gentleman dismisses all his white servants, and is supplied with Chinese, who are, however, sham, the dismissed Irish cook disguising herself as the Chinese help and a local butcher boy following her example and making up as Ah Sin. Their instrumental performances and their singing drive their employers crazy, and the ruse cures the demand of the irascible old gentleman for foreign domestics. Miss Maggie Moore, who has travelled to all parts of the world in the drama Struck Ile, appeared as a stage-struck slavey of Irish proclivities, and gave burlesque imitations of Italian opera. She also sang an Irish song, and her vim and vivacity were as conspicuous as ever. She was ably assisted by Mr R. Roberts, a clever young actor, who has supported her on the theatre stage in Australia and elsewhere. There were other capable people in the cast, but the names were not given. The sketch requires to be liberally pruned before it can be acceptable on the music hall stage.

Mr Curtis-Bennett, on Wednesday at Marylebone Police-court, had before him a young man giving the name of Arthur George Spry, whom he committed for trial on various charges of robbery. The magistrate remarked that he had received a letter from the comedian, Mr A. G. Spry, dated from the Hippodrome, Liverpool, in which he stated that while performing at the Grand, Clapham, last June twelvemonths he ascertained that a person using the name of A. G. Spry had been trying to sell a copyright song of his. Recently he received a request from an unknown person at the New Cross Empire to send on the promised remittance, and he (the writer) supposed the person calling himself "A. G. Spry" must know something about that matter also. Mr Spry has evidently suffered much annoyance through his double.

THE LONDON MUSIC HALLS.

THE PALACE.

The enterprise of the management at this ever-popular hall is proved by the fact that, since our last notice of the variety entertainment here, almost every item has been changed. There are several "versions" of the magic kettle now being presented to the London public; but that at the Palace claims to be the "first and original" one. The kettle and the marvels achieved by its aid are so famous now that we need only mention that the feats performed with it at the Palace—the drying and cleaning of a handkerchief in a hat, the petrifying of grapes, the hardening of a porter-house steak by cooking it on a block of ice, and the lighting of a fire upon the same block are performed with striking effect, the pleasing nature of the exhibition being increased by an extremely attractive female assistant, who helps the professor in demonstrating the kettle's powers. The magic kettle is certainly the most wonderful, the most curious, and the most astonishing adaptation of scientific discovery to entertainment purposes that has been seen on the music hall stage for years. It holds a very important position in the bill at the Palace, where the astounding—indeed, almost incredible—things done by its aid are watched with intense interest, and applauded most enthusiastically. An item of great beauty and ingenuity of arrangement is Mdlle. De Dio's creation, "Terpsichore's Dream." It is an almost bewildering combination of female grace with "magic lantern" views; exquisite patterns, forms, and colours being displayed, while Mdlle. De Dio's shapely figure, attired in pretty costumes, is seen mingled with a succession of flying birds, flames, and brilliant tracery. One scene represents the bottom of the ocean. A diver descends a rope ladder; and immediately a fair water nymph appears from the bed of the ocean. Mdlle. De Dio's entertainment is artistic, effective, and agreeably varied; and it well deserves the success which it attains. Miss Maud Courtney, by her arch and humorous personality, wins the hearts of the audience completely. Beginning with a medley of old American songs, which she sings with dainty expressiveness, she sends the house into roars and ripples of laughter by some funny anecdotes, and concludes with a pathetic recitation, delivered with delightful tact and cleverness. Madame Mealy is the essence of gaiety and chic. Her laughter in the "chanson Fourire" is bewitchingly spontaneous and natural; and her imitation of a half-tipsy man in "Bon Soir, Madame La Lune," is truthful without being offensive. She is a most attractive and exhilarating artist, and deservedly holds a good place in the Palace bill. The Dandies are four pleasing vocalists who, with the assistance of a fifth at the piano, give the "Torpedo and the whale" song from Olivette, "Excelsior," and other ditties in admirable and agreeable style, and have a very cordial reception. Alexandre is a wonderful bird imitator, and his mimicry of the thrush, the blackbird, the goldfinch, and the canary is most faithful, his comical reproductions of the cries of ducks and geese creating much amusement. The Palace Girls supply a smart and dashing turn. Eight in number, they march and countermarch, and dance duos of an extremely spirited character, also tripping it lightly in line and in "fours." Burke and M'Voy are genuine humourists, their drolleries being done with an entire absence of effort which much increases their effect. They are also remarkable acrobats, one of them accomplishing a "double pirouette somersault," which brings down the house. Miss Belle Davis and her "piccaninnies" are immensely popular, and their performance is certainly original and amusing. The dancing of the dusky lads is something extraordinary, and the funny details they introduce elicit hearty laughter. The views shown by the aid of the Bioscope are all new since our last visit. They include some most interesting pictures of the recent invasion of Essex, showing the method of landing the troops in big boats. The effects of a first cigarette on a youthful smoker are graphically depicted in another film, and the pranks of three mischievous little maids are extremely diverting. Other views represent some fancy shots at billiards, and the crew of the Japanese man-of-war Asama ranged in lines on the deck of the vessel. Mr Herman Finck's excellent orchestra performs in capital style selections from Sullivan's Merchant of Venice music and Missa's "Normande" march. The Palace is doing "big business," and the house full is the rule nightly.

THE BEDFORD.

The alterations contemplated by Mr B. Pearce Lucas at this popular hall are in no way necessitated by County Council requirements, but are initiated by him for the greater comfort of his audiences, which, we are glad to say, are larger than ever. The big attraction of the current week's bill is Mr Geo. Leyton, who has been associated lately with successful scenas in praise of the Services. In The Boys of the Chelsea School he sounded in broad significant phrases the virtues of our younger soldiers, worthy descendants of their sires, who faced Russian and Afghan in the two chief wars of the nineteenth century. Now he sings with enthusiastic emphasis of "Britannia's Babes," who are "rocked in the cradle of the ocean." Their toys are the cutlass and the cannon, and their bull-dog breed will out. The verses are well written, and Mr Leyton's fine figure and handsome presence are well set off by a post-captain's uniform. He sings with real grit, and infuses a deal of brio into a number that is in every way excellent. He is supported on the quarter-deck—a well-painted scene—by twenty-four local boys, and the audience cheer lustily at the conclusion of the scena—so lustily, indeed, that the refrain had to be repeated twice on the night of our visit. A great favourite at the Bedford is Miss Jessie Preston—one of the celebrated Sisters Preston—who exhibits a deal of broad comedy in her Irish version of "Bedelia," which she follows with just an "illigant" taste of a jig, just to show that she has not forgotten the step. Her first number concerns the adventures of Mary Jane in London and other places. A generous measure of encouragement is meted out to Miss Fredrica and her wonderful performing terriers—Scotch, fox, black-and-tan, and other varieties. Three of the canines accomplish a circus act on a revolving table, and join gleefully in a skipping-rope performance, in which one of them throws somersaults. The diminutive pony exploited by its trainer is quite a little pet, and paces with her in the cake-walk. Altogether a very pretty show. The Woodbee Wonders, who were noticed in these columns last week, are repeating their success at the Bedford; and Mr W. H. Perrette and Miss Bessie Shelley are quite popular in their original comedy quick-change act Teasing the General. Mr Perrette's wide and extensive experience as a leading actor stands him in good stead, and a prettier and more piquante "tease" than Miss Shelley can scarcely be imagined. Her buoyancy is inspiriting, and her songs and dances are full of animation and gaiety. Mr Charles Beanland (Beanland and Bath) is making what we believe is his first appearance in London solus. He assumes a wooden expression which is extremely quaint, and his make-up is eloquent of the modern "gabey." His utterance is distinct and clear, and his voice reaches the furthest corner of the gallery. He is well suited—we are not referring to his clothes—in his song, "Return good for evil," which has more subtle humour than his second number, "Is there anything funny in that?" Mr Beanland's success is very decided. The Babusian Brothers, who are termed the wonderful Continental pot-pourri artistes—a very vague description—do some clever head and hand balancing up and down a staircase, and other gymnastic feats of theirs are heartily applauded. Mr Ted Saunders, a new mimic, essays an imitation of Mr Gus Elen in his song "What's bred in the bone." There is very little finish about it, but the tones of the celebrated coster comedian's voice are fairly realised. The sketch of the week is The Lights of the Harbour, played by Mr Fred Eustace, Miss May Eustace, and company. The sailor hero is temporarily estranged from his sweetheart by the machinations of the villain, unconsciously assisted by the lady's sister. This unfortunate victim of the heartlessness of the villain is eventually murdered by him, and the onus of the crime thrown upon the shoulders of the virtuous naval lieutenant, who clears himself and receives promotion ust before the final fall of the curtain. Mr Fred Eustace plays in manly fashion the part of the virtuous lieutenant; and Miss May Eustace cleverly doubles the part of the heroine and her unfortunate sister. The other features of a capital entertainment are the films of Ruffell's Bioscope and the entertainment of Miss Maud Turner, comedienne. Mr A. F. Lovesy is Mr Pearce Lucas's courteous and diligent manager.

SOUTH LONDON.

There can be no doubt as to the success of the two-houses-a-night plan, or of the general policy adopted by those responsible for the government of the popular London-road hall, for its prosperity was never greater than at the present moment. For a few pence an excellent entertainment and a good seat can be secured by the humble toilers who mainly constitute the audience, and that these are appreciated is evident by the large audiences that pack the old-established house twice nightly. The programme which is presented this week by the astute and energetic manager, Mr Frank Weeks, is especially strong in turns that mostly make for hearty laughter, the sensational sketch for once making way for a couple of comic playlets that exactly fulfil the purpose for which they were written. The first of these is The New Doctor, a humorous trifle for which Mr Paul Courtney and his company are responsible. The principal characters in this are an eccentric individual who poses as a doctor and a youth who feigns illness, and the many strange antics indulged in by the couple never miss fire, continuous hilarity prevailing while they occupy the stage. A lady also aids considerably in the fun-making, and the trifle was most cordially received. Another comic playlet is that given by Rice, Rose, Davis, and the Half, and entitled Geese Geese, Goose Goose. In this a couple of niggers just released from gaol successfully fool a sportsman, playing all manner of ludicrous pranks with him until they are captured by a diminutive policeman with the aid of a knowing dog. The quartet who present this amusing little sketch work hard and with every success, unrestrained merriment prevailing throughout. An exceedingly popular item in the bill is the clever and amusing little interlude supplied by Kelly and Gillette, Fun in a Billiard Room. The comedian of the duo who impersonates a tramp is responsible for some most laughter-provoking business with a soda-water syphon, his grotesque appearance and antics generally largely helping along the success of the turn. The talented couple are exceptionally smart acrobats, and their wonderful somersaults and other difficult feats are accomplished with apparent ease and are loudly acclaimed. Musical Silvo gives an instrumental act that is varied and decidedly entertaining. His first contribution is a much appreciated selection of popular airs on the concertina; and he also scores heavily with his rendering of the pretty "Good-bye, little yellow bird," on the "Silvo" chimes, a tuneful instrument of which the performer is the inventor. The favourite song from Florodora, "Oh, my Dolores," is next given by the versatile musician on the melodious bamboo bells, of which he is also the originator, and he concludes his clever and heartily applauded turn by a medley of familiar tunes on the musical glasses, in the playing of which he is especially expert. Griff, the droll clown juggler, performs his tricks to a running accompaniment of jocular remarks, and skilfully catches oranges thrown from the audience on forks held in his mouth. His "spoof" business at the conclusion of this portion of his entertainment amused greatly on Monday evening, and much applause was bestowed on his clever pupil Alpha, for his smart manipulation of a number of hoops. The Harrison Brothers have a smartly written duet in "Studying hard for the Bar," and their "Walking" song is also an amusing item. Their patter is always comical and well delivered, and they excel as step-dancers, their entire turn being decidedly entertaining. The Sisters Wingrove, a couple of dainty duettists and dancers, becomingly gowned in pale blue, warble blithely of a certain stylish miss who is all the rage on Broadway, and are the recipients of prolonged plaudits for their rendering of "You don't want to flirt about with other girls," and its accompanying dance, a well-executed and attractive exhibition. An extra turn on Monday evening was given by a gentlemen who created considerable merriment with "The yokel's hunt" and "The mud walk at Giles's ball," a couple of comic effusions that contain much humour. Other popular entertainers in the programme are Booker and Narbis, comedy artistes, who are always amusing; Edgar Budden, an expert bone soloist and skate dancer; and Miss Flo Majilton, comedienne. The excellent band here is under the careful guidance of Mr Charles E. Howells.

AT the Hippodrome, Stoke, this week, the premier position is held by Auto Atlas in a really marvellous strong show. One of his acts consists of lifting a motor-car with his teeth, the car at the time containing five occupants. Mason and Bart on the triple bars present a novel and clever turn, which is much appreciated. Boswell, "the furniture shifter," contributes a balancing turn, which is both clever and amusing; the Countees sing admirably, their voices blending most harmoniously; Connie Williams is a comedienne and dancer of much ability; Tom Brantford, the quaint American, entertains his audiences splendidly, his imitations of whistles, &c., being exceptionally good; Jennie Belmore is a vivacious comedienne, and dances smartly; and Harry Roy and Celia Fenton in their musical comedy act are clever and amusing. Collins' British Bioscope shows a capital picture, namely, "Day and Night in a Steel Works." On Sunday next Mr. Collins, with his usual generosity, gives the full proceeds of a sacred concert for the benefit of the North Stafford Hospitals. A splendid programme has been arranged, and a packed house is certain.

MESSRS WICKHAM AND WARD visited Carmarthen, and gave a first-class variety entertainment at the Assembly Rooms. Mr Bert Wickham, the champion wrestler and well-known Welsh athlete, gave splendid exhibitions of muscle posing, ball punching, wrestling, and feats of strength. Messrs Pearce and Ward gave amusing exhibitions of comic boxing and a couple of dances and comic songs. Mr Leavill gave a most acceptable song and step dance, while little Dot Ward fairly enraptured the audience with her songs and dances, the cake walk being exceptionally good.

MESSRS FRANCIS, DAY, AND HUNTER have this week accepted, for early publication, a new song with the pretty title "You are the Flower in the Garden of My Heart." It is written by John P. Harrington, and wedded to appropriate music from the graceful pen of J. Airlie Dix.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of Brown's Bronchial Troches. People troubled with a hacking cough, a slight cold, or bronchial affections cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious pulmonary and asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government stamp around each box. Sold by Chemists everywhere, 1s. 1½d. per Box.—[ADVT.]

CHAT WITH MR. CUTHBERT CLARK.

Some people seem to imagine that the work of the conductor of an orchestra is very simple indeed, and that it merely consists of a variety of mechanical movements with a baton. Such an impression is, of course, entirely wrong. There is an art in conducting, and, indeed, something more than an art. Perhaps it would be right to say that the director of an orchestra, apart altogether from his musical qualifications, should be able to exert some psychological influence over the whole body of players whose individual efforts he is controlling. To put it in another way, he should have music in his eye—at least while he is wielding the wand of his office—and it must be possible for him, however, in a degree, unconsciously he does it, to instantaneously transmit to other minds his idea of tone and time. Probably the conductor employs a kind of invisible magnetic current, a chord of forceful sympathy which causes forty or fifty men to throw heart, soul, and hand for the time being into a unity of melody.

While it is necessary that a conductor be endowed with musical attainments of a high order, it is hardly less necessary that the science of memorisation should play a prominent part in his studies as well as in the latter work which devolves upon those studies. In this and other respects we can point to Mr Cuthbert Clark, the musical director of the Empire Theatre, as an able exponent of his art. Mr Clark's professional career gives evidence not only of unique musical talents, but of great concentration and attention to the work which he, at an early age, determined should be the moving spirit to lead him onward to advancement. Born in London in 1869, he spent some part of his early life at a French school. As a budding musician he claims to have been self-taught, though a later period of study at the Guildhall School of Music proved of great assistance to him. His first professional engagement of any note was as principal second violin and pianist repetiteur in the Empire orchestra, at one time under the directorship of M. Hervé, the composer of Chilperic, Little Faust, and the first ballet produced at the Empire. At this period Mr Clark was still receiving lessons on the violin from M. Franc, a Belgian professor of that instrument. On the retirement of M. Hervé in November, 1891, Herr Wenzl was appointed conductor, and Mr Clark was promoted to the position of sub-conductor and first violin. After a time the latter gentleman went on a six months' tour with Albert Chevalier in America, where he wrote, composed, and published a number of songs. Then followed an engagement with Mr George Edwardes at the Palace, Manchester, where Mr Clark conducted an orchestra of fifty strong, and successfully produced ballets for a period of seven years. After twelve months spent in similar work at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, he was appointed by Mr Oswald Stoll director of the orchestra at the Holloway Empire. He did not, however, remain very long at Holloway, for his services were soon requisitioned for the Empire, Leicester-square, again as sub-conductor and first violinist. Quitting this house once more, he joined Clarke and Earle, who toured, in the Moss and Thornton halls, a very popular musical act. In a few months Mr Clark had a further offer from the Empire management, in whose employment he has remained ever since. On March 28 last—Herr Wenzl having retired from his position of musical director—Mr Clark took possession of the conductor's chair, which he now occupies with credit to himself and the establishment whose interests he serves.

Mr Clark tells us that the first music he composed in this country was for Miss Amy Roselle, for whom Mr Saville Clarke wrote The Seige of Lucknow. Mr Clark also composed the vocal ballet for Mr Tiller's Harvest Home, the "book" being by Mr J. Hickory Wood. He has written and composed three or four songs for Miss Ada Reeve, including "Susie—oo," "The Lover and the Ladybird," and Yalloo." While at the Manchester Palace he considers that the best work he did was an orchestral fantasia entitled "The Forest Nymph," which proved a big hit. For the Eldorado Girls he composed the music for their Vanity Fair, and for their songs. Mdlle. Alexia, the clever French chanteuse, whose tuneful songs delighted audiences at the Casino De Paris, wrote a few days ago to say that everybody was complimenting her upon the music which Mr Clark had written for her. When Mr Harry Norris wrote the lyrics for the comic opera called An Opera Singer, Mr Clark was commissioned to attend to the musical numbers; and he has composed for Miss Vesta Tilley, Miss Alexandra Dagmar, Miss Harriett Vernon, Miss Lena Verdi, and for Mr J. J. Dallas's Bazaar Girl. He has written several marches, one of which was dedicated to Mr J. P. Sousa, and other pieces of his have been published by Messrs Francis and Day, Oliver Hawkes, and Keith Prowse and Co. He has composed the numbers for a dozen pantomimes, including Ali Baba, Forty Thieves, Blue Beard, and Jack and Jill, all of which were entirely original and were produced at the Palace, Manchester. He also assisted with the music of The Babes in the Wood, in which Miss Louie Freear made such a big hit at the Theatre Royal, Manchester. Among his other work may be mentioned the accompaniments for biograph displays, parts of the ballet High Jinks and practically the entire second portion of it, in which he introduced a big waltz which has been much admired.

During conversation Mr Clark gave expression to the regret that there seemed so little good feeling and good fellowship existent among musical conductors and composers. He thinks that a society should be formed to bring musicians together to discuss things in general, and not confine themselves, as is at present the case, to one narrow groove. "Every composer," he remarks, has his own particular style, and I am of the opinion that there should be more free speech for the sake of art."

Mr Clark, whose father was an artist, and who belongs to a family, the members of which have almost solely concerned themselves with the brush and the palette, has a brother (Claude Cardon) whose pictures have been hung in the Academy. The subject of this interview has always indulged to a considerable extent in athletics, and one of his principal pastimes consists of sculling. He tells us that, curiously enough, the first prize he ever gained was not given in recognition of musical honours, but for gymnastics.

"THE ARISTOCRATS."

Musical Absurdity in Two Scenes,
by James and Thomas Passmore, with Music by Peter Conroy,
Produced for the First Time at the Queen's Music Hall, Poplar, on Monday, Oct. 10.

The Duke	MR JAMES PASSMORE
The Count	MR THOMAS PASSMORE
John	MR ALFRED ERNEST
Hon. Miss Maud Ainsworth	Miss GERTIE GLENN
Hon. Miss Sybil Harley	Miss HARRIE ROSE
Florrie	Miss NANCY DUNCAN

The fame of the Passmore Brothers has hitherto rested chiefly on their eccentricities as knockabout comedians, but in the production of the above sketch they have given proof of their ability to furnish the class of entertainment that now seems most in demand, and have produced a diverting skit in which fun abounds, song and dance alternate in pleasing variety, and a most ludicrous piece of fooling is succeeded instantaneously by a smart and exhilarating scena instinct with life and movement. The opening scene is a drawing-room in Park-lane, where the Hon. Maud Ainsworth and the Hon. Sybil Harley return home loud in the praise of a couple of noblemen of their acquaintance, whose arrival is momentarily expected and whom they see approaching. The ladies retire to prepare to receive their distinguished visitors, giving orders to the butler to show them in. The "Duke" and "Count" duly arrive, but their attire hardly befits their exalted rank, being more suited to that of broker's men, which in reality they are, announcing the fact in a lively song. They set about removing the household goods, and the room is speedily divested of almost every particle of furniture—chairs, tables, ornaments, and a dummy piano being carted into the street. The ladies return decked out in their best, and despite the altered appearance of the apartment, indulge in a lively flirtation with their aristocratic visitors, all four joining in a double duet, cleverly written and drolly conceived, on "the art of making love." A stately minuet follows, in which the servants join, and then an instantaneous mechanical change is made to a sylvan spot in Hyde Park, and an equally sudden alteration of costume takes place, the three men returning in military uniforms and the three ladies elegantly arrayed. They sing altogether of "The very latest fashion in the Army," and execute a series of marching and counter-marching in true military style, and with no little grace and precision. The whole sketch comes in the nature of a novelty, and won the cordial appreciation of the audience, as it is sure to do with all who favour a bright spectacle and harmless fun. The little piece was acted spiritedly by all concerned. The Brothers Passmore must be mentioned together, for they act in concord in the cause of fun, and they did not spare themselves in the characters of the "Duke" and the "Count," their make-up in each case being marvels of eccentricity. Miss Gertie Glenn and Miss Harrie Rose also shared equally in merit as the honourable ladies, singing their duets in dashing style and acting merrily. Miss Nancy Duncan was a presentable maid-servant, and as the butler Mr Alfred Ernest took no inconsiderable share in the creation of mirth. No effort has been spared either in costumes or in the skilful working of the scenery, in the setting and arrangement of which the assistance of Mr Joe Haynes, the popular manager, has been invaluable.

ON Saturday the promenade concert in the Central Hall of the Alexandra Palace was supported by the band of H. M. Coldstream Guards. Miss Alice Motterway added some pleasing vocal items, and the well-trained voice of Mr Thomas Thomas in some good numbers materially strengthened the concert programme. Madame Belle Cole made her reappearance, and being a strong North London favourite, her selections were received with acclamation. The attendance was good, and the Bohemian nature of these concerts is meeting with general approval.

THE Duke of Portland has presented to the museum of the Comédie-Française reproductions of two interesting pictures in his collection; a portrait of Molière attributed to Charles Le Brun, and one of an Italian actor, Silvia Polletti, attributed to De Troy.

MR EDITOR.—Sir,—During my recent tour with Mr Fred Mouillot's My Lady Molly you gave me several good notices, for which many thanks. On Sept. 17 Mr Moreton was kind enough to release me so that I might take up my London engagements. However, in answer to a pressing telegram, I fulfilled a special week at Manchester ending Oct. 1 owing to the illness of Mr Mozar. In your issue of the 1st inst. you complimented me on my impersonation of Lionel Bland, but gave the credit to Mr Mozar. Yours faithfully, HAROLD PAYNE.

AHRENSMEYER, the Cowboy hypnotist, has been causing wonderment and drawing big audiences to the Britannia, Hoxton, all this week. Next Monday he opens at the Canterbury and Duchess, Balham.

IN the Court of Bankruptcy, on Monday, a first meeting was held in the case of John Warren, the debtor being described as of Lime-grove, Shepherd's-bush, entertainer, and latterly a member of the Bradstow Concert Party, of Broadstairs and Ramsgate. The receiving order was made upon the petition of Tom G. Clare, residing at Maida Vale, a judgment creditor for £63 4s. 10d., in respect of the costs of an action for slander unsuccessfully brought against him by the debtor. No particulars of the debtor's affairs were forthcoming, but it was said that his income as an entertainer amounted to about £1,000 a year. Mr Westcott represented the petitioning creditor. The Official Receiver will continue to act as trustee.

MR C. SHARP, who is now master carpenter at the Adelphi, held a similar position at the Kennington Theatre for some years. He laid the stage and had charge of other work back of the curtain for the King's Theatre, Hammersmith. Mr Sharp will make some of the scenes for the Shakespearian play which may be produced at the Adelphi at Christmas or thereabouts.

CHARLES BEANLAND made his début before a London audience on Monday, and scored an instantaneous success by his decidedly original style. He has placed his sole bookings in the hands of Daly's Agency, of Arundel-street, Strand.

MR FRED G. BROOKE, the well-known author and producer of sketches in the halls, has, in collaboration with Miss Dora Deane, written a little playlet, entitled Guy Fawkes, which is to be produced at Sadler's Wells Theatre on the 31st inst. —The Brewsters have been specially retained another week by Mr Tom Transfield at his Hippodrome, Sheerness, to take part in his highly successful spectacle, Fra Diavolo.—Mr Nat Travers opens on Monday at the Empire, New Cross, with his aristocrats in the popular scena, Life in an East-end Hotel.

MR AND MRS BLAKE ADAMS start the Barrasford tour with the successful dramatic episode The Last Pitch, opening at the Pavilion, Glasgow, on Monday next.

MRS ALLAN M'ASKILL is suffering from typhoid fever, and remains in a critical condition in Scarborough Hospital.

AN ANATOMICAL PUZZLE.

Marvels multiply unceasingly at the Hippodrome, where the perplexing Phroso has found a successor equally inexplicable in Zutka and the black box in which he is carefully packed. It seems impossible to believe that a full-sized man can be contained within its two-feet limits; but doubts are speedily set at rest by the gentleman who introduces Zutka unlocking the box, the sides of which collapse outward, and the figure of a tall pierrot is unfolded. Raising the figure to his feet, the operator touches a spring, and Zutka bows in the most natural way ere he is carried bodily by his guardian to the stage, where an electrical apparatus is set at work, and the doll's hands reach up and grasp a couple of rings which hang from ropes above his head. The figure is doubled in two, and his legs strapped to his body, which revolves in the approved gymnastic fashion. Having gravely acknowledged the applause, the figure is bundled unceremoniously into his ebony casket, which before being finally closed is passed round so that the audience may examine the doll—an ordeal which he undergoes with undisturbed rigidity. Regarded as an automaton, Zutka is a masterly piece of mechanism, but the stolid demeanour and inflexibility of the doll, and the manner of its disposal in the box, are all but incredible in a being of flesh and blood. Whatever it may be, man or marionette—or perhaps a combination of both—Zutka is certain to stimulate public curiosity to any lengths, and his composition is likely to be an open question for a long time to come. Other additions of surpassing interest have also been made this week to a stupendous bill-of-fare, chief attention being secured for the tableaux presented by Mdlle. Diane De Fontenoy, under the title of "An Artist's Model." Amid the elaborate surroundings of a painter's studio Mdlle. De Fontenoy presents a series of living pictures, from Boadicea to England's present Queen, a magnificent embodiment of Lalla Rookh alternating with a vivid portrayal of Cleopatra's death. The pictures are remarkable in expression, colouring, and pose, and the cheers of a highly delighted audience commend the perfection of the display. Other fresh comers are the Three Sisters Leamy, whose tricks on the trapeze and rings are extraordinary, a brilliant effect being obtained when the frame within which the talented trio perform is lit up with coloured lights and revolves rapidly, one fair performer being seated on a bicycle above. A mixture of sensations is in turn aroused during the rest of the programme by the intrepid feats with shot and shell of Paul Conchas, the "liquid air" manifestations of Dr. Maxim Boyd, the balancing exploits of the Wille Brothers, the wondrous fire horse of Salamonsky, the speaking music of the Miles-Stavordale Quintet, the oddities of Marceline, the burlesque lions of Charles Baron, the equestrian act of Joko and Koko, the ball manipulation of Robertus and Wilfredo, the juggling of the Alfonso Trio, and the excitements of the sketch Siberia.

'JACK SHEPPARD; OR, THE BURGLARY AT THE GRANGE."

Vocal Scena, by Albert Voyce,
Produced at the Bow Palace on Monday, Oct. 10.

Blueskin	MR VERNON COWPER
Jack Sheppard	MR TUDOR WILLIAMS
Edgworth Bess	Miss ETHEL FABER

The history of the house-breaking hero has served the purpose of many a dramatic sketch, but the latest episode of his career appears to have sprung entirely from the fertile brain of Mr Albert Voyce, who has concocted the rhymes and furnished the music of an operatic scena that should be of excellent service. The story opens in an effective scene of The Grange at Hampstead where Jack Sheppard and his friend Blueskin are engaged in their favourite pastime of "cracking a crib." Jack emerges through the roof of the house with a bag of stolen treasure, which he throws down to Blueskin, but when Jack finds among the booty a portrait of his mother, which tells plainly that he has robbed the house of those who had befriended her, he refuses to be a party to the theft. Blueskin leaves him in disgust, but Jack is consoled by the entry of his sweetheart, Edgeworth Bess, who cheers him with a lively dance. Blueskin returns and demands the valuables, but Jack keeps him off with a pistol, and casts the bag through the window of the house. Blueskin, unwilling to part from his friend, agrees to the sacrifice of the "swag," and the two friends are reconciled. The dialogue of the little piece, which possesses humorous as well as pathetic interest, is principally in rhyme and set to melodies that have a swing and tunefulness agreeable to the popular ear, while the ancient air of "Ri-too-ral-li-tay" is utilised for the introduction of a duet to which such subjects as Adolf Beck and Russo-Japanese War give a topical flavour. The playlet is thoroughly well represented by Mr Albert Voyce's company. Mr Vernon Cowper has a jovial bearing as Blueskin, and plays the part with breadth and vigour. He uses his cultured voice also with excellent effect in the snatches of song which fall to him, and carries the piece along with the energy and ability possible in only an experienced performer. The title-rôle is ably enacted by Mr Tudor Williams, whose pleasing tenor is employed in the sentimental strains of the part and in the concerted numbers. No more comely Bess could be desired than Miss Ethel Faber, who does her dance with rare vivacity and charm. Elegant costumes and mounting give added effect to the piece, which bears the recommendation of novelty, and the attention devoted to it by the audience at Bow and the appreciation with which it was received left its success without a doubt.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

(SPECIAL TO THE ERA.)

THE Joint Concert Committee met on Tuesday last at 29, Wellington-street, Strand. An encouraging report was given of the offers of assistance which were being received daily from musicians. Sir Charles V. Stanford, who had been invited to conduct one of the items of the musical programme, wrote regretting his inability to accept the invitation, but kindly wished the societies every possible success, and enclosed a cheque for £3 3s. as a donation to the benevolent funds.

MISS VERA WARWICK-EVANS has, with the permission of the Royal College of Music, kindly consented to play at the concert. Miss Evans is the winner of the Tagore gold medal. During the past nine years during which this medal has been competed for, it has only been awarded five times, and never before to a violiniste. Miss Evans will appear before the public for the first time at the concert at the Royal Opera House on Nov. 20.

THE items which it is proposed shall be given by the orchestra at the concert are the Tannhauser overture, Berlioz's Faust march, the Unfinished Symphony, and the William Tell overture.

THE terms of the dissolution of the Dramatic and Musical Fund and the distribution of its funds have been remitted by the Registrar for the members to append their signatures.

CHARLIE HARRELL, the chief of the stage staff at the Albert Theatre, Gainsborough, died suddenly on Thursday morning, the 6th inst. Always genial and polite, Harrell will be greatly missed by the touring companies visiting that town.

DAVE MEIER AND BELLA MORA, American speciality artists, have just booked to appear with Mr Sydney Hyman's enterprises in South Africa in 1906.—Miss Rita Resdan, the dainty male impersonator, is rebooked at the Oxford, four weeks, July, 1905.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

(COPYRIGHT.)

(FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The story of the rise and progress of Parliamentary defence by the organised showmen is a brilliant record of splendid work. The difficulties at the outset were of the most formidable kind. It was looked upon by public bodies as a sort of impertinence that mere showmen should dare to set up a claim against them, or to venture opposition to their Private Bills. When the battle of the bye-laws had been fought and won, then it was that the Showmen's Guild turned its attention to Private Bill legislation. In 1900, two important victories were won—in fact, three—for the showmen had to prove their trade right to appear by counsel and to petition against the inimical clauses in Private Bills. The fight for the locus standi, or the right to appear, was a costly business, but it had to be done. The Guild had to make a demonstration in force before the Court of Referee concerned with Private Bills before the House of Commons. This right was not at the time acknowledged. It was, however, conceded that individual showmen attending the fairs threatened in Private Bills had a locus standi whether they were resident ratepayers or not in the district covered by the Corporation Bill before Parliament. This is important to bear in mind, for it leads up to the ultimate recognition of the Guild's locus standi at the Home Office and Local Government three years later.

It was the Corporation of Eccles that denied the Guild a locus standi to defend the business interests of its members. In the Bill the Corporation of Eccles tried to pass were clauses giving power to make bye-laws to fix the hours during which shows, &c, might remain open; and, further, that no one should erect any stall for the sale of goods, &c., within the borough without the written permission of the corporation, the corporation having power also to fix conditions to such permission as might seem good to them. This was a big order, and would have left the showman and fairground trader at the mercy of the local authority. The end of the struggle was that the case for the showman was so well put before the Private Bills Committee as to win a complete victory. The clauses were struck out and a new bulwark of defence erected, for it was clearly defined as a principle of Private Bill legislation that no law in restraint of trade in excess of the common law can be carried in a Private Bill.

In the same session of Parliament Mansfield Corporation sought powers to prescribe the hours during which—at any fair, or other time—shows or roundabouts, circuses, or menageries might remain open; powers greatly in excess of the general laws. Here again the showmen were subjected to heavy expenses in preparing their petition, and appearing by counsel and witnesses against the Bill. After hearing the witnesses and counsels' arguments the committee threw out the restrictive clauses, and a victory was gained for the organised showmen The next big Parliamentary battle was with the Halifax Corporation. Besides an attempt to obtain powers to impose exorbitant rents or tolls at the annual fairs, a new move was made to hamper and penalise the show business, the Corporation Bill provided that no private ground within the borough should be let to showmen for fair purposes or a stand for exhibitions. Here was a new danger of most serious moment. Free trade in fairs was to cease as far as Halifax was concerned. After two days' argument and the attendance of witnesses the novel clause giving the Corporation a monopoly of fair ground business was thrown out and the new scale of tolls brought down to reasonable limits.

We have only referred to the actual victories won in the Private Bills Committee-room of the House of Commons, and that tale is not half told. But there is the contemporary victories won by negotiations, Bills introduced—dozens of them—and by the Parliamentary agents' and solicitors' amicable conference and consultation with their promoters, the objectionable clauses were thrown out or dropped. Amongst corporations thus amenable to reason and fair play we may mention Swansea, Knaresborough, Rotherham, Leicester, Carlisle, Buxton, Selby, and Newport (Salop), the great point being that all the time this exacting and costly work has been going on, the whole body of corporation officials, Parliamentary agents, and the Parliamentary Bar have had the object lesson kept before them of a trade well organised and able to defend its just rights and privileges. We shall return to this again, for, great and encouraging as the work already chronicled has been, the half has not been told, the moral of the lesson being let every showman see to it that the treasury of the Van-Dwellers' and Showmen's Protection Association be well supplied, and the sinews of war procured for the Parliamentary Defence Fund of that organisation. Subscriptions may be sent direct to the hon. treasurer, Edward Ledger, Esq, at the office of The Era; or to the secretary, H. M. Horne, Burton-road, West Didsbury, Manchester.

Lord John Sanger and Sons' Circus visited Leicester on Monday. The performance proved most enjoyable, the audience being loud in their applause of the clever and amusing acts submitted for their delectation. The principal artistes were Annetto, the flying cyclist, whose sensational feat of descending an almost perpendicular chute and jumping through space for a distance of nearly sixty feet held the audience "spellbound." Another exceptionally smart and daring performance was that of Ethardo and Pugh on the flying trapeze The De Burston Troupe of cake walkers on the telegraph wire submitted a clever and graceful show. The haute école act of Miss Hoffman and the English jockey act of Herbert Horley proved these artists to be equestrians of ability; Girkoff's Russian ponies on the revolving table, introduced by Herr Hoffmann, were admired; and Maximus and Minimus, introduced by the same gentleman, elicited the admiration of the delighted audience. A great feature was the remarkable performance of the clever elephants of Mr G. M'Cole. Besides playing football they appear at a fire, take part in the fire brigade drill, and extinguish the flames. The Crotchet Troupe of musical instrumentalists are good, and the turns of Elton and Olrac on the horizontal bars, the perch performance of the Norways, and the juggling of Toga all elicit admiration. As clown Ping-Pong kept the audience in continual laughter by his antics. A comic entry by Sammy also created merriment. Mr James was well up to his work as ringmaster, and the smart manner in which the performance was carried through reflected much credit on him. The circus stayed at Leicester two days.

St. Matthew's Fair, at Bridgwater, was favoured with splendid weather, which caused the largest attendance that has been seen for many years Between three and four thousand came by G W. Railway. The shows were as numerous as ever, Anderton and Rolands taking first place with animated pictures and a variety show, the front looking very bright and pretty with the electric light. Chipperfield's came next with a very smart programme. There was the usual boxing show, and many other smaller shows, not omitting Marshal Hill's ostrich roundabout and switchback, also Colin's roundabouts. Business all round was brisk on the two first days, but on the third day rain somewhat "damped" the business, but on the whole the show world could not complain.

Everyone interested in the employment of children on the stage should send three stamps to the publishing offices of The Era for a copy of the Act which came into force on Oct. 1.

Lorenzo Crick, dog and monkey trainer, who was killed by collision with a tramcar at Atherton on Wednesday, Sept. 28, was buried at Bedford Leigh, Lancs, on Monday, Oct. 3. The following acted as bearers:—Mr J. Moulding, Mr A. Swatmon, Mr T. Omerod, and Mr R. Morris. The following sent floral tributes, and most of them also attended the funeral:—Mrs Crick and family, Mr Crick and family, Mr and Mrs H. Refein, Mr Clark, sen., Mr and Mrs W. Wright, sen., Mr and Mrs W. Wright, jun., Mr and Mrs G. Hague, Mr and Mrs Hancock and family, Mr and Mrs Dyer and family, Mr and Mrs Whatmore and family, Mr and Mrs Grant, Mrs Jewell and family, Mr Clark's employees, Mr and Mrs E. Brenner, Mr J. Jewell, Mr and Mrs Taylor, Mr and Mrs Langton, Mr and Mrs Deeks, Mr and Mrs Horton, Mr and Mrs Whiting, Mr and Mrs Jameson, Mr and Mrs Dearden, Mr and Mrs Forshaw, Mr and Mrs Butterworth, jun., Mr and Mrs Mitchell, and Mr and Mrs Holmes.

The City of Peterborough has an ancient pleasure fair held on the first Wednesday and Thursday in October. It is locally known as the "Bridge Fair," being held in the field on the south side of the river. It is the most popular of the fairs held in the district, and always draws large crowds from the neighbourhood, and, indeed, excursions are run to it from all parts of the country. The fair was well set out under the supervision of Mr J. W. Walshaw, City Surveyor. Biddall's celebrated wild beast show had the premier position. Biddall's No. 2 concern, the Cinématograph, and Thurston's exhibition of animated photography exhibited national and local films with Russo-Japanese war pictures. Enoch Farrar's Royal Academy of fine arts and Powell's fine art gallery completed the list of shows. Messrs Barker and Thurston, the well-known fair caterers, exhibited three machine sets—the Venetian gondolas, the galloping horses, and the switchback There were also overboats and highfliers by Messrs Parr and Harris. These, with four small sets of horses, ten shooting galleries and bottle batteries, and a round dozen of variety frames and coker sheets made up the total of entertainers' concerns at Peterborough October Fair.

Woodstock, nigh unto Oxford City, and famous in history as the place of Fair Rosamund's Bower, held its October Hiring Fair on the 3rd of the month. Taylor's grand theatre of animated pictures and varieties, Proctor's Cinématograph show, and Chipperfield's novelty booth were the principal concerns at this fair. Mr Wilson exhibited a switchback set, a set of galloping horses, highfliers, and rifle saloon, Mr Buckland a steam horse-set and coker sheets, and Messrs Hatwell and Smith, with other local caterers, provided the usual amusements of the fair ground.

Abingdon has one of the best hiring fairs in Berkshire—dating from ancient times—and always held on the Monday before Oct. 11. Quite the best shows and concerns on this round of hiring fairs make a point of attending Abingdon. W. Taylor's superb show, the Cinématograph and variety theatre, Alf Ball's animated pictures, C. Bailey's fine art show, and J. Carroll's school of boxers were the principal exhibitions this year. Mrs Chas. Bailey's switchback, gondola set, and giant wheel, C. Hill's galloping horses, Mrs Bird's steam gallopers, Mrs Matthews' park swings, and Forest's overboats completed the machine list. Shooting galleries and bottle batteries by Messrs E. Ball, Chas. Bailey, and Mrs Matthews, Mrs Wilson's big wheel and dolly frames, juvenile roundabouts, coker shies, and other varieties by Messrs Barnard, Spurritt, Bird, Bond, Wilson, Rowe, Taylor, Forest, Brown, Roberts, and Ball. The fair was admirably set by the clerk to the market, Mr T. Faulkner, jun.

Michaelmas Fair at Tiverton was proclaimed with accustomed quaint ceremonial on Oct. 6. The Mayor and Corporation, with the attendant mace-bearers, marched in state from the Town Hall to a well in the centre of the town, and the ancient charter fair rights were read and the fair duly proclaimed.

At Gloucester Fair Mr Jacob Studt had a serious fire by the accidental overturning of a paraffin lamp. The entire Cinématograph apparatus and films, the tent, the outside paintings, and costly inside fittings, plush curtains, &c., were destroyed. We understand the loss, which is not covered by insurance, means £300.

In addition to the concerns mentioned in our brief notice of the Boston Fair at Gloucester last week were the following:—Wm. Symonds', the local caterer, splendid set of gondolas and his No 2 set the four-abreast galloping horses.

Our local correspondent sends us the following interesting note about Alcester Fair or Mop:—Supplementary to our report of last week, one stall only, belonging to Mr C. Herbert, of Headless Cross, stood in the street on Mop day. Years ago the High-street was lined both sides with stalls; now only Mr Herbert keeps to the old custom. He has stood in the street on Mop day for over fifty years. At one time tradesmen and others benefited largely through the Mop being held in the streets. Now it is held on the Stratford road, and is the means of drawing everybody out of the town rather than into it. Shows, roundabouts, &c., can still stand in the streets on Mop day if they choose to do so. The tradespeople would be pleased to see them there. Showmen and roundabout proprietors should take note of this, and next year keep Alcester Mop in the same old style as they did years ago—take their stands in the streets, and let the tradesmen have a good day for once in the year.

At Evesham Mop, held on Merstow-green and in Vine-street, were the following attractions:—Wadbrook's Royal Electrograph, the rage of Evesham; Clarke's grand switchback railway, Strickland's steam galloping horses, Wright's fine art exhibition, A. Dobson's fine art exhibition, Taylor's freak show, Butlin's midget pony roundabout, Kemp's bazaars; Clarke's, Wilson's, Wright's, and Strickland's shooting saloons and bottle shooters; swing boats by Messrs Clarke and Strickland, cokernut sheets by Messrs Dobson, Butler, and Wright; and Lewis's toy stalls. Other attractions were provided by Messrs Eccleston, Cooper, Lewis, Cartwright, Churchley, Harding, Kimberley, Coles, Jenks, and Smith.

At Astwood Bank we have Eagle's photographic studio for a short season.

By kind permission of his Worship the Mayor, Wadbrook's Royal Electrograph remained on Merstow-green on Monday, Oct. 10. Mr Wadbrook kindly arranged to give the whole of the receipts on that day to the Evesham Cottage Hospital. This show is all the rage in Evesham. Crowded houses are the rule at every performance during the present visit.

The important fairs next week are:—Christchurch, Luton, and Southam, on the 17th; Harwich, Leominster, Maidstone, and Salisbury, on the 19th; Devizes and Sleaford, on the 20th; Chichester, Chorley, Lichfield, Oundle, Princes Risborough, Stratford-on-Avon (second fair) on the 21st; Bridlington, Clitheroe, Dalton-in-Furness, and Winchester, on the 22d.

A beautiful seal was caught off the Marsden Rocks this week, and has been purchased by Mr C. Collens, of South Shields, who has placed it in the hands of Mr P. Dempster for a course of training.

Stratford-on-Avon Mop and Hiring Fair still keeps up many of the old-time customs. It is a great gathering ground for pleasure-seekers. The aggregate of shows, &c., this year more than maintained the high-class standard of this fixture.

Wadbrook's fine exhibition, the Electrograph, now on this round, was the delight of admiring crowds of visitors, Holloway's ghost illusion was a splendid second, closely followed by Braham's performing bird show, and the fine art concerns of Messrs Wright and Dobson, Sol Reeder, with two ground booths, the crocodile show, and the midget mare and foal, Ridley's freak show, and the fistiana and old English boxing booths of Tolley and W. Lines, roundabouts, swings, &c, were a goodly array, and included Clarke's switchback railway, Davies's galloping horses and cockerels, Strickland's gallopers, Dingley's pony circus, and Butlin's midget mountain ponies. Messrs Clarke, Strickland, Davies, and Dingley provided ranges of park swings, highfliers, &c. Messrs Joe Caddick, Fossett, and Brooks were present with their portable photographic studios; shooting ranges and bottle batteries by Messrs Wilson, Clarke, Wright, Turner, and E. Clarke.

Taylor's grand "fairings" bazaar and toy stalls by Messrs Kemp, Lewis, and Corrall were also present; with stalls, pipe-smashers, cokers, mollies, &c., by Messrs Cartwright, Phipps, Winsper, Wainwright, Bennett, Bradley, Cooper, Coley, Andrews, Smith, Young, Hodgkiss, Butler, Bertoli, and Harris.

The October Hiring Fair at Wallingford was well maintained this last week. Crowds of people and the largest collection of shows, roundabouts, &c., for many years.

Faringdon Fair was held in glorious October weather and was crowded with show-loving visitors. There were few stalls in the streets of Faringdon, but on the fair field in Wellington Meadows high carnival was held under the capable management of Mr Alfred Ball, who exhibited his well-known Cinématograph theatre, electric railway, and other novelties. There were numerous other fair-ground varieties by attendant entertainers. The great free sight attraction was Blondin II. on the high rope in a highly clever and thrilling performance.

Mr Robert W. Paul, of 68, High Holborn, the patentee and manufacturer of the New Century Animatograph, has just taken several charming series of views in the West Country, and the scenery of Cornwall and Devonshire has been laid under contribution for some most attractive films which are entitled "Paddington to Penzance," and which are now placed on the market at the most reasonable price of 6d. per foot nett.

Mr Paul is also exploiting the Nernst-Paul High-Power Electric Projector Lamp, which is the outcome of a long series of experiments made with the object of producing a practical high-power illuminant for the lantern, working on the lines of the well-known Nernst lamp. It takes a current of about three ampères, and in the same lamp a burner may be used suited either for direct or alternating current, or for pressures of 100, 200, or 250 volts, a different burner being required for each of the systems of supply. The burner is detachable from the lamp, being provided with sockets at its back, which fit on to pins on the front of the lamp, and make the connections to the filaments. The filaments are supported by small brackets on the front of the burner, and may be separately detached from the brackets for ease of renewal, each being provided with two small connecting plugs for the purpose. Some caution is necessary in handling these filaments, for which reason the lamp is formed with a projecting hood which protects them when in place in the lamp.

MUSICAL DEGREES.

Sir F. Bridge on Wednesday afternoon, at the Guildhall School of Music, chose as the subject of a lecture the Value of Degrees in Music. He mentioned that a fortnight ago he was examining for Degrees in Music at Durham. There were on that occasion twenty-seven candidates who came up for final examination, and of these twenty were passed—the largest number which had ever got through at one time in music in any of our English Universities. On the same occasion no fewer than seventy-four persons who had passed the Arts test presented themselves for first examination in music, and the majority of them got through. That was far more than the number of Music Bachelors there were in the United Kingdom when he took his Degree, now nearly forty years ago. That was an illustration of the estimation in which Degrees in Music were held in the present day. At the Royal College of Organists an Arts test had been insisted upon recently, and the time was not far distant when such a requisition would become imperative in connection with the issuing of certificates by which persons would hope to get their livelihood. Sir John Stainer described such Degrees as intellectual property. Let them consider what a benefit these examinations were to the candidates from the mere fact that they were compelled to work at many various subjects. Even if they never passed the examination, they widened their knowledge. The public appreciated these Degrees, and were prepared to pay a little more for the services of those who possessed them. He urged his hearers to be content, to work steadily and get a distinction for themselves, and not to trouble over the fact that some of our most illustrious composers had not been through a University course. With the general waking up of University work, musical examinations had also moved, and candidates had been multiplied a hundredfold. Let them pay no attention to the idle talk about academical study cramping the mind and doing harm to the imaginative powers. That was all arrant nonsense. Of late years, in the active musical world, a good many prizes had been offered for new musical compositions, and by far the largest proportion of these prizes had been won by holders of University Degrees. There were upwards of 20 000 professional musicians in the country, and only about one in thirty was a graduate in music. To obtain a Degree meant properly directed work, regular, steady work, extending over a considerable period. There was no doubt whatever that the general public thought a great deal of the possession of a Degree, and that meant that the general public, who would be the employers of the musician, were inclined to employ a person and give better pay because of the Degree.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Sir F. Bridge for his lecture.

Mr Morton Powell's company in Bigamy, under the direction of Mr Fred Moule, is being cordially received at the Theatre Royal, Ton-y-Pandy, this week. As Sylvia Dresden Miss Elsie Capell is very good. Her acting is natural and sympathetic. Miss Alwynne Ermon as Diana De Coucelle is excellent. Mr Charles Burdon gives a capital portrayal of Frank Merrivale.

At the Grand, Hanley, the premier position is held this week by Miss Nellie Purcell, whose singing is much appreciated; she has a nice voice, a good appearance, and meets with much success. The Jackson Family return in their musical turn, which is always delightful. The Bros. O'Brien as triple-bar performers are without rivals, their feats being most clever and daring; Lady Mansel, with her six juveniles, contributes an interesting turn; Gertrella is a smart gymnast, and is much appreciated; David Poole is a ventriloquist of a capital order; Atroy juggles admirably, and his performances proves most interesting; Fritz, the illusionist, is well received, and contributes a capital turn; Viola is a clever instrumentalist; and G. W. Foster does well.

NOTTINGHAM GOOSE FAIR.

(FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

The origin of Nottingham Goose Fair has been an interesting matter of dispute amongst antiquarians. It is one of those survivals of the past that grow stronger with age, and seems to possess the power of perpetual youth. Nottingham alone is a standing rebuke to those people who would have us believe that the pleasure fair as a national institution is either dying or dead. So far is this from the real truth, that only the obstinately and perversely blind and deaf and dumb—who refuse to use eyes or ears, and answer not the voice of sound sense and reason—only these persons attempt to overcome fact by persistent assertion; the proved truth being that we have more fairs, more capital sunk in the business, more people engaged in it, and more industries linked with it or concerned in it than ever before.

Within the memory of the writer of this article the Empire did not contain enough shows and fair-ground novelties to furnish ten first-class fairs at the same time. It is no exaggeration to say that at the present moment fifty fairs could be fully equipped and fully maintained without any difficulty. If you take any great national holiday—Easter, Whitsun, or the all-popular Bank Holiday in August—you will readily verify what we say. Go where you will, there is the show, the roundabout, and the attendant satellites of the fair, giving to the eager multitude the open-air amusements they need. East, west, north, and south; in busy town or sylvan village; by the seashore or on our national playing grounds, the breezy heath, or common land, "where the people most do congregate," there you will find the travelling showman ready to entertain the people. To talk of the decay of the fairs, in the face of these speaking facts, is to deny the truth of our social history, and all that experience teaches The official figures given for this year's Goose Fair are 320 standings for exhibitions, machines, fair-ground varieties, and stalls—a number in excess of last year—and £1,500 paid in tolls to the Corporation Funds for the three days' fair. Another significant fact for the people eager to chant the requiem of popular fairs is that in spite of shortage in trade all over the country, 2,000 more excursionists than last year's big total came into Nottingham to keep Goose Fair.

All the great Trunk lines ran specials for the fair days. The Midland brought people from Leeds, Bradford, and the Yorkshire towns served by their system—Manchester, Liverpool, and the Lancashire area, the Derbyshire towns, and from Birmingham, Walsall, and Wolverhampton, Peterborough, King's Lynn, Stamford, Bristol, Cheltenham, and Gloucester, St. Albans, Luton, and Kettering, Bedford, Wellingborough, and Northampton, Lincoln, Newark, Leicester, Loughborough, Chesterfield, and Sheffield. The Great Central Railway had an excellent service of specials on their line, including the direct London to Nottingham, from Liverpool, Manchester, and big towns on their routes, with Cleethorpes, Hull, and the Eastern coast towns. From Sheffield and other Yorkshire towns the G.C. had to considerably strengthen their ordinary trains, and also ran a few trains in duplicate. The Great Northern Railway Company also brought crowds of sightseers from their territory Special and strengthened ordinary trains from Hertford, Hitchin, Peterborough, and Grantham; Luton, Hertford, Grantham, and Bottesford; Louth and Horncastle; Boston, Billingborough, and Sleaford; Lynn, Holbeach, and Spalding; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Walsall; Halifax, Bradford, Leeds, Batley, and Wakefield; St. Ives and March; Yarmouth, Ipswich, and Lynn.

The whole city is given over to the fair for the three fair days. As your train steams into the station you feel as you alight that the throng of the fair has absorbed you. You are no longer an individual; no longer an independent identity. You know that the multitude, of which you form a necessary unit, has gripped you. The mighty vox populi absorbs your vocal powers, and you move out of the station a willing captive to the thrall of the fair. With the crowd you move to the heart of the town. As you pass along the crowded streets, all gaily agleam with flags and banners and attractions galore, the local traders (turned showmen for the nonce) are eagerly crying their wares, toys and fairings at every shop door; gingerbread and toy are stalls at every street corner; you have not to seek the fair. The fair has caught you, and you press along the stall-flanked streets on to the great market square. Here it is that the crowd grips you and sweeps you along. Your pulse beats to the music and joy of it; you are now in the full swing and abandon of it—the greatest and the best fair in the world, the centre a vast and dazzling kaleidoscope of colour and light and motion. Here are huge concerns of every kind designed by the art of man for the delight of his fellows; each one a marvel in its own peculiar feature of attractiveness.

Then the shows—the menagerie, the cinématograph theatres, the mystery of magic, ancient and modern! After all, it is to see the shows that people crowd our fairs. The showman, with his treasure of novelties, is still supreme as the popular caterer of open-air amusement.

Wombwell's menagerie, the premier show of the world, with its unbroken record of over a century continuous popularity, is occupying its old ground. Mr E. H. Bostock, the proprietor, in the magnificent collection of birds, beasts, and reptiles fully maintains the Wombwell traditions. The menagerie is quite different to that which visited Nottingham last year, but has lost nothing in point of power to amuse and interest. Of lions and lionesses no fewer than twenty-two are to be seen, in addition to tigers, leopards, pumas, panthers, and representatives from almost every clime. The curious blue and red faced mandril, a member of the monkey tribe from the Congo, was minutely inspected. The proprietors of the menagerie recently refused £200 for this valuable specimen. It has a long, flat nose of bright scarlet, the cheeks hang in "bags" of sky blue, and the curious appearance of the animal is enhanced by a close-grown yellow beard. Then there are examples of the brindled gnu (the African horned horse), a baby camel, and the rare Albino deer. Altogether the collection fills sixteen caravans, and there is much that is rare both of beast and bird. At intervals during the day daring performances were given by trainers of lions and leopards.

The portable hippodrome (proprietress, Mrs F. Collins), with a varied range of animated pictures, was, as usual, a great centre of attraction. G. H. Kemp's superb show, the Anglo-American entertainers, with up-to-date films on events of the day, more than maintained its well-won reputation. Mr John Proctor's Cinématograph exhibition, Mr Arthur Twigdon's Electrograph, and Captain Tom Payne's Bioscope—each show excellent and original—were fully appreciated by the people at the fair. Dr. Edward Lawrence's "Humanities" (title registered) must have been a boon and a blessing to the seekers after novelty. We congratulate the clever doctor on the return to a line of business in which he is now the best living exponent on the road.

Professor Harry Hughes with military tournament, athletes, and boxers—a good old English show—next arrested our attention. We were sorry to miss Professor B. T. Burnett's celebrated military entertainers. Owing to some misunderstanding about the site for the show Mr Burnett was crowded out this year. Sahib Leo with his unique entertainment, the Egyptian Hall mysteries, catered for the lovers of the weird and magical with his usual ability and success. Madame Salon's exhibition, "The Tattooed Lady," headed the list of smaller concerns, closely followed by the excellent exhibits of Mr Tom Matson with the giant bullock, Mr J. W. Mackay with the novel "Bill Bailey" show, Mr John Cooper with Parisian novelties, Mr Sam Smart's abnormals, Mr Jim Smart's living novelties, and Mr Charles Relph's Wee M'Gregor, the smallest horse alive. Thus it will be seen that in point of interest as well as numbers this year's shows at the fair establish a record.

Now we endeavour to chronicle the names of the ceaseless, whirling mass in the centre of the fair ground. We notice here that this year more room has been found for the people to circulate around the fair than obtained last year. Four magnificent sets were exhibited by Messrs P. Collins, Limited—1, The rolling gondolas (manager, Mr W. Mallett); 2. The racing cockerels (manager, Mr Summerheys); 3. the prize roosters (manager, Mr Wm. Whyatt); and 4, the four-abreast galloping horses (manager, Mr Crawford). Mr John Collins exhibited two machines—the ships in the air and the steeplechasers. John Whiting's superb set—the Venetian gondolas, Mr Arthur Twigdon's two machines, the circular switchback, and the Venetian gondolas, Mr George Green's novel machine, "The Coronation Pickets," George Twigdon's three-abreast gallopers, and Mr Fred Hodder's "Japanese junks," made a veritable galaxy of life and colour, and light and motion, with all manner of music. The excellent photo. studios of Messrs Joe Caddick, Chas. Warwick, and A. C. Tyler were as busy as usual. The refreshment booth, well served by those kindly Nottingham ladies, Mesdames Hodgkinson, Hind, and Lilley, was a great boon to the show people and visitors. This is an institution of Nottingham Fair, and well deserves imitation on other fair grounds.

Down the long avenues and street bazaar of stalls, toy stalls, pannum stalls, variety stalls, stretching along Cheapside, Long-row, Chapel-bar, Angel-row, South Parade, and Exchange-row were hundreds of vendors of penny novelties. Many minor attractions found standing-room on the Corporation land at Sneinton, and on vacant sites in the neighbourhood of the Market Square. Amongst these caterers we noticed the new football game of Mr John Eady; "The Tommy Waller" novelty throwing game by Mr T. Hancock; shooting galleries, gingerbread stalls, and countless novelties and varieties by Mesdames John Whiting, Harrington, Whyatt, Jennings, and James; Messrs Street-Monks, Roper, Mitchell, Robinson, Lyons, Knight, W. Jennings, J. Jennings, H. Carr, C. Waghorn, S. Mercer, George Cordwell, A. Warwick, T. Jennings, J. Cordwell, jun., and Dumont Brothers.

Nottingham Fair is the Mecca of all good showfolk. Each year, either on business or pleasure bent, the show-world, and his equally eager wife, makes pilgrimage to see and to be seen. Amongst the crowd of notable show-people were found Mr and Mrs E. H. Bostock, late of the Zoo, Glasgow; Messrs Read, of the Royal Agricultural Hall, Islington; Mr William and Miss Hancock, of the Winter Gardens, Plymouth; Mr John Studt, Cardiff; Mr Jacob Studt, Southampton; Mr and Mrs Chamberlain, Leicester; Councillor G. T. Fuby, Doncaster; Messrs H. J. Wallis and James Wallis, of Seaforth; Mr James Berry, Liverpool; Mr E. Holland, Manchester; Mr Geo. Campbell, Inverness; Mr T. Hurst, Manchester; Mr Alf. Ball, London; Mr Alf. Reeves, London; Mr R. Dooner, Plymouth; Mr F. T. Salva, and Mr Sid Jeffries. Amongst the firms doing business with the world of shows the following had representatives at the fair:—All the railway companies, amongst whose representatives were found Mr Tom Smith, of the Great Central, and Mr Davison, of the L. and N.-W.; Mr Fred Bibby, of John Bibby and Co., Manchester; Mr Mellor, of Mellor, and Sons, Oldham; Mr Bert Bernard, of L. Gaumont and Co.; Mr J. Wentworth, of Marenghi and Co.; Mr Thos. Orton, of Orton and Sons; Mr Dickerson, of Leeds; Mr Brimmell, of Stroud; Mr C. J. Spooner, of Burton; Mr Wright, of Wright and Holmes, Manchester. Various corporations sent their official representatives to the Goose Fair, amongst whom we noticed Councillor Greenwood, chairman of the Markets and Fairs Committee, Bolton, and Mr Robert Pike, market superintendent, and Mr Gordon J. Holroyd, market superintendent, Sheffield. Mr Radford, the market superintendent of Nottingham, has set out the fair for the past forty years. The veteran superintendent is now at the age of eighty-three hale and hearty, and takes as big a delight as ever in the order and well being of the world-famous fair. He traverses all the nonsense talked about the decay of British fairs, and contends that the fairs of to-day are better served and better appreciated than the fairs of the past. He speaks from an experience unique in the history of corporation provided fairs, and no small credit is due to Mr Radford for the high character of Nottingham's open air carnival—the annual goose fair.

For several years past the Church of England Temperance Society, with praiseworthy enterprise, has had a tent in the Market-place for the sale of non-alcoholic refreshments. This year, under the superintendence of the Rev. F. P. Downman, the society is carrying on its operations during the three days of the fair in the now disused tramway offices on Long-row, where a committee of ladies, headed by Mrs Ferris, the wife of the Rev. Canon Ferris, of St. Matthews, will dispense non-intoxicating refreshments.

Just fifty years ago Nottingham Fair is thus chronicled:—"The advent of the fair was apparent on Friday towards dusk, when several shows had taken up their position in the market place, and when skeleton and completed stalls began to arise out of vast accumulations of planks and canvas. Shopkeepers, too, were seized with commendable enthusiasm, cleaning out their windows, and decking them anew with the freshest and best of everything. . . . Little boys and girls made incursions among their kind uncles and aunts, and other cherished friends; like juvenile Rob Roys, levying 'blackmail' from all and sundry. Promising little philosophers broke their earthenware savings' banks, or rose in rebellion against mamma if she hesitated to deliver up the purse in which the accumulations of weeks had been so carefully hoarded. The appearance of a few shows raised the popular excitement to a higher pitch; forthwith, every juvenile rallied round the paternal hearth, and if necessary proclaimed open rebellion unless the sinews of war were delivered into his hands so that he might go and do as every spirited juvenile has done from time immemorial—make a fair of it. On Saturday morning, the cattle market turned the town into a huge Smithfield, and the women folk either kept indoors or were vastly frightened if they ventured out. . . . Holloway vended the 'legitimate drama' in his huge Sanspareil establishment. He was opposed by Raynor, by Ryan, and by a still more curious and anonymous squad who had taken up their quarters at the foot of Park-row. Wombwell's son-in-law, Mr Edmonds, was there with his highly respectable exhibition of living wonders, and his no less respectable band, which, with the music of the Imperial Mechanical Exhibition close by, presented a most agreeable contrast to the harsh and inharmonious clang of contending instruments. Winrow's ingenious views, a small portrait painting gallery, a camera obscura, the Imperial Mechanical Exhibition aforesaid, and Clapton's views of the Great Exhibition were probably the most rational sources of amusement in the Market-place. Then there was a Royal Caledonian Waxwork, all the way from St. Andrew's, with a Scottish triumvirate of barbarous bagpipers, blowing might and main to bring the 'siller' to their 'ain door;' the bazaars, fitted with all manner of hard and soft goods—from tripe and oysters to fiddles and flageolets; the stalls, extending from the top of Chapel Bar, a mountainous region of toffee and gingerbread, nuts and brandy-snaps; the customary array of shooting galleries; an innumerable variety of scientific machines at which you might test your height, weight, and strength; with other attractive features too numerous to mention, made the Market-place, even in that rainy weather, a sight not to be sneezed at by the lovers of those 'good old times,' when Goose Fair was Goose Fair indeed."

The first historical note of Nottingham Fair is given in the "Borough Records," wherein a charter of borough rights and privileges, granted by King Edward I., amongst other matters, sets forth in order authority to hold the Fair:—

Wherefore we will and firmly enjoin, for ourselves and our heirs, that the aforesaid Burgesses and men, and their successors, besides their fair lasting for eight days at the Feast of St. Matthew the Apostle, shall have for ever one other fair in the same town every year to endure for fifteen days; to wit, on the eve, the day, and the morrow of the Feast of St. Edmund the King and Martyr, and for the twelve days following.

The local title, "Goose Fair," originated in the large market at Michaelmastide for geese to be fatted for Christmas sale. This goose market was a necessary preliminary to the Pleasure Fair.

In 1704, Marshal Tallard, the French commander at Blenheim, was brought to Nottingham as a prisoner of war, and here resided for several years. It is traditionally told of him that, shortly after his arrival among us, he wrote to the King of France suggesting the further continuance of hostilities, as England was nearly drained of men. Shortly after came along Goose Fair, which after visiting, he immediately wrote his monarch again, counselling him to give up the war forthwith, as he had seen "as many men congregated in one English market place as could conquer the whole of France!"

Wylie, in his "Old and New Nottingham (1853)" tells us:—"Goose Fair formerly continued for 'twenty-one days!'" This, however, would seem to have been an unwonted and not officially recognised extension of hours on the original "fifteen days."

Henry Field, in his amplified edition of Sutton's "Nottingham Date Book," thus records the 1876 curtailment of this, then, "nine days wonder":—"October 3 (Tuesday)—Previous to this year, Nottingham Goose Fair had always commenced on October 2, and was proclaimed for nine days; but the Town Council, having decided that five days should be its extent, namely, from the first Tuesday in October until the first Saturday, it commenced at this date.'

And four years later, in 1880, came the further compression of the glories of a five days' Goose Fair into but three, as at present; probably the limit unto which the condensation process should in truest wisdom be carried, for this our autumn carnival undoubtedly acts as a safety-valve through which the superexuberancy of a large section of the community may lightsomely escape instead of finding vent in other and far more reprehensible forms of madcap prankishness.

DINNER TO MR. CHARLES HYLAND

The Dublin journalists entertained Mr Charles Hyland on Saturday evening last at dinner in the local Dolphin Hotel, in commemoration of his twenty-five years' connection with the Gaiety Theatre. The gathering was a most representative one, and the function proved thoroughly enjoyable. Mr J. G. M'SWEENEY presided, and Mr ALFRED P. DELANY occupied the vice-chair.

After dinner, which was excellently served, Mr Delany read letters of apology from Messrs James Carlyle, W. A. Locker, T. A. Stodart, A. Dunlop, J. M. Lowry, W. A. Craig, M.R.I.A.; J. B. Hall, Hugh Curran, and C. W. P. Smith.

The CHAIRMAN, in proposing the health of Mr Hyland, said that that gentleman had earned the universal appreciation of the theatre-going public, and he had helped in no small way to establish the popularity of the theatre which he so ably managed. It was his capacity to do everything that was right that had caused him to be so highly esteemed, and it was because of this and his many other good qualities that they assembled that night to celebrate his silver jubilee and wish him long life and happiness. The toast was cordially drunk.

Mr. HYLAND, in reply, said: It is indeed a high honour you have conferred on me to-night, and the difficulty I find myself in is for words to convey my feelings. I know, gentlemen, you will take the will for the deed. Looking round to-night I see the representatives of every newspaper of every creed and politics, and have to ask myself what have I done to be thus honoured by a profession second to none. I think, gentlemen, I must answer that it is to your good nature more than to any ability of mine. Many round this table here to-night I have known personally for a great number of years, so many that, perhaps, for all our sakes we will let it pass; others not quite so long, but still long enough to know their sterling worth and value their friendship. True, we do not always agree, especially when I open my paper on Tuesday morning and read the criticisms of the previous night's play; but, gentlemen, I yield to no one for my admiration of the independence of the Press and the honest opinion of its members. I wish I could now find words suitable to express my thanks for the honour conferred on me this evening, but believe me, gentlemen, I shall always regard this as a red-letter day in my life.

The other toasts were "Music and the Drama," proposed by Mr John M'Grath and responded to by Dr. Murphy; "Literature and Art," proposed by Mr M. A. Manning and responded to by Mr J. S. Macartney; "The Bar," proposed by the chairman and responded to by Mr R. J. Kelly and Mr W. M'Grath; "The Medical Profession," proposed by the chairman and responded to by Dr. Cope, Dr. Murphy, and Dr. M'Aulay; and "The Chairman," proposed by Mr Delany. In the course of the eveneng songs and instrumental items were contributed by members of the company.

AMUSEMENTS IN CALIFORNIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT).

SAN FRANCISCO, SEPT. 23.—Theatrical business in this city is in a prosperous condition. At the Columbia Theatre The Wizard of Oz is being performed, and will be followed by Frank Daniels and company, in The Office Boy. Kyrle Bellew and company fulfilled an engagement here two weeks ago, opening his season of 1904-5 in this city. Mr Bellew is now in Los Angeles, and is making a tour of the State prior to returning to the Eastern States.

AT the Orpheum Music Hall Trovollo, the ventriloquist, is the feature, and has made a hit.

AT the California Theatre Florence Roberts, in Tess of D'Urbervilles, concludes a highly successful four weeks' season to-morrow night.

AT the Alcazar White Whittlesey is reviving Soldiers of Fortune.

AT Fischer's Theatre Dorothy Morton is the leading prima donna, and the play is Miss Mazuma.

THE Central Theatre is doing well with melodrama.

THE Grand Opera House opens it regular season next Monday night with York State Folks for two weeks.

AT the Tivoli Opera House The Serenade is being staged, after a seven weeks' run of The Toreador.

AT the Majestic (the new house) a capital stock company is performing The Altar of Friendship, to be followed by Captain Barrington

MADAME FANNIE FRANCESCA (Michelson), a California girl, made her début in San Francisco, her native city, on Wednesday night, in concert, and achieved quite a success. She gives one more concert to-morrow, prior to starting on a coast tour.

BEN GREET and his London company open at Lyric Hall on Oct. 3, for two weeks, in Everyman and after that in Elizabethan productions of Twelfth Night and other Shakespearian plays.

A COPY OF "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

AMUSEMENTS IN GLASGOW.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Humphreys.—Madame Sherry has been presented here this week by Mr George Dance's company. Miss Georgina Delmar makes a handsome and dashing Spanish senorita as Catarina. Mr J. Robert Hale plays young M'Sherry with the necessary lightness of touch, and his performance throughout is full of quiet humour. Well contrasted is the eccentric fun of Mr Fred Walton as Joseph and the clever low comedy of Miss Nellie Dade as the gawky servant Maud. Miss Lily Elsie is a charming Barbara, a sweet singer, and a dancer of neatness and grace. Mr F. W. Ford plays Colonel M'Sherry on conventional lines, with some clever and original touches. Miss Mabel Sealby as Mistigrette and Miss Ada Binning as Suzanne are both of much value to the cast; Mr Arthur Stroud as the masquerading Leonard is also good; and Mr Ivan Berlyn is a volatile French policeman.

ROYALTY, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr Wm. M. Downie.—Mr James Welch and company are paying a second visit here with The New Clown, the tour being under the direction of Mr Silvanus Dauncey. Mr Welch takes his original part of Lord Garston, and keeps the house in constant merriment; he again receives admirable support from Mr G. H. Snazelle, whose Circus Proprietor is also a performance of outstanding merit; Miss Audrey Ford repeats her lively impersonation of Rosie Platt; while in the parts of the Misses Chesterton Miss Estelle Winwood and Miss Alexandra Carlisle make attractive society ladies. As Captain Trent Mr Cyril Harcourt acts with considerable dash, and good character work is seen in the Baker of Mr Harry J. Crane and the Pennyquick of Mr Leopold Profeit. Mr Henry Belding is well suited as the Strong Man, the remaining parts being well filled by Messrs Lloyd Earle, C. Entwistle, and Master Ernest Winter. On Monday and Friday the farce was preceded by The Man in the Street, in which Mr Welch gave his inimitable sketch of Jabez Gover; while on the other evenings Angelina's Lover was played as a curtain-raiser.

KING'S, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr H. Macfarlane.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr Percy Hutchison's company is here this week with Saturday to Monday. The part of the young widow, Mrs Wendover, is played with grace and vivacity by Miss Moyra Creegan, and that of her admirer, Lord Culvert, is ably undertaken by Mr Stuart Champion. Probyn Dyke is depicted with exquisite comicality by Mr Thomas A. Braidon. Lady Diana Porchester has an able exponent in Miss Madeline L'Estrange, while her daughter Angela is charmingly portrayed by Miss Nancy Beresford. Miss Josephine Ray as an austere old maid and Miss Ida Laurie as a demure young one are both delightful. Mr Thomas Sidney as a preachy clergyman and Mr Dallas Welford as a monocled dude are excellent delineations. Good audiences receive the comedy with intense enjoyment. A curtain-raiser called Judged by Appearances precedes, in which Miss Nancy Beresford and Mr Dallas Welford sustain the principal parts.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr Hugh Murdoch.—The Grand and Princess's have exchanged companies this week, and that clever young Irish comedian, Mr Chalmers Mackey, is now appearing with his company at the south-side theatre in The Wearin' o' the Green.

GRAND, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr A. Mascard.—Mr Milton Bode's company in the powerful drama, Woman and Wine, has moved over here from the Princess's, and is drawing crowded audiences to this popular house.

METROPOLE, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr John Dunbar.—In a Woman's Grip is here this week. The company Mr Douglas Bruce has brought together is in all respects an excellent one. Frank Haydon has a gallant and heroic impersonator in Mr Herbert Pearson, and for a more unmitigated scoundrel than Maurice Stanton one would travel far. Mr Bernard Copping makes a hit in the part. Sir Edward Morton is dignified as the British Ambassador in the charge of Mr Edward Clarke. Mr F. Summers as Mr Fairley does the part full justice. Ralph Sharkley is a good specimen of an old sea dog, well acted by Mr James W. Manning, while Mr John H. Fiman is as Lambert, the lawyer, as great a scoundrel as his employer, Stanton. Major Edwards and Dr. Meadows (Messrs Robert Soane and John Chassell) are effective in the Prison scene, and the Mad Doctor of Mr R. Purdie is a fine bit of acting. Wardresses Chambers and Johnson are most acceptably played by Misses Violet Pearce and Midge Maynard, and Miss Dot Whitmore as Marie is a promising juvenile artist. Mr Frank Ayrton is a clever and versatile Joe Butters, and shares much of the plentiful applause with Mollie (Miss Daisy Maynard), both of whom have much to do. Mr Frank Litchfield as Dick Langley invests the part with much that is attractive. Great interest centres in the rôle of Lillian Fairley, an admirable portrayal of which is given by Miss Marguerite Trevosper. Miss Beatrice May is a tragic and emotional actress of undoubted ability, and charms in three varying and heavy parts as Mary Langley, Convict 43, and Princess Zaroff.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr J. H. Oakden.—The strong company of Messrs Fred Darcy and Fred J. Little is here this week with On the Stroke of Twelve. Mr Fred Rivers makes a manly hero, and is ably supported by Mr Fred Guinness as George Bainbridge. Mr H. Creagh Hunt makes a clever study of the villain, and the part of Marie Bergerre is made sufficiently vindictive by Miss Elma C. Turner. Mr Harry C. Robinson ably impersonates Henry Rutledge, and Mr Karl H. Edwards makes a very musical as well as a crafty Moses Levi. Mr F. J. Little derserves special mention as the Negro, Jasper, and, along with Mr Will Bass as Pat, causes roars of laughter. Miss Nellie Moore as Jess Bainbridge and Miss Bertha St. Ruth as Doris Rutledge are well suited, both taking prominent parts in the play.

WHITEVALE.—Proprietor, Mr George Green.—The Red Signal is ably interpreted by Mr Sidney Vereker's company this week. The hero, Darkwood, is ably presented by Mr Alfred Allen, and Miss Rosa Lehmann makes an acceptable May Sorrell. Mr Sidney Vereker amuses with his quaintly humorous impersonation of Sammy Gay. Sir Otto Darkwood, the unscrupulous villain, is cleverly portrayed by Mr Charles V. Sandford. Mr John Levey sustains well the part of Peter Sorrell, and Florence Culver is capitally sketched by Miss Norah Coronne. Miss Marion Edwardes sings several songs during the intervals. Miss Edwardes possesses a clear soprano voice of considerable range. Mr Cowell Clarke as Richard Culver submits a characteristic study, while Mrs Tomlin makes the most of Crazy Sal. In the rôles of Joe Knapton and Tom Davies Mr Hugh Mortimer is most successful. Miss Bertha Hall gives a lively portrayal of Jenny Jones.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Limited.—Charles Prinz, with his seventeen lions, gives a wonderful display, and the fire dance in the den of lions is a daring feat by Miss Marcella. The Lukushima Troupe of Japanese equilibrists contribute a neat and clever show, their Risley business being specially good. Alec Hurley this week gives The Lambeth Walk and Piccaninny pride of place, and is a strong favourite. Manning's Entertainers, in their lively sketch, A Hotel Boots, cause roars of laughter. Parros Bros. are smart equilibrists, with some new and daring feats. Annie Casey, a comedienne with a taking style; James Kurry, comedian; the Bioscope; Max Millian; and Chas. Ward, eccentric comedian, complete a good programme.

TIVOLI.—Proprietors, Messrs Colquhoun and Armstrong, Limited; Managing Director, Mr Barney M. Armstrong; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred C. Ewing.—The "evergreen" Joe O'Gorman, Irish humourist, tops the bill here. Lily Morris continues to be a great favourite; Harry Pleon is seen at his best in impersonations of leading artistes; Brothers Lang, "brothers in love," contribute an excellent boxing act; while the funny songs and sayings of James Brady, comedian, fairly bring down the house. The other members of the company include Bouverie Pleydell, serio; Cecil Lidden and Elsie Hayward, in sketch, A Quiet Rehearsal; the Abadaroffs, comedy acrobats; and Mons. Duro, strength equilibrist.

PALACE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Rich Waldon and Thos. Barrastord.—The programme provided here includes Minnie Hunt and Rhys Thomas, in a musical duologue, "Her Birthday." The extraordinary athletic act by the Kyaryas is greatly appreciated. Other notable members of the company include Harris and Worth, comedians; Les Belles Americaines, vocalists and dancers; the Lombarts, gymnasts; Leo Stormont, baritone vocalist, in his cleverly written scenas; Lowell and Lowell, eccentric acrobatic comedians; Grant and Grant, smart American specialists; Bros. Dixon, the clever musical eccentrics; and H. A. Zetto, comic juggler.

QUEEN'S.—Lessees, Messrs Colquhoun and Armstrong, Limited; Manager, Mr T. J. Colquhoun.—Darring is the bright particular star here this week, and as a Glasgow man the interest in his performance is considerably heightened. Lily Morris once again proves a popular favourite. Miss Lena Brunton scores as a mimic of well-known artistes; Mr W. H. Downs, coloured artiste, also scores. The company also includes the Rozells, bar act; Mr Alf Levarni, wire act; Arthur Learto and "Babs;" and Harry Leybourne, comedian. Permane's bears continue their hold on public favour.

HARMONIC CONCERTS.—Musical Secretary, Mr William Biggan.—J. W. Rowley has a budget of catchy songs, which meet with approval. The St. Johns, musical comedy artists, display much talent; the efforts of Ranson and Waite, variety artists, are highly appreciated; Jack Mills, Scotch comedian, is to the fore; and Le Warren, ventriloquist, gives a praiseworthy turn. Archie Jack, in his vocal efforts, is highly successful; Jack Chambers, Negro comedian, is popular, as also is Max Holden, conjuror; and J. G. Manford, eccentric Negro comedian, assisted by Master George Murray, completes a capital programme.

A CIRCUS "SEND OFF."

A pleasant assemblage took place on the evening of the 6th inst. at the Angel Hotel, Islington, when a happy company sat down to an excellent supper, given by Mr E. H. Bostock, of Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie, the occasion being the sending off of a contingent of circus artistes to South Africa to amalgamate with the one sent out some twelve months back, the great success of which has induced Mr E. H. Bostock to further strengthen his great show. The gathering under notice was of a most enjoyable and diverting nature. Full justice was done to a sumptuous supper, well served by Mr Cash, proprietor of the Angel Hotel, but although the ménu did not include telegrams, Mr E. H. Bostock was served with several plates during the evening. He found them palatable, for they were good wishes from numerous friends from all parts, who were present in spirit.

Mr T. READ, in conjunction with his son Mr T. E. Read, lessees of the World's Fair, Royal Agricultural Hall, was a popular and efficient chairman, and spoke of his long pleasant business connections with Mr E. H. Bostock and Mr Bostock's pluck energy, and honourable dealings in all his enterprises, and the vast expense entailed in sending out the first contingent last year, the enormous cost of transportation and keep of the great menagerie, &c., and who is now at a fabulous expense sending out the present company to run a large circus in conjunction with the menagerie. The chairman drew artistes' notice to the fact that they were quite safe, for if the show should be a frost—which was most unlikely—they all knew the ghost would walk. This was relished by the artistes present, for they knew it was a fact.

Mr E. H. BOSTOCK, in replying to the toast, thanked the chairman for his kind remarks, and had no doubt as to the ultimate success of his new venture, for he had made a very careful and well-considered selection of his artistes, and felt confident in his own mind that they would one and all do their very best to ensure success and add further laurels to their well-known individual reputations, to all of whom he wished a comfortable and pleasant journey.

Mr F. FITT, responding on behalf of the visitors, facetiously remarked he did not quite think he was one of them, but more one of the family, having married Miss Bostock. He spoke in very high terms of the sterling qualities of both Mr and Mrs E. H. Bostock.

Mrs M'DONALD, of Glasgow, was also called upon, much to her surprise, to respond. She rose to the occasion, and spoke of the deep and sincere regret felt at the departure of Mr and Mrs Bostock, and the many staunch friends they had made in Glasgow, where their philanthropic acts had been much appreciated.

Mr CLARK, who further responded for the visitors, said he had not until that evening come in contact with artistes off the stage, and had often wondered when sitting in front watching and enjoying their performances what they were like away from their business. That evening he had seen. He was more than delighted, and wished he, like Mr Fitt, was one of the family. However, he had many friends in all parts of South Africa, and influential ones. He had been there, and could personally assure those ladies and gentlemen who were about to cross the water that they would have a right down loyal welcome, and that their efforts would be greatly appreciated.

The evening was further enlivened by songs from some of the company; and after singing "God Save the King" and "Auld Lang Syne" the company broke up. A long procession of cabs took the outward bound and many of their friends to Fenchurch-street station, en route for their ship, the ss. Tintagel Castle.

The following among others were present:—Mr and Mrs E. H. Bostock, Messrs T. Read (chairman) and T. E. Read, lessees and managers World's Fair, Royal Agricultural Hall; Mr F. Fitt, Mr Clark, Mrs Macdonald (of Glasgow), Mr F. H. Fowler, secretary to Messrs T. and T. E. Read; also the following sailing per ss. Tintagel Castle, Oct. 7:—Frantz Troupe of acrobats, Ernest Trio, equestrians; Three Zaracs, horizontal bar experts; Rosa Montero, haute école, equestrienne; Hinton and Wooton, comedy and trick cyclists; Mrs Crockett and her performing liberty horse, Happy Jackies, talking and singing clown; Pongo, wonderful monkey impersonator; Diavolo, marvellous cyclist, "Flying the Flume;" the Wonderful Ladderites, three merry Jack Tars on the lofty ladders; Almero, king of the high rope and swinging perch; the Remingtons, athletes and ring performers; Palmer and Palmer, trick and comic skaters; Signor Bertani on the unsupported ladder; Dungi and Dolwi, Continental musical clowns; Pastor Brothers, comedy equestrians; Pearce Butler, the well-known equestrian director and circus manager; Herr Altoff and his troupe of canine marvels; and Stewart and Steward, marvellous hand equilibrists; also to sail by the the ss. Galeka on Oct. 21, Lukushima Troupe of Japanese, seven in number; and Donat Bedini, Continental agouste and tumbling clown.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

STROUD.

SUBSCRIPTION ROOMS.—Manager, Mr H. J. Twitchett.—On Tuesday Mr Charles Macdona's company, in the musical comedy A Country Girl, paid a visit here. Mr Guy Williams acted and sang in fine style the part of Geoffrey Chaloner; the Sir Joseph Verity of Mr W. O. Billington showed artistic ability; and Barry was humorously impersonated by Mr Richard Telford. Miss Florence Burdett was admirable as Nan; Miss Florence Hallam was a charming Marjory Joy; Miss Sadie Neville a clever Sophie; and Miss Lucie Dever an admirable Princess. The Douglas Verity of Mr W. Besley Beltran, the Granfer Mummery of Mr Harry Playfair, and the Rajah of Bhong of Mr Bernard Vaughn were excellent.

SUNDERLAND.

AVENUE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; Business-Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—Mr George Edwardes' company in the charming musical comedy, San Toy, occupies the boards here this week. San Toy is represented in charming style by Miss Fanny Dango; Mr E. Statham Staples as Li makes himself a favourite; the character of Yen How is cleverly portrayed by Mr John Humphreys; Miss Maud Darling is especially pleasing as the maid Dudley; Mr Reginald Kenneth is a big success as Captain Bobby Preston, and as Sir Bingo Preston Mr Stratton Mills is admirable.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; General-Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—Mr J. W. Carson and company are here this week in The Nihilist Queen. Mr J. O. Stevenson, Mr W. H. Monte, Mr J. W. Carson, Miss Alice N. Livesey, Miss Eulin Heilburg, and Miss Annie Gill are all successful in prominent parts.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Acting-Manager, Mr George V. Wybrow; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr Alfred Browne.—At the top of the bill this week is the George Bonhair Gregory Troupe of acrobats, whose feats are executed in a manner which is little short of marvellous. Mr Edwin Boyde, comedian, is as good and as funny as ever. Ernie Myers, patter comedian; the Two Bells, duettists and dancers; Rich and Rich, comedians and buck dancers; Lily Lonsdale, soprano vocalist; Miss Harber Ingold, contralto vocalist; and Clown Mephisto and Brothers Pim, in comic gymnastic novelty act, also contribute.

SWANSEA.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Sons; Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Boyce.—On Monday Miss Ellen Terry and her company opened a week's visit at this house—her first to the town—and on her first appearance on the stage had a splendid reception from a well-filled house. The play selected for the opening night was Much Ado About Nothing, and a most enjoyable performance was given. Miss Terry's impersonation of Beatrice was delightful to witness, and she was loudly called for at the end of each act. Mr Matheson Lang was exceptionally good as Benedick, and won a large share of the applause. Mr E. Harcourt Williams's Claudio was excellent, and so was the Borachio of Mr Alfred Bucklaw. Miss Hutin Britton gave an admirable portrayal of Hero, and much amusement was caused by Mr John Willis as Dogberry and Mr Tom Paulton as Verges. Much Ado was again played on Tuesday and last night (Friday). The Merchant of Venice, Nance Oldfield, and The Good Hope are also in the répertoire.

NEW STAR.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Morton Powell; Acting-Manager, Mr William Coutts.—Mrs F. G. Kimberley's melodrama A Sister's Sin has been the attraction here during the week, played by Mr and Mrs F. G. Kimberley's own company.

NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Albert Mitchell.—A very strong programme has been provided here this week, made up as follows:—Miss Marie Kendall, a delightful songstress, as popular as ever; Dutch Daly, the ever popular; Lawrence Barclay, an excellent humorous comedian; Goggin and Davis, who win much applause for their clever comedy acrobatic turn; the Four Milons, exceedingly clever acrobats; Zarmo, a clever comical juggler; Mabel Hinds, a dainty little singer; the Imperial Quartet of charming lady vocalists and dancers; Steve M'Carthy with some clever dancing; and the Manings, a clever pair of acrobats and equilibrists.

TAMWORTH.

ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Manager, Mr F. Hughes.—Mr Charles Macdona's company appeared here on Monday in Three Little Maids. Miss Vera Vallis acted charmingly as Ada Branscombe; Miss Nellie Groves as Hilda won golden opinions, and had an ovation for her delightful rendering of "The Miller's Daughter;" Miss Doris Trevor did justice to the part of Edna; Madame Ilma Norina was an aristocratic Lady St. Mallory; the favourite of the "gods" was Miss May Wright as Gretchen, who, with Mr Ewart Drake as Cupid, did some amusing business; Mr F. Hulme Sharp as Lord Cheyne created much merriment; Mr Jules Charmettes as M. De L'Orme was encored for his 'cello solo in the last act. Mr Herbert Austin was the courteous business-manager.

WAKEFIELD.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Messrs Milton Ray's company in the musical drama, A Hot Night, is here this week. Mr Arthur Milton submits an able rendering of Frank Firth, Mr Francis Hope is capable as Fontenoy Flutterwig, and Mr Harry T. Butler acts well as Mark Maybury. Mr Alfred Wellesley is suited as Professor Sheerman, Mr James Sherwin makes a bold Captain Drake, and Mr Rolando Martin achieves a huge success as the Waiter Whimples, keeping the house in continuous roars of laughter. Miss Susie Bevan is admirable as Polly Drake, Miss Clara Reid dances well and makes a charming Lucy Lorrimer, Miss Adeline Montagu is efficient as Mrs Flutterwig, Miss Madge Wear and Miss Jessie Wear are good as Fanny Frith and Mary Maybury. Clever dancing is provided by the Eldorado Quartette of dancers.

WALLSEND.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Owners, the Wallsend Theatre Company; Manager, Mr D. Richardson.—Mr H. Johnstone's company is appearing here this week in The Bank of England. Mr Julian De Alberti gives an excellent rendering of Stephen Hartley; as Sherlock Holmes Mr Herbert S. Chambers leaves nothing to be desired; Mr Charles Goff causes considerable amusement as Tommy Sprouts, being ably assisted by Miss Dorothy Normandale in the rôle of Lucy Lockett. Mr Charles Gallier makes a manly Hon. B. Burlington; Miss Marie Loreth is pleasing as Aminta Bean; and Miss Ada Collins makes the most of Sylvia Barraclough.

WEDNESBURY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr Harry Battersby; Acting-Manager, Mr W. J. Cranston.—Mr F. C. Kimberley's No. 1 company in Bound to Win is paying us a return visit here this week. Mr F. G. Kimberley as Harry Lindon and Mr Adam Alexander as Squire Forbes are both excellently suited in their respective portrayals. As Philip Ayre Mr Frank Strickland contributes a fine study; Mr James Hont is well placed as Ned Oakley; Mr Edgar Morgan creates fun in his humorous interpretation of Horatio Buffett; Mr Horace Custin is loudly applauded in the rôle of Willie Wilkins; and Joe Blake is capitally rendered by Mr James Willoughby. Miss Lottie Addison makes the most of her opportunities as Gladys Arme; the rôle of Marion Forbes is in the worthy hands of Miss Nina Blake Adams; and Miss Edie Marklin as Winnie Oakley is warmly appreciated.

WALSALL.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager and Secretary, Mr W. H. Westwood.—Miss Fortescue and company are proving very popular here. Four nights of the week Moths was played, with Miss Fortescue as Fuchsia Leach; she made an excellent impression. As Prince Zouroff Mr Conway Wingfield supplied a powerful impersonation; Mr Dalziel Heron was successful as Lord Jura; Mr Francis Burdett was well placed as the Duke of Mull and Cantyre; Mr Cecil Newtown was seen to advantage as Raphael De Corveze; Miss Miriam Lewis was an admirable Duchesse De Sonnaz; Miss M. Meredith contributed a good impersonation of Lady Dolly Vanderdecken; Miss Gladys Jesson as Vere Herbert was capital; and Princess Nadine was acted by Miss Eugenie Vernie in excellent style. On Tuesday night She Stoops to Conquer was given.

GRAND THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager and Secretary, Mr W. H. Westwood.—Mr Frank Bateman's company is here with the Russian drama, At War with Women. Miss Lizzie Montague as Auriel Romanoff plays with great power; Mr Edward Ouston is a manly Lieut. Alexis; the General Malakoff of Mr Fred Vaughan is a well-depicted character; Mr Arthur Balmoral makes an excellent Captain Volsky; Mr Steer Flinders as Ivan Clovitch portrays the character in true artistic style; Mr Clinton Baddeley contributes a finished impersonation of Autolski; as Jerry Blake Mr Shaun Glenville is highly entertaining; and Miss Marion Warren is an engaging Frida Malakoff.

WALTHAMSTOW.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr G. Adney Payne; Manager, Mr Arthur J. Barclay; Acting-Manager, Mr Geo. F. Slatter.—The new "dumb-show delirium" entitled The Day Breakers, written by Wal Pink, and produced here for the first time on Monday night, will require a considerable amount of pulling together to achieve anything like permanent success. No expense has been spared in the production; the scenery has been solidly "built" by F. Gaydon, jun., and painted by J. Soames; capital properties have been provided by Ernest Major; and the dresses by S. Benjamin and Boxall and Co. are beyond reproach. By far the most popular engagement of the week is Miss Fannie Leslie. Of her two songs, "The quickness of the hand deceives the eye" and "That's the page that's missing from the book," it would be impossible to say which was the better of the two, both being admirable in themselves and excellently suiting the clever singer. Mr George Barron is an amusing comedian of the eccentric order. Miss Beattie Herbert, looking like a dainty little porcelain ornament in pink, sings a new and very pretty song, "Sunshine of Love," with delightful grace, while her later contribution, with its clever dance, is heartily applauded. Mr Victor Travers is responsible for much laughter, especially as a grotesque female. Much comic juggling and some exceedingly neat gymnastic business are presented by the Evalos. Miss Rosie Lloyd has a big reception and sings with her wonted taste. Hicks's wonderful Clerks, including the funny Little Peter, appear to great advantage, and are received with a storm of applause. Clive and Clark, black and white comedy artistes, who made themselves popular on a former visit, sing with much gusto, and do some dancing that sends their audience wild with delight.

KING'S THEATRE.—"A syndicate of members of the old Britannia Theatre (Hoxton) Company"—to quote the announcement on the programme of this house—is appearing in a creditable production of Jane Shore. Mr Arthur St. John plays with much dignity and considerable elocutionary power the two widely contrasted characters of Richard, Duke of Gloucester, and Matthew Shore. Miss Patey Trounsell gives a pathetic and, occasionally, powerful rendering of the hapless heroine. Mr St. John Beecher is a manly John Grist, and Miss Kitty Bennett a dignified Queen Elizabeth Woodville.

WARRINGTON.

ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter.—Mr Frank E. Burdett's company is here this week in the stirring play The Indian Mutiny. Mr H. Ryland Leigh acts capitally as Lieutenant Manley, and equally successful is Mr H. G. Brandon as Capt Manley. Mr W. S. Tindell is well placed as Major Ingleby, and Mr G. Scully as Terry O'Brien supplies the humorous element with marked success. Mr Villiers Stanley acts with dramatic force as Nebu Singh, and as Abut Khan Mr J. S. Shedden shows dignity. The Ra Goonga of Mr Ernest Keand is a fine study, and Miss M. Digby as Ghuzeah scores well. Miss Kate Bruce as Mrs Major Ingleby and Miss Agnes Kingston as Kate Ingleby, and Miss Agnes Kingston as Kate Ingleb'y complete an excellent cast.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter.—The Abd'l Kader Trio head the bill here this week, and their marvellous rapid sketching of gigantic pictures causes wonder and astonishment; Davies and Davies are a clever pair of comedians; and the Rushforths, in a series of illustrated songs, supply a welcome turn. Kit Keen is an accomplished coon delineator, and Ray Maskell, a charming comedienne. Edith Sylvisto, in a unique speciality act, goes through various acts of contortion; and King Leo is an original ventriloquist. The Royal Bioscope, under the manipulation of Mr Wiesker, continues to win favour in the showing of beautiful pictures.

WATERFORD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—The Norman V. Norman company commenced a week's engagement here on Monday. The play selected for the opening night was Under the Red Robe, in which Mr Norman V. Norman portrayed the part of Henri De Cocheforêt admirably. Miss Beatrice Wilson acted in a most accomplished manner the difficult rôle of Renée De Cocheforêt, and was recalled again and again. On Tuesday David Garrick was played, with Mr Norman in the title-rôle. The theatre was again packed on Wednesday. Nell Gwyn was the attraction.

WEST STANLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Mark H. Lindon.—Messrs Mitchell and Belton's company is here this week with The Conscript. As Karl Truevitch Mr Geo. Mitchell is successful; as Ivan Manloff Mr Walter Skinner is capable; Mr Fred H. Constable is clever as Count Paul Hardiski; Mr John Belton is a successful Dor Doggerwitch; Miss Mary Dawson is pleasing as Nadia Truevitch; and Miss Ivy Chandos does well as Wanda.

WINDSOR.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Governing Director, Mr Samuel James; Business-Manager, Mr Worton David; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Nash.—That powerful domestic drama A Woman's Redemption, by Cyril Austin Lee, was presented here during the first half of the week by Mr James Hare's strong and able company. Mr James Hare himself played the Hon. Bernard Sutcliffe in most excellent manner; Mr Herbert assumed the rôle of the manly and noble-minded curate, the Rev. John Ganthony, with effective dignity; Mr Albert H. Clark was very good indeed as the farmer, Reuben Griffiths; Mr Hill Cremer did well as Jem Lee, a ne'er-do-well; Mr Tom Arkinstall was highly diverting as Leonatus Lowe; and Mr John A. Stimson as Claudius Lowe contributes much to the bright and humorous aspects of the play. Mr J. Le Hair did all that was possible with the part of Inspector Harris. Miss Irene Clifford's impersonation of the betrayed and revengeful gipsy, Ruth, was a vivid and stirring performance; Miss Agatha Holford as the much-wronged, but gentle Mary Griffiths, submitted a highly emotional and artistic representation; and Miss Jenny Hallworth is delightfully amusing and mirth-moving as Sally. The Golden Chance was played on the remaining three nights.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.

GRAND.—General Manager (for Mrs. Weldon Watts), Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident Manager, Mr Fred Conneaux.—Sensation rules here this week, where Mr E. Hill-Mitchelson's company is appearing in the drama The Assassin, which is being received nightly with unmistakable evidence of satisfaction. As the cool-headed, calculating Prince Demetri, "the biggest scoundrel in Russia," a better exponent of the part could not be conceived than Mr E. Hill-Mitchelson. Mr John C. Carlyle as the hero of the play, Ivan Ipanoff, acts in a noble and masterly style. Comedy is represented by Mr Edward Swinton as Baron Alphonse and Mr Fred Yarnold as Peter. General Nicholl has an able exponent in Mr Arthur M'Culloch. Of the ladies in the cast unstinted praise is due to Miss Ruth Shepherd for a well-studied rendition of the character of Countess Wanda; Miss Alice Barber as the light-hearted and vivacious Connie Jonathan, brimful of wit and cutting repartee, plays the part exceptionally well.

PALACE.—Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—Professor Zertho's troupe of dogs are marvels of canine intelligence; Professor Dunning in his ventriloquial entertainment proves himself an expert at his business; Kahn and Kahn in modern necromancy perfectly bewilder all beholders; Johnny Danvers is a comedian of repute; Jimmy Shields, comedian and one-legged dancer, is here again reaping additional popularity, as are also Ted Denham, comedian; and the Phydoros in their eccentric musical act. Werner and Rieder are novel and interesting in their Tyrolean vocalisation, and Ernest Sefton, comedian, is also in the bill.

WEXFORD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr E. P. Ronan.—Mrs Hubert O'Grady's No. 1 company opened here on Monday with A Fast Life. Mr Harry Harrild did well as Sir Oliver Franklin; Mr A. Gribbin was effective as John Dixon; Mr Alfred Weekly made a satisfactory Morris Goldberg; Miss Violet Wood was an interesting Lady Franklin; and Miss Gwen Hastings as Hon. Mrs Cleveland and Mrs Hubert O'Grady as Julia were well placed.

WHITEHAVEN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Clark.—Mr Charles March's company is engaged here in the spectacular romantic play, The Priest of the Temple. Mr March appears successfully as Valerius, and Mr Ronald Bayne acts powerfully as Decus Fronto. Mr Henry Moxon is well cast as Appius Herdonius, and Mr Stanley May is good as Hermanus. Miss Evelyn Hope acts in a pleasing manner as Polita, and Miss Marie North evokes sympathy as Praestantia.

WIGAN.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr John Worswick.—The musical comedy-drama Otto the Outcast has been played with much success this week by Mr Harry Starr's company. The title-rôle was taken by Mr Harry Starr, the popular comedian; and the part of Lara, a flower-girl, by the charming American actress Miss Ethel Danbury.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr J. Worswick. — Professor Inman Hocking creates considerable sensation by his hypnotic and electric performances. Will Onda's company in a pantomimic sketch, A Quiet Night, is most entertaining. Fred Dice, comedian and quaint dancer; Goliath, "the strongest youth on earth;" R. C. Note, comedian; and the Brothers Onda, acrobats, are very popular. Charles Deane, vocalist; Gillin, ventriloquist and comedian; and Amy Allnutt, comedienne, are also well received.

EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Manager, Mr W. Burchill.—Derwin, in his Japanese hoop mystery, and T. B. Fayme, comedian, continue their engagement for a week longer. Craig, Rose, and Craig, novelty gymnastic experts, are clever; and the Yorkshire Mill Lasses (Mona and Gladys Wells) pay a welcome return visit. Miss Flo Melville, burlesque actress; Ray and Miles, in a novelty musical act; Kavados, juggler; and A. B. Kendal, eccentric comedian, furnish a good programme.

WOKING.

PUBLIC HALL.—Manager, Mr Joseph Lewis.—Mr G. W. Bowes presented Mr Charles Frohman's company on Monday night in William Gillette's celebrated play Sherlock Holmes. The title-part was played in a highly satisfactory manner by Mr Kenneth Rivington, his performance leaving little to be desired; Mr Edward Heanley was distinctly good as Holmes's friend and colleague, Dr. Watson; the Professor Moriarty of Mr Arthur B. Murray was a clever character study; Mr Harry Stafford was an amusing Sidney Prince; and Mr Ernest Gray an efficient James Larrabee. Master Walter Hicks made a decided hit as Billy; Miss Florence Radcliffe gave a good rendering of the difficult part of Alice Faulkner; as Mrs Faulkner Miss Ethel Gordon proved quite capable; and the French maid, Theresa, received able treatment from Miss Marjorie Murray. Miss Carrie Lacey was an excellent Madge Larrabee.

WOLVERHAMPTON.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr E. H. Bull and Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Percival.—The first production in Wolverhampton of the interesting and exciting play The Breed of the Treshams was made at this house on Monday last before a large and enthusiastic audience. Mr Martin Harvey's performance as Lieutenant Revesby was one long to be remembered as a finished and magnificent piece of acting, and he was repeatedly compelled to bow his acknowledgments for the undeniable calls he received. Mr Harvey was supported by an excellent company. Mr Milton Rosmer was seen to great advantage as Francis Tresham; Mr Charles Glenny made a capital Clement Hungerford; Mr Percy Anstey was good as Sir Henry Curwen; and Mr Albert E. Raynor was an efficient Viscount Dorsington. The part of Margaret Hungerford was effectively played by Miss Coleridge; while that of Batty was admirably impersonated by Miss N. De Silva. The play was splendidly staged.

YORK.

ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr T. H. Barrow.—Florodora has been presented here on several previous occasions, but not until this week has a York audience had the pleasure of seeing Mr Edward Lewis in his inimitable impersonation of Anthony Tweedlepunch, a part this clever comedian has made particularly his own. His reception by a crowded audience on Monday was most cordial, and he caused roars of laughter. Miss Lena Maitland was particularly charming as Dolores, rendering the popular numbers with artistic grace. Miss Hilda Dugdale was lively and winsome as Angela Gilfain, and Miss Isabel Dillon as Lady Holyrood was at once interesting and pleasing. Mr Leonard Russell as Abercoed sang in his usual first-class style; Mr Fred Winn caused amusement as Cyrus Gilfain; and Mr J. Paul Callan was well placed as Captain Donegal, giving a breezy and clever portrayal.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr Sidney Brooke.—A Country Girl is paying a return visit this week, and as usual is meeting with great success, mainly attributable to the comical efforts of Mr Johnny Osborne, who, in Barry, finds a part particularly suited to his style of humour. In conjunction with Mr Osborne, Miss Veronica Brady is particularly successful in several numbers, which are invariably redemanded. As Nan Miss May Glen works hard, and with the knowledge that her efforts are heartily appreciated. Mr Cyril Thompson sings in first-class style as Geoffrey Challoner.

PRINCE'S THEATRE,

CENTRAL MOSTYN STREET.

N.B.—The Dressing Rooms of the Theatre are built on an adjoining Leasehold piece of land, of which the term is ninety-nine years from September 29, 1862. They will be underleased to a purchaser for the purpose of using the same as Dressing Rooms in connection with the Theatre for the unexpired term of the superior Lease at the nominal annual rent of £10.

(B) NEWMAN'S FRUIT AND FLOWER STORES, the Dimensions of which are 31 by 24, now in the occupation of Mr W. T. Newman.

(C) THE COMMODIOUS CELLARAGE extending underneath the whole of the Property, the Dimensions of which are the same as the Stores.

These conveniently arranged and extensive premises command the immediate attention and custom of both residents and visitors on account of their accessibility and central location. The position is one that only once in a lifetime comes into the market, and is favourably adapted to meet the requirements of Restaurateurs and Wholesale and Retail Tradesmen generally who require business premises containing ample accommodation and publicity, situated in the most busy portion of the town, about fifty yards distant from the property recently purchased by Messrs Bass and Co., Limited, and unexcelled for its trading facilities. They are now the unrivalled medium of a flourishing and increasing trade.

The Tenure of the whole of the Properties is Leasehold for a term of Seventy-five Years, dating from Michaelmas, 1892, at a Nominal Annual Rental of 5s.

Two-thirds of the Purchase Money can, if desired, remain on Mortgage, secured in the usual way.

Possession of the Prince's Theatre and Cellarage can be given upon the completion of the Purchase.

Possession of the Prince's Theatre Stores can be given on April 1, 1905.

Descriptive Particulars and Permission to View the Property may be obtained upon applying to R. BELLIS, Esq., Solicitor, Town Hall, Llandudno; or, to the Auctioneer, County Chambers, Llandudno and Rhyl.

NEW COMIC FILM.

TURNING SAUSAGES INTO DOGS;

OR,

THE DOG FACTORY.

A most laughable subject, showing a patent transformation machine situated in the middle of the room. Upon the walls are a number of pegs from which hang festoons of sausages of different sizes, labelled "Pug," "Terrier," "Dachshund," "Retriever," "Bull Pups," &c. Several customers enter and select their particular fancy breed of dog sausages, which are then placed in the "transformator" and the live article evolves. In two instances, where the purchaser is not satisfied with his bargain, the unfortunate dog is again returned to sausage-meat and hung up again on his proper peg. The fate of a costermonger who speculates in "Fighting Bull" brand is most comic, as the bulldog dashes from the machine and pins him to the ground.

Length, 240ft. Price, £6 10s.

LADY PLUMPTON'S MOTOR.

When Lady Plumpton bought her motor car she forgot to take her huge bulk into consideration, and the car, although a powerful one, proved to be inadequate to the demands made upon it, for her ladyship weighs 19 stone. After she had, with difficulty, been squeezed through the narrow doorway at the back of the car, the machine refused to budge an inch, so out she comes again, and the car starts off immediately. The chauffeur drives it back to the place where her ladyship is waiting, and once again she is helped and squeezed into the vehicle. With the kind help of several passers-by, who put all their strength into the job, the car is at last started on its way, and once started it sails off merrily and drops the kind pushers on to the road. All goes well until it becomes necessary to pass through a water-splash, and, in the very middle of the water, the car sticks fast and cannot be moved. What is to be done? The chauffeur, for all his efforts, cannot make his car move. Lady Plumpton gets very excited, but she can do nothing, because they are surrounded on all sides by water. She is just handing the baby to her fellow traveller in order that she may more vigorously adjure the motor man, when the whole thing goes off in a violent explosion. As the smoke clears away it is seen that a terrible catastrophe has occurred; the motor is nothing but a heap of wreckage; the chauffeur is a mangled corpse; her Ladyship's friend and baby are both blown to bits; her Ladyship herself alone is saved, for even the explosion could not move her. Alone she stands on the wreckage of her property, helpless, in the middle of the water, while bits of motor car, bits of baby, and bits of every description drop from the air on all sides. At last the friendly policeman comes into sight and wades out to the rescue. Helped by a passer-by, he tries to clear the wreckage, and, in fact, anything rather than tackle the job of rescuing her Ladyship. At last, however, he can avoid it no longer, and taking her up in his arms, he staggers a few feet and then drops her into the deepest part of the water. Her terror and anger combined are beyond description, but at last she gets safely to land, just as the petrol tank catches fire, and the last of the motor car is consumed in a sheet of flame.

Length, 200ft. Price, 6d. per foot—£5.

No. 668.

THE STORY OF A PIECE OF SLATE.

This picture shows the complete history of a block of slate, from the time that it is hewn from the solid rock till it is neatly packed in a railway truck ready to be delivered to the builder. In the opening of the picture there is a pretty view of the tunnel-like entrance to one of the "levels" leading to the underground slate workings. A battered-looking one-armed man—eloquent testimony to the dangers of slate quarrying—emerges at the head of a train of trucks; tied to his breast is a lanterr, whose feeble rays have illumined his path through the tunnel. A weary-looking horse draws the train of rough trucks, on each of which one or more huge blocks of slate are packed. Each truck halts for an instant on a weighing platform in order that a rough record of the slate quarried may be kept. The train winds slowly along to the sawing sheds, and as it passes we get an excellent panoramic view of the quarry. Next we see one of the trucks tilted over and a huge block of slate, weighing several tons, is thrown to the ground. With hammer and chisel the workmen quickly split it into huge thick slabs, and these are carried away to be sawn into blocks. A big circular saw slowly cleaves its way through the slate, and then the blocks come into the hands of the splitters. These men very deftly split each block first into halves, then quarters, and then finally into thin sheets, which are used for roofing and many other purposes. The thin sheets, all jagged and uneven, are carried to the trimming sheds and placed for an instant with their rough edges against a quickly revolving knife, which, in four movements, chips each uneven slate into rectangular shape. Then the slates are carried in bundles to the trucks, into which they are loaded, and each truck as it is filled is shot rapidly down a terrifically steep incline to the lower levels, where it is taken away by railroad to the various builders' yards. The film throughout is of remarkably excellent quality, and even the interior scenes are wonderfully good.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1904.
"The Era" Annual, 1904, contains, as usual, many items and statistics of use and interest to all connected with the stage, and, in addition, a number of sketches and short stories by leading artistes, managers, and others. Among the contributors are J. L. Toole, Dan Leno, George R. Sims, George Robey, Huntley Wright, Harry Randall, Bransby Williams, A. W. Pinero, Louie Freear, Little Tich, George Mozart, and Douglas Orichton. The publication is cheap at a shilling.—Birmingham Daily Gazette, Jan. 16th, 1904

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1904.
"The Era" Annual for the current year preserves all the features which have made it popular among actors and actresses in the past—short stories, some of them very good and some of them not so good, by well-known entertainers, countless photographs, and a list of plays produced during the year which should make it useful to students of stage history. It is a sign of the times that Omar Khayyam should be quoted on the first page of the almanack.—Morning Post, Jan. 23d

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1904
"The Era" Annual, 1904, reappears with all the features that to metropolitan and provincial playgoers make it invaluable as a work of reference. It again contains a list of new plays and important revivals at the London and suburban theatres, with dates of production to the end of November; new plays submitted in the provinces; the theatrical, musical, and equestrian obituary for the year; and other stage matters concerning which information is often desired. Each branch is excellently classified. What may, for convenience sake, be termed the "useful" portions of the "Annual" are sandwiched by forty short stories by popular actors and entertainers, the interest of these contributions being increased by autographs and portraits.—Daily Chronicle, Jan. 16th, 1904

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1904.
"The Era" Annual, 1904, contains, as usual, many items and statistics of use and interest to all connected with the stage, and, in addition, a number of sketches and short stories by leading artistes, managers, and others. Among the contributors are J. L. Toole, Dan Leno, George R. Sims, George Robey, Huntley Wright, Harry Randall, Bransby Williams, A. W. Pinero, Louie Freear, Little Tich, George Mozart, and Douglas Crichton. The publication is cheap at a shilling.—Birmingham Daily Gazette, Jan. 16th, 1904

"ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL."

Edited by W. Osborne Brigstocke.
Methuen and Co., 36, Essex-street, Strand, W.C.

This volume forms another of the interesting series known as the "Arden Shakespeare," and we find the same elaborate care and scholarly erudition devoted to it. Its beautifully printed text is a joy to the book lover. Mr Brigstocke tells us that the play teems with obscure and corrupt passages some of which, in spite of the learning and ingenuity of generations of Shakespeare scholars, are still unexplained. It was never really popular on the stage, and was not produced until March 7, 1741, for Mrs Giffard's benefit at Goodman's Fields. Mrs Giffard, who appeared as Helena to her husband's Bertram, was the actress who played Queen Anne on the historical occasion of Garrick's début at that theatre in Richard the Third, on Oct. 26, in the same year. Dr. Hudson ("Shakespeare: His Life, Art, and Characters") says that in respect of plot and action "the piece is of a somewhat forbidding; not to say, repulsive nature; and though it abounds in wisdom and is not wanting in poetry, and has withal much choice delineation of character, and contains scenes which stream down with the poet's raciest English, yet it is not among the plays which readers are often drawn to by mere recollections of delight. . . . The poet may have lost the manuscript in a more unfinished and illegible state, from a sense of something ungenial and unattractive in the subject-matter and action of the play."

Mr Brigstocke demurs to this criticism when he says "Surely the fact that the play is supposed to have been remodelled after the lapse of several years is hardly in keeping with the idea that Shakespeare saw something ungenial in the subject matter. On the contrary, all seems to lead us to suppose that Shakespeare liked the subject sufficiently well to revise the greater part of an old comedy he had written years before, and also to treat of the same subject in Measure for Measure. Be that as it may, the play certainly does, as Dr. Hudson says, abound in wisdom and contains scenes which stream down with the poet's raciest English."

The data that we possess for determining the time of composition are lamentably scant. Francis Meres in his Palladis Tamia mentions a comedy entitled Love Labours Wonne. This immediately follows Love Labors Lost, and critics are now almost unanimous in declaring that All's Well that Ends Well is in all probability the former play, and that both were written about the same time. Coleridge held the opinion that All's Well that Ends Well was written at two different and rather distant periods of the poet's life, and Mr Brigstocke in this connection also quotes Verplanck, who is of the same opinion, and writes:—"The contrast of two different modes of thought and manners of expression here mixed in the same piece must be evident to all who have made the shades and gradations of Shakespeare's varying and progressive taste and mind at all the subject of study. Much of the graver dialogue, especially in the first two acts, reminds the reader in taste of composition, in rhythm, and in a certain quaintness of expression of The Two Gentlemen of Verona. On the other hand, there breaks forth everywhere, and in many cases entirely predominates, a grave moral thoughtfulness, expressed in a solemn, reflective and sometimes in a sententious levity of phrase and harshness of rhythm which seem to me to stamp many passages as belonging to the epoch of Measure for Measure or King Lear. We miss, too, the gay and fanciful imagery which shows itself continually alike amidst the passion and the moralising of the previous comedies."

The story on which the play is founded is most probably Paynter's version of Boccacio's Giglietta di Nerbona from "The Decameron." "It is a revolting idea which underlies the plot," remarks Mr Brigstocke, "and it leaves so unpleasant a flavour with some people that it is not tasted again. I hold that the taste for All's Well that Ends Well is an acquired taste, and when the taste has once been acquired, one wonders how the revolting side of the plot could ever have hidden the manifold, and in certain respects unique, interest of the play. I say unique because in no other play, so far as I know, do we have so curious a blending of Shakespeare's various styles: here a passage of florid rhetoric characteristic of the earliest work, here a phrase which seems a bettered version of some lines in King John, and there gleams of irony that surely come reflected from the dark period of King Lear, Measure for Measure, or Hamlet. Furthermore, the eye in time becomes accustomed to the brightness of Helena's personality, and recognises round her a number of lesser characters, unnoticed before. By studying to understand what Shakespeare added to the authentic story, we may come to conjecture why the tale of Helena's labours touched him, and in what spirit he intended us to read his rendering of it."

Mrs Jameson tells us that in Helena we have a character allied to Juliet as a picture of fervent, enthusiastic, self-forgetting love, but differing wholly from her in other respects. The distinguished German critic, Dr. Louis Lewes, says that "In common with Juliet, Helena's love is passionate, spiritual, free from all egotism, but it is not, like Juliet's, entwined with fantasy, but with a firm and resolute will, an unbending strength of purpose, which renders Helena an entirely different personality. Juliet's passion reveals itself in glowing picturesque fluency; Helena lacks the outward glow and splendour of speech and metaphor. In her, passion shows itself in the earnestness with which she pursues an apparently unattainable end, in straightforward unshaken resolution, without poetic adornment in thought, language, or demeanour. Helena's character is related to that of Isabella, in Measure for Measure. Both are endowed with brilliant intellectual capacity; both bear the stamp of an amiable melancholy without being thereby hindered in their practical issues or rendered morbid. But their firmness of purpose is founded on different bases. Isabella's is derived from strong religious conviction; Helena's, on the contrary, is drawn solely and only from the deep passionate love which entirely fills her soul. Helena is introduced to us in a dependent and humiliating position. She is of low birth; she loves a youth her superior in rank, who feels no attachment for her, and refuses to hear of any bond between them, indignantly repudiating the idea of marriage. Her position is not only unhappy, it offends our taste, and yet her character rises in inward sincerity, touching nobility, and beauty above the unworthiness of her condition."

Mr Brigstocke is indebted to Dr. Halliwell-Phillips for some notes on the play. The learned critic says:—"It is worthy of remark that Shakespeare's comedy at a later period seems to have passed under the name of Monsieur Parolles, that appellation being assigned to it by King Charles I. in a manuscript note in a copy of the second folio of 1632, preserved at Windsor Castle, which formerly belonged to that unfortunate monarch. No notice of All's Well That Ends Well, under that title, has been discovered of a date previous to its entry on the books of the Stationers' Company, in November, 1623, where it is placed in the list of 'soe manie of the said copies as are not formerly entred to other men.'"

In our notice of A Woman's Redemption at the Theatre Royal, Windsor, last week, our correspondent inadvertently gave Mr Herbert as playing the part of the Rev. John Ganthony instead of Mr Herbert H. King, who actually sustained the rôle.

Messrs Boosey and Co.'s thirty-ninth series of London Ballad Concerts will be given at the Queen's Hall on Friday afternoons this season. The series will commence on Friday afternoon next, when Herr Kubelik, amongst other well-known artists, will appear.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, Thursday, Oct. 20.—This is the story of an utterly depraved family. It is much the type of Sudermann's Die Ehre, and the title (Honest Folk) is, of course, ironical. Herr and Frau Breithaupt are the "bieder leute." They manage to delude the authorities into the belief that they are penniless, and so gain a very comfortable little income from public and private charity. Willy, their youngest daughter—a pretty, frivolous girl of twenty—attracts the senses of a wealthy old man named Reinecke. He offers Willy the inducement of a luxurious home, but the girl at first declines to be caught, for her heart—what she possesses—is given to Leo Meister, a gay youth of sporting tendencies. Breithaupt, however, talks her over, seeing the advantages to be reaped from Reinecke's money-bags. Willy acquiesces finally, quite willingly; and later on, when she is about to become a mother, her father threatens Reinecke into giving her a large sum of money in order that she may marry Leo, who is not quite blameless in the whole matter. The character of the thorough-paced villain, Breithaupt, who turns everything to his own advantage, is very cleverly and naturally drawn, and it was equally well acted by Herr Fischer. The incidental story of Breithaupt's elder daughter, Kaethe, is a little bit of pathos in the satirical comedy. Kaethe is engaged to a pedantic young fellow, whom she loves honestly, but whom she is compelled to give up because her father finds him too straight-laced. The piece is altogether too long; three acts would be quite sufficient, and the last is superfluous. Both interpretation and mounting were good, and the author—who is a much-esteemed playwright—was called before the curtain several times in response to genuine and hearty applause.

Madame Sarah Bernhardt commenced her season at the Berliner on Monday, receiving an enthusiastic welcome from the crowded house. La Dame aux Camelias was the performance, and the great actress achieved her customary triumph. At the conclusion of the third act a quantity of flowers and laurel wreaths were handed up, and the applause was endless. It was a matter of much gratification that Madame Bernhardt did not give up coming to Berlin, as she was compelled to give up going to Bremen and Hanover, on account of the accident to her eye at Aix-la-Chapelle. The glass splinter—caused by the breaking of the cab-window—was skilfully removed by an Aix oculist, but Madame Bernhardt was obliged to give the wounded eye a complete rest of some days.

The Royal Schauspiel-Haus company gave a performance of Sardou's Theodora at the New Royal Opera on Saturday. It was an interesting and enjoyable evening, owing chiefly—I might almost say solely—to the fine acting of Frau Wiilig in the title-rôle. Frau Wiilig is the star of the Court Theatre at Wiesbaden, and it is not improbable that she will be engaged here; she would be a decided acquisition to the Schauspiel-Haus. The part of Andreas was acted by Herr Christians, who gave an intelligent account of it. The smaller rôles were adequately sustained by Fräulein Von Mayburg, Herr Stægemann and Herr Oberländer.

A three-act comedy, entitled Klarzum Gefecht, by MM. Kurth and Laverrenz, was recently produced at the Deutsche Volksbühne, and met with such a deservedly cordial reception that it will certainly run for some time to come. The following is the plot, which is well conceived and developed. Captain Matthiesen, of his Imperial Majesty's navy, has indulged in a very hot flirtation with Anita, an impetuous, dark-eyed Mexican maiden, who ends by taking a vow to kill any woman who may supplant her in her lover's affections. Matthiesen returns to the Fatherland, marries a German girl, and lives happily enough until he learns that Anita is in Europe searching for him. He is then filled with dismay, remembering the Mexican's terrible oath. After some misunderstanding it turns out that Anita is married too, and is only looking up her old sweetheart to obtain possession of the letters she had written him. So all ends to everyone's satisfaction. The interpretation of the merry little piece was excellent, and the mounting particularly good. The action of the first act passes on board a German warship, all the accessories being capitally done, down to the minutest detail. Enthusiastic applause was evoked at this scene, and the authors called and recalled.

Blumenthal's new verse-play Der Tote Leone, about which we heard so much, has proved a very ordinary affair after all. The big bell of réclame was set ringing in every direction, the climax being that which is desired by all modern German authors—a prohibition by the censorship. This being once attained, public curiosity is aroused, and the matter is well aired in the papers. A few cuts are made, or—as in the case of The Dead Lion—a manager in a less critical town than Berlin is found to produce the play, and the gratifying result is there. Hamburg, the Free City, was the one that had the honour of bringing Blumenthal's latest piece before the public, and being but a few hours from Berlin some of our critics journeyed thither, hoping and expectant. The reception was frigid, verging on a frost; there was a little applause and a good deal of hissing. It was an open secret that the "dead lion" was Bismarck, and the young Spanish monarch of ancient times—who would not brook the supremacy of his statesmen—no other than the Kaiser. Thus curiosity was more than usually rife in regard to forbidden fruits, which proved, after all, very poor fare.

The Luisen Theatre is giving with much success a once-popular burlesque farce by MM. L'Arronge and Moser entitled Der Registrator auf Reisen. It was given on Wednesday in last week for the first time, and has filled the bill almost exclusively ever since. The cast is good, Herr Huener in the title-rôle, Herr Wald, Fräulein Bottstein, and Fräulein Huettel all being most satisfactory.

"Lucia di Lammermoor" was revived at the Royal Opera on Friday, and was one of the poorest, most unequal performances ever witnessed in that historical house. The name-part was given by Fräulein Siems, who is singing here, so to say, on approval. The artiste is young, and may in time sing with expression. At present, though her voice is pleasing, there is no feeling in it. Also the Opera House is too large for the young lady's voice, and she forced it a good deal at times. The remaining rôles did not seem to suit any of their exponents, while the chorus was frequently out of time. Dr. Best, the new conductor, was evidently not at one with either his orchestra or chorus.

Italian opera seems to be the mode here at present. At the National, Rigoletto, with Alessandro Bonci in the part of the Duke, was given last week successfully. The "guest" has become so popular that every seat in the house was taken and the ticket-office closed long before the performance commenced.

Mr Ritter Riley, of the Dallas Comedy Company, died at Karachi, India, on the 28th ult. Mr Riley seriously injured himself internally while dancing on the stage during a recent visit of the Dallas Company to Bombay.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

ABERDARE.

NEW THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Z. Andrews.—Mr Ben Greet's company, under the direction of Mr J. Bannister Howard, is here this week in The Eternal City. For Mr Lewis Mannering as Baron Bonelli we have nothing but praise; Mr Henry Deas thoroughly deserves the applause he receives as David Rossi; Mr Leonard Gray gives a telling impersonation of Pope Pius XI.; Mr P. L. Julian is a manly and vigorous Bruno Rocco, Mr E. Sharp a good chief of police; and Mr George Lowther does well as Charles Minghelli. Master Geoffrey Carlile is natural as little Joseph. The rôle of Donna Rosa receives careful treatment from Miss Edith Anton Laing.

ABERDEEN.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; General Manager, Mr Eade Montefiore; Acting-Manager, Mr H. C. Cavanah.—Mr James Welch is, of course, the leading attraction of The Man in the Street and The New Clown this week. The impersonation of Jabez Gover constitutes a remarkable study of real life, and he is intensely diverting in the part of Lord Cyril. Mr G. H. Snazelle plays most enjoyably as the circus proprietor, Dixon; and Messrs Cyril Harcourt and Harry Crane very capably appear as Captain Trent and Thomas Baker. Miss Audrey Ford makes a fascinating Rose, and the parts of Maude and Winnie Chesterton are admirably filled by Misses Winwood and Carlisle.

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Ernest Sheldon.—Permane's Siberian bears are the prime attraction this week, and another important turn is that of the Abadaroffs, the "prehistoric mountebanks." Mr Tom Foy and company continue very popular, and among the other successful artists are Mr James Brady; Bishop and Vale, eccentric comedians and dancers; Miss Flo Challis, contralto; Miss Ethel Beresford and Mr Gerard Hunt, in an attractive comedy sketch; Mr Harry Jennings, comedian and dancer; and Mr Charlie Bayman, Negro comedian.

ABERTILLERY.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessees, Messrs Arthur Carlton and Sam Duckworth; General and Resident-Manager, Mr Geo. W. Ventom.—The boards here are occupied this week by Messrs E. H. Knight and George Denham's company in The Grip of Iron. Mr Fred Powell as Jagan, alias Simmonet, gave a most powerful and dramatic rendering; Mr Geo. Denham as Paul Blanchard is effective; Lorentz De Ribas as played by Mr J. Wilton Richards is exceptionally good; Alphonse De Coucou and Dodot, detectives, as submitted by Mr Harry Agar-Lyons and Mr John Brittain, respectively, are most amusing; Mr J. E. Stevenson as Robert De Belfort is really capital; Mr Andrew Liston as Loustalat, the Smiler, provokes roars of laughter; Miss Georgie De Lara as Cora Simmonet plays her part fascinatingly; Miss Nellie Grant as Sophie Blanchard is responsible for a brisk portrayal; Miss Hilda Baynton as Marie Guerin submits a pathetic representation; and Miss Mabel Middleton as Babette is very capable.

ACCRINGTON.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr J. E. Barnes.—On Monday the Milton Rays opened here with A Hot Night Mr A. Milton created much amusement as Frank Firth; Mr Alfred Wellesley must be complimented on his excellent impersonation of Professor Sheerman; Mark Maybury lost nothing in the hands of Harry T. Butler; Captain Dionysius was a capital representation by Mr J. Sherwin; Mr Rolando Martin was both original and quaint as William Wiffles; Miss Clara Reid gave a neat and natural performance of Lucy Lorimer; Miss Cecily Hilton was good as Polly Drake; Miss Beatrice Annersley made an ideal Mrs Flutterwig; and Miss Madge Wrae as Fanny Firth was full of vivacity and charm. Mr Herbert Morgan earned great popularity.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Fairbairn.—Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company is here with A Woman's Pluck. The author, Mr Willard, sustains the part of Dick Darrell, a scoundrel with a bad record, and is as callous and cruel as the author intended he should be. Miss East-Robertson plays with great show of daring and complete self-possession the trying rôle of Grace Daremont. Mr J. P. Dryden doubles the parts of Mark Scanlan and Jim Daremont, and fulfils the requirements of two dissimilar characters admirably. Able impersonations are also given to other prominent parts by Messrs Edward Ashby, C. P. Wentworth, W. Hayward, Cecil Raymond, and Misses Helen Elmar, Jessie Yatman, Sarah Smith, and Tina Show, the latter in the character of a boy. The humour was of the best sort as portrayed by Mr Harry Emerson and Miss Agnese D'Aragon.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Chas. Revill; Director of Entertainments, Mr F. Willmot.—Two principal features of the Hippodrome programme for the week are the Eight Lancashire Lads and the Abd'el Kader Trio. The former heads the bill, the troupe consisting of eight performers, solo and glee singers and dancers. The other artistes who fill up the intervals between these renowned artistes and the Abd'el Kader are Ray Maskell, very charming comedienne and speciality dancer; Davis and Davis, vocal comedians and dancers; Edith Sylvester, who gives a unique speciality act of music and pose; and Pete and Juno, coloured coons, whose sand dancing is a revelation of leg-mania and expert stepping. The Hippodrome Bioscope projects some interesting moving photographs. The Abd'el Kader Trio, with their gigantic pictures, give a wonderfully interesting performance.

ATTERCLIFFE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr Claude Seaton.—Messrs George Harris and Fred Terriss's company is occupying the boards here with the naval drama, entitled Why Women Sins. The part of Lieut. Harry Maxwell is played with vigour by Mr Wallace Campbell; the character of Capt. Herbert Carlton is admirably portrayed by Mr Fred Terriss; Mr George Harris as Cecil Spencer is highly amusing; Mr Bob Herrick, Mr Lionel Ellis, Mr F. Newburn, Mr Forbes Harrison, and Mr Charles Herberts are all good in their respective rôles. As Lilly De Vere Miss Winifred Preece is very popular, her songs being well received. Miss Gussie Everett scores as Ida Valette; exceptional ability is shown by Miss Effie Bartlett as Nell Desmond; Miss Mary West as Nancy Nibble and Miss Georgina Thomas as Jack Smith, a waif, both deserve a word of praise.

AYR.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry W. Day.—Not since the new theatre has been opened has there been such a really representative audience as assembled there on the opening night of Mr Chas. Macdona's company in the charming musical comedy A Country Girl. Nothing could have been happier than Mr Harry Emeric's conception of the happy-go-lucky Barry, nor Miss Lilly Shaw's unsophisticated, merry Nan. The Geoffrey Chaloner of Mr Chas. Marston was a rare foil to Barry's frolics, Mr Jack Parson made a capital Rajah of Bhong, and the Sir Joseph Verity of Mr Jack Fortescue was a good character sketch. Miss Clara Judge's Marjory Joy was a pleasing performance, Miss Winifred Croft acted the character of Princess Mehelanah well, and Miss Marjory Moore as Madame Sophie did extremely well in the "Chicken" duet with Barry.

BACUP.

NEW COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Denman-Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr Richard Nightingale.—Miss Beatrice Isaacson's company opened a week's engagement here on Monday with the drama A Great Sensation. As Jack Danvers Mr Sydney N. Hallows is all that can be desired; a clever character sketch is submitted by Mr Alexander I. Isaacson as Bunko Bates; Mr Victor Fossett as Robin Dale is real and convincing; Eva Dale is played by Miss Beatrice Isaacson in a manner reflecting on her considerable credit. The genteel villainy and insatiable animosity of Sidonie are well expressed by Miss Edith Wallace. An amusing representation of Ria is forthcoming from Miss Marion Mayne, and Mr Harry Ugar is amusing as Peter. The other characters are well sustained.

BARNSLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr A. C. Mitchell.—A Little Coquette, a new burlesque, under the management of Mr Gar Kiddie, is being presented here this week. Miss Lizzie Payne is fascinating in the title-rôle; Robin Adair is extremely good in Miss Flo Warner's hands; Mr J. W. Groves scores as Ann Teeke; Gabriel Grabbe is effectively undertaken by Mr Forsyth Bruce; Mr George Hestor is much appreciated as Simon Scrapps; and the Captain is in the capable hands of Mr E. H. Bertram.

PUBLIC HALL.—Manager, Mr G. E. Hoey.—Mr John H. Tomkinson's Royal Gipsy Children are at the above hall with songs and dances, including some very interesting and clever variety interludes. The Lizette Troupe are worthy of much praise; the Musical Keiths contribute a smart turn; the Florida Troupe introduce the cake walk with much success; Elsie Rubina's wire act is excellent; and Fred M'Lean, Letta Star, Gracie Bard, Ada Lorne, May Bishop, Alice Dunn, Eric Lynn, Pattie Burton, Sam Paul, and Maurice Lindley effectively contribute to the entertainment.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr George Stone.—Mr E. St. Alban's opera company, in Les Cloches de Corneville, is here. He himself plays with much power and originality the part of the miser Gaspard, and Mr George A. Fox adds to a good presence a fine voice which he uses with effect as Henri, Marquis De Corneville. Grenicheaux is capably taken by Mr Walter Cranbourne, Mr George Delaforce makes an amusing Baillie, and Mr Fowler Thatcher causes much fun as Gobo. Miss K. Farrell is a winning Germaine, and Miss Lucie Fitzroy an amusing and vivacious Serpolette.

TIVOLI THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr Tom Whiting.—Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, trick cyclists and comedy artistes, give some remarkable exhibitions of skill, and Miss Ada Cerito makes a great hit. The Dagmar Troupe of lightning acrobats and tumblers are clever; Joe Archer is a comedian of merit; G. H. Keith, actor-vocalist, does well; Marie Weston is an expert dancer and banjoist; and Sibb and Sibb are smart double trapeze artistes. Vernon's Bioscope shows the latest pictures.

BATH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr Lewis A. Long.—The crowning engagement of the autumn season is being fulfilled this week by the appearance of Miss Ellen Terry, who has not been seen locally since the opening performances of the present theatre (1863), when as a young girl her histrionic talents were being developed in that wonderful stock company of youthful artistes which the late Mr James Henry Chute had gathered together for the Bath and Bristol Theatres. For her initial performance on Monday Much Ado About Nothing was put on, with, of course, Miss Terry as Beatrice. Upon her first entrance round upon round of applause greeted the popular actress, which culminated at the close in a scene of enthusiasm seldom witnessed locally. Excellent support was accorded the leading lady by her admirable company, the Benedick of Mr Matheson Lang proving a masterly impersonation, while the Claudio of Mr E. Harcourt Williams only strengthens the good impression this clever Shakespearian actor made upon a former visit. Miss Hutin Britton secures just appreciation for her skilful handling of Hero, being particularly good in the difficult church scene of the third act. Special mention should be made of the Don Pedro and Don John of Mr Charles Thursby and Mr T. A. Shannon, while sound renderings of Leonato and Borachio are forthcoming from Mr George Fitzgerald and Mr Alfred Bucklaw. Mr John Willes is a capital and humorous Dogberry. The comedy was produced under the direction of Mr Gordon Craig, the stage management being well looked after by Mr Charles La Trobe. On Wednesday The Merchant of Venice, with Miss Terry, of course, as Portia, drew a large audience; and on Thursday The Good Hope and Nance Oldfield formed a strong bill.

PALACE THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Trussell.—A bill full of good things is drawing large houses this week. A dramatic episode, entitled The V.C., is far above the usual playlet, and as acted by Mr Charles Cunningham and his three associates meets with much favour. The Jalvans, Oriental entertainers, perform their tricks with great skill and success; Bennett and Martell, in their crazy comedy act, do their hard work to the accompaniment of laughter and applause; Ferrari Duo, cosmopolitan dancers, excel in their various styles of dancing; Doody and Wright are paying a welcome return visit, and their eccentric comedy business goes as well as ever; George Bendon, the white coon, is another old favourite who is always sure of a warm reception; Beatrice Renee strikes out an original idea in song and dance that pleases her audience; a capital Irish comedian and dancer is Andy Fagan; and the Sisters Adelaide, duettists, also appear with acceptance.

BIRKENHEAD.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—Mr William Greet's company is presenting with undeniable success the late Wilson Barrett's play, Lucky Durham. Mr W. F. Grant gives a careful and effective rendering of the title-rôle. Mr D. M'Carthy is well suited as Richard Vallourton; Lord Mountfallon is finely played by Mr Henry De Solla; and the Hon. Reginald Steighton is admirably portrayed by Mr Paul Belmore. Miss Phyllis Ralph is an irreproachable Helen Vallanton; Miss Mary Relph is an excellent Lady Mountfallon; and Miss Jessie Winter as the Hon. Margaret Steighton and Miss Nellie Bonser as Mrs Durham are both most efficient. Remaining parts are in able hands, and the staging of the piece is capital.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—Mr F. Brooke Warren's company in Mysteries of the Thames is doing good business. As the Hawk Mr Warren is both highly effective and popular. Richard Brandon is well acted by Mr Roy Fortescue, and Bill Riscol is admirably assumed by Mr Elton Morgan. Miss Gwynne Warren displays considerable dramatic power as Flash Nell, and the cast throughout is a thoroughly competent one.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr D. J. Clarke.—The comic element is well represented this week, the list of comedians including, as it does, Mr Neil Kenyon, in his Scottish effusions; Mr John E. Coyle, Mr J. H. Milburn, Mr Harry Conlin, and O'Connor and Brady. Miss Gertie Gitana is repeating her remarkably successful sketch, A Schoolgirl's Holiday. Miss Rosie Coleman is a comedienne and dancer of ability, and the Lyons Trio of acrobatic pantomimists and the Lupino Brothers, mimics and musicians, complete an excellent company.

BEDFORD.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter R. Wilson.—This week the boards are occupied by Mr John Wainwright's company in It's Never too Late to Mend. Mr Wainwright cleverly impersonates Tom Robinson; George Fielding is well sustained by Mr Alfred E. Calver; Mr Hornby Warburton capably fulfils the duties of the chaplain of the prison; Mr Henry Lee imparts humour by his amusing interpretation of Peter Crawley; Mr Edwin Davies is well suited to the part of Isaac Levy; and Mr Harold Webb is a good exponent of Mr Meadows. Miss Kitty Carew sweetly portrays the part of Susan Merton; Miss Millie Milton feelingly impersonates the poor waif Josepha.

BELFAST.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr James M'Cann.—The attraction here this week is the musical play A Country Girl, which has been capitally interpreted by the members of Mr George Dance's company. Honours are due Miss Daisy Le Hay, whose piquant and vivacious impersonation of Nan has charmed many admirers. Miss Maud Boyd must be congratulated on her convincing embodiment of Marjory Joy, her singing being delightful. Mr Charles R. Walenn is a host in himself as Barry, his rich humour and diverting style creating roars of laughter. Mr Walenn is a smart comedian. In the rôle of the Princess Melaneh Miss Ethel Negretti acquits herself with high distinction. Miss Maude Prenton furnishes a decidedly clever impersonation of Sophie, her fascinating style being decidedly captivating. Mr Robert Michael is is an able exponent of Geoffrey Challoner, and no one could desire a better representative of Sir Joseph Verity than Mr Joe Nightingale. Miss Mary Hay is a graceful Mrs St. Quinten, and Mr Arthur Leyshon makes the most of his opportunities as Granfer Mummery. Other rôles are capitally sustained by Miss Florrie Hylton and Messrs St. John Hamund, Jack Daly, P. Corray, &c. The powerful chorus and orchestra are under the capable direction of Mr Sydney Shaw.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr John P. Beardmore.—Much praise is due to Mr Fred W. Warden, the managing director here, for his enterprise in securing such an important engagement as Dr. Maxim Boyd, who comes direct from the London Hippodrome with the sensation of the day, "The Mysterious Kettle." His various experiments with that extraordinary product "liquid air" are watched with the keenest interest. Miss Elaine Ravensberg and company are responsible for an operatic comedy sketch, The Maid and the Brigands, which is quite a feature of the bill, Miss Ravensberg's vocalism being much admired. That droll comedian Mr Cliff Ryland causes peals of laughter with his funny songs and patter, and Grell and Grey command success with their absurdity Bertie's First Lesson in Tennis, a really funny act. The Sisters Terry (Bella and Minnie) are smart duettists, with good voices, and a capital performance is provided by Vance Brothers, comedy instrumentalists, in their new and attractive act entitled Sharp and Flat. Also appearing are Charles Danton, character comedian; Miss Sheila Deans, comedienne; and the Katos, in their decidedly clever Lilliputian act.

FLORAL HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs Lennon Bros.—Under the auspices of the Belfast Shakespearian Society—of which Sir Henry Irving is one of the distinguished patrons—a dramatic performance of no little merit took place at the Floral Hall, Belfast, on the evening of the 13th before a crowded audience. The pièce de résistance was the Trial scene from The Merchant of Venice, in which Mr Sinclair Neill, formerly of Messrs Forbes Robertson's and F. R. Benson's companies, appeared as Shylock. His fine acting as the revengeful Jew completely enthralled the large audience, who accorded him quite an ovation. Mr Neill achieved a success of which he may well feel justly proud. Madame Julia Ryan in the rôle of Portia exhibited decided ability, speaking her lines with the utmost effect, and special praise is due Mr J. Roy's admirable impersonation of Bassanio. Other parts were effectively portrayed by Miss S. Roy and Messrs J. M'Coubrey, T. H. Convery, W. J. Rea (capital as Gratiano), J. Brannigan, and R. J. Allen. Other Shakespearian selections given were scene two of the first act from Julius Cæsar by Mr Sinclair Neill and Mr A. Savage, which reflected much credit on these gentlemen, and the Quarrel scene between Brutus and Cassius was admirably sustained by Messrs J. Roy and W. J. Rea.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Brock.—The engagement of the renowned coster comedian, Mr Alec Hurley, drew capital houses here on Monday. He was in good form, and with his company keenly delighted his innumerable Belfast admirers with his coster sketch entitled The Lambeth Walk. A big hit has been made by the Anartos, musical sketch artistes of repute, their entertainment affording much pleasure; and Silent Tait, the eccentric wizard, is unquestionably very droll. A good reception has been accorded Mr Charles Chard, a versatile comedian with a capital voice; and Mr James Kurry, eccentric comedian, creates amusement with his brisk songs. Mr Harry Coates, "the singing navvy," has a capital voice, which has been heard to the utmost advantage; and the Brothers Redmond, acrobatic comedians, have repeated last week's success. Miss Annie Casey is a charming comedienne, and others appearing are Miss Lillie Soutter, comedienne, and Miss Marion Scott, balladist.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Henry T. Downs.—The star here this week is the clever comedienne, Miss Lily Marney, who has been very successful with her finished rendering of several catchy songs. A good reception has been accorded Mr Charles Woodward, an accomplished actor-vocalist, in The Last Touch. Hanna and James, equilibrists, execute some startling feats, and Mr Morny Cash upholds his reputation as a comedian, his comic songs being hugely enjoyed. The new pictures exhibited this week by Welsker Brothers' Bioscope are very realistic, and the comedy act by the Boston Twins evokes loud merriment. Ellis and Watts, clever comedians, are also capital dancers, and others appearing are Miss Mattie Crawford, a delightful soubrette, and Master Henri, unique juggler.

BILSTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Harry Battersby; Manageress, Miss Grace Battersby.—An excellent portrayal of Glory Quayle, in The Christian, is given by Miss Grace Chalmers, and as the Hon. John Storm Mr Harry Scott is equally effective. Prominent also are Mr Stanley Radcliffe as Father Lamplugh and Mr Charles B. Bedells as Lord Robert Ure. Special mention should be made of the Mrs Callender of Miss Clara Nicholls, and both Miss Lily Grammonde as Polly Love and Mr Jackson Wilcox as Horatio Drake contribute to the success of the play.

BRIDLINGTON.

ROYAL PRINCE'S PARADE.—Manager, Mr Charles Palmer.—The success of the manager's attempt to lengthen the season at this popular resort has been very great, audiences assembling in the pavilion nightly in great numbers to listen to Mr Tom Carrick's White Musketeers, who on Monday took their benefit. Miss Lily Carrick's songs and dances were well done; Mr Squire Day, with his mechanical doll, was very clever; and Mr Jack Bang's powerful baritone voice was effective in his songs. Mr Tom Carrick's female impersonations and mandoline solos were capitally rendered, and the company gave smart little sketches, including a well-played one, The Snowstorm. Mr Fred Marks is a clever piano soloist and accompanist.

BLACKBURN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr Harry Yorke; Business-Manager, Mr Reginald Yorke.—The amusing comedy Are You a Mason? is paying a return visit here this week under the direction of Messrs Edwardes and Frohman. Mr Stephen Wentworth as Frank Perry, and Mr Harry Ashford as Amos Bloodgood cause much laughter in their respective parts. Mr Anthony Fawcett and Mr Tom Mowbray are also very good. Miss Harriett Trench acts well as Mrs Bloodgood, whose three daughters are played by the Misses Violet Graham, Lily Beagle, and Isla Glynn. Hushed Up precedes the comedy each evening.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr E. H. Page.—The King of Thieves is being presented here this week by a company under the direction of Mr Jack Haddon, who also plays the principal part, James Galston. He is ably supported by Mr John Cecil as Harry Travers, the young fireman, Mr Ernest Munro, and Mr Reginald Hamer. As Mary Galston Miss Thorne Hallam is very pleasing.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr Will Murray; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Drury.—The principal attraction here this week is Zertho's dogs, who go through a wonderful performance. The Villions give a comic acrobatic and cycle turn; Stewart and Morgan, vocalists, make a successful reappearance; and Downes and Langford, comedians; Kitty Wager, comedienne; and Georgina Leonard and others make up an attractive programme.

BIRMINGHAM.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Rodgers, Limited; Manager, Mr J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr Henry Johnston.—The D'Oyly Carte opera company continues to supply the works of Gilbert and Sullivan in a most satisfactory manner, and much appreciation is bestowed upon them. The Gondoliers was down for Monday and Wednesday evenings, when Mr C. H. Workman as the Duke of Plaza-Tora greatly pleased those present with his admirable singing and acting. Mr Fred Billington was also available as the Grand Inquisitor, and was made a big favourite; and Miss Nora Maguire as Gianetta, Miss Theresa Rassam as the Duchess, Miss Bessie Mackenzie as Casilda, Miss Jessie Rose as Tessa, Mr Pacie Ripple as Marco Palmieri, and Mr Albert Kavanagh as Giuseppe were all deserving of praise, together with the others of this really satisfactory cast. The Mikado, H.M.S. Pinafore, and The Yeomen of the Guard, though they may have lost their novelty, have by no means lost their charm, and grateful audiences have revelled in the beauties of these works.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. W. Turner; Manager, Mr Victor Turner.—Mr Edward Terry has once more vouchsafed his Birmingham admirers, whose numbers are countless, a rich and a rare treat this week by appearing in most of his popular parts. On Monday The House of Burnside revealed Mr Terry as an emotional actor who can beguile an audience of its tears, and later Bardell v. Pickwick displayed his delightful versatility as Sergeant Buzfuz. On Tuesday The Passport, preceded by The Telephone, showed the favourite comedian in another successful rôle, Christopher Coleman to wit; and on Wednesday Sweet Lavender, with Mr Terry as Dick Phenyl, constituted the evening's delight. Love in Idleness and You Never Know are also in the week's bill. The visit has proved eminently successful, and the support is most worthy. Mr Arthur Cornell, who acts with exemplary dignity as Parminter; Miss Daisy Murch, in her well-rendered rôle of Marion; Mr Allan Pollock, who acts with admirable frankness the part of the good solicitor; Mr Fred Knight, who makes a fine part of the "bo'sun;" Miss Beatrice Selwyn, who well expresses the loyalty of the faithful Betty; Mr A. Hylton Allen, who is decidedly a hit as Jack Morrow; Miss Olga Kay, who acts prettily as Jenny; and Miss Beatrice Terry and Master Roy Lorraine as the grandchildren take part in The House of Burnside.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Lester Collingwood.—A London Actress takes the stage this week, and meets with cordial support. Miss Emma Litchfield is to the forefront with her brilliant acting as Hilda Mannering. Miss Maud Saxby gives a fine rendering of the part of Nellie. Mr Chas. A. Leicester well fills the rôle of Lieutenant Kingston, and Mr Stuart Cleveland is a potent factor in the success as Clive Crawford. Mr Fred Tenaur acts commendably as Moses Mendoza; Mr Sam Wilford embellishes the part of Pat Maloney with several clever songs, and Miss Alice Capel, Miss Louise Millward, Miss Adele, Miss Nelly Eglen, Mr Geo. Doyle, and Mr Alfred Gregory act in a capable manner.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Walter Melville; Resident-Manager, Mr J. Hindle Taylor.—His Majesty's Guests, which is one of Mr Fred Karno's most successful productions, is receiving fresh proof of its popularity at the Metropole this week. Mr Harry Roxbury supplies an infinity of fun as Sergeant Lightning; Mr Walter Balfour as the swaggering Lord Easem acts in the most approved manner; Miss Florence Burns plays Lady Maud with much success; Mr Charles Usher does good work as Mr Miffin; Mr Victor Knight paints a clever picture of Mr Minks; and Mr Leon Petters is a big favourite as Harry. Miss Hetty Gale as Dolly wins admirers in plenty, and there are many others who lend themselves to the success of this enjoyable production, in which everybody shines, from principals to chorus.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Owner and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr Ben Sydney.—Sapho has returned here, with Miss Annie Bell in her now well-known and admired conception of the title-rôle. Mr Horatio Sinclair essays the part of Jean Gaussin in a most satisfactory manner. Mr C. Antley makes his presence welcome as Césaire; Mr Archie Helsby is successful as Flamant; Mr J. A. Storey makes the rôle of Father Legrand very acceptable; Miss Laura Ray wins approval as Machaume; and little Miss Lottie Ray depicts the tantrums of the child Joseph with absolute fidelity. Messrs R. A. Green, H. Langford, and the Misses Brinklow, Oliver, Desmond, and Greenhalgh also take parts.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr Charles Barnard; Manager, Mr Dan Barnard.—At War with Women constitutes the evening's fare this week, and in this clever and exciting drama Mr Frank Bateman's company scores indubitably. Mr Edward Owston as Lieut. Alexis bears his hero's honours gracefully and well. Miss Marion Warren is fully appreciated as Frida Malakoff; Mr Steer Flinders plays the villain, Ivan Clovitch, with much ability; and Miss Lizzie Montague as that "beautiful white devil," Auriel Romanoff, towers high among the company with her powerful acting. Mr Clinton Baddeley as the Pole, Antolski, acts in a finished and dignified manner; and the comic parts are well delivered by Miss Mabel Leigh, Mr Shaun Glenville, and Mr Fred J. Lennox.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr A. W. Matcham.—T. E. Dunville is the attraction here this week, his eccentricities being keenly appreciated. The Brothers Horne, in their comedy boxing act, are entertaining; Lily Burnand has some good songs; the equilibristic feats of the Lukushima Troupe and the Parros astound the audiences; Selma Braatx is loudly applauded for her juggling act; and the Lannons, duettists; George Formby, a quaint comedian; Harry Bickley; and Dot Hardy, low comedienne, complete the programme.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Albert Bushell.—The patrons of this popular house were rather disappointed during the earlier part of this week at the absence of Annie Purcell and the Albert and Edmunds Troupe, owing in both cases to indisposition. The management secured the services of the Brothers Horne, who are at the Empire. The Belle of the Orient remains another week. Ross and Grayson are repeatedly encored for their clever business; the Sisters Dacre render their songs and dances with good effect; and other excellent turns are provided by Gladys Mavius, Will Dalton, Dolly Harmer, and Zanfretta and Naplo.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford.—One of the finest animal entertainments we have seen is that of Richard Sawade with his lions, tigers, bears, and dogs, and Mdlle. Clothilde with her performing cockatoos and parrots is highly appreciated. Whit Cunliffe, J. H. Scotland, and Martine and Son come in for a good share of applause. Amy Augarde, an exceedingly clever burlesque actress, and Mabel La Blanche are well received. The juggling feats of Geraldo are very smart, as also is the contortionism of Monsieur D'Musto. Wal Robbins and Terry and Lambert are also in the bill.

BORDESLEY PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr Edw. Foster.—May Edouin and Fred Edwards are appearing here in A Bachelor's Dream, which is capitally played and loudly applauded. The British Quartet render their selections with good effect; Bradley and Warwick have a capital comedy sketch, The Advent of Venus; and Elsie Roby also appears in a comedy act. The acrobatic turn presented by the Three Georges is most entertaining; Rich and Rich are really funny; and the Passports, John Gilmore, Albert Le Fre, and Dora Clements add to the success of the long programme.

BLACKPOOL.

HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General Manager, Mr J. R. Huddlestone.—The New Barmaid is again proving attractive here, the company enacting the same being under the direction of Mr Alexander Loftus. The two most important characters, Captain Lovebury and Bertie White, are in the hands of their original exponents, Mr Harrison Brockbank and Mr Joseph B. Montague respectively. Custom hath made it in them a property of easiness to enact the parts with the greatest success. Mr Alexander Loftus does well as William White, and Mr Albert Weston has a part that suits him in Mons. Bonsor. The name rôle is in the hands of Miss Gwladys Elvey, who presents a very charming picture. Miss Hilda Blanche as Brenda Louth, and Miss Violet Osmund as Dora Heather are also seen to advantage. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr Michael Dwyer.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr T. Sergenson.—Mr Laurence Irving and company are here this week with Richard Lovelace. Mr Irving plays the name-rôle with considerable success, and Miss Mabel Hackney supplies a careful portrayal of Lucy Sacheverell. The Colonel Hawley of Mr William E. Ashcroft is a fine performance, and Mr Henry Crocker as Alderman Sacheverell, Mr Michael Sherbrooke as Mr Porter, and Mr Chris Walker as the Adjutant are satisfactory. The Mistress Porter of Mrs Campbell Bradley is also a commendable performance. Daisy's Escape (by permission of Sir Henry Irving) is the curtain-raiser.

PALACE.—General Manager, Mr G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Waller.—The Manhattan Comedy Four, who appear at the top of the bill this week, give a good turn of comedy and vocalism. The Three Sisters Slater, banjoists and dancers, appear in a scena entitled Navolio; Mark Anthony tells funny stories; Percy Hannan sings well; and Stanley and Vandyke score a great success in their comedy act. The Five Delevines appear in a musical mélange; the Misses Lytton sing some pleasing duetts; Regan and Ryan display their versatility in comedy song and dance; and Henry A. Moore shines in mimicry. Flora Lumiere's fairy grotto is a charming turn; and the sketch supplied by Weston and May is also well received.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Signor Pepi and company; Manager, Mr T. P. Dulgnan.—Another big programme is set forth here this week. The Black Troubadours are a quartet of vocalists who are meeting with the cordial reception which is fully warranted by their singing. Texas Hattie is a clever young artist on the tight rope; and Lillieth Leyton and her company appear in a sketch entitled The Order of the Bath, which finds great favour. Most of the other artists are well known and appreciated here, and include Flo Melville, comedienne; Oswald, the hand balancer; Gus Hindell, comedian; Duncan, club manipulator; and Jack Lorimer, the Scotch comedian.

BOOTLE.

ROYAL MUNCASTER.—Proprietors, Messrs Pennington; Acting-Manager, Mr Albert Wilson.—One Woman's Wickedness is on the boards here this week, and the stirring melodramatic incidents of the piece are much enjoyed. Mr Charles Phelps as Jem Craggs takes the leading part, and gives an excellent rendering; Mr Laurence Brien as Philip Beaufort leaves nothing to be desired; and Mr George Byrne as the scheming lawyer is excellent. Mr Arthur Ferriss makes an amusing Lord Algernon Fitznoodle; Mr Howard Ward shows himself a born low comedian in the character of Limpy Larry; Marianne Beaufort is well rendered by Miss Frances Jessop; and Miss Florence Lloyd as Janet Raymond plays an odious part with the utmost ability. Aunt Crasy (Miss Florence M. Daly) is a very creditable performance; Miss Ethel Ashbury makes an excellent barmaid; and Miss Louie Davis as Lillian Craggs is a sweet singer.

BOSCOMBE.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr F. Mouillot; Manager, Mr Rowland Stewart.—Mr John Denton's company pays a visit here this week in A Modern Judas. Mr Denton is excellent in the rôle of Elkanah Pearce; Mr Frank Beresford appears to advantage as Jack Vavasour; and Mr Percy Rhodes is a capable exponent of the villain, Captain Melbourne. Mr Trueman Towers does well as Bennett, and Mr Willie Scott's impersonation of Tom Hopkins is eminently successful. Miss Ada Palmer is good as Miss Agatha Pearce, and the rôle of Elise receives good handling from Miss Kate Walbran, the part of Claire Rivers being sustained by Miss Violet King in a thoroughly able manner.

BOURNEMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Sons; Lessee, Mr Mouillot; Manager, Mr Rowland Stewart.—Messrs Charles Frohman and Arthur Chudleigh's company is paying us a first visit with The Duke of Killicrankie. Mr Langhorne Burton distinguishes himself in the title-rôle, acting throughout with ease and distinction; Mr Arthur Grenville is immensely diverting in his impersonation of Mr Henry Pitt-Welby, M.P.; and Mr Howard W. Cochran gives point to the character of Mr Ambrose Hicks. Miss Doris Templeton unites charm, grace, and naïveté in the rôle of Lady Henrietta Addison; Miss Alda Jenoure cleverly interprets the worldly wisdom of the rich and fascinating widow, Mrs Mulholland; and Miss Ellen Standing is well suited as the Countess of Pangbourne. Barbara precedes the main attraction.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.

NEW THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr John Waller.—Mr Edmund Tearle is here this week with a selection of plays. On Monday The Three Musketeers was produced, Mr Tearle appearing as D'Artagnan with the greatest success. Miss Kate Clinton is an accomplished Miladi, playing her part in an easy and natural manner. Anne of Austria is impersonated by Miss Mary Campbell with considerable ability, and Miss Esther Tearle is pleasing as Constance. Mr Wm. J. Miller, an actor of undoubted talent, does well as Cardinal Richelieu. Praise is also due to Mr Frederick Barlow and Mr Edmond Grogan as King Louis XIII. and the Duke of Buckingham respectively. Mr T. W. Benson is amusing as Boniface, Mr W. T. Ross shines as the Count De Rochfort, while the Three Musketeers, Athos, Porthos, and Aramis, are well impersonated by Messrs W. Raynham, J. V. Fairley, and V. O. Crabtree. Macbeth, *The Merry Wives of

BRADFORD.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr John Hart; General Manager, Mr T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Richardson.—The Orchid, one of Mr George Edwardes's many notable successes, had a warm welcome here again on Monday. Miss Coralie Blythe is charming as Lady Violet Anstruther; Miss Irene Verona is again a notable success as Caroline Vokins; as the adventuress, Zelie Rumbert, Miss Ethel Griffies is very good; Miss Luna Love is entertaining as the knowing secretary, Thisbe; with ability Miss Katie Leechman plays the Countess Anstruther; and Miss Gertrude Gilliam is vivacious as Josephine Zaccary. Mr Lawrence Grossmith is distinctly prominent in a capital performance of the Hon. Guy Scrymgeour, and he has an able colleague in Mr Donald Hall as Dr. Fausset. Mr Ellis Ogilvie avails himself well of his many opportunities as Aubrey Chesterton; the fiery Comte Raoul De Cassignat is intensely humorous in the hands of Mr Sam Walsh; Mr Sidney Vincent's Zaccary is a clever performance; and Mr George Gregory is responsible for much of the hearty laughter as the irrepressible Meakin.

Prince's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frances Laidler.—For the first time here Miss Rosalind Scott-Watson and her capable company are appearing in the drama of strong interest The Scarlet Woman. Miss Scott-Watson in the name-part displays histrionic ability of a very high order. The lady has strong support, Mr David M'Farlane as her associate in crime, Will Raymond, being excellent, and Mr Bryce Methven sustaining the part of the hero, Philip Gordon, with effect. As the heroine, Margery Honor, Miss Muriel Allyne plays gracefully; and Mr Reginald Fox is good as Richard Marchant. In lighter vein Miss Lala Connell and Mr Mat Melrose contribute to the success of the performance.

Empire.—Moss' Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr E. Crawford Swann.—Mr A. C. Lilly and company are here again this week with the military dramatic sketch Drummed Out, which is well received, and to the rest of the programme Will Musgrave, comedian, contributes acceptably. Beatrice Willey's excellent voice is heard to advantage in ballads. A clever gymnastic performance is gracefully accomplished by the charming Trentanovi Sisters. The clever turn by Maxwell and Frances is deservedly appreciated, and Tom Leamore is a distinctly funny comedian. Dome does clever and amusing work as a clay modeller; Nellie Coleman, the lady comedian, makes up wonderfully, and is very amusing and energetic; acrobatic dancing by Marba and Verity is combined with humour; and Tennyson and Wallis provide capital comedy, and so, too, do those funnily contrasted comedians, Big Ben Brown and Little George Le Clerq, in their absurd turn, A Dark Night Before Us.

Palace Theatre.—Lessee, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr W. E. Berry.—An amusing and clever contribution to the programme here this week is the turn by Sanford and Lyons, comedians and dancers. The Four Jumels, with banjo and mandoline, are clever and entertaining. George Hyam, comedian, submits an acceptable turn; Fyne and Hurley win approval with their sketch, The Coster and the Dude; Mignon Tremaine, comedienne, makes a successful début here; and a fine conjuring entertainment is given by Ching-Llao, the Asiatic mystic, who bewilders his audience; the Phydoras are entertaining in their eccentric musical act; Fred Dunstone gives an acceptable character comedy turn; Carne Curre with banjo, patter, and dog is diverting; and F. V. St. Clair's patriotic songs are as usual well relished.

St. George's Hall.—Manager, Mr S. H. Carter.—Adeler and Sutton's Pierrots are here this week, viz., Charles Harvey and Jack W. Hughes, comedians; Mena Eckermann, comedienne; Forshaw Kershaw, musical entertainer; Edwin Adeler, comedian; and Olly Oakley, zither banjoist. In addition, the New Century Company are exhibiting some excellent Animated Pictures.

BRIGHTON.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. Cecil Beryl; Assistant-Manager, Mr Harcourt M. Beryl.—Mr George Musgrove's company is paying a farewell visit here with The Belle of New York, and is doing excellent business. Mr Harry A. Meymott gives a very entertaining representation of Ichabod Bronson, whose spendthrift son, Harry, finds an able exponent in Mr Philip Leslie; Mr Max Copland makes an eccentric and amusing Karl Von Pumpernick; Mr Cecil Burt is well suited as Doc Sniffkins; Mr Paddy Dupres is a capital Kenneth Mugg; and Mr Alfred Selby and Mr Albert Sealy as the Portuguese twins are a lively pair. Mr Frank Lawton achieves distinct success as Blinky Bill, and is enthusiastically applauded for his whistling and bone solos. Miss Beatrice Lamotte submits a charming portrayal of Violet Grey, the demure Salvation lassie; Miss Lillian Digges acts brightly as Fifi Fricot; Miss Kitty Lindley is a winsome Kissie Fitzgarter; Miss Winnie Brown a handsome and impressive Cora Angelique; and Miss May Angus Young a pleasing Mamie Clancy. The full chorus and augmented orchestra acquit themselves admirably, and the duties of conductor are in the able hands of Mr Leonard Hornsey.

Grand Theatre.—Under the entire control of Mr Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr W. F. Crowe.—Mr Edward Marris's company opened here on Monday with As Midnight Chimes. Mr Melville Bickford gave a masterly and convincing impersonation of the villainous Luke Dezzard; Mr Frank E. Petley made a manly Dave Stannard; and Miss Gertrude Price was sympathetic and impressive as Mary Stannard. Mr Henry Beaufort's Ezra Gamble and Mr Percy Maitland's Nat Wilson were well played, and Witty Wattie Walton was very droll and amusing as Tat Spavvin. Miss Annie Megson was a vivacious Suzette, and able assistance was rendered by Mr Dan Parker, Miss Iris M. Ward, and Miss Minnie Ethel. The drama was admirably staged and mounted.

Aquarium.—Manager, Mr W. J. Hardy; Secretary, Mr S. H. Andrews.—The Dagonets, society entertainers, are here this week, the party comprising Miss P. M'Carthy, soprano; Miss L. Beaton, contralto; Mr F. Dunn, humourist; Mr H. Stockwell, tenor; Mr B. Brown, baritone; and Mr J. Blascheck, humourist. Ruffle's Imperial Bioscope also adds to the enjoyment of the large audiences.

Alhambra.—Managing-Director, Mr J. L. Graydon; General Manager, Mr Ernest Lepard.—The following are here this week:—Captain Woodward's famous sea lions and seals; Spry and Monti, comedians; the Sisters Pine (Vesta and Minnie), in the musical comedy, A Kitchen Rehearsal; Herbert Shelley, actor-vocalist; the Leonards (Bob and Jennie), duettists and dancers; Charles Faning, patterer and vocal comedian; Charles Russell, comedian and vocalist; the Brothers Durant, in the speciality act, Kings of the Airship; Ara, Zebra, and Vora, in "Indian Pastimes;" Harry Zetter, comedian and grotesque dancer; and the Alhambra pictures.

Hippodrome Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—The following are here this week:—The Carola miniature circus; the Kimberley Boys, comedians and dancers; the Brothers Phillipi, in their latest creation, Shunting; Harry Edson and his canine marvel "Doc;" Grant and Grant, American speciality artistes; Kelly and Gillette, in their billiard table act; the Brothers Krags, gymnasts; Madeleine May, comedienne; Carlotta Levey, in her latest successes; the Legay Quartet of Parisian dancers; and animated pictures.

New Palace Pier.—Manager, Mr C. Thompson Ford; Entertainment Manager, Mr Drew Mackintosh. Mr Frank Nelson's company is here this week with the farcical comedy Trooper Hunt's Widow. Mr Howard Cridland undertakes the dual-rôle of Trooper Hunt and Widow Hunt, and proves highly successful and very amusing. Mr Roy Milton is effective as Richard Hunt; Mr Edgar Kent's Harry Fraser and Mr Henry Osman's Gordon Ryder are well played; and Mr Cecil Fowler is seen to great advantage as Nathaniel Sapp. Miss Amy Edmonds makes a pleasing Frances Graham; and Miss Susie Oak as Bessie Wood and Miss Ella Kitson as Mrs Jane Watson merit commendation.

West Pier Pavilion.—Secretary and Entertainment Manager, Mr A. D. Norman.—An excellent company under the direction of Mr Herbert Greville is here this week with The New Clown. Mr Stanley Cooke is highly amusing as Lord Cyril Garston, the new clown; Mr Herbert Greville gives a clever impersonation of Mr Dixon; Mr Fred Paul is a manly Captain Jack Trent; Mr Fred Lake makes a capital Tom Baker; Mr James Benwell is admirably suited as Billy, the strong man; Miss Katie Yates's Rose Platt merits praise.

Concert Hall, West-street.—Messrs Maskelyne and Cooke's company are here this week, under the direction of Mr David Devant, and are delighting large audiences with their magic and mystery.

BRISTOL.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr James Macready Chute.—There was a large attendance here on Monday evening, when Mr F. R. Benson and company commenced a week's engagement with The Taming of the Shrew. The comedy was tastefully staged, and it was well performed. Both Mr and Mrs Benson were highly successful in their respective parts of Petruchio and Katherina. The applause and laughter was frequent throughout the performance, and the curtain had to be raised several times in the course of the evening. Miss Mabel Moore presented a charming and refined portrayal of Bianca; Mr Cyril Keightley acted cleverly as Lucentio; Mr Clarence Derwent did well as Tranio; Mr Percy D. Owen was sufficiently dignified as Baptista; Grumio and Biondello had capital exponents in Mr G. R. Weir and Mr Arthur Whitby; and Messrs B. A. Pittar as Vincentio, Mr H. O. Nicholson as Gremio, and Mr G. Buchanan as Hortensio all did full justice to their respective parts. The part of the Widow was nicely taken by Miss Cissie Saumarez, and she obtained considerable applause for her song. On Tuesday evening Macbeth was staged in a fine, rugged style. There was a good attendance in all parts of the house, many seats in the dress circle being occupied by pupils of the leading Clifton schools. The performance went well, both Mr and Mrs Benson obtaining much applause for their expositions of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. Mr Cyril Keightley presented a fine dramatic performance of Macduff, and Mr Arthur Whitby distinguished himself by a very careful and telling representation of Banquo. The remaining characters were all in good hands, and the tragedy was followed throughout with marked attention. The Merry Wives of Windsor, Hamlet, The Rivals, Richard III., Richard II., and As You Like It, have also been played during the week, the two latter at matinées.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Ernest Carpenter.—Mr Henry Eglinton's company is here with When the Lights are Low, which is staged in a satisfactory manner. Mr Fred Carlton and Mr Edward Avinal present highly satisfactory impersonations of Guy Goldsworthy and Roland Goldsworthy. Mr Tom Roberts is successful as Admiral Goldsworthy; Miss Adeline Mercandalli and Miss Kate Froude are pleasing exponents of Nancy Christie and Violet Christie; Miss Cissie Williams is excellent in the rôle of Stella Goldsworthy; Miss Maude Leonard is sufficiently vivacious as Kathleen Kerry; and the amusing parts of Willie Wilkins, Tim Wilkins, and Ikey Isaacson are capitally taken by Mr Dick Seddon, Mr Kenneth Scott, and Mr Tom R. Seymour.

Palace.—Managing Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Resident Manager, Mr Horace Livermore; Secretary, Mr Welchman. — The Donaldson Brothers and Ardel company is here with the amusing pantomimic sketch A Zoological Comedy; Adrim and Oram do a smart turn as rag time eccentrics; Miss May Lilian Levey has some good songs and obtains applause; the Fleury Trio present a capital exposition of French dancing; Collins and Rice, patter comedians, obtain appreciation; the Brewsters do a good act as vocalists and speciality dancers; Laffan B. Jolly, comedian, pleases; Miss Lily Lonsdale and Miss Alma Jones are both agreeable vocalists; Ernie Myers, patter comedian, is successful; and Robert Williams, as an extra turn, scores in a display of sword exercises. The performance concludes with some good animated pictures.

Empire.—Proprietor, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—Miss Vesta Victoria, comedienne, heads the programme with an excellent turn, which is applauded by all parts of the house; Duncan's Royal Scotch collies do many clever acts neatly, and evince perfection of training; the Picquays give an expert acrobatic display; Alf Aubyn is successful with coon songs; Miss Alice Lorette presents an interesting and pleasing act with her statue dog, Ben; Miss Madge Grey, comedienne, does a smart and agreeable turn with dialect songs, &c.; the De Breans are clever jugglers; the Durvals are experts on the horizontal bar; and Ward Brothers are quaint acrobatic comedians. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

BROUGHTON.

Victoria, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr Charles A. Wilkes; Licensee, Mr James W. Haworth; Manager and Secretary, Mr James M. Hardie, jun.—The excellent variety programme is well received by large audiences. Jenny Valmore is deservedly applauded and encored; Ryder Slone gives a successful turn with his comic songs; Rose Harvey's numbers give much pleasure; and other good turns include George Daunton, character vocalist; Ada Martine, comedienne; Fred Spencer, expressionist; Fred Herbert, topical vocalist; and Dainez Comedy Circus; with some good animated pictures.

BURY (LANCS).

Theatre Royal and Opera House, Limited.—General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling.—The Carl Rosa opera company is here for this week. On Monday Lohengrin was given. In the title-rôle Herr Julius Walther was in excellent voice, his acting also being very fine; Mr Charles Victor was Telramund, and right well did he acquit himself, his singing being a great success; as Elsa Miss Lizzie Burgess sang with great taste and charm; and Madame Augusta Renard, who took the part of Ortrud, used her wonderful voice admirably. The scenery, dresses, and chorus were alike magnificent. Carmen, Faust, Tannhauser, Don Giovanni, Cavalleria Rusticana, and Pagliacci are also in the répertoire.

BUXTON.

Opera House. — Secretary and Manager, Mr Arthur Willoughby.— For Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday this week we had Mr C. P. Levilly's company in the comic opera, Amorelle. M. Gaston Serpette's delightful music and Mr White's witty book greatly pleased the audiences, and the opera is performed by a most capable company of artists. Mr Leon Simkin had quite the lion's share of the laughter-making as Dr. Napoleon Bonaparte Crow, and Mr Arthur Cozens sang well and acted with spirit as the hero Jules. Mr Horace Manger did well in the small part of François, and Mr J. Redmond, as Lupin, sang with evident ability the lullaby duet with Lesbia. Mr Langford Reed, too, was well cast as Alphonse; Mr Fred Carrington played most effectively as Farmer Dotard, and was recalled for his capital song with the tail of "I'ses." The chief ladies' parts were exceptionally strongly cast. Miss Adah Grey sang delightfully and acted with infinite charm as Lesbia, and Miss Empsie Bowman was quite irresistible in the title part. Miss Bowman sings most artistically, and has a very winning way with her. The choruses were capitally rendered.

CAMBRIDGE.

New Theatre.—Managing Director, Mr W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—A charming play, exceedingly well acted, was the verdict passed on Monday night by those who were fortunate enough to witness Monsieur Beaucaire, given by Mr Norman Macowan's company. The title-rôle was undertaken by Mr Macowan, and therein he displayed all the qualities of the finished actor. Miss Violet Sterne as Lady Mary Carlisle was also much admired, acting the part in a thoroughly earnest and sympathetic manner. Mr J. Stuart Wilson must be commended for the restraint he put upon himself as Lord Winterset, not overdoing the part in the slightest. Major Molyneux, in the hands of Mr Herbert Cornish, was also well done. A clever character sketch was given of Beau Nash by Mr H. A. Young; Captain Badger was well rendered by Mr P. Ramsay Forman; and a special word of praise is due to Miss Millie Hamer for her winsome Lucy Rellerton.

CARDIFF.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Robert Redford.—Mr E. S. Willard has returned to Cardiff after a short absence, and has presented this week two of his popular creations—Tom Pinch and The Cardinal. The former play was presented on Monday. This famous character of Dickens was rendered by the clever actor in a manner that left nothing to be desired. Mr Willard was frequently and loudly applauded. Miss Maud Hoffman was a faithful representative of Mary Graham; Mr H. Cane gave an admirable rendering of the part of Pecksniff; John Westlock and Martin Chuzzlewit had capable exponents in Mr William Souter and Mr S. A. Homewood; while Mr Ulick Burke deserves hearty commendation for his capital impersonation of old Martin Chuzzlewit. Mrs Russ Whytal made a pleasing Ruth Pinch, Mrs Lupin was excellently depicted by Miss E. H. Tombes, Mr Walter Edmunds as Mark Tapley gave a very creditable representation, while the quaint characters of Charity and Mercy were quite safe in the hands of Miss Eileen Warren and Miss Mabel Dubois. The Cardinal was produced during the latter part of the week.

King's Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Bateman; General-Manager, Mr Robert Sawin.—The bill-of-fare here is the powerful drama entitled The Village Blacksmith. This is the first time the piece has been to Cardiff, and is presented by Messrs Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company. The leading part of John Strong, the blacksmith, is skilfully rendered by Mr Sam Livesey, while the numerous other characters are all exceptionally well acted. An attractive feature of the production is a wrestling match, which causes much excitement.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Lea.—The following names appear in the bill here:—Spot, the enchanting coon, in his up-to-date scena, The Cuke-Walk Craze; Tina Clementa with her horse and troupe of performing dogs; G. W. Hunter and Mdlle. Ayah in a vocal and magical mélange; the musical eccentriques, Binns and Binns; Lizzie Valrose, a pleasing singer of homely songs; Scottish Meisters, the Highland comedy quartet; Walter Stanley, comedian; Alcide Capitaine, the perfect gymnast; Bert Byrne, comique; and Arthur Melrose, the original word whistling comedian.

CARLISLE.

Algie's Hippodrome.—Proprietress, Mrs P. E. Veitch; General Manager, Mr C. Algie.—Mendel, the blind pianist, is the star turn, and although it is his second appearance here, his performance crowds the house nightly, and is received with enthusiastic approval; Reklaw, a smart juggler on the rolling globe, meets with success; and Mr Bob Stephenson's funny Irish stories and clever dancing create laughter and applause. A smart turn is that contributed by Learto, a versatile musical comedian, who is assisted by a wonderfully intelligent little fox-terrier. A clever triple jockey act and new pictures shown by the Hippodrome Biograph complete a well-arranged and much-appreciated programme.

CHELTENHAM.

Opera House. — General Manager, Mr H. Oswald Redford.—This week we are being charmed with Quality Street, presented by Bright and Maxwell's company. Mr George Brandram as Valentine Brown displays fine elocutionary powers and an admirable stage presence. Miss Florence Jackson wins favour as Phœbe Throssell; and Miss Grace Edwin as Susan plays well. Miss Gwynneth Galton depicts the part of Patty with skill and a wealth of humour. Mr Arthur C. F. Lysons' impersonation of Ensign Blade is excellent. Master Ernest Hollom as Master Arthur Wellesley Tomson shows great promise.

CHESTERFIELD.

Theatre Royal, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr Holbery Hardy.—Mr George Kirk and Miss Mary Neil's company is here this week with Judy. Mr Kirk gives an original rendering of Grip the detective. In the dual-rôle of Alice and Polly Miss Nell proves herself an accomplished actress. Miss Florrie Groves is most vivacious in the title-rôle, and Miss Muriel Thompson is efficient as Blake. Mr Carlton Wallace makes a villainous Duburg, Mr Wm. Vane is a good hero, and mention should be made of Mr Will Casey as Jim.

Corporation Theatre.—Lessee, Mr Samuel L. Urwick.—Mr Lawrence Brough's company is proving a great attraction here with the two farcical comedies The Lady of Ostend and The Cruise of the Saucy Sally, which are staged on alternate nights. In the former Mr Harry Hampson well portrays the character of Dick Whortles; Mr Percy Marshall is exceedingly good as Joseph Carbury; the French Baron is in the able hands of Mr Lawrence Brough; and Miss Kate Milford makes a charming Dorothy Whortles.

CLYDEBANK.

New Gaiety Theatre.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Wilson.—These boards are occupied this week with the drama, In the Shadow of Night, presented by Mr James Willard's company. Mr George Harvey makes a good Squire of Hazelmere. As his son Gordon Allington Mr Howard L. Tracey is highly successful. Mr Hamilton Deane proves himself to be an accomplished actor, his characterisation of the villain Clifford York being quite original, and as his accomplice Jake Grudgewell, a poacher, Mr Fred Norburn is also very good. Mr Archie Selwyn as Joe Jackson and Rev. Nathaniel Hope is highly entertaining. Miss May Richardson as Violet Kingston is an emotional actress of high standard, and her natural and fine acting charms the audience, who were not slow in recognising her talents. Miss Nellie Sheffield is a sprightly Mollie Woodstock; Miss Millie Gordon portrays Bob, a little tramp, very smartly; Mr Ern Carlton gives a finished performance of James Woodstock; and Tom Nainby is well looked after by Mr Chisholm Taylor.

COATBRIDGE.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietress, Mrs Mary Watson; Manager, Mr C. B. Fountaine.—Messrs Fred Darcy and Fred J. Little's company occupies the boards here this week on a return visit with The Executioner's Daughter. Mr Edward M. Hamilton, who appears as Monsieur Roche, gives a performance worthy of the highest praise; Mr George Beverley characteristically portrays Felix Marius; Mr Wilson Howard successfully delineates Paul Revel; Mr W. H. Sharpe submits an excellent character sketch of Kretch; and Mr E. W. Avery exhibits talent as Tom Holmes. Miss Carlotta Anson gives a wonderful rendering of Felice; Miss Beattie Moore is delightful as Christina; as is also Miss Dorothy Riddell in the title-rôle.

CASTLEFORD.

Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr Chas. Gadsby; Business Manager, Councillor Henry Masterman.—A cordial reception was accorded Miss Winifred Maude's company on Monday in The Sins of a City. The acting is good and the scenery much above the average. Mr J. W. Baxter in the dual-rôle of Joe and Jasper Woodleigh works in a vigorous and telling manner; Mr Ivan Gore supplies an impressive portrayal of Donald M'Ivor; Mr Leslie Beaufort finds ample scope for his undoubted abilities as Ralph Blackwater; Mr Victor Du Cane has an easy and natural method as Isaac Levi; Mr Royce Carleton plays throughout with much earnestness as Sandy M'Donald; Miss Winifred Maude gives skilful and efficient aid as Seaweed; Miss Alice Granville displays spirit and vivacity as Midge; and Miss Marie Lyons is a conscientious Lesbia.

CHORLEY

Grand Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr G. T. Sante; Secretary, Mr J. Clay.—The attraction this week is the sensational drama, Wep-Ton-No-Mah. Go-Won-Go-Mohawk, the Indian actress and authoress, was well received in her creation of the title-rôle; Mr C. W. Charles gave a capital representation of Colonel Stockton; and Manuel Lopez was powerfully acted by Mr G. Thorne. The singing and dancing of Messrs G. D. Hackney and Dan Ryan were much appreciated. Mr Geo. Courtney and Mr Theo Alker were good in their respective parts. The characters of Nellie Stockton and Matilda Sniffles were well sustained by Miss Minnie Goepel and Miss Jessie Hart.

CONSETT.

New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr Lloyd Clarance.—Mr John Cassidy and company are here with Muldoon's Picnic, and are receiving good support. Mr Edwin Garth as Michael Mulcahy and Mr W. G. Wesley as Dennis Muldoon are very good in their respective parts. As Mrs Muldoon Mr Leo Whamboult is successful; Mr W. H. Montgomery as Johnny O'Brien and Mr G. Cromwell as Gussie Tearle are quite successful; and as Kitty Muldoon Miss Madge Cassidy is very pleasing.

CORK.

Opera House.—Manager, Mr John Horgan.—Mr Norman V. Norman's company is appearing here this week in a number of plays, opening on Monday with Nell Gwyn. Mr Norman as Charles II. gave an artistic rendering of the part; the title-rôle was filled by Miss Beatrice Wilson in charming style. Mr Cooper Willis as the Earl of Rochester was clever; Mr Eric Maxon was a forceful Lord Dellans; and Mr Robert Hilton as Master Ralph Curaitor acted with skill and spirit. Miss Kathleen Rind gave a dainty delineation of the character of Betty Arndale, and Miss Lillian Kevill-Davies was an acceptable Lady Castlemaine. The play was keenly enjoyed. Under the Red Robe, David Garrick, and The Lady of Lyons are also in the répertoire.

Palace Theatre.—Manager, Mr Henry Kemble.—There is an excellent programme here, which includes Harry Maynard, actor vocalist, who gives a number of songs in capital style. Percy Cahill, comedian, also pleases. Mdlle. Magna in tableaux vivants represents several beautiful pieces of sculpture; the Two Seebolds give a musical act; Rodin, tramp cyclist, causes much amusement; Whitty Gower; G. W. Hastings, comedian; Siamoso San, a juggler; and Hill, Barry, and Lang, comedians, also contribute interesting turns.

COVENTRY.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr Wm. Bennett.—A large and enthusiastic audience on Monday night welcomed a first appearance in Coventry of the Orchid. Miss Ethel Bryant is excellent in the part of Lady Violet Anstruther; Miss Irene Desmond is successful as Josephine Zaccary; Miss Poppy Wilkinson satisfactorily impersonates Thisbe; and Miss Madge Lucas is most amusing as Caroline Vokins. Miss Eve Melville capitally portrays the part of Zelie Rumbert; Mr Ernest Darrell is seen to advantage as Mr Aubrey Chesterton; Mr Edmund Page is amusing as the Comte Raoul Cassignac; Mr Arthur Hemsley is responsible for some capital dancing as Zaccary; and Mr B. Wright, an old favourite, plays Meakin in his usual accomplished form.

CREWE.

Lyceum Theatre.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Henry Taylor.—In the Ranks, which opened the new Lyceum Theatre here about seventeen years ago, is paying a return visit this week, and Messrs Carlton and Armitage's company is playing to good business. Mr Edward Lloyd, a manly and earnest Ned Drayton, fully deserves the hearty reception accorded him. Miss Edith Blair-Staples makes a graceful and winsome Ruth Herrick; Mr Arthur Palling as Colonel Wynter gives an excellent portrayal; Barbara Herrick is nicely played by Miss Ella Wilmer; Gideon Blake is entrusted to Mr H. Cecil, who well sustains the character; Captain Holcroft is well played by Mr Archie W. Chappell; the comedy element is well supplied by Miss A. Beaumont as Mrs Buzzard and Mr C. Clayton as Joe Buzzard; Mr W. H. Wilson submits a good character sketch of Richard Belton; and Mr L. Ainscliffe is well cast as surly Sergeant Searle.

CROYDON.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr Lawson Lambert; Acting-Manager, Mr Reginald Lawrence.—Mr Charles Macdona's company is causing a sensation here in Three Little Maids, in which the full chorus and augmented orchestra are pleasing features. Mr Haddon Cave puts in good work in the rôle of Brian Molyneux; Mr Alec Chentrens is in capital voice as M. De L'Orme; and Mr Arthur Longley creates incessant mirth as Lord Cheyne. They have reliable partners to work with in Miss Janet Reeve, a charming Ada Branscombe; Miss Gertrude Melville, a fascinating Hilda Branscombe; and Miss Nora Grey, a bewitching Edna Branscombe. The trio are always gay and laughing, and cause many a heart to beat fast with admiration. Mr George Oxley's impersonation of Cupid calls for the warmest congratulations; Miss Kate Forster meets with approbation in the rôle of Lady St. Mallory; Miss Laura Wright makes the most of her opportunities as Gretchen; and the remaining parts are carefully looked after. The dresses and scenery are quite in keeping with the excellent company of hard-working artists.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr H. D. Lyle.—The Triumph of Truth is drawing good houses at the Royal. Miss Marie Auckland appears with success in the dual-rôle of Violet and Lilian Anstruther; Miss Lily Rogers is a spirited Katie Bright; and Little Nellie Kenneth is natural as Lena. Mr Edward E. Louis's Captain Jack Eversleigh is boldly drawn; Mr J. A. Keogh is satisfactory as Sir Charles Eversleigh; Mr T. Renaud Lockwood is adequate as Count Raoul D'Orville; Mr Charles Herrick acts with force as Vitto Mascagni; and Mr Johnny Clegg is most diverting as Tommy Woodhead. The remaining parts are in good hands.

Palace Theatre of Varieties, Limited.—Resident General Manager, Mr Eustace H. Jay.—The following go to make up a capital entertainment at the National Palace:—George Chirgwin, the inimitable white-eyed comedian; Alice Maple, comedienne and dancer; Foreman and Fannan, the millionaires; Percy and Harold; Ethel Yorke, comedienne and vocalist; Viviana, the dancing girl; Kit Keen, the coon; Florence and Lillian, in drawing-room musical turn; Will Newman, comedian; Sydney Lee, magician; Spry and Austin, vaudeville artists; the Palace pictures, with local productions; The Little Colonel, dramatic and musical scena, by Angela Hope, Bella Valpy, and Ernest Montefiore; and Mr Fred S. Partridge's orchestra.

DARWEN.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr E. L. Ormsby.—A Message from Mars is paying another visit this week, and, as on previous occasions, the presentation leaves little to be desired. The capable company is headed by Mr Cyril Austen-Lee, whose Horace Parker is a meritorious performance. Another part particularly well played is that of the Tramp by Mr Percy Tyler; and Mr William Lockhart as the Messenger is also very successful. Miss Edith Cuthbert as Minnie, Miss V. Auberies as Miss Parker, and Miss Florence Heather as Mrs Clarence are not one whit behind the gentlemen, and altogether the piece is most enjoyable. A Kiss in the Dark has preceded the play each evening.

DERBY.

Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General Manager, Mr T. Allen Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr Chas. Denley.—Glittering Gloria occupied the boards here for the first three nights this week. Mr John Campbell played well as Jack James, and Mr Stanley Arthur made an acceptable Archie Toddleby. Mr Haughton Macauley was a mirth-provoking Zebedie Poskett, and the same remark will apply to Mr J. Wordsley Hulse as Colonel Gallagher, Mr Gerald Clarke as Algernon Entwistle, and Mr Chas. Williams as Mr Griddletop, the last-named being especially good. Miss Stanley Ronalds acquitted herself successfully in the nom-rôle, and Miss Lilian Williams as Mrs Jack James and Miss Peggy Harrington as Dorothy Kenworthy enacted the parts allotted to them very creditably. The remaining characters were all capably represented.

Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Allen Edwardes.—The premier item here this week is supplied by Florrie Gallimore, a comedienne of versatility and charm, who has made herself a favourite. Among other attractions may be mentioned Clarice Netta, a tuneful soprano, whose efforts are greatly appreciated; the Maisanos, who give an entertaining combination musical act; Zaro and Arno, who create any amount of fun in their comedy bar act; Reuben Hill, a character vocalist of ability; Pueblo Bros., who present a praiseworthy variety entertainment; and George Foyle, who acquits himself well as a descriptive vocalist. The performance concludes with Pallister's American Bioscope, by which some good pictures are shown.

DEWSBURY.

Theatre Royal. — Resident-Manager, Mr J. Herbert Asquith.—Mr Tom E. Murray is scoring highly here with his laughable comedy Our Irish Visitors. In the rôle of Col. M'Mahon he sends the audience into screams with smart patter. Mr J. W. Braithwaite as Mr O'Brady is a hard-working comedian, and Mr A. D. Adams is also good as Tilly Softsolder. Miss Amy Knott as Mammy Dioble makes friends by her excellent coon song, and Miss Dot Stanley is interesting as Janie.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr Geo. Weldon.—The programme here consists of a carefully selected and varied programme. The Victoria Troupe of international dancers deserve premier position, and Steve Cook is a very capable second. Bill Bailey and Joe Hennessy offer smart business, and the Sisters Vol Becque are to be commended. Paddy Datas, the lightning calculator, and Alexander Royal give much pleasure, and the specialities of Billy Ross and Co., and the Two Weirs are above the average.

DONCASTER.

New Grand Theatre and Opera House, Limited.—Managing-Director, Councillor J. W. Chapman.—A rich treat has been provided here by Mr Edward Marris's company in The Dandy Doctor. Mr James Salter acceptably sustains the rôle of Melchisadek Brown; Mr James Danvers's assumption of Colonel Pendred is decidedly clever, and as a pianist he is a virtuoso; Bertie Bolinbroke, the locum tenens, is well rendered by Mr Walter Nugent; Mr Owen Dacroy is a capital Mr Drycoff; and Miss Maisie Ivie an interesting Miss Vandyke. Ivy Pendred is daintily played by Miss Lizzie Primmer. The most humorous unit in the combination is Jane, "the general," funnily rendered by Miss Florence Smithers. The Dandy Belles are deservedly popular, and Mr Ben Rowe and Miss Halden are vociferously received as Society cakewalkers.

DOVER.

Theatre Royal. — Proprietors, the Dover Theatres, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr Fred C. Dew.—Dare-Devil Dorothy, played by Mr Henry Swinerd's No. 1 company, is proving a welcome change from melodrama here. Chief honours lie between Miss Majorie Cecil, a dainty and fascinating little lady who impersonates the heroine with conspicuous success, and Miss Nellie Harcourt as Judith, whose pretty vocal numbers and graceful dances serve to display her vivacity to the best advantage. Miss Kathleen Garnon achieves complete success as Ruth Montrose, and the Sisters Lillie and Mabel Blake win popularity for their dainty and smartly executed dances. Mr Wilfred Carr sustains with effectiveness the rôle of George Fielding. Mr Henry C. Ward acts with subtlety the unthankful part of Edward Dudley. Mr Walter Boyce is diverting as Featherstone Haugh; and Mr A. Stretton gives full effect to the villainies of Hawkins. Mr W. G. Hearson is decidedly good as Smith. General Garston, who appears in the first act only, is powerfully portrayed by Mr Walter Boyce. Mr Arthur Verne displays all-round ability as Silas Crump.

DUBLIN.

Gaiety Theatre. — Lessee, Michael Gunn, Limited; General Manager, Mr Charles Hyland.—Messrs Gatti and Frohman's company opened here on Monday with Quality Street. Miss Grace Armytage Noble represents the heroine, Phœbe Throssell, and her performance is a thoroughly enjoyable one. Miss May Whitty acts the part of Susan Throssell most effectively, her conception of the character being an admirable one. An excellent and painstaking actor is Mr David Glas-ford, who makes many admirers by his clever rendering of the part of Valentine Brown. Miss Mabel Wynne is a pert servant, and as the Recruiting Sergeant Mr Gordon Tomkins plays his part in a clever and humorous manner. The Ensign Blades of Mr A. Carlaw Grand is a good impersonation. Master George Robbins acts well as Master Arthur Wellesley Thompson. Miss Rollo Deas plays capitally as Miss Willoughby, and as Miss Fanny Willoughby Miss Bertha Wolcote does exceedingly well. Miss Henrietta Turnbull is carefully represented by Miss Eveleen Mills, and Miss Eva Marsden sustains the part of Miss Charlotte Parratt in an effective manner. The Lieutenant Spicer of Mr Arthur H. Hill is all that could be wished, and the Waterloo veteran is ably represented by Mr T. Langton-Lane. Miss Daisy Lane capably portrays the part of Isabella, and as Harriett Miss Grace Oswald acquits herself well.

Theatre Royal, Limited.—Managing-Director, Mr Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr Arthur Armstrong.—Mr Mouillot's company opened here this week with Old Heidelberg, and the comedy has been well received. The part of Karl Heinrich was entrusted to Mr George F. Tully, who acted as the Prince in capital style; Mr Clifford Bown appeared as the tutor, Dr. Juttner, and displayed his abilities in a clever manner; Mr Lionel Gadsen ably represented the character of the valet, Lutz; and as Kathie Miss Irene Lavington gave a successful portrayal. Mr Alec Murray was very good as Killermann, and the innkeeper was well played by A. M. Moore.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. W. Whitbread; General Manager, Mr Kennedy Miller.—The sensational military drama The Indian Mutiny is being played here this week by Mr Frank E. Burdett's company. The rôle of Lieutent Manley is capably acted by Mr H. Ryeland Leigh, and as Ghuz-Nah Miss Maud Digby deserves much praise. Mr H. G. Brandon acts the part of Captain Manley cleverly, and as Rama Goosh Miss Dora Moorhouse is admirable. Mr George Scully gives a most amusing impersonation of Terry O'Brien, and as Kate Ingleby Miss Agnes Kingston is excellent. Mr Villiers Stanley capitally sustains the part of Nebu Singh, and the rôle of Mrs Major Ingleby is well played by Miss Kate Bruce. The part of Major Ingleby is ably embodied by Mr W. S. Tindall, and Mr G. Birch as Ensign Blake and Mr F. Anderson as Sergeant Thompson are both good in their respective parts.

EMPIRE.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. S. Figgis.—At this popular establishment the leading feature is the Haytors, in their sketch, Here She Goes, There She Goes, which causes plenty of laughter. Phil Herman, comedian, scores successfully; and the Sisters Sprightly have many admirers. Leo Tell's imitation of musical instruments is very entertaining; and Little Ganty is a host in himself. Ben Albert is a humorous comedian; and Hemming and Free, comedy artists; Amy Sullivan, comedienne; and Arthur Reece, comedian, who remain from last week, are still to the fore, and the Empire Pictures are up-to-date.

TIVOLI THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Chas. Jones; Secretary, Mr H. A. Murphy.—The attraction here this week is Park's Eton Boys, who meet with a cordial reception. The marvellous gymnastic act of Charles Serra is aplauded, and Dan Thomas is a successful character comedian. The Four Andys are a smart acrobatic turn, and Will Letters is a good comedian. Kate Gourlay is an excellent coon vocalist and buck dancer, and Bretma a capital magician. Zaid, assisted by Orienta, gives a novel and interesting performance. Lillian Neville is an acceptable ballad vocalist, and Tom O'Neill, comedian, also scores.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Manager, Mr John H. Stevenson.—The attraction at this favourite resort is Dale's Original Opera Singers. Miss Edith Serpell's vocal efforts are well appreciated. "Love's Old Song" is charmingly rendered by Miss Lily Pritchard and Mr Frederic Dale. Mr Claude Anderson sings with good effect, and Mr H. Colman's pianoforte solo is well received.

DUDLEY.

Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr J. W. Tilley.—Mr Frank Lindo with a specially selected company is here this week in the drama Home, Sweet Home. Mr Lindo is to be complimented on the powerfully written and intensely human drama, while his acting as David Armitage was a strong and vigorous rendering. Mr Geo. F. Black gave an interesting and artistic embodiment of Stephen Armitage. Captain Gerald Gambier was distinctly good as the Duke of Ancaster, and a powerfully-played part was that of Dick Redmayne by Mr Geo. Overs. Miss Ivy Ellaline Thorne acted in fine style and with thorough abandon as Sybil Fay, and the Joan of Miss Marion Wakeford was a graceful and pathetic piece of acting.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Tom Prichard.—Chief among a host of attractions is the Imperial Boys' Orchestra, conducted by Herr Linde, a talented and excellently trained combination; the Four Herberts, in a sketch The Jolly Californian Farmers, display great versatility; Lynn, the original singing newsboy, is clever. Among the remaining turns in an exceptionally strong programme are Deany Ford, Australian coon artiste; Harry Sheldon, vocal comedian; the Sisters Princelow, comediennes and expert dancers; Harry Earle, patter comedian; and Anna Webster, international dancer.

DUMFRIES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr W. E. Potts.—On Monday and two following nights we had the Ben Greet company, under the direction of Mr Bannister Howard, with The Fatal Wedding. The principal parts were well sustained by Mr G. E. Olive as Howard Wilson and Mr Cecil A. Collins as Robert Curtis, who made the part villainous enough to receive hisses from the gallery. Miss Eva Moss did full justice to the rôle of Mrs Wilson; the adventuress, Cora Williams, was ably sustained by Miss Beatrice Whitney; Miss Cora Fenton as Bridget was funny; and Miss Maisie Richardson as Jessie was a perfect little mother. The piece was well staged.

DUNDEE.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; General Manager, Mr Eade Montefiore.—Mr Lewis Waller's company is playing Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner for the first time here. Mr Thomas Kingston as Captain Harry Peyton has a part in which he fairly revels; Miss Eily Malyon makes a sweetly sympathetic Miss Elizabeth; and Miss Alys Rees as Miss Elizabeth's aunt acts in a winsome manner. Miss Edith Elton as Molly Edwards and Miss Marguerite Cellier as Brenda are very effective. Mr Hilliard Vox makes a good Mr John Colden, and as Valentine Mr George Mallet submits a fine study. Mr J. Harold Carson deserves special mention for his clever assumption of the rôle of Major Murphy.

PEOPLE'S PALACE.—Manager, Mr Will Parker; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr Alf Ross.—An enthusiastic reception is accorded Mr Johnny Beveridge, a blind pianist, vocalist, and story-teller. The Marconis display some wonderful electrical experiments; the Borrellis, in their musical entertainment, win much favour; Shavo does some smart juggling; and a clever acrobatic performance is provided by Cinizelli. Mr Walter Stockwell, a great favourite here, sings some new songs. Kate Holloway, serio, and Happy Atwood are successful, and the programme is completed by the Glynn sketch combination.

EMPIRE, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr Will Percival.—Mr A. W. B. Kingston's dramatic company is presenting a varied bill-of-fare this week. On Monday The Black Lady of Logie was produced. Mr Kingston gave a powerful rendering of Fletcher Reid; Miss Madge Young as the Indian Princess was responsible for an interesting interpretation; and Miss Emily Peel in her impersonation of Lucy Nichol acted with discretion. The company also includes Mr Harry Egan, a talented Scotch comedian.

GAIETY, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr S. King Alexander.—Mr Fred Karno's company is paying a return visit with The Dandy Thieves. Mr William Rokeby carries off chief honours for his quaintly humorous impersonation of Sergeant Lightning. Mr Howard as Lord Easem, besides displaying true histrionic ability, also wins favour by his cultured vocalism. Miss Newcombe as Lady Easem proves very successful. Mr Cardon makes the most of the part of Miffen, the universal provider. "The six little burglars" is deservedly encored. Miss Effie Northern is also encored for a particularly neat and clever dance.

DUNFERMLINE.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr W. E. Potts.—The management is to be congratulated on its opening engagement of J. W. Turner's opera company, which was heartily welcomed when it appeared on Monday before a good audience in The Puritan's Daughter. Mr Turner as John Wilmot was successful, and the appreciation shown him was well merited. Mr Tom Griffiths as Charles II. left nothing to be desired, Mr John Ridding as Clifford gave an effective rendering of the part, Mr Sydney Clifford was a capital Col Wolff, Fleetwood was in the capable hands of Mr R. Carter, full justice was done to the part of Seymour by Mr G. Ridding, Mr Charles Le Sueur achieved success as Ralph, Mary Wolff was in the able hands of Madame Constance Bellamy, whose fine singing charmed the audience, and Miss Jessie Dennis did well as Jessie. Trovatore and Maritana were produced on Tuesday and Wednesday.

EASTBOURNE.

DEVONSHIRE-PARK THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr A. Standen Triggs.—The Moody-Manners opera company is appearing here this week in a round of grand opera. On Tuesday evening Cavalleria Rusticana was given in an excellent and complete manner. The singing and acting of Miss Enriqueta Crichton as Santuzza were very fine and were appreciated by the audience. Miss F. Edwards was a successful Lucia, and a rich contralto voice was admirably used by Miss F. Aylwin as Lola. Mr Edward Arthur as Turiddu proved his possession of a capital tenor voice and he acted with effect, while Mr T. H. Wood rendered his music with conspicuous ability. In Pagliacci Mr Charles Carter made extensive use of his dramatic and vocal gifts and was a powerful Canio. Mr Charles Tilbury deserves great credit for his capable work as Tonio, and Mr Robert Brookes as Beppo and Mr Walter Barret as Silver did able work. Miss Nedda Morrison sang delightfully and was a charming Nedda. The augmented orchestra and fine chorus are under the able direction of Mr Harrison Frewin.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr Samuel Lloyd.—The Fisher Girl is being played here this week. Mr C. Innis Bowen is a strong Kaspar, and displays vocal ability. Mr Charles Fisher is a handsome and bright Hendrick, and his songs are well approved. Mr J. M. Jones is a picturesque Vanderdecken; Mr Will Raymond and Mr J. G. Forde cause much fun and merriment as Nickel and Klaus; and Mr Frank Couch works well as Mynheer; while Mr Walter Champneys dances nimbly as the Baron. Elsbeth has a charming representative in Miss Marie Rito, and her sweet voice is used with much charm. Miss Maud Desborough is a dainty and pretty Maid Hannah, working with much vivacity and ability; and Miss Alma Evelyn is sufficiently severe as Frau Jan. The Fedecia dancers contribute brisk specimens of their art.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr George Hayes.—Mr Frank Wilson and his company are appearing here during the week in The Marriage of Kitty. Miss Vera Fordyce again gives us the work of a clever actress, and she is an attractive and charming Kitty. Miss Kate Harwood's contribution as Madame De Semiano is capital, and Miss Avril May is a sufficiently French Rosalie. A clever character sketch is given by Mr Frank Wilson as Sir Reginald Belsize; Mr Sydney Orton, with an individual style and an easy, effective manner, is a particularly successful John Travers; and the smaller parts of Norbury and Hampton are well filled by Mr J. F. Leighton and Mr Royston Keith, jun.

ECCLES.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Hague; Treasurer and Acting-Manager, Mr P. Ryan-Smith.—The Osmond Tearle Répertoire Company is here this week. On Monday Mr Alexander Marsh scored as Hamlet and Miss Carrie Baillie was deservedly applauded as Ophelia. On Tuesday The Merchant of Venice was given. Mr Marsh repeated his success in the part of Shylock, and Miss Baillie was a sweet and sympathetic Portia. The week's programme includes Romeo and Juliet, David Garrick, As You Like It, Julius Cæsar, and The Lady of Lyons.

EDINBURGH.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Hollister.—Mr George Dance's company commenced an engagement here on Monday, when the new musical comedy Madame Sherry was presented. Mr J. Robert Hale worked exceedingly hard as Andrew M'Sherry, his acting and singing being happy and effective, and his humour never forced. Mr Fred Walton acted throughout with comic gusto as Joseph, and Mr Ivan Berlyn was adroit and nimble as the gendarme, Gustave. Colonel M'Sherry was capitally played by Mr F. W. Ford; while Mr Arthur Stroud showed ability as Leonard, Messrs Albert Bruno and J. Owen Ford being excellent as Fritz and M. Feauville. The management are fortunate in possessing the services of Miss Georgina Delmar, who made a bewitching Caterina; her singing and acting were of a high order. Miss Lily Elsie looked charming as Barbara, acting and singing well and dancing with preeminent grace, while Miss Mabel Sealby was a dainty Mistigrette. Miss Nellie Dade has natural powers as a comedienne, and displayed them to every possible advantage as the servant Maude. Miss Ada Binning was a smart and buxom Susanne. The choruses were attractive and well sung and the dancing was all that could be desired. The enlarged orchestra was ably conducted by Mr Ernest Vousden.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs Howard and Wyndham, Limited; General-Manager, Mr G. T. Minshull.—The Moody Manners Opera Company, Limited, is fulfilling its semi-annual engagement here this week. Tannhäuser opened an attractive programme on Monday, and introduced Madame De Vere—an artiste of high vocal and dramatic accomplishments—as Elizabeth, a character in which she made an imposing appearance. Her performance was an eminently satisfying one, and completely successful in every detail. Miss Toni Seiter gave a fine personation of Venus, singing brilliantly, and Miss T. Addington's beautiful voice was heard to special advantage in the music of the Young Shepherd. Tannhäuser was undertaken by Mr Joseph O'Mara, who was at his best all through. Mr Charles Magrath again distinguished himself as the Landgrave, and Wolfram remains one of Mr William Dever's most esteemed performances. Admirable assistance was given by Messrs F. H. Erle, T. C. Fairbairn, J. Alexander, and V. Brodo, and the chorus did their work with notable spirit and effect. Mr Richard Eckhold conducted the orchestra, doing every justice to the score under his skilful direction. On Tuesday Mdlle. Zelie De Lussan made her entry as Carmen, and on Wednesday Traviata was given, with Madame De Vere as Violetta. The other operas of the week were Mignon, Lohengrin, The Daughter of the Regiment, and Maritana.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr H. E. Moss.—The chief item on the bill is Mr Charles Prinz and his den of seventeen trained lions, which go through a varied and interesting performance. An intensely thrilling episode is when Mdlle. Marcella enters the cage and executes a fire dance surrounded by the ferocious beasts. Another attractive item is Rousby's electric review "In Paris," a picturesque and enjoyable turn that secures well-deserved applause. Miss Ida Brophy, a smart soubrette, sings charmingly, and Hal Forde makes a diverting appearance as a comedian. The Wartenberg Brothers do some clever foot balancing, the Brothers Webb afford excellent entertainment as musical clowns, and the Eight of Hearts dance effectively. The talented equilibrist Max Millian performs some wonderful feats, and the Alaskas display acrobatic ability in their capital comedy act, the Wernes-Amoros Troupe appearing in an amusing sketch, The Artist's Studio with success.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Tom Ellis.—Miss Frances Delaval's company occupies the boards of this theatre with the stirring drama entitled The Biggest Scamp on Earth. There was a good audience on Monday, who received the performance with cordial favour. Mr Percy Carne Waram made an effective appearance as Derrick Knight—a very prodigy of wickedness; and Miss Frances Delaval showed herself an actress of ability in the fascinating rôle of Naomi Belvedere.

EXETER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr Fred Pollard; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy M. Dunsford.—Mr Frank Fenton's company is presenting this week the romantic play If I Were King, from the novel of Mr Justin Huntly M'Carthy. The company is a particularly good one, and the piece is most charmingly staged. Mr Frank Fenton as François Villon plays with great dramatic ability. Mr Olive Currie as Louis XI. presents that monarch with histrionic skill, and Miss Marion Gray in the part of Katherine makes a deep impression.

VICTORIA HALL, LIMITED.—Secretary, Mr M. J. Dunsford.—Gilbert's circus still continues to maintain its usual high standard. Among the leading features on this week's programme are the remarkably clever balancing performances of Rappo and Ella; the extraordinary feats by Pickitt, the handcuff king; and the daring triple bar achievements of the Dorans. Datas causes a deal of amazement with his marvellous memory; Alexandra and Bertie go through a sensational aerial act; and Vasco skilfully manipulates a variety of different musical instruments.

FALKIRK.

GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr Horace W. Ebbutt.—Dr. Walford Bodie has packed the theatre this week with audiences who marvel at his skill, and depart overwhelmed with wonder at his mysterious and occult demonstrations, and his extraordinary curative powers. His feats of mesmerism and hypnotism are alike awe-inspiring, and his ventriloquial entertainment is exceedingly clever. Dr. Bodie, while the chief attraction, is assisted by a large and accomplished variety company, among whom are Miss Marie Walford, instrumentalist; Tom Dewar, comedian; Mdlle. La Petite Bella, burlesque actress; Les Fontaines, marionette performance; Sisters Lyle, duettists and dancers; the De Roys, comic conjurors; Little Dolly Robson; Gerald Lopez, the coloured coon; and the Garden troupe of pipers and international dancers.

FARNWORTH.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr T. Morton Powell.—Mr Horace Stanley's company is this week presenting The 10 30 Down Express. Mr Horace Stanley plays specially well as Sam Wagstaff, being admirably assisted by Miss Kate Kilpack as Peggy Potts. Mr Scott Leighton works hard as James Inderwick, coming out powerfully in the last act; and an excellent study is the Letitia Leigh of Miss Evelyn M. Walton. The play is mounted in good style.

FOLKESTONE.

PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr H. W. Rowland.—Mr Herbert Hollister's company in The Lights o' London was here the first three nights of the week. Mr Cecil G. Calvert was excellent as Harold Armytage. Miss Jeanne Burgoyne acted well as Bess. Mr Albert Brasque gave a powerful rendering of Clifford Armytage, Mr Ernest K. Nelson created laughter as Philosopher Jack, Mr Percy Compton was an admirable Jarvis, Miss Emilie Dawson was effective as Mrs Jarvis, Miss Gladys Murray was quite at home as Shakespeare Jarvis, Little Ida Murray showed great promise as Joey, Mr Herbert Hollister scored a success as Seth Preene, and Miss Kate Randolph as Hetty was well placed. Mr Norman Macowan's company in Monsieur Beaucaire is the attraction for the remainder of the week.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager, Mr Frank Seabrook.—This popular place of amusement closes this week, much to the regret of the patrons. Miss Elsie Jones, soprano, has a good selection of songs. Mr Owen Clark, prestidigitateur, meets with a favourable reception. The animated pictures are exceptionally good, and the Ladies' Salon Band deserves mention.

GATESHEAD.

METROPOLE THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Mr J. Straughan.—The bill here is headed by Captain Woodward's performing sea lions and seals. Ike Scott and Son are responsible for an amusing comedy sketch, while Captain Devereux's performing dogs provide an exceptionally interesting display. Travers and Weldon, musical entertainers, give a good turn, as also do the Sisters Brenton, duettists and dancers. Other capital turns are given by Fred Reed and Tom Lerne, novel comedians, and Miss Ruby Bijou, the dainty dancer.

GLASGOW.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Humphrys.—Mr Beerbohm's Tree's company in The Darling of the Gods is again in Glasgow this week, and large audiences have given this fine play a hearty welcome. The scheming State Minister Zakkuri is once more associated with the name of that most capable actor Mr Robert Pateman, while Kara, the outlaw, has again a fine impersonator in Mr Gerald Kay Souper. Prince Saigon gets all the required dignity from Mr Ivan F. Simpson, and Mr Douglas Payne as Inu makes an excellent dumb servant. Sympathetic love and atonement are the dominant chords in the fine acting of Miss Frances Dillon as the heroine Yo-San.

ROYALTY, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr Wm. M. Downie.—The advent of Mr A. W. Pinero's play, Letty, is an event of considerable importance, more especially as Mr Chas. Frohman's company includes Miss Irene Vanbrugh and Mr H. B. Irving in their original parts. Miss Vanbrugh's acting as the ambitious girl, Letty, is instinct with grace and refinement throughout, and the varying moods of the character are indicated with consummate skill. The cynical Neville Letchmere of Mr H. B. Irving is equally good, and also marks a distinct advance in the art of this clever actor. Miss Beatrice Forbes Robertson as the staid Marion, and Miss Elinor Souray as the frivolous and vulgar Hilda Gunning are two cleverly contrasted parts. Mr Scott Craven as Bernard Mandeville plays the objectionable snob with vigour and emphasis; Mr T. M'Causland Stewart as the indignant husband, Crosbie, comes successfully through a difficult scene; and Miss May Blayney as his erring wife gives a sympathetic touch to the part. Mr Leslie Victor as the photographer, Perry; Mr Charles Froode as Neale, and Mr Tom Heslewood as the insurance agent are all well placed. Mr Vernon Steel as Coppinger Drake, Mr Clayton Greene as Ruggs, and Mr Litchfield Owen as Frederick lend able support. The play is mounted and dressed with thorough completeness.

KING'S, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr H. Macfarlane.—Mr Martin Harvey and company are appearing here this week, in The Breed of the Treshams. In the part of Lieutenant Reresby Mr Harvey's acting is most expressive throughout, and rouses the audience to an enthusiastic pitch. Owing to indisposition on Monday Miss N. De Silva was unable to take the part of the boy Batty. A good substitute was found, however, in Mr John Alexander. The rôle of Colonel Hungerford is filled by Mr Charles Glenny with excellent effect, and Mr Milton Rosmer's Francis Tresham is a spirited performance. The Viscount Dorsington of Mr Albert C. Reynor and the Colonel Curwen of Mr Percy Anstey are also worthy of praise. Miss Amy Coleridge, who takes the part of Margaret Hungerford, acts with grace and feeling, being ably supported by Miss Edith Coleman as Mrs Bagshaw and Miss Bessie Elder as Helena Pierrepoint. Mr Fred Wright, sen., gives character to the part of Colonel Bagshaw, and Mr Gilbert Yorke makes a good impression as Captain Stanhope. As Captain Rashleigh Mr George Cook is highly successful, as also are Messrs Eugene Wellesley and Arthur Maude as Willoughby and Peyton respectively.

PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr Hugh Murdoch.—Mr William Greet's company pays a return visit with The Sign of the Cross. Mr F. B. Woulfe is a capital Marcus, his fine portrayal meeting with hearty recognition. Miss Evelyn D'Alroy is excellently suited to the part of Mercia, in which she makes a distinct hit. Mr Charles Aldred displays sound ability as Tigellinus, and Mr J. Wetherall is well placed as Lucinius. Nero has good treatment at the hands of Mr A. Bernhardt Turner, and Glabrio is ably presented by Mr Frank Wood. Mr L. Winning is successful as Viturius. Favius is admirably played by Mr Robert Hare, and Mr E. J. Carlin does good work as Titus. Miss Ivy Millais gives an artistic reading of Stephanus, Miss Alma Bolton acquits herself well as Berenice, as also does Miss Cissie Carlton as Dacia. Miss Ethel Land acts effectively as Poppæa, and the Ancaria of Miss May Fairclough is a good study.

GRAND, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr A. Mascard.—The attraction here this week is Mr Lester Collingwood's company in When London Sleeps. Mr Franklyn Graham acts with excellent effect as Captain Rodney Haynes. The good-hearted athlete David Engleheart is played to the life by Mr Wm. H. S. Sams. Miss Maude Hastings gives a sympathetic rendering of the part of Queenie Carruthers. The humour of Mr F. E. Thomas as Signor Jonesio is much enjoyed, as is also that of Miss Bella Power as the Signorina and Mr Victor Mason as Sammy Blyth. The dude, Bertie Broomhead, is amusingly played by Mr Frank Eden. Miss Marie Brammer acts with power as Hilda Carrode. Carrie Jones (Miss Effie Mackintosh) and Maudie De Frere (Miss E. Magna France) are both cleverly played parts. The play is staged with much attention to detail.

METROPOLE, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr John Dunbar.—The stirring American drama, The Still Alarm, is here this week. Mr Matthew H. Glenville, in the rôle of the hero, Jack Manley, is admirably suited, and the way in which Mr Paul Lovett portrays the villain, John Bird, leaves nothing to be desired. The part of Doc. Wilber is in the able hands of Mr Fred Osmond, and Mr Lewis Gordon as Franklyn Fordham makes a creditable appearance. Miss Mary Lovett is a great success in the difficult part of Elinore Fordham. Miss Hettie Zillwood's dancing and singing are well received, and she makes an excellent Carrie Wilber; and the Mrs Manley of Miss Mabel Verlton meets with much approval. Mr Tom Beasley and Mr Arthur Downs are both good as Willie Manley and Jenkins, and the singing of Messrs Dan Mining, W. Edward, E. Tudor, and H. Johnstone gets a great reception.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr Rich Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr J. H. Oakden.—Mr Frank Bertram and his company are here this week with The Convict's Daughter, in which Mr Bertram gives a powerful rendering of the convict, whose character he delineates with consummate success. Miss Edith M. Savery acts charmingly the part of the ill-used lady who gives the play its title. Mr J. K. Walton makes a dignified study of Frederick Neville, the banker, and Miss Maud Osmond is equally successful as Marion Thorn. Mr T. W. Hurst as Harold Trevalyen is a fine, manly lover, and Mr G. Moreton Williams scores as Jasper Thorn. Mr A. Terris as an Irish policeman and Miss Julie Alexander as Betty, the maid-servant, add greatly to the comedy of the drama, the lady's acting being particularly piquant.

WHITEVALE.—Proprietor, Mr George Green.—A Life's Revenge is being presented here by a well selected company. Mr Fred C. Somerfield as Prince Boris Strogoroff acts the part of the scheming villain ably. Paul Starovitch, the artist, is admirably played by Mr John F. Traynor. Miss Marie Dagmar as Princess Vanda Ivyala has a strong part, and her acting is very realistic. Miss Katherine Eckart as Marcia Vittoria plays with dash and abandon. Mr Walter Roberts as Michael Orloff plays the scheming old man extremely well. Mr Pringle Roberts as the Englishman, Maurice Trevor, acts in manly fashion. On the lighter side, Mr Sydney Ernest is very funny as Nicholas, and Miss May Davis as Daphne Dashaway is a decided success. Mr Percy Brown as Chesterfield and Miss Amy Hughes as Acouline are both of value. Mr Edwin Cheetham as General Mikhaloff plays his part well, and Mr Charles E. Warne causes much laughter as Colonel Tumbleoff by his droll performance.

EMPIRE, LIMITED.—Director, Mr H. E. Moss; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen.—Uproarious laughter greets the appearance of Mark Sheridan this week, the popular comedian being in the happiest vein. Will English, coon comedian, also proves himself a general favourite. The Smythsons' comedy company submit an entertaining little sketch, The Lie Alarm, with great success, and a comedy musical act by Hume, Ross, and Lewis is highly amusing and clever. Florence Esdaile is a sweet singer, and Edie King, comedienne and dancer, finds much favour. Calile and Walker come in for notice in their little comedy act, and a pantomime sketch by the Denmores is well carried out. The Two Graces, duettists and dancers, and Pat Rafferty, Irish comedian, also deserve mention.

TIVOLI, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr Barney Armstrong; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred C. Ewing.—Darring, the local handcuff expert, whose turn is proving a decided hit, is the star here. The George Bonhair Gregory Troupe give a clever Risley performance. Lena Brunton repeats her realistic impersonations of music hall celebrities. Haydee's Mannikins provide a novel item; and W. H. Downs, Larry Lewis, and Fred Neiman are all clever in their different lines.

PALACE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Rich Waldon and Thos. Barrasford.—An interesting programme is submitted here this week, including "The Magic Kettle" act; the Waldrons, in their funny burlesque entertainment; Monks and Woods, in an amusing duologue; Charles R. Whittle, comedian; Mirzah, whose wonderful combination of music and jugglery excites astonishment; Mr and Mrs Paul Knox, society entertainers; and Vansart, with his grip of iron. Marie Else, the French flirt, has a place in the programme, which also includes a series of animated pictures.

QUEEN'S, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr T. J. Colquhoun; Acting-Manager, Mr B. M. Armstrong, jun.—Joe O'Gorman, in his lively Irish songs and patter, is the principal turn here. Charlie Deane is another strong favourite, and is well provided with catchy songs. That clever whistler, Charles Mildare, is also a great draw.

BRITANNIA.—Lessee, Mr James Anderson; Manager, Mr George Saphrini.—This well-known and old-established hall was reopened, under the above management, on Monday evening, in the presence of a crowded audience. The house is being run at popular prices on the one-house-a-night system, and judging from the reception of the opening company, the "Brit" bids fair to renew its lease as a popular resort of the working classes. The new management is making a special bid for their favour and patronage, and, given good companies, there is no reason why they should not attain their end. Suitable alterations and improvements have been effected, and the house presents a bright and comfortable appearance. The Mottramos in a pleasing musical sketch, Do You Reverse? head the bill for the opening, and give a creditable and pleasing performance. Mr J. B. Mackenzie sings tenor songs in good style; and Miss Alice Golding's ballad turn is an agreeable feature of the programme. The Brothers Hannaway are first-rate comedians and dancers; Akbar performs clever gymnastic feats; while Cambo, the man monkey, gyrates successfully. Beatty and Blanch are clever dancers, and A. B. Thorn is a pawky Scotch comic. Benetti and May Corrie are funny in a burlesque juggling act; Bella Leabourn does well; while Vasey and Ramsey are successful comedians. Mr Anderson made a short introductory speech during the evening and was loudly applauded.

HARMONIC CONCERTS.—Musical Secretary, Mr William Biggam.—An attractive programme here includes Regan and Ryan, the clever comedians and dancers; Vance Brothers, smart instrumentalists; Marie Le Blanc, in several good songs; Mackinnon Family of vocalists, dancers, &c.; Lottie and Marie Ross, popular character duettists; George Kirkland, the blind conjuror; Tom Glenn, Willie Mackey, Frank Rogerson, and Miss E. Clare Buchanan.

GRAVESEND.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Captain H. E. Davis; General Manager, Mr David Hart.—Madrali, the well-known wrestler, is here for the week, and his exhibitions of skill and strength have been very warmly received. Besides this great attraction Maud Marlow, a bright burlesque artist and dancer; J. H. Crew, a quaint comedian; Arthur Gilbert, comedian; Carlo and May, with their clever comedy acrobatic and wire act; Lily Flexmore, comedienne and legmania danseuse; Harry Naylor, a funny comedian; and Francis, the cannon-ball king, are also entertaining.

THE WHISKY OF MANY MERITS

DEWAR'S "WHITE LABEL" WHISKY

GAINSBOROUGH.

ALBERT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Robert Kirk.—Mr George Kirk and Miss Mary Neil's company appeared here for three nights last week in Judy. This well-known drama was excellently produced. Miss Florrie Groves gave her clever impersonation of Judy. Miss Mary Neil in the dual-rôle of Alice and Polly, the coster, showed great versatility, and she was well supported in the latter character by Mr Will Casey as Jim. Mr Carlton Wallace as Duborg and Miss Muriel Thompson as Blake were successful; and Mr George Kirk gave a powerful rendering of Grip, the detective. The other characters were in good hands.

ROYAL HALL.—Manager, Mr J. W. Morris.—Parson Thorn was here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, played by a company under the management of Mr Ormonde G. Smethurst.

GLOUCESTER

THEATRE ROYAL.—Owners, Messrs C. W. and J. R. Poole; Manager, Mr W. H. Weller.—Mr Arthur Hart's company in My Lady Molly is paying a welcome return visit. Miss Mabel Lait makes a charming Lady Molly, and Alice Coverdale is vivaciously rendered by Miss Maud Thorne. Mr George Grundy is an agreeable Captain Harry Romney; Miss Sybil Thorne is neat as Hester; Lionel Bland is ably enacted by Mr Frank Stather; and Mdlle. Mirabeau as played by Miss Lottie Sargent is favourably received. Mickey O'Dowd is a hugely comical personage in the hands of Mr Arthur Powell, who finds great favour; Sir Miles Coverdale is presented in bluff and hearty style by Mr Walter Ashley; and Mr David M. Miller is good as Judge Romney. Mr T. Norbury makes an excellent Reuben Oates. Mr Carlton Mason is the musical director.

GOOLE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr John E. Tomlinson.—The Lightning's Flash, presented by a strong company under the direction of Mr Leslie Vyner, is the attraction this week. Mr Leonard Robson gives a powerful performance of Stephen Merrick; Mr Sydney Kearns as Gordon Garville and Mr Courtney Robinson as Jim Bargiss are a capable pair of villains; Mr Wm. Attfield is well placed as Dick Durham; and Mr Maurice Grant is a sufficiently unscrupulous Ned Grimstone. Mr Harry M. Vernon causes roars of laughter as Toby Gander, being ably assisted by Miss Blanche Vernon as Selina Slack. Miss F. Russell-Spiers submits an attractive performance of Kate Merrick; and Miss Dora Condor is highly successful as Zuza. Special mention should be made of the songs and dances introduced by Miss Dora Condor, Miss Blanche Vernon, and Mr Harry M. Vernon. Saved from the Sea was here on Thursday and Friday.

GREAT YARMOUTH.

ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. W. Nightingale.—A return visit is being paid here by Mr Bert Coote's company in The Fatal Wedding. Mr Wilfred Payne is effective as Howard Wilson; Mr Leyton Cancellor is excellent as the villainous Robert Curtis; Toto is most amusingly portrayed by Mr Charles H. Kenny; Mr Fred Dobell is admirable as Schwartz; Mr Henry Welbeck is capital as O'Reilly; the Rev. Dr. Lancewood is cleverly enacted by Mr Arthur Law Raynor; Miss Marie Houseley is natural and sympathetic as Mabel Wilson; Cora Williams is ably represented by Miss Beatrix De Burgh; Miss Harriet Clifton causes plenty of laughter as Bridget; and Miss Ida Valli is winsome and bright as "the little mother."

GREENOCK.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, the Executors of the late Mr Alex. Wright; Managers, Messrs A. B. Wright and J. J. Wright.—Mr Robert Perris's company is here this week with the drama A Fight for Millions. Mr Perris is successful in the part of Tom Manby; Mr J. Newton Cowling shows ability as Hudson Rivers; Mr Horace Booth gives a careful embodiment of Richard Dudley; Mr Donald Cameron does well as John Leveredge; and Harold Hobbs finds a capable representative in Mr Nicholas Conway. The humorous element is well sustained by Mr Larry Clements as Willie Neverwork and Mr Fred Acton as Solomon Moses. Miss Eva Purcell is attractive as Pearl Rivers; Miss Fannie Williams is good as Mrs Hudson Rivers; Miss Vera Dobson appears as Helen Dudley with effect; Miss Winnie Acton deserves praise for her Little Madge; and Miss Gertie Douglas is decidedly funny as Betty and Mag Brady.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr H. L. Skivington.—At this theatre the Brothers Lang are applauded for their very smart knockabout act; Florence Hill, burlesque actress and dancer, gets a hearty reception; Douglas and Douglas give an interesting Risley performance; Mary M. Glenn, Scottish vocalist, sings well; Harry Walker is an amusing patter comedian; Wal Croft, Scotch comedian, does well; and an entertaining turn is provided by Charles Vandyke and company, in the pantomime absurdity Nicodemus.

GRIMSBY.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Exceptionally large houses have been experienced this week upon the second visit of Mr Bert Coote's company with the popular drama The Fatal Wedding. Miss Gwynne Herbert now takes the part of the wronged wife, Mabel Wilson, and wins entire approval. Mr Stuart Lomath is eminently successful as Howard Wilson. Miss Gertrude Harrison gives complete satisfaction as Cora Williams, and Mr Creagh Henry gives a good representation of Robert Curtis. The part of the "Little Mother," Jessie, is charmingly played by Miss Maidie Andrews. The amusing characters of Peter Schwartz, Toto, and Bridget are ably sustained by Mr Walter Westwood, Mr Edward Morgan, and Miss Marie Hassell respectively. A number of entertaining specialities are introduced in act three by the children travelling with the company.

HIPPODROME.—An amusing sketch entitled Uncle Yank has been produced here this week by the Mannon Troupe of pantomimists. Some smart and effective trap work is introduced in it. The Two Athlones have created a very good impression. They are athletes who not only perform feats of great strength, but do so in a fashion that is as novel as it is pleasing. Another sketch of a highly laughable character, entitled Married or Photographed? has been presented by F. Warden Reed and company. Two particularly funny comedians have contributed to the programme in the persons of Sam Shipley and Sam Dalton. Other good turns have been given by Lilian Travellie, ballad vocalist; the Sisters Warner, duettists and dancers, and the Two Falcons, balancers.

KING'S HALL.—Tom Birchmore's variety company has occupied the King's Hall for the third successive week.

HUDDERSFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy G. Arthur.—Mr George Dance's company is here for this week with A Country Girl. Miss May Glen is a fine figure of a Nan, using a powerful voice with effect; Miss Maud Harvey sings in a cultured method, and looks captivating as Marjory; Miss Nina Carlton is to be congratulated on a highly satisfactory appearance as the Princess, her singing being fine; and Miss Veronica Brady is the daintiest of Sophie's in her clever assumption of the would-be fine lady. Mr Cyril Thompson is gifted with a fine voice; Mr Johnny Osborne rattles with irresistible gusto through the merry part of Barry; Mr Vincent Bowyer is quite immovably calm as Raikes, the Rajah. He also sings in effective manner. Mr George Mudie, jun., is diverting as the effusive and amorous Sir Joseph Verity. In smaller parts effective support is given by Miss Edna Knollys, Mrs St. Quinton; Miss M. Jolly, Lady Anchester; Mr Tom Sheridan, Granfer Mummery; and Mr Scrope Quinton, Lord Anchester.

HALIFAX.

GRAND THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling; Acting-Manager, Mr Norman Robinson.—The Never-Never Land is the attraction here this week. The play is full of interest, is well presented, and is suitably and efficiently staged. The important part of Jack Mowbray is admirably assumed by Mr Edmund F. Kennedy, a sound and conscientious actor; Mr Edward Rochelle gives a telling rendering of his part; Mr Arthur Bolton plays with ease and ability the part of Tom Hewley; Mr Simon D. Ord gives a crisp rendering of Wolff; Mr Cecil Elgar does well as Lord Thorland; and Mr John Hart is responsible for a faithful picture of the old servitor, Brudds. Miss Caroline Barrett must be complimented on a perfectly natural, frank, and attractive impersonation of the heroine; Miss Marion Fawcett's Lady Walgrave is a quiet, unassuming, and sympathetic performance; Miss Julia Kennard impersonates the disreputable Sal Barker with much ability; and Miss Margaret Parker does well as Smudgee.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr Steuart Cecil.—A really smart and enjoyable company occupy the boards here this week. Lady Mansell introduces half-a-dozen children, who sing and dance to the manifest delight of the audience. The Mackweys do their performance at lightning speed. It consists of acrobatics, somersaults, wire walking, and pantomimic tricks. Mr and Mrs Neil Lichfield do a musical and mimetic sketch, which is clever; Iben Obed, hand-balancer, is smart; Allis and Cassati are amusing in vocal comedy; Bert Lytton sings his songs with point; the Karno Trio, in a pantomimic sketch, cause constant laughter; the Sisters Morgam, duettists and dancers, are attractive; and the Mozondos do a comedy barrel and tumbling act.

HANLEY.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. Elphinstone.—That entertaining musical comedy The Girl from Kay's is presented this week, and the piece meets with the heartiest of receptions. Miss Lily Lingard in the title-rôle is well placed, acting and singing admirably; Miss May Marton as Norah Chalmers is seen to advantage in the part; Mr Johnnie Schofield as Hoggenheimer is exceedingly funny; Harry Gordon finds a capital exponent in Mr Garnet Wilson, who renders his songs admirably; Mr Tom Shelford as the Hon. Percy Fitzthistle is most amusing. Special mention must be made of the pierrots who appear in the second act in a delightfully rendered musical item in which Mr Walter Bates and two ladies are seen.

GRAND.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr James Wynes.—Two full houses welcomed on Monday a capital programme. The premier position is held by Chas. Aldrich, in a wonderful quick-change performance. The Three Meers, in a novel wire act, are much appreciated; John Lloyd, the singing collier, has a nice voice, and is most successful; Lauri Wylie, in his mimicry mannikin show, is exceedingly good; Bertha Palliser sings her songs charmingly; Maud Ross also is well received; Will Matcham is always welcome in his vocal and musical comedy act; the Vernon Troupe contribute a capital item in the way of xylophonists; the Sisters Lunelle are smart vocalists and dancers; and the Grand pictures, as usual, are new and entertaining.

HARROGATE.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Smith.—Mr Moullot's company opened here on Monday for three nights with A Message from Mars. Mr Rawdon Buckley gave a lifelike presentation of Horace Parker, Mr Bruce Lindley was convincing as the Tramp, and Mr William Brougham was very impressive as the Messenger. Miss May Saker, Miss Flora Hastings, and Miss Joan Meredith each gave meritorious performances, and other parts in a lengthy cast were creditably filled.

THE KURSAAL.—Manager, Mr H. J. Dacre.—The concerts have been well attended this week, and the demonstrations with liquid air are being given as a variety turn.

HARTLEPOOL

EMPRESS.—Proprietors, Councillors Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr Harry Burns.—The Marvellous Savonas have been retained for another week. Wee Mona is also a great attraction. Codge, the street arab, in his clever exhibition of whistling; James Stewart, the one-man piano; and Muir and Bartlett, in their funny sketch A Clerical Complication, are all old favourites; and Harry Tomlinson, comedian, George Collins, comedian, and Burns' Bioscope complete a strong programme.

HASTINGS.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Geo. H. Gaze.—A bright and pleasing performance was given here on Monday of the musical play The Belle of New York, by the Ben Greet company, under the direction of Mr J. Bannister Howard. Mr Arthur Ricketts filled the rôle of the eccentric Ichabod Bronson with complete success; Mr Harold Wardroper capably impersonated the spendthrift, Harry Bronson; the unique fooling of Karl Von Pumpernick was cleverly presented by Mr Walter Emro; Mr Guy Ford made a blustering "Doc" Snifkins; Mr Mack Ollive as Blinkey Bill executed some agile dancing; Mr Walter Uridge afforded merriment as Kenneth Mugg; and Messrs Lionel Yeoman and R. L. Cody as the twin Portuguese Counts were alertly similar in their actions. Miss Mora Hersee as Violet Graysang very acceptably; Miss Helen Rose enacted Fifi Fricot very agreeably; Miss Ida Grandison's good voice and dashing style made her an ideal Cora Angelique; Miss Florence Hersee displayed exceptional vivacity as Mamie Clancy; and Miss Hilda Corelli as première danseuse gave evidence of ability.

ST. LEONARDS PIER PAVILION.—Local Manager, Mr Elvey Thomas; Entertainment Manager, Mr Drew Mackintosh.—An excellent concert party are appearing here, bearing the name of "The Gaieties." Under the direction of Mr Charles Conyers and Mr Wilson James a very attractive selection of songs are provided. Miss Edith Trew possesses a sweet and expressive voice, and is warmly applauded. Miss Ruby Wilson is equally successful in her popular songs. A great deal of humour is introduced into the entertainment by the above-named gentlemen, who either ventriloquise or introduce amusing recitals during the evening.

PIER PAVILION.—Pier-master, Mr R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr J. D. Hunter.—Mr Fred J. Kirke's company appeared here the first part of the week in the musical comedy, entitled The Naval Detective. The lady acrobats, the Gaiety Girls, go through some graceful evolutions. Mr Arthur Hickman is highly amusing in several rôles, and Mr Will Brereton is good as Captain Hustle. Mr Fred J. Kirke's comedy, Our Sailor Lad, concludes the week.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Harold Penny.—An attractive programme this week is opened by the coon vocalist and dancer, Miss Daisy Yates. Mr Chris Richards is remarkably smart as an eccentric comedian. Messrs Dale and O'Malley are a good comedy turn. Mr Tom Stuart gives some vivid representations of characters from Dickens and popular actors. Miss Edie Rivers, comedienne, is well received. Grais' Baboon Prodigies cause great amusement in a grotesque tight-rope dance and a clever act of cycling the loop. Miss Kate Butler receives great applause as a character comedienne. Collinson's Combination is appearing in A Club Raid, which is highly sensational.

PUBLIC HALL.—Mr Joseph Poole is giving a fine show by his interesting myriorama, entitled "The World's History Day by Day." A series of high-class varieties is interspersed, whilst an excellent orchestra adds greatly to the enjoyment of the audience.

HAWICK.

TOWN HALL.—On Monday evening we had a visit from Mr W. T. Rushbury's company in Alone in London. Mr John Clyde gave a good impersonation of John Biddlecombe; Mr J. Myron Howard was well placed as Richard Redcliffe; Mr Walter A. Warren was very humorous in the part of Jenkinson; and the same may be said of Miss Amy Bell as Liz and Mr R. A. Earl as Charlie Johnson. Mr Burnaby was ably represented by Mr Henry Bowler; Annie Meadows had a painstaking exponent in Miss Dorothy Wallace; Tom Chickweed as played by Miss Kitty M'Pherson could not have been in better hands; Miss Agnes Bain made a charming Ruth Clifton; and Miss Doris Howard was good as Little Paul.

HEBBURN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr W. A. Jackson.—Another variety company is here this week. Tom White's Arabs form the chief attraction, being very amusing in their versatile singing and comedy act. We have also a welcome return visit of Rhoda Paul, male impersonator; Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, the Staffordshire cardboard box makers, contribute some excellent harmonised melodies; the Brothers Hampson are clever patter comedians and dancers; the Two Romers, operatic soloists, have a most flattering reception; Mdlle. De Vena submits a clever performance as a club manipulator and juggler; Les Allisors figure to advantage as refined ring performers; and Mdlle. Rosella is a pleasing trapeze artiste.

HORWICH.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Arthur Sandiford; Acting-Manager, Mr Alfred Holles.—Miss Mary Dalby's company in Woman to Woman is the attraction here this week. The staging and scenery are excellent, and the piece goes with a swing from start to finish. Mr Chas. Whitlock as the Rev. Leslie Lorne has a good part, and plays with dignity, Mr Ernest Vaughan's Lieut. Podraski is a very careful interpretation, Mr Edward Finlay's Lieut. Yashma is a fine specimen of a Japanese officer, Mr E. D. Allen as Denny O'Hagan is responsible for some genuine comedy, and Mr Fred Dalby as Rufus Rapon and R. Bosco as Nakaga are up to the mark. Miss Georgina V. France as Lilian Lorne is charming, Miss Madge Douglas as Monica Stokes and Elba works very hard, her songs receiving unstinted applause, and Miss Mary Dalby as Ogandaga, the native Queen of Korea, does full justice to the part.

HOYLAND.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Owner, Arthur Carlton; Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Geo. S. King.—Perry and Stanton's musical comedy company is paying a visit here this week with The Sporting Girl. Miss Stanton in her original part of Kitty Fitzroy is seen to much advantage, and introduces some first rate songs. Mr George Perry as Mr Penton Hook gives a capital impersonation, and Mr Charles Saunders as Mr Jack Garling finds ample scope for his ability in the character. Mr Horace Moseley as the Rev. John Bunyan and Mr Mark Practice as Stodge are very good. Mr Marcus Grey is capital as Marco Castelino.

HULL.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr W. Morton; Local Director, Mr W. F. Morton.—Mr Henry Neville is meeting with the heartiest of receptions here in The Two Orphans. No finer impersonator of Pierre exists, and the years that have touched Mr Neville so lightly have not altered one jot the genius of this ever-welcome actor. May Edwardes is finely depicted by Miss Evelyn Weeden.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; Local Manager, Mr Wynn Miller.—The ever-pleasing Geisha is again with us. The O Mimosa San of Miss Aimée De Leska is a delightful piece of work. She has a voice of fine quality and striking histrionic talent. She achieves considerable success. Miss Florrie Saunders makes a very frolicsome Molly. The Wun-Hi of Mr Ed. Carlton brings down the house.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Sole Owner, Mr W. Morton; Manager, Mr Geo. Morton.—That now-familiar play, The King of Crime, is the strong attraction at the Alexandra, and meets with warm welcome, and is altogether to the taste of the house. Mr Wm. Clayton fills with distinction the rôle of the King of Crime.

ALHAMBRA.—Resident-Manager, Mr C. J. Bartleet Perry.—Imro Fox provides a clever conjuring entertainment; J. W. Hall and Dave Marion are comedians of distinct merit; Dora Martine displays much nerve in a horizontal bar act; Brown and Nevarro make a first appearance in England, and their turn is a huge success; Jennie Hartley is a promising juvenile; Chant and Chant sing some popular melodies, and gain much applause; Clarie St. Clare, an extra turn, is well received; and Bert Leslie, a good swell comedian, completes the bill.

ILKESTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr L. F. A. Rogers.—A special treat has been provided this week by Mr Chas. Macdona's company in the musical play, Three Little Maids, which is here for three nights, the remainder of the week being filled by the play No Cross, No Crown, presented by Miss Rose Faith's company. The Three Little Maids were capitally portrayed by Miss Vera Vallis, Ada; Miss Nellie Groves, Hilda; and Miss Doris Trevor, Edna; all three ladies winning great admiration and praise. Madame Ilma Norina was responsible for a pleasing conception of Lady St. Mallory, Miss Edith Lorraine played admirably as Miss Price, and the Gretchen of Miss May Wright was an inimitable performance, her dance with Cupid finding special favour. Mr R. Barrie in the part of Cupid, the caddie, did some excellent work, Mr Frank Henderson gave a clever presentment of the dude, Lord Cheyne; Mr H. Welchman was good as Brian Molyneux, and Mr W. Pieroy Morgan made a presentable country vicar. The M. De L'Orme of Mr Jules Charmettis was worthy of special commendation, and his 'cello solo was vociferously applauded.

IPSWICH.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. G. Fisk.—Mr Walter Melville's sensational melodrama, with the startling title The Worst Woman in London, has been the attraction here during the week, and is supported by a good all-round company. The central character of the piece was portrayed with striking effect by Miss Constance Medwyn, while Miss Lilian Ross as Ruth Milford and Miss Helena Rigby as Matilda Park contributed to the success of the female interest of the cast. The hero, Jack Felton, found an earnest representative in Mr Edwin J. Collins, and Mr P. B. Lewers was a convincing villain of the deepest dye. Bob Goldfinch as the rival of Barnum and Bailey, in the hands of Mr G. H. Asquin, relieved the serious interest of the piece by his humorous business, in which he was assisted by Messrs Bernard Mervyn and Joe Bracewell.

HIPPODROME.—The turns here include the Herald Comedy Four, a clever quartet of vocalists; Mdlle. Florence, a globe walker, gives a pretty and neat display, and a marvellous gymnastic performance is introduced by a coupe of artists named Helene and Emilion. The Bodina Trio of vocalists and musicians also contribute some pleasing business, while new pictures on the Hippograph add to the attractions of the programme.

PUBLIC HALL.—Manager, Mr G. Watson.—Poole's Myriorama has occupied this large hall during the week, new and striking pictures of the Japan-Russia war in the Far East being added since their last visit to Ipswich. A strong variety company diversifies an attractive programme with their contributions.

JARROW.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Hugh Robertson.—This week Mr Henry Furnival's company is paying a visit with The Harvest of Sin. Mr Charles H. Lester gives first-class renderings of Harold Mainwaring and Arnold Mainwaring; Mr W. J. Butler is excellent as George Mainwaring; Mr E. Valentine is a powerful Paul de Brisionere; Mr W. Garrett a good St. John Haughley; and Mr J. Fulton Millar submits a capable impersonation of Silas Logan. Miss Louisa Peach is interesting as Grace; Miss Alice Oliver is quite at home as Margery Gray; Miss K. Willoughby is excellent as Gladys Mainwaring; and Miss P. Hastings does full justice to the part of May Mainwaring.

JERSEY.

OPERA HOUSE.—The domestic drama Sunday was played here for four nights on Monday by Mr Louis Calvert and Mr Herbert Ross's company. Miss Marie Polini's embodiment of the title-rôle is admirable; Mr W. Edwyn Holloway, who figures as Colonel Brinthope, acts well; Mr Arthur Willoughby scores as Tom Oxley; and Mr John Holloway as Arthur Brinthope looks every inch a young aristocrat. The four "pals," Tozer, Davy, Lively, and Jacky, are represented by Messrs Henry Stephenson, David Curtis, Alfred Phillips, and Arthur Somers. Miss M. Henderson as Mrs Naresby sustains her part with credit, and Miss Dorothy Gordon as the nun suits the rôle admirably.

KEIGHLEY.

QUEEN'S THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs Carson and Granville; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Barnes.—A welcome return visit is being made by Miss Edith Cole and company in A Royal Divorce. Miss Cole gives an artistic rendering of Josephine; Mr Frederick Victor's Napoleon is a capital piece of work; Tallyrand is ably embodied by Mr Claude Agnew; Mr Alfred Grenville gives a capital rendering of Augereau; Mr Trevor Lowe plays De Beaumont in excellent style; Mr Ernest G. Batley does good work as Marshal Murat; Miss Ethyle Murray is seen to advantage as Marie Louise; Miss Helen Richmond charms everyone as Stephanie.

KETTERING.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Payne.—This week we have Miss Blanche St. Alban's company in Her One Great Sin. Mr Sam Arthur is a capable Reuben Warhurst, and Mr Frederick Lloyd is successful as Arnold Thornhill. Mr Fred Hodson is amusing at Jerry Jumble, and Mr Harold Ford is a capital Jack Hundle. Miss Phyllis Damain gives a good performance as Charlie; Miss Nellie Lambert acts well as Nancy; and Miss Maudie Lambert is warmly applauded as Little Gracie. Miss Florence Creagh gives a talented rendering of the part of Grace Warhurst, and Mr Chas. Lambert and Miss Louie Walton as Dan and Bet Hundle are responsible for excellent character studies. The other members of the company give adequate support.

KIDDERMINSTER.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr R. C. Gudgeon, jun.—This week we have here Mr Chas. A. Chandler's company with The Bells of Haslemere. Mr Leonard Yorke submits an able rendering of Frank Beresford; Mr Montague Turner is capable as John Silkstone; and Mr Chas. A. Chandler acts well as Captain Vere. Mr Douglas Hamilton is well suited as Matthew Brookfield; Miss Florence Chandley is admirable as Norah Desmond; and Miss Mary Hardacre is efficient as Mary Northcote.

KING'S LYNN.

NEW ROYAL THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Bannister Howard; Business Manager, Mr Herbert Leonard.—Mr Geo. Edwardes's company, in San Toy, appeared here for the first three nights this week. Mr Edmund Sherras gained considerable applause for his impersonation of Bobby Preston; Yen-How was played by Mr Alfred W. Clark satisfactorily; Mr Alfred Beers as Li worked hard, and created much amusement; he was ably supported by Miss Florence Arnold as Dudley; Miss Don Harradine made a charming San Toy; Miss Mabel Lavelle sang well as Poppy; Mr G. I. Williams as Sir Bingo Preston was good; and Mr Clinton Ryland deserved praise for his dramatic rendering of Fo-Hop. The chorus was exceedingly good, and the augmented orchestra was under the direction of Mr Harold Lonsdale. On Thursday The Girl from Chicago was given.

LANCASTER.

ATHENÆUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Hy. Wilkinson.—A crowded house on Monday greeted the drama I Defy the World, presented by Mr Julian Malvern's company. Mr Lewis Gilbert showed himself an actor of exceptional power in the rôle of Leon Darville; Mr Joseph W. Worley gave a powerful rendering of the schemer, Count De Beaulieu; and Miss Lina Nazeby gave a capital portrayal of Blanche Darville. The humour was successfully supplied by Mr Chas. M. Julian as the Cockney tourist and Miss Maud Julian as his wife.

PALACE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs W. J. Fergusson and John Porter.—Another capital programme is arranged here. Heading the bill is Atlas, champion athlete, and Miss Vulcana, who have a good reception for their feats of strength. Frank Hartley is a clever boy juggler; the Warlocks, comedians, come in for rounds of applause; as also does Vosper in his impersonation of celebrities. Others who appear are Miss Rose Tilley, descriptive vocalist; La Modele, in her classic poses; and Miss Lily Turner, burlesque actress. Payne's Bio-Photoscope presents some good pictures.

LEAMINGTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Manager, Mr R. Taylor.—Messrs H. J. Callan and Wentworth Croke's company in Florodora had a hearty reception from a large house on Monday. Mr C. Y. Fiscott in the rôle of Gilfain, Mr W. Everard as Abercoed, Mr Arthur Lenville as Tweedlepunch, Miss Violet Bronson as Dolores, and Miss Dorothy Sephton and Miss May Yates as Lady Holyrood and Angela respectively fairly divided the honours between them.

LEEDS.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; General Manager, Mr Fredk. Vincent.—Musical comedy once again holds sway here. This time it is the record-breaker A Chinese Honeymoon, and in the hands of Mr George Dance's company the piece makes a rollicking and enjoyable entertainment. Mr Martin Adeson, a big local favourite, makes the part of Pineapple a thorough success; Miss Vera Vere is conspicuous for a clever and humorous portrayal of the waitress Fi-Fi; Mr Frank Crimp sings and acts well as Tom Atherton; Mr Philip Hayden makes an effective Emperor; and Mr Fred Payne and Mr Ernest Laws are also prominently successful. A dashing performance of Mrs Pineapple goes to the credit of Miss Eva Bevington; the official mother-in-law is capitally presented by Miss Holford Beringer; and we are indebted to Miss Madge Temple for a very pleasing study of Soo-Soo.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr R. Ernest Liston.—Messrs Landeck and Shirley's sensational drama, Woman and Wine, is the attraction here, and Mr Milton Bode's powerful company gives an excellent presentation. A trio of fine actors—namely, Mr Frank H. Robertson, Mr Fred Mace, and Mr Walter Thornton, fill the leading rôles with distinction, and are ably assisted by Miss Rose Galloway and Miss Lucy Langley in prominent feminine parts.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Dottridge and Longden; General Manager, Mr C. H. Longden; Acting-Manager, Mr Chas. Bush.—San Toy is again filling the house to overflowing, and Mr Geo. Edwardes's company does the piece full justice. A pleasing portrayal of the name parts is given by Miss Fanny Dango, and Miss May Francies is also exceedingly good as Poppy. Mr Reginald Kenneth sings and acts well as Captain Bobby, and the part of Yen-How is in the capable hands of Mr John Humphries. Mr E. Statham Staples provokes continual hilarity by his comical presentation of the cunning Li. Mr Henry Claff fills with distinction the part of Fo-Hop, Mr Colin Coop repeats his popular version of the Emperor, Mr Stratton Mills is effective as Sir Bingo, and good work is also done by Mr Jocelyn Hope and Mr Arthur Soames. The clever dancing of Miss Alice Lethbridge in Act 2 deserves a word of special praise.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Moss Empires, Limited; Resident-Manager, Mr T. Gerald Morton.—Mr Albert Chevalier is here delighting huge audiences with his accomplished character delineations and musical monologues. The Griffiths Brothers are also appearing, and their burlesque business again goes extremely well. Gilbert Rogers renders vocal items in good style, and Sybil St. Elmo also sings popular ballads with success. Minnie Cunningham, comedienne, again demonstrates her ability to please; Bard and O'Brien submit an expert slack wire act; Lieutenant Travis gives an entertaining ventriloquial turn; Johnny Dwyer is a smart example of the eccentric comedian; song and dance is cleverly rendered by Daisy Dormer and Flo Burris; and the bill is completed by Stave, the electric comedy artiste.

TIVOLI.—Proprietor, Mr Thos. Barrasford; General Managers, Messrs Chas. Weldon and Edgar O. Weldon.—There are two excellent animal shows to be seen here this week. De Gracia, with his fine troupe of elephants, which perform many amazing feats; and Carl Reinsch, with some remarkably intelligent horses and dogs. The Bob Hanlon Troupe of gymnasts again submit an expert and daring act; Troba, the juggler, finds great favour for his clever work; and Percy Honri, concertinist and comedian, is likewise having a most successful time. Dave O'Toole, a smart comedian; Cissie St. Clair, comedienne; and Professor Welsen, with his Swedish bar performance, are also appearing.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr F. W. Wood; General Manager, Mr J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr S. Jones.—George Leyton leads here with his naval vocal scena, Britannia's Babes, and is vociferously applauded. That sprightly comedienne Lillie Langtry is a popular contributor, as also is Tom E. Finglas, the negro vocal specialist. Terry and Bentley please their audience with clever comedy business. Lozelle presents a speciality act with great success. Chas. Coverdale, comedian and mimic, the Lynches, illustrated song artistes, and Leonard Bros., acrobatic clowns, complete the programme.

LEICESTER.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; Acting-Manager, Mr C. D. Leigh.—Sir Henry Irving and company occupied the boards here for the first three nights this week. The répertoire for the three nights of his engagement included Waterloo, The Bells, The Merchant of Venice, and Becket. On Monday evening the performance opened with Waterloo, in which Sir Henry appeared as Corporal Gregory Brewster. This was followed by The Bells, with the renowned actor in the part of Mathias. By his powerful impersonations of these two extremely different characters he once more showed that his hold upon an audience is as great as ever. In the former play, Mr Lionel Belmore was conspicuously successful as Sergeant Archie M'Donald, and Miss Maud Fealey was charming as Nora Brewster. Colonel James Midwinter had a capital representative in Mr Vincent Sternroyd. In The Bells Mr H. B. Stanford as Christian, Mr Charles Dodsworth as Walter, and Mr James Hearn as Hans are to be highly complimented on their clever assumptions. Miss May Holland won golden opinions by her delightful portrayal of Annette. Both Miss Mary Foster as Sozel and Miss Grace Hampton as Catherin were excellent. Others in the cast who did well were Mr Mark Paton as Dr. Zimmer, Mr F. Tyars as the President of the Court, Mr L. Palmer as the Notary, Mr T. Reynolds as Fritz, Mr W. J. Yeldham as Clerk of the Court, and Mr J. Archer as Mesmerist. When the curtain fell so enthusiastic were the audience, and so incessant the demands for a speech, that Sir Henry had perforce to comply with the demand, which he did in the following characteristic little reply:—"Ladies and gentlemen,—It is my privilege to thank you, although very inadequately, for your most kind, most gracious, and inspiring greeting. It is a delight to be with you once again, and to receive from you so cordial and so hearty a welcome. I thank you for my comrades one and all, who cannot respond, but who are most grateful to you, and I thank you for myself, as ever your respectful, loyal, and willing servant." On Tuesday evening The Merchant of Venice was produced with a completeness which reflected high credit on all concerned. Another splendid reception from a brilliant audience awaited the appearance of Sir Henry as Shylock, in which part he riveted the attention of the audience throughout by his masterful, consistent, and powerful character study. Miss Edith Wynne-Mathison appeared as Portia, and was conspicuously successful. Mr Gerald Lawrence was exceptionally good as Bassanio. The Antonio of Mr James Hearn left little to be desired. Mr H. B. Stanford was capital as Gratiano. Mr Charles Dodsworth as Launcelot Gobbo, Mr F. Tyars as the Prince of Morocco, Mr T. Reynolds as Old Gobbo, Mr Mark Paton as the Duke of Venice, Mr F. D. Davis as Salanio, Mr Lionel Belmore as Salarino, Mr Vincent Sternroyd as Lorenzo, and Mr J. Archer as Tubal were also included in the cast. Mrs Cecil Raleigh made a strong impression as Jessica, and Miss Grace Hampton was a pleasing Nerissa. At the end of Portia's Garden scene the applause was so vociferous that Sir Henry, leading Miss Mathison on the stage, thanked the audience in the following words:—"Ladies and gentlemen,—It is my privilege to thank you. It is impossible to thank you adequately for your most delightful, most inspiring, and cheering greeting. It is a matter of infinite pleasure to us to feel that our interpretation of this incomparable play of the master's has been received by you with such favour. I thank you for one and all of us, whose hearts respond most gratefully to your greeting, and I thank you as ever your loyal, respectful, and loving servant." This memorable and farewell visit terminated on Wednesday evening with a fine performance of Becket.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Winstanley; General Manager, Mr John H. Clarke.—The Life That Kills, presented by Messrs Moule and Nicholls's capital company, is on a return visit here this week. Mr Herbert Sidney sustains the villain's part, Kendal Croat, with ability, and as the hero, Hector Rodney, Mr Hugh Metcalfe is admirable. Mr E. D. Nicholls fully realises the possibilities of the part of the Rev. Theodore Rodney; Mr Morris Maud is good as Valentine Telford; Mr Harry Howe is successful as Jack Jolliffe; and Mr Stevenson does well as Terence Malone. Miss Vyvyan Montgomery is seen to advantage as Laura Linden. In the dual-rôle of Tom Dicks, a bugler, and Johanna Dicks Miss Mabel Kessler is a favourite, and her specialities on the cornet, post-horn, and bugle elicit unstinted applause. May Linden, a crippled child, is well played by a promising young actress in Little Mabel, and Miss Cathleen Cavanagh does well as Brenda Croat.

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Leonard Vidal.—Bransby Williams, assisted by Mr F. Morland, is starring here this week, and is giving with great success his dramatic episode, '87; or, The Veteran's Birthday. As a character impersonator Mr Williams undoubtedly stands pre-eminent, his attention to detail and his artistic method reflecting the greatest credit upon him. A word of praise should also be bestowed on Mr Morland. At the other end of the bill are Homer B. Mason and Marguerite Keeler, who keep the audience in a continual ripple of laughter with their sketch Hooked by Crook. The Bandurria Quintet of mandolinists and guitarists delight all with their enjoyable turn; Miss Marguerite Broadfoote, a fascinating comedienne, is always sure of a hearty reception at this hall; Albert Whelan, the Australian sifflleur and singer, provides a very good turn; Die Schützenlieseren Quartet are vocalists of considerable ability; Barrère and Jules give a smart exhibition on the parallel bars; the Brothers Cavallini score with their eccentric parodies; Juno Salmo is an extraordinarily clever contortionist; and Belle Braham, pictorial songstress, sings well.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter Lapworth.—The top-liners this week are the Leggett combination with The Maid of Athens. The Bransbys are excellent character duettists; Onda and Artell are clever in their pot-pourri gymnastic act; Ada Twibell is a smart burlesque actress; Ted Young is a capital comedian; and others entertaining are Kydd and Kydd, comedians and dancers; Cribb and Cribb, in an original burlesque, After the Ball; and the Cecils, terpsichorean artistes.

LEIGH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Dewhurst; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Dewhurst.—This week the boards here are occupied by Mr Walter Melville's company, in Her Second Time on Earth. Miss Hilda Beverley's performance as Dora Grey is very finished; Mr Chas. Franmore gives a capital portrayal of Captain Jasper Norman; Mr Cecil A. Milton is a manly Jack Carlton; Mr St. John Stuart is earnest as Tom Norman; Mr Wilton J. Selby makes an excellent Beppo; as Guy Brand Mr Chas. Girdlestone is very successful; Mr Percy Horton is a model Dr. Ridley; and a clever and realistic representation of Elizabeth Burke is vouchsafed by Miss Polly Marsh. Mr Fred Ingram as Teddy Butterfly ably supplies the comic element, and is well backed up by Miss Nana Flensberg as Kitty Rosebud. As Laura Norman Miss Elaine Vanbrugh is very pleasing.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. H. Dunlop.—Harry Tilbury and company in their sketch Jealousy are the attraction here this week, Dale and D'Argan give a smart acrobatic and juggling turn; Mill May, protean artist, is well received; Miss Nellie Shannon, the coloured coon, is responsible for some taking songs; Cris Bearne is a clever banjoist; and Bert Clench, boy vocalist; Kier and Allen, knockabouts; and the Two Dominoes, with their educated ass, are also well received. The Hippodrome pictures meet with their usual success.

LIVERPOOL.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr Arthur Lawrence.—Another of their ever-welcome visits to Liverpool is this week being paid by Mr and Mrs Kendal to the leading theatre, wherein they achieved many of their triumphs. That their admirers in the city on the Mersey have not fallen short in their appreciation of the renowned artistes has been shown in a marked degree by the large attendances of the public throughout the week. Old associations up this way are not soon forgotten. On Monday the clever comedy A Scrap of Paper was presented; on Tuesday the ever-delightful Elder Miss Blossom; on Wednesday Still Waters Run Deep; and for the following three nights and Saturday matinée Dick Hope, for the first time in Liverpool. Included in the supporters of the Kendals were Mr Bassett Roe, Mr Ernest Hendrie, Mr Metcalfe Wood, Mr R. Sheldrick, Miss Elsie Clarens, Miss Mary Jerrold, and Miss A. B. Tipping.

SHAKESPEARE THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. M. Hardie; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Gaffney.—Mr John Hare and his London company are here this week with Little Mary. It has drawn good audiences, who have probably been attracted by the advance press notices regarding the "secret" of the play. Much enjoyment has been provided, and rippling laughter has followed the smart dialogue and humorous situations. Mr John Hare, whose name is a household word in the theatrical world of Liverpool, was the Earl of Carlton; Miss Hilda Trevelyn, a clever young actress, the Moira Lovey; and others worthy of mention were Miss Helen Rous, Miss Kathleen Gordon-Lee, Miss Beatrice Kelston, Mr Carter Pickford, Mr Rudge Harding, Mr Eric Maturin, and Mr Fred Grove. There was a curtain-raiser, 'Op o' me Thumb.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessee and General Manager, Mr J. H. French; Acting-Manager, Mr S. Beltram.—Mr Thomas Thorne and his company have this week presented here Our Boys, which has been very cordially appreciated. As Middlewick Mr Thorne was as humorous as of yore. Mr M. Russell Rosse was the Sir Geoffrey Champneys; the "boys" were undertaken by Messrs Wilfred E. Brandon and C. Otter Hind; Miss Celestine Brandon was Mary Melrose; Miss Ethel Verne the heiress; and Miss Lucie Evelyn the Clarissa Champneys. A comedietta, A Silent Woman, preceded Our Boys.

ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr M. Montgomery; Licensee, Mr J. G. Howard; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Montgomery, jun.—The Face at the Window has been the strong attraction here this week. Although the work has been given in Liverpool very frequently, it still attracts attention, and the popular Northend playhouse has been well patronised. The company responsible for the production is that of Messrs Armadale and Warren, which includes Mr E. Hoggan Armadale, who has played The Wolf for over 1,500 nights. The work is replete with sensationalism, which appeared to be thoroughly enjoyed. In addition to Mr Armadale the company comprised Miss Marie Florence as the Banker's Daughter, Miss Jeannie Dempster as Le Pinau, Queen of the Rogues' Retreat, and Mr T. W. Dunscombe as Paul Gouffet, an enterprising detective.

LYRIC THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Henry C. Arnold; Directors of Entertainments, Messrs T. Barrasford and F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Coles.—The programme here includes Miss Robina Casselli and her Mexican dogs, who perform various acrobatic feats; Billy Williams, Australian comedian, has made a decided hit; Jules Keller, an acrobat who does all his work on his hands, is well applauded; Brothers Lavelle, comedy acrobats, are good; Frank Coyne's songs are always well worth listening to; the Wedburns are amusing with some new patter; Miss Sadie Simpson has a good coon song; the Northern Troupe are fine exponents of Scotch and Irish dances; and Virto, with his daughters, Irene and Venita, are excellent in their musical act.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr H. Fineberg; Acting-Manager, Mr M. Simmons.—"House full" has been shown here each evening. On Monday night especially the Star would have needed double its present holding capacity to accommodate all who applied for admission. The great attraction is A Girl's Cross Roads, played by an able company sent by Mr Walter Melville, the author of the successful work. Mr Edwin J. Wilde presented a fine character sketch of the old agriculturalist from the country; a manly type of hero, Jack Livingstone, was offered by Mr Wingold Lawrence; while Mr David Barone was a lively stableman and Miss Emily Custance the humorous housemaid. These two last-named artistes acquitted themselves with credit in the comedy parts. Miss Violet Barton-Astor presented a pitiful picture of a distressed schoolmistress battling with poverty; the gay farmer's daughter, tired of the hollowness of London life, found in Miss Octavia Noel a capable exponent, and Miss Beatrice Homer proved powerful as Barbara Wade. The scenic effects were good.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs Carson and Granville; Manager, Mr Fred Granville.—A Priest of the Temple, presented here this week, has been well received. Mr Charles March, the author, acts the part of Valerius Herdonius, the priest, with dramatic skill, and is supported by a capable company. Miss Marie North impersonates with satisfaction a Roman lady named Præstantia, with whom Valerius falls in love; and a strong character is that of Decus Fronto, the chief priest, played by Mr Ronald Bayne. Credit is also due to Miss Evelyn Hope, who invested her part with naturalness. Mr Henry Moxon was a fine Tiberian chief. Some excellent incidental music, composed by Mr March, added to the interest of the play.

EMPIRE THEATRE, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr H. E. Moss; Acting-Manager, Mr T. A. Cook.—George Lashwood is in big type here this week. He brings with him several new songs, and in response to the many demands for encores revived one or two old favourites. He was given a cordial reception. Chung Ling Soo, the Chinese conjuror, remains another week to bewilder people, who watch his remarkably neat movements with breathless interest. The St. James Quintet of vocalists and glee singers are a musical treat; a laughable turn is that of Fred Ginnett, with his Rejected Remounts sketch; the Brothers De Wynne show themselves to be athletes of refinement and ability; the Three Sisters Chester give a popular entertainment as vocalists, instrumentalists, and dancers; the Bros. Damm as eccentric acrobats cause considerable merriment; and included in the long list of artists are Dan Thomas, comedian; Professor Berner, king of marionettes; the Mannings, with their amusing sketch, A Hotel Boots; Rita and Roma, vaudevilles; Cassie Walmer, the dusky princess; Woodhouse and Wells, comedians; and the Venola Brothers, comedy gymnasts.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—A return visit of Houdini has aroused a deal of interest here. On the last occasion when he visited Liverpool his name became prominent by reason of the fact that the Head Constable of Liverpool gave him a testimonial for freeing himself from one of the local prisons. His remarkable quickness and skill in releasing himself from all manner of handcuffs and other manacles met with warm appreciation. De Biere provides an excellent turn with his exceptionally clever exposition of legerdemain; Algie and Reggie cause laughter in plenty as eccentric musicians; as does also H. A Zetto, with his smart comic juggling. A neat exhibition of gymnastics is given by the Freydos, the Waltons present an interesting turn as Chinese equilibrists, and others in the programme are Tom W. Royal, an accomplished clog dancer and comedian; Mariott Edgar, comedian; and Russell Wallet, who gives an acceptable society entertainment.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr F. O'Toole.—Muldoon's Picnic is here this week, as fresh as ever. Uproarious laughter follows the antics of Mr James M'Grath as Mulcahy, Mr G. Casey as Muldoon, and Mr Tom Coyne as the original Mrs Muldoon. Others in the cast are Mat M'Cormack, F. Maitland, T. Sullivan, and Grace Burns. Another "handcuff king" in the person of Villroe gives an exhibition of releasing himself from manacles; Dan Karnell as a patter vocalist is amusing; Rosie Somers is a dainty comedienne; and Halsey and Bowers are smart comedians and dancers.

NEW PARTHENON.—Proprietor, Mr Edwin W. Smith.—A capital bill is submitted here this week. At the head are the Verners, with their "tea-cup track," in which some wonderful bicycle riding is accomplished. The exhibition is received with much applause. The Hayes Brothers, comedy cross-talkers and dancers, are a capital turn; O'Connor and Traynor give a humorous entertainment with their burlesque boxing; Miss Millie Howell sings sweetly; Campkin, the original tramp cyclist, is exceedingly funny; and the three Sisters Lee go through a refined entertainment. Some excellent new pictures are shown by the Bioscope.

PADDINGTON PALACE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr James Kiernan.—The Danbys are principals here this week. As eccentric comedians and dancers they display considerable ability, while their quaint antics and funny patter cause much amusement. The Lulaine Darrell Troupe of Roman ring artistes provide an original performance, and are loudly applauded; the Dunvilles present a laughable comedy musical act entitled Mansion Domestics; Arthur Elvey sings some rollicking songs which are much appreciated; and Grace Compton is an acceptable burlesque actress. A feature of the evening's entertainment is the exhibition of snapshots of people taken in the main streets of the district. These are thrown on the screen, and the sum of five shillings is given to anyone who recognises his or her photo.

WESTMINSTER.—Proprietor, Mr M. Montgomery.—Miss Hetty King, "the society gem," is foremost here this week, and renders several capital songs; Harry Taft, the American whistler, is a good turn; Mabel Thorne, a favourite, brings several of her successful songs; Francisco is an expert juggler; May Moodie plays the piccolo with exceptional cleverness; the Bros. Stanley are smart character comedians; and Mr Arthur Beecham treats his audience to several amusing ditties.

PARK PALACE.—Director, Mr James Kiernan.—A well-filled bill is offered here this week. At the top we have the Two Eltons, who keep the house in a roar with their eccentric knockabout business on the horizontal bars; Fredo commands attention with his clever illusions, and is honoured with warm applause; the Darrell Trio of musicians are a neat turn, Miss May Darrell being especially skilful with the banjo; Flo Everette's canine pets give a smart performance, introducing somersaults, serpentine dances, &c.; Nancy Renshaw proves an able Negro comedienne and bone soloist; Norman Russell displays uncommon powers as a mimic; and others in the bill are Ada Searle, the Salford singing mill girl; the Ver-vains, whistlers, vocalists, and speciality dancers; George Edney, light comedy comedian; and the Marblesque Trio.

LLANELLY.

ROYALTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr John Tully.—Under the able direction of Mr Charles Harman, In Old Kentucky is being given here with much success by Mr J. F. Elliston's company. Mr George F. Steel as Frank Harley is most successful. Miss Amy F. Hermann as the heroine, Madge Brierley, is most charming, playing throughout the piece with the greatest energy. Colonel Beauchamp is most excellently portrayed by Mr Alfred S. Bankes, Mr Eric Hudson as Jasper Grafton does very well, Miss Beatrice Shirley and Miss Mary Clithson are both very good as Mrs Van Astor and Barbara Grafton, and Miss Edith Halford as Alethea Harley is also capital. As Neb Mr Harry Leander is very good with a clever speciality, and so is Mr Jimmie James in banjo and bone solos. The piece is lavishly mounted, and there are three race horses introduced.

LUTON.

GRAND.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr E. Graham Falcon; Assistant-Manager, Mr Louis J. Beard.—Miss Fortescue, supported by an excellent company, opened here on Monday with Moths. Miss Fortescue met with well-merited applause for a successful rendering of Fuchsia Leach; Prince Zouroff had an able interpretation at the hands of Mr Conway Wingfield; as Lord Jura Mr Dalziel Heron was good; and the same may be said of Mr Francis Burdett as the Duke of Mull. Miss Madeline Meredith did exceedingly well as Lady Dolly; Miss Marian Lewes scored as the Duchess De Sonnaz; Mr Cecil Newton was an acceptable Corrèze; and Miss Eugenie Vernie did well as the Princess Nadine. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon Miss Gladys Jesson for her portrayal of Vere Herbert, a part she played with great pathos. On Tuesday The School for Scandal was presented, and on Wednesday She Stoops to Conquer. On Thursday Mr John Wainwright commenced a three nights' visit in It's Never Too Late to Mend.

MACCLESFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr W. K. Gatley.—On Monday Mr and Mrs William Maclaren presented the romantic costume drama Proof. Mr William Maclaren acts with considerable ability as Pierre Lorance; Mr Ardene Linden presents with a good deal of humour the part of Chamboran; Mr Arthur Wareing as Victor and Mr Kingsford Pearce as Duke D'Aubeterre give useful impersonations; Miss Lily C. Bandmann is as usual quite successful as Valentine; and Adrienne has a capital representative in Miss Gertrude Evans. Mrs S. Hays appears with credit as Madame Deprets; Miss Wynne Hanley makes a pleasing Duchess D'Aubeterre; and Mr Richard Fulton is effective as the Count De Laval. On Wednesday the company appeared in David Garrick.

MAIDENHEAD.

NEW PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr G. Gude; General Manager, Mr Arthur Alston.—Pulo, the marvellous boy juggler, heads the bill this week, and thoroughly earns the unstinted applause accorded him. Carl Osmond, the tramp lightning cartoonist, contributes a clever turn, his quiet, but effective, by-play adding greatly to the value of his appearance. Miss Marie Lawrence, who has a quaint method, is redemanded; and Miss Lily Martell follows her songs with some very graceful dancing. Mr James May does eccentric dancing and hat spinning. Mr Charles Ellis is a good character impersonator, and another performer, under the names of Facio and Major Clark, makes two interesting appearances as chapeaugraphist and ventriloquist.

MANCHESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr Edmondstone Shirra.—Mrs Madeleine Lucette Ryley's play, Mice and Men, was given here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings by a company headed by Mr Forbes Robertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott. It is some time since Mr Forbes Robertson favoured Manchester with a visit, and the appreciation of very large audiences goes to show how welcome he is. Mrs Ryley's play is a capital vehicle for the exploitation of Mr Robertson's gift of sentiment, which is fragrant, unexaggerated, and pathetic, his rendering of Mark Embury being, in fact, a masterpiece of emotional characterisation, marked by artistic self-restraint. Miss Gertrude Elliott intensifies the pathos of the situation by her charming personality as Peggy, and Mr Frank Gillmore as Captain George Lovell achieves a success commensurate with the interest and importance of the rôle. Good parts also are in the hands of Mr George Sumner (Roger Goodlake), Miss Auriol Lee (Joanna Goodlake), Miss Ada Mellon (Mrs Deborah), and Mr J. H. Ryley (Kit Barniger), all of whom acquit themselves with vigour and distinction. The programme for the remaining half of the week is The Light that Failed and the "Booing" scene from The Man of the World.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr George Lee.—Whimsicality and wit are abundant in Mr W. S. Gilbert's "domestic pantomime" The Fairy's Dilemma, which was presented to a Manchester audience for the first time at this theatre on Monday. The chief honours of the performance were well earned by Mr C. Herbert Hewetson as the Demon Alcohol, Mr Charles V. France as Sir Trevor, Mr Frank Stanmore as the Rev. Parfitt, Miss Elsie Cooke as the Fairy Rosebud, and Mr Frank Collins as Mr Justice Whortle, ample assistance being rendered by Miss Ada Homer as Lady Angela and Miss Gertrude Hope as Clarissa. A very funny ballet in the old style is included. The piece is preceded by a comic adventure of a burglar, under the title of The Adventure of Nat Sturge.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr W. H. Broadhead; Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—Mr Frederick Melville's drama, Her Forbidden Marriage, is the attraction here this week, after a successful week at the Grand Junction Theatre.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Oscar Barrett; Acting-Manager, Mr H. M. Thorburn.—Mr Eugene C. Stafford's company are here this week in a farewell visit of the evergreen comedy, The Private Secretary. A good house on Monday enjoyed the piece as heartily as if it had been new, thanks chiefly to the excellent humour of Mr Geoffrey Guise as the Rev. Robert Spalding, and Mr. W. Hargreaves as Mr Cattermole. Miss Dora Gray as Edith is prominent among the remainder of an exceedingly capable cast. The comedy is preceded by John B. Buckstone's one-act piece, Good For Nothing.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—A capital programme, as usual, is offered here this week, including the well-known negro-patter comedian, Sam Redfern, and the Five Bogannys, a troupe of clever acrobatic bakers. Other interest and amusing turns are Clifton and Gibson, eccentric comedians; Linton, acrobatic tight-rope artiste; the Three Victorias, vocalists and dancers; Marie Winsome, a very pleasing male impersonator; Winnie Scott, soubrette and dancer; Jack Hylton, eccentric comedian; Three Sisters Anderson, in an equilibristric act; Tell and Tell, comedy acrobats; and Jimmy Shaw, a local juvenile vocalist.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—Messrs Garside, Knowles, and Ludlow's company are here this week in an interesting and sensational drama, The London Fireman, by Arthur Shirley and George Conquest. A good house enjoyed it on the opening night. The principal parts are in the hands of Mr J. Forbes Knowles, Mr Edward L. Garside, Mr Charles Preece, Miss Mona Gray, and Miss Nellie Garside, and these capable performers are well assisted by the remaining members of the cast. The play is very well staged.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Richard Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Berry.—The boards are occupied here this week by an interesting and exciting romantic play entitled The Edge of the Storm, excellently performed by Mr Leon M. Lion and capable company. Mr Henry Renouf as Jim Poulett plays with fine distinction, while a careful character study is given by Mr Leon M. Lion as Mootooswami, Poulett's faithful servant, and some amusement is caused by the capital impersonation of Mr Alan Borthwick as the pompous Major De Trafford. Miss Jean Sterling M'Kinlay as Szantes Lita is particularly good, and praise should be accorded Miss Ada Marius for a somewhat difficult part. Others who render excellent service are Messrs Frederick Annerley, Julius Hagen, Louis Palgrave, Lynward Grahame, Arthur Fitzgerald, and Gerald Malvern; and the Misses Nannie Hume, Maud M. Magrath, and Minna Renouf. The play is admirably staged and the scenery most effective.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—A strong turn here this week is that of the Imperial Russian Troupe of national singers and dancers, who are deservedly well applauded. Will Hebden, comedian, appears in his latest successes; Goliath and Walford give an exceptionally smart turn in feats of strength; much laughter is caused by the patter and eccentric dancing of Avon and Crest; and the Brothers Wynford are exceedingly clever barrel-jumpers; Winona and King execute some astounding shooting from a swinging trapeze; and the Paulastos are seen to advantage as head-balancers and acrobats, in their act, "Frolics in the Café Garden." Other interesting turns are J. P. Carroll, tambourine expert; Len Lever, coon artiste and sand-dancer; Sisters Neilson, duettists and dancers; George Foster, eccentric comedian: and the Hippodrome pictures.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr P. B. Broadhead.—Miss Dinah Morris and her troupe of American artistes are the principal attraction this week, and are exceedingly well received. The Famous Schaffers offer an exhibition of amazing strength; and Dwight and Son contribute some farmyard imitations and really smart dancing. Martin Conway, comedian, "walks round" in an amusing way; Harry Grey, the "Australian Nugget," adds to the fun; and the Sisters Sivado give a clever cycling act. The knockabout performance of Robins and Collier, in their sketch The Photographer and the Lady is amusing; and other enjoyable items are Alex M'Nulty, a pleasing juvenile vocalist; Frank Staley, actor-vocalist; Andrews and Thompson, comedians; and the animated pictures.

TIVOLI.—Managing Director, Mr Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr Arthur B. Wilkes.—Julie Mackay, the famous American comedienne, tops the bill here this week, and meets with a hearty reception. Well received also are J. W. Rowley, a favourite comedian in Manchester, and George French, an eccentric comedian, whose methods create endless amusement; Ella Dean, descriptive vocalist, sings well; the Redferns (Ruble and Elsie) provide a delightful musical turn; and Thomas Delaney, baritone, is heard to advantage. Others who contribute are Ariel and Astarte, clever gymnasts; Clo Lavinia, burlesque artist; and the Sisters Le Roy, duettists and dancers.

GRAND.—Lessees, Messrs Thomas Barrasford and Will Sley; Manager, Mr H. C. Arnold, jun.—The principal attraction here this week is Miss Minnie Hunt and Mr Rhys Thomas in a capital new musical duologue, entitled Her Birthday, which is enthusiastically received nightly. The dialogue is smart, and Miss Hunt's rendering of a Spanish love song is excellent; whilst the duet with Mr Thomas is delightful. Blanchard, Lister, and Rooker are extraordinary comedy contortionists; Arthur Boyne is funny in songs and eccentric tumbling; Maud Clifton sings the new popular ballad, "Goodbye, my Bluebell," in charming style; Gus Harris pleads for Jew as well as Gentile in a descriptive song; Felton and Manley appear in a novel athletic sketch, A Rural Relative; Little Barney, the comedian from Scotland, creates roars of laughter with his Gaelic song and dance when attired in kilts; Nellie and Nora present a refined musical act; Wills and August gain great applause with their neat and clever juggling act, combined with their comical plate-smashing assistant; and a series of excellent pictures complete.

PALACE.—Manager and Secretary, Mr P. Watson; Assistant-Manager, Mr J. H. Stringer.—An excellent programme is provided here this week, the principal attraction being the inimitable Scotch comedian Harry Lauder, whose amusing songs and patter keep the house in roars of merriment. Henri Cazman also is here in his clever and diverting act "Le Café Chantant;" and some expert comedy acrobatics are supplied by the De Courcey Brothers. Stylo gives a clever performance with his "trained" hoops; Mountford and Walsh are seen in a smart speciality duologue; Florence Yayman, an American eccentric comedienne, makes a decided hit with her novel and graceful coon-dancing; Blanche, electrical and quick-change artiste, gives a bright and pleasing performance; and Alma Obrey, comedienne, is very well received in a series of taking songs. Other good turns are Bob Baxter, comedian; Beatrice Bonnie, comedian; and James Grant, comedian. The orchestral selection and the Palace Pictures are, as usual, entertaining.

ARDWICK EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Will Collins.—Excellent turns here this week are Jap Kokin, whose juggling is a marvel of dexterity; Max Renard and his well-trained statuary dogs; Carrie Laurie's kindergarten, introducing some remarkably clever children; and the Jees, in their strikingly original musical act. Other good items are the Roman Singers, in a delightful musical scena, Song, Sense, and Nonsense, including Lindon Wyatt, who is a host in himself; Boyd and Gilfain, in a vocal and bagpipe performance; and the Three Laurels, in a speciality of the ping-pong tables. Cruikshank is a highly amusing entertainer; Lilian Lowe, vocalist, sings well; May Milburn is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; and Alexander, the great trick cyclist, goes through a clever performance.

MARGATE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr E. Macknight; Business-Manager, Mr Charles E. Hardy.—Messrs Carson and Granville's company has been appearing here with The Heart of a Hero. The drama is staged with great picturesqueness. Mr Fred W. Goddard carries off chief honours as Jem Resdale; Mr Charles E. Johnson, in the role of Wilfred Marl, is particularly effective; and Mr A. B. Mackay gives a capital representation of Mark Marl. Mr Harry Dunning acts very creditably as Jack Collinson, and Mr J. Harold makes a satisfactory Henry Barker. Mr Eric Forth easily makes himself a favourite as Dave Pritchard, and Mr Allen Carruthers is the pivot on which all the fun turns as Timothy Heighno. The fund of humour is added to by Miss Ida Mackay, who makes a very pert Susie Slack. Miss Cissie St. Elmo plays Nell Resdale with much pathos and effect, and Miss Lily Langley is a sweet and winsome May Ryder. Miss Beatrice Hudson is impressive as Mrs Ryder, and the other characters are all in safe hands.

GRAND THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr F. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr C. F. Bawtree.—Miss Madge Girdlestone and her company have been here with The City of Millions. Mr Martin Sabine plays with requisite force as Captain Wilfred Dread. Miss Madge Girdlestone plays with apt discrimination as Rosa De Valois. Miss Agnes Verity employs winning freshness as Jessie Townsend, and Mr Vernon Sansbury, in the character of the much-wronged hero, John Stacey, contributes a manly and earnest delineation. Mr Grahame Herrington makes a most amusing Benjamin Boodle, and some good comedy is provided by Mr Sam Wilkinson as Westwood and Mr Claremont Gaskell as Joseph Smudgeley. Miss Gladys Vernon is very vivacious as Kitty Taylor, and Miss Maud Stewart does well as Timothy. The remaining parts are all well filled.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr Will Smithson.—The God of War, presented by Mr J. Rice Cassidy and company, is revisiting here this week. Mr Cassidy is highly amusing in his impersonation of Dan Donovan, and is ably supported by Miss Lillian Clare, who gives a delightful portrayal of Dolly Daly. Other prominent parts are played by Mr Frank Orchard as Rega Alvado, Mr Norman Walletts as Señor Armado, Mr Stephen Crossley as Carlos Armando, Mr Frederick Biron as Raspa Cortes, Mr Frank Copeland as Lord Beamer, Mr Norman Hall as Doctor Roderigo, Miss Ada Roscoe as Señora Alvado, and Miss Florence Halton as Madeline Alvado.

MOTHERWELL.

NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Resident Manager, Mr W. Gillespy.—This week we are favoured with a return visit from Mr and Mrs Chalmers Mackey's company in The Wearin' o' the Green. Mr Chalmers Mackey's representation of Barney O'Hea does not suffer by repetition; Miss Nellie De Lacy depicts the part of Norah M'Grath with good effect; Mr Reginald Garland is effective as Shamus M'Dermott; and Mr Conway Hastings does well as Connor Martin. Mr H. Sainsbury plays well as Sir George Courtenay, and Mr W. Payne is satisfactory as Michael Kenny. Mr Henry Danson as Gerald Courtenay, Mr James Neville as Sergt. Yorke, Miss Bessie Carlyle as Edith Anstruther, and Miss Mona Russell as Gladys Anstruther are all well placed. The part of Biddy M'Ginn is in the capable hands of Miss Lalla Stanhope, and her singing and dancing bring down the house.

MEXBOROUGH.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr W. H. Melton.—Mr Geo. Burton's variety company is the attraction here this week. The star turns are Miss Flo Hilton, a delightful male impersonator, and Hanco, the handcuff king, who gives a wonderful exhibition. Other turns are the Four Kays, sketch artists; Tom Johnstone, actor vocalist; Sisters Hula, vocalists and dancers; Miss Daisy Belfrey, comedienne; Herbert Betts, comedian; Gillen, ventriloquist; and Kan and Kooney, comedians and patterers.

MIDDLESBROUGH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Middlesbrough Theatres, Limited; Managing-Directors, Messrs Geo. and Charles Imeson.—At the Royal this week Mr Louis Calvert and company are occupying the boards with Sunday. Miss Nita Faydon takes the leading part with unqualified success, enacting it with womanly grace. Mr Edward Pearce gives an excellent portrayal of Colonel Brinthorpe, and the "boys," Towzer, Davy, Lively, and Jacky, are finely presented by Mr Frederick Powell, Mr John Manley, Mr Norman Walter, and Mr Whitford Kane respectively. As a Nun Miss Olive Adair is charming, and great praise is due to Miss Elizabeth Watson for her portrayal of Mrs Naresby.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Licensee and General Manager, Mr T. Hopcutt.—A welcome return of My Lady Molly is attracting large numbers here. The excellent company is under the able management of Mr Frederick Mouillot, whose courteous acting-manager is Mr Harry Lindsay. Miss Decima Moore is charmingly captivating as Alice Coverdale, her acting and singing meeting with unqualified approval. In the title-rôle Miss Beatrice Edwards is thoroughly successful. Mr Ernest Morgan as Lionel Bland is deserving of considerable praise, as is also the Captain Romney of Mr Harry Davies. Mr John T. M'Callum in the part of Mickey O'Dowd creates much laughter. The other characters are in very able hands. The chorus is tuneful and well balanced, and the scenery and dresses are pretty.

EMPIRE.—Managing Director, Mr John Brill; Manager, Mr J. W. Thornborrow.—This week George Gilbey, comedian, meets with an enthusiastic reception. Burnetti, musician, gives a pleasing turn. Another clever turn is that of Mons. O'Gust, clown, imitator of animals and instruments. Miss Alma Gray is a pretty dancer, and Harry Pleon, in a sketch, How to Make a Book, is most amusing. Abel and Welsh, grotesque eccentrics, give a good show, and Johnny Alexander and company, in Our Lodger, are as successful as on previous visits to Teeside. Alec Kennedy sings some capital songs, and some good films are shown on the "Bio."

OXFORD.—Lessee, Mr Wm. Peacock; Manager, Mr Wm Ainsworth.—Heeley and Meeley, acrobats, head the bill here in some really clever feats; the Wallys are smart jugglers; J. H. Hawtrey sings some good songs; Miss Mary Weatherly and Frank Ellin, duettists, come in for a good meed of applause; the Brooklands are dainty dancers; the Keith and Imerson Troupe give an acceptable acrobatic show; and equally clever as acrobats are the Donatos. Mdlle. De Rose, the lady baritone vocalist, meets with a cordial reception.

NORTHAMPTON.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr W. J. Andrews.—Mr Tom B. Davis's company is presenting Florodora here for the fourth time with renewed success. Mr Daley Cooper is again the clever exponent of Tweedlepunch, this being his third visit here in the part. Miss Leonora Grieve is excellently suited both personally and vocally in the part of Dolores. Miss Daisy Byford is a dainty and sweet Angela Gilfain; Miss Rene Steadman is well placed as Lady Holyrood; Mr Charles J. Barber plays admirably as Cyrus W. Gilfain; Mr Cyril Dane acts and sings well in the part of Frank Abercoed; Mr Derrick Knowles as Captain Arthur Donegal and Mr Lionel Williams as Leandro make the best of their opportunities. The chorus is highly effective.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Fred H. Anderson; Acting-Manager, Mr Robert Barton.—Mr John Lawson is producing alternately his episodes Humanity and Sally in Our Alley. The remainder of the amusements are furnished by Conan and Doyle, comedians; Will Crowson, swell coon comedian; Craig, Rose, and Craig, dental athletes; Will Bacchus, actor vocalist; Ray and Mills, the curious couple; Cissy Conyers, ballad vocalist; and R. C. Note, comedian.

NOTTINGHAM.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr Howard Finney.—Miss Julia Neilson and Mr Fred Terry are this week giving playgoers the opportunity of seeing their latest production, Sunday. Miss Neilson's treatment of the part of Sunday is delightfully sweet and simple; the Colonel Brinthorpe of Mr Terry strikingly marks his versatility; the part of Tom Oxley is assumed by Mr J. D. Beveridge with the happiest results; the four backwoodsmen are excellently portrayed by Messrs Rothbury Evans, J. Carter-Edwards, Horace Hodges, and Alfred Kendrick; Mr Malcolm Cherry is sufficiently villainous as Arthur Brinthorpe; Miss Adeline Bourne makes a quiet and dignified Nun; and Miss Bella Pateman contributes a graceful embodiment of Mrs Naresby.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Chas. P. Cooke.—The ever-popular opera company of Mr F. S. Gilbert occupies the boards this week with a round of favourite operas. Maritana was staged on Monday. Mr Gilbert repeated his successes of former visits as Don Cæsar, singing with all his accustomed verve and charm. Miss Marie D'Alcourt essayed the title-rôle, giving it an attractiveness, and vocalising with skill and spirit. Miss C. Waldron as Lazarillo made a good impression, and Mr H. G. Place was highly effective as the King of Spain. Il Trovatore on Tuesday night introduced Miss Constance St. Bride as Leonora, a part in which her cultivated voice shone. Miss Vera Vezard enacted the Gipsy with commendable energy; and good work was done by Mr Albert German, Count Di Luna; and Mr J. Wheelan, Ruiz. Other operas given during the week were Faust, Satanella, and The Bohemian Girl.

KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr A. W. Bull.—In The Best Must Win Messrs Charles Draycott and H. B. Peppin have a play that contains many thrilling incidents. Mr Robert Watson presents a capable and vigorous performance of Paul Dumaresq, and Mr Fred Aldworth carefully enacts the old blind soldier. A thoroughly callous and despicable villain is seen in Mr Charles Draycott's embodiment of the Marquis De Marcel, and he is well supported by Mr O. J. Round as Minos. Miss Lilian Watson Loyde pathetically impersonates Denise Dumaresq, and Miss Ethel Vinroy puts dramatic feeling into the part of Lucille. The comedy element is furnished by Miss Maud Elliston (Suzette) and Mr Harry Harrop (Jacques Courcel).

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Hatton Wharton.—Horace Goldin's tricks of magic are far and away the best ever shown on this stage. An exceedingly clever ventriloquist is heard in Tom Edwards; the songs of Ernest Shand meet with a rousing reception; Nina Martino has a sweet and highly cultured voice; the comical antics of the Harvey Boys produce a fund of laughter; and another eccentric turn is provided by the Bros. Ethairien. The Ohms introduce a small circus performance with their dogs, bears, monkeys, and ponies, and a high standard of intelligence is shown by the different animals. Miss Maud Mortimer's descriptive songs are well received, and Andy Burn

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

TYNE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr Fred C. Sutcliffe.—For the past week or two we have had a succession of the latest musical plays, and the number was added to on Monday when Mr Wm. Greet's company appeared in The Earl and the Girl, a production which has all the advantages that charming dresses and bright scenic accessories can afford. Mr Wm. Stephens as Jim Cheese, the dog trainer, who finds himself in strange and exalted surroundings, keeps the fun going by his humorous performance. Mr Percy Carr displays smartness in his songs and acting as Dick Wargrave. The Hon. Crewe Boodle is capably presented by Mr Bertie White. Mr Wm. Walshe as A. Bunker Bliss, Mr Will Hindson as Downham, and Mr J. C. Graves as Mr Talk realise these parts in good style, and Mr Tom Redmond as Mine Host of the Fallowfield Arms does well. A particularly charming representative of Elphin Haye is found in Miss Aimee Grey, whose song "Sammy" is repeatedly encored. Miss Dot Carey as 'Liza Sholdam is very happy and natural in her treatment of the part, and the strong lady, Mrs Shimmering Black, is suitably embodied by Miss Gladys Fontaine. Miss Florence Imeson is a pleasing Daisy Fallowfield, and Miss Helen Langton as Miss Virginia Bliss sustains the part well.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr F. Teale Lingham.—Miss Lena Ashwell and company are appearing here in Marguerite, an adaptation of the play La Montansier. It is a somewhat sketchy and inconclusive piece. Miss Ashwell sustains the part of Marguerite, and although the rôle is not calculated to display her talents to the full, she acts gracefully and with power, and at every phase invests her impersonation with the right feeling. Mr Frank Mills as Neuville submits a forcible and spirited impersonation; while the Marquis De Pommeuse has an earnest exponent in Mr Thomas Holding. Mr Charles Groves as St. Phar thoroughly enters into the spirit of the part; and an enjoyable performance is that of Mr Harry Halley as Barelle. Mr G. Drayton as Nicolet, Mr L. Race Dunrobin as Berton, and Mr Charles A. Doran as Citizen St. Juste are seen to advantage. Among the ladies Miss Marie Hudspeth as Madame Brunet and Miss Sydney Fairbrother as Mdlle. Senedar give praiseworthy impersonations. At the matinée performance to-day (Saturday) Mrs Dane's Defence is down for production.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr T. W. Rowe.—The sporting drama Rogues of the Turf is being presented here by a company under the personal direction of Mr George R. Montford. The appearance of a stud of racehorses adds realism to certain scenes. The designing Marion has a capital exponent in Miss Gertrude Godart. The leading "rogue" is Captain Clinton, which is effectively impersonated by Mr G. R. Montford, and one of his tools is Moses Solomon, portrayed in amusing fashion by Mr H. H. Rignold. Mr Harry Phillips succeeds in bringing out the worthy qualities of the trainer, Joe Flaxman, and his daughter, Nellie, has a graceful and sympathetic representative in Miss Hilda Shirley. Amusement is derived from the performances of Miss Mabelle F. Barlow as Phyllis Warzell and Mr H. Benson as Sam Flaxman. Mr Ernest R. Allen is a spirited Arthur Somerton.

NEW EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Director, Mr Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr E. Leslie Conroy.—Crowded houses are to be noted here, where Vesta Tilley, the Newcastle idol, is fulfilling another most successful engagement. Spick and span, as usual, in what may be termed "creations" in the way of masculine apparel, and looking remarkably well, the talented lady has been singing four or five songs at each performance, including two new ditties in "The Seaside Sultan" and "The Owl," all of which are given in her own inimitable manner, and her reception has been enthusiastic in the extreme. Picturesquely clad as Venetians the Kellinos give a truly wonderful Risley acrobatic performance, their tricks being accomplished with remarkable neatness, ease, and finish. Those extraordinary dancers Espinosa and Neilson remain for another week, and a sensational act is that of the Tom Davies Trio, who race on bicycles around a bottomless track suspended above the stage. Pleasing duettists and dancers in the Cora Sisters are well received, and Ford and Hanson in their musical act introduce some novel features. The Hoopers, in their comedy juggling and hoop-spinning, give a very entertaining turn, and the company is further strengthened by the turns contributed by Juan and M'Que, knockabout comedians; Nello, lady contortionist; Charles Stevens, character vocalist; and Austin and Cowan, pleasing vocal entertainers.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr Ernest W. Bacon.—The Dayton Family occupy the place of honour this week, and their feats as Risley and pedestal acrobats evoke enthusiastic approval; the Violas, the white Mahatmas, give a clever performance, and mystify the audience; a hearty reception is accorded A. F. Dundas in song and patter; and the Ottawas appear successfully in a Canadian musical scena. An enjoyable comedy act is given by the Haldyne Duo, and the Brothers Teviotdale perform various feats of strength. A popular coon vocalist is Louis Kerno, while Grapho and Jackson, comedians, and Bert Kemp, cartoonist, add to the attractions of the programme.

OLYMPIA THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Thornton and Bacon; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr Nelson Barry.—"Olympians" are finding plenty of excitement in the drama A Wrecker of Men, which is performed by Mr C. Watson Mill and company. Risca Mallison is a sort of modern Delilah, and this character is cleverly realised by Miss Rosalind Tate. The burglar, Jim Murley, is depicted with force and excellent effect by Mr C. Watson Mill, who is the author of the drama. Rallton has a good exponent in Mr Sydney Fiennes, and Mr Charles Yorke skilfully enacts the part of the Egyptian, Pharosaphus. Mr Alfred Maurice is quite successful as Guise Strange. Miss Victoria May makes a pleasing Dor's Melville, and as the nondescript, Vavasole Slopper, Miss Kitty Melville appears with credit.

PAVILION THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr W. H. Boardman.—A strong all-round company is engaged here for the local race week, the programme being headed by the Ergotti and King Luis Troupe of Risley performers. Their entertainment is on familiar lines, but is exceedingly clever and daring. Austin Rudd, a favourite comedian in this city, is as amusing as ever. The New York Comedy Four introduce much humour into their contributions. Frank Gerald and company play a matrimonial sketch, which contains much that is amusing. The Five Whiteleys, acrobats of ability, are also expert wire walkers and musical performers. Will Godwin scores his usual success as a vocal actor, and Paul Vandy does not belie his name as a clever juggler and trickster. The Boswells' stage circus of ponies, donkeys, and dogs give an interesting show; Lowell and Lowell submit a comic acrobatic turn; and Tray and Rich, black and white artistes, and Cumminger, sand dancer, also appear.

NEWPORT.

LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Sidney Cooper.—Under the Russian Flag is being played here this week by Mr Walter Howard's company. Especial praise is due to the author. Mr Walter Howard, for his fine presentation of Demetrius; Miss Agnes Howard's Ogarita is a bright piece of comedy; Miss Ellen Snow as Luka shows great force and passion; Miss Ada Champion (Vera Vassiloff) makes a striking heroine; and Mr George Arthur is well adapted to the part of Michael. Mr F. W. Freeman as Ivan and Mr Alfred Bennett as Alexis looked and acted their parts well; and the Peter Poluski of Mr Hal Forde was a rich bit of humour.

EMPIRE.—Moss Empires, Limited; Managing-Director, Mr O. Stoll.—A strong bill here includes Mabel Hind, in her scena, "A Little Japanese," wherein her clever dancing evokes warm recognition; Steve McCarthy, Irish comedian, is somewhat of a novelty; Zarmo is clever as the Juggling Jew; and the Imperial Quartet sing and dance successfully. Lawrence Barclay's racy and original songs are rendered in taking style; Goggin and Davis, in a comedy acrobatic act, perform some clever feats; and Miss Marie Kendall receives quite an ovation. The turn of the Two Maningos is clever and sensational; Dutch Daly keeps the house in roars with his funny stories; and the Four Milons perform feats that are both clever and artistic.

NORTH SHIELDS.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Arthur Jefferson; General Manager, Mr Horace Lee; Secretary, Mr Gordon Jefferson.—Miss Mary Austin and Mr E. Vivian Edmonds's company is presenting The Golden Ladder here this week, which has been cordially received by appreciative audiences. As Lilian Grant Miss Mary Austin is well adapted to the part, and Mr E. Vivian Edmonds shows considerable skill as Michael Severa. Mr Harry Cullenford is good as the Rev. Frank Thornhill; Mr J. Milne Taylor acts remarkably well as Mr John Grant; Mr John Owen makes a hit as Samuel Peckaby; Mr G. Winsford fills with dignity the character of M. Peranzi; and Mr J. Rowland makes the most of Jim Dixon. Miss Nellie Graham is a commendable Mrs Peckaby, and Miss Freda Sheldon is pleasing as Mrs Dixon.

BOROUGH THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Arthur Jefferson.—Herr Fritz, the famous mystifier, has created quite a sensation here this week; the Sisters Russell, burlesque artists, are clever; and the Du Gros Trio, trampolin acrobats, introduce a smart act. Messrs Tate and Tate, comedy acrobats, are well received; Mr A. Aldridge, tenor vocalist, is popular; Mr Percy Curry, the "candy man," is cordially greeted; and Miss Alice Coventry, comedienne; Mr George Goldburn, comedian; and Mr Oliver Conroy, comedian, also meet with favour.

NEW CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Wm. Mould.—Mr Adam Tomlinson, the popular local comedian, is one of the principal attractions here. The O'Malleys, comedians, have also made a great hit, and Messrs Nelson and Thomas, comedians, are received with much favour. Miss Jeannie Evans, comedienne, is well received, and the Shandos, speciality artistes; King Leon, ventriloquist; J. H. M'Cann, skate dancer; the Rushforths, illustrated song artistes; and Payne's Bio-Photoscope are all successful.

NORWICH.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Manager, Mr Fred Morgan.—To the regret of all lovers of the legitimate this is the last week this handsome building will be utilised for the presentation of ordinary plays. Next week the proprietors of the Hippodrome open it with their popular variety entertainments. During the week Miss Lilian Dundas and her excellent company, under the direction of Mr Henry Dundas, have presented East Lynne to capital audiences. Miss Lilian Dundas as Lady Isabel played with much fervour and enlisted the sympathies of the audience. Mr Henry Dundas as Archibald Carlyle was most successful. Miss Leslie Dane was everything desirable as Barbara Hare, whilst Miss Kathleen O'Connor ably sustained the part of Miss Corney Carlyle. Miss Magdalene Douglas made a capital Joyce, and Miss Marion Ryder as Willie Carlyle and Miss Daisy Cooke as Isabel Carlyle were very interesting. Mr Wilfred Butt was very good as Captain Francis Levison. Mr Harry Barrett as Justice Hare, Mr John Hastings Batson as Lord Mountsevern, and Mr Rowley Hyde as Richard Hare were excellent in their respective parts. The other characters were ably filled and rendered every assistance.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr F. W. Fitt; Musical Director, Captain Selby.—This is the last week of the variety entertainment at this popular place of amusement, and the management deserves praise for the excellent class of entertainment given during the past thirteen months. Messrs Bostock and Fitt next Monday open at the Grand Opera House, and Mr Morgan resumes his position here as lessee with legitimate drama. This week an excellent programme is presented. Fred Karno's company of comedians appear in Jail Birds, and cause much laughter; Simons and Simons are amusing and clever musicians; the Brothers Anderson are well received as hand-balancers; Harry Gold, comedian, is a good turn; Edgar Budden is successful as a bone soloist and skate dancer; King and Ross are well received in their dramatic episode Brother for Brother; and Edith Courtney is pleasing as a ballad vocalist. The Hippodrome Bioscope is an interesting feature.

NUNEATON.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE, LTD.—Managing Director, Mr A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter J. R. Bryan.—An excellent programme is provided here this week by Mr John Leopold's company, with Frivolity. The piece is brought up-to-date, and is thoroughly enjoyable from beginning to end. Besides the Leopold Troupe of acrobats, the lady acrobatic dancers are clever, and greatly assist in the successful songs and dances with Miss Amy Hall, Mr John Leopold, jun., and Mr Bert Lloyd.

OLDHAM.

EMPIRE, LIMITED.—Manager, Mr Ernest Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr Hulme.—Mr George Edwardes's company is here with The Toreador. Mr W. H. Powell, as the dealer in wild animals, met with a cordial welcome; Mr T. W. Volt as the Lieutenant was a decided success; and Mr E. Nainby, Mr Fred Fowler, Mr John Donald, Mr Fred Allendale, and Mr Lionel Victor were successful in their respective delineations. Miss Alice Oppitz, Miss Daisy Stratton, Miss Nellie Bouverie, Miss Bessie Madoz, and Miss Nancy Langtyre were charming in their respective parts.

ROYAL.—Proprietors, Oldham Theatres, Limited; Manager, Mr Ernest Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr George Knowles.—An excellent programme is submitted to the numerous patrons of this house this week, Caicedo, the king of the wire, occupying the premier position. His marvellous and daring performance on Monday was greeted with well-merited applause. A. P. Boswell was successful in an exhibition of feats of strength; the Three Cape Girls were excellent as vocalists and dancers; Valvero was responsible for some skilful lightning drawings; Burg, Haud, and Wise were very entertaining in an acrobatic sketch; and Fred Keeton, comedian; Burns and Evans, American comedians; the Bros. Artois, gymnasts; and Percy Fammond, the singing collier, were also well received.

GAIETY.—Proprietors, Oldham Theatres, Limited; Manager, Mr E. J. Dexter.—The great attraction here is the Mysterious Lilith, who gives a varied performance whilst in a hypnotic trance. Miss Lilian Warren is very successful in a couple of sweetly sung songs, "A Picture no Artist could Paint," and "I'll be with you," illustrated by lantern slides; Beattie Bloom is a clever comedienne; Wisper, comedy juggler, is successful; and Fred Harcourt, a smart conjuror, astonishes his audiences by his brilliant feats. H. G. Prosper, comedian, is amusing. Raymond's Bioscope has many new pictures.

OXFORD.

NEW THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr Thomas Lucas, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr C. C. Dorrill.—This week Mr Tom B. Davis's company is paying us a first visit with The Medal and the Maid. Miss Rita Leonhardt is a captivating Merva Sunningdale; Miss Maude Lake a successful Josephine; Miss Cissie Stephton an insinuating Miss Ventnor; Mr W. Bland is a capital Brigand; and Mrs and Elsie Habbicombe find excellent exponents in the Misses Edith Blanche and Lillie Leroy. Mr Tom Graves scores hugely in his exceedingly quaint and humorous rendering of Levanter; Lord Belton and Allen Blythe find good representatives in Messrs C. Bishop and C. Kingsley; and Mr Tom Fancourt keeps the house in roars of laughter by his genuinely funny Simon Pentweazle.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Albany Ward; Acting-Manager, Mr H. G. P. Wells.—Mr Henry Eglington's company is fulfilling a week's engagement here with One of the Family. As Captain Lightfoot Mr Fred Clifford is bright and robust; as Terry O'Flanagan Mr Henry Eglington is a great success; Mr William Gardiner as Bartlemey Crowe and Mr A. Leslie Martin as Matthias Maggs are both intensely amusing; and Mr Harry Ray does well as Hon. Hubert Berkley. Miss Hylda Denison is graceful as Mrs Seymour, and Miss Hilda Waldorf is winsome as Emily Fanshaw. Miss Madeline Du Val looks charming and sings well as Kate Denny; Miss Dorothy Vernon endows Susan Hopkins with considerable vivacity; and the Geronds, speciality artistes, contribute some effective dances.

PAISLEY.

PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr J. H. Savile.—Mr J. W. Cragg's company occupies the boards here this week with the pantomimical absurdity Laughter Land. The marvellous Craggs create quite a furore by their comical efforts, and in their more serious work as acrobats and equilibrists they are vociferously applauded for their clever feats. Mr Harry Rousby as Dick Marlow is conspicuous for genuine humour. Mr Henry B. Lewis is a large factor in the success as Professor Sylvanus Wood, and Mr Arthur E. Behan as Squire Topsam, Mr G. Westmacott as Sir Vincent Marlow, Mr Craigie Edwards as Alderman Trentham, and Mr Victor Raymond as Archie are shining lights. Miss Amy Hastings prettily portrays Clarice, Miss Agatha Rose as Clothilda gives a bright representation, and Misses Cissie Dawes, Kitty Lingard, and Maisie Ryder are to be complimented on their singing and dancing.

EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr J. H. Savile; Manager, Mr Delno Fritz. The programme this week includes the names of Brady and Johnson, in their comedy sketch, Turning the Tables; Alf. Levarni, in a great wire act; Barney Noble, comedian; the Rozells, comedy bar performers; Golden and Grey, comedy artists; and G. W. Fyvie, Irish comedian and dancer.

TOWN HALL.—Proprietors, Magistrates and Council.—J. M. Hamilton, Scottish tenor, and his company, were the entertainers at this hall on Saturday night. Next to the popular tenor vocalist himself, J. B. Preston, comedian, had a most flattering reception.

PENTRE.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Sole Owners, Messrs Carlton and Duckworth; General Manager, Mr Sam Duckworth; Resident-Manager, Mr Eugene Hardie.—Large audiences are being attracted here this week by variety, which has taken a wonderful hold on local patrons. Larola tops the bill with a funny performance. The ventriloquial powers of Coram are greatly appreciated; the Four Trees are exceptionally clever dancers; the Sisters Aindow contribute a capital musical speciality; and in his descriptive songs Mr Arthur Albert is loudly applauded. The eccentric comedy of Ward and Wylie is interesting; Rose Cabini contributes a series of sweet songs; the Terras Brothers are exceedingly good in their acrobatics; and the orchestra, under the bâton of Mr C. Weldon, discourses excellent selections.

PERTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr Frank Aldridge.—Mr E. Lockwood's company is drawing full houses here this week with the comic opera La Poupée. Mr C. A. Shale's Lancelot and Mr Arthur Reynolds's Hilarius are good, and considerably amuse the audience; Mr Eliot Skinner as Father Maxime is seen to advantage, his fine vocal renderings being much appreciated; Mr Walter H. Page is delightful as old Balthazar; Mr Charles M'Lagan and Mr Fred Walsh are successful exponents of Loremois and Baron Chanterelle; Miss Lillie Leigh is a sympathetic Madame Hilarius; Miss Florence Shaw cleverly impersonates young Henri; Miss Violet Ward and Miss Lillian Pickering are decidedly good as First and Second Dolls respectively, and Miss Midge Clark receives quite an ovation for her excellent rendering of the rôle of Alesia.

CITY HALL.—Prince Bendon, the ventriloquial comedian, gave an excellent entertainment here on the 15th, those contributing towards an enjoyable evening's programme comprising such well-known artists as Mr J. W. Bowie, the Macdonald Troupe, Mr J. H. Macfarlane, Madame J. W. Craigie, and Pete and Minnie Lee; besides Prince Bendon in his ventriloquial and Cinématograph display.

PORTH.

POOLE'S OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr W. Bynorth.—Mrs Bandmann-Palmer and a specially selected company occupy the boards this week. On Monday Mary, Queen of Scots, was successfully played to a large and appreciative audience. In the title-rôle Mrs Bandmann-Palmer displayed great ability; Miss Katharine Herbert merited praise for her fine impersonation of Queen Elizabeth; Mr Sydney Bland showed much capability as Lord Burleigh; Mr F. Skein was remarkably good as the Earl of Leicester; Miss Henthorn gave an effective rendering of Hannah Kennedy; and Mr Edward Trant distinguished himself as Sir Edward Mortimer. Sapho, East Lynne, Nell Gwyn, and Jane Shore were to be played during the week.

PORTSMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Bell.—Mr George Edwardes's company is appearing here this week in The Duchess of Dantzic. Miss Evie Greene, an old Portsmouth favourite and a native, is playing the title-rôle. Her impersonation is a most able one, her singing well deserving the hearty applause accorded. Miss Adrienne Augarde is a charming Renée De Saint Mézard. Miss Billie Burke also shows ability as Lisette. Mr Courtice Pounds displays highly diverting humour as Papillon. The Napoleon I. of Mr Holbrook Blinn is a striking personality and an impressive study. Mr Herbert Clayton is an ideal François Lefebvre, and sings excellently. The Vicomte De Bethune of Mr Leonard Mackay is a capital performance.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr T. E. Agate.—A new and original drama, entitled The Traitor, is the fare at this house for the week, presented by Messrs E. Hill-Mitchelson and Harris Fineberg's company. Mr Wellesley Draper in the dual-part of Prince Rudolf and Colonel Nervi is seen to advantage, his acting being of the vigorous order. Mr Stephen E. Scanlan is responsible for the part of the Chief of the Police, the traitor, and doubles as Number One; he acts with commendable and conspicuous success. Miss Theresa Osborne as Lulu, the Avenger, gave a capital and well-sustained portrayal.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Secretary, Mr W. Pratt.—The programme submitted here is an excellent all-round one. Fred Karno and company give two sketches a-night, Mumming Birds and Jail Birds, both being highly diverting. Charles Gardener, eccentric comedian, has some extremely laughable songs and patter. The Lampas, duettists, dancers, and bâton spinners, do a very good turn. Fanny Erris is a pleasing character comedienne. Sable Fern is pleasing, and meets with a good reception. The company includes Rose Cass, soubrette; Three American Idols, vocalists and dancers; and J. H. Macaan, the concertina king.

PLYMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Langdon Lee.—Produced this week for the first time in the West of England by Mr C. P. Levilly's clever company, the comic opera Amorelle has proved very popular. Much of the success of the opera depends on the part of Dr. Crow, and Mr Eric Thorne makes full use of his many opportunities to provoke laughter. It is a grotesque and diverting performance. Miss Stella Gastelle appears in the title-rôle with striking success, her delicacy, style, and singing eliciting hearty plaudits; Miss Kitty Cavendish is a pleasing exponent of Lesbia; Mr John Doran as Jules, and Mr Newton Ide as Francois ably sustain those characters; and distinction is earned by Mr Robert Fairbanks, the Count; Mr William Griffin, Boissey; and Mr Fred Seymour, Dotard.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Williams.—A feast of drama is being provided here this week by a company including Mr F. H. De Quincey and Miss Sime Seruya, who have achieved notable successes in Richelieu, The Red Lamp, and Othello. Both are artists of great ability, and display studious acquaintance with their parts. Capital representations are given also by Mr Balliol Holloway, Mr W. H. Hargreaves, Mr C. Langton, and Mr Montague Lane.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr A. Carlton.—A Sister's Sin holds the boards here this week, Mr and Mrs F. G. Kimberley's company presenting it very satisfactorily. It is a stirring melodrama, and the cast is a strong one. Mr Arthur Royston as the hero, and Mr Cora Linda, the heroine, revealed considerable talent; and Mr Raymond Thomas and Miss Clara Santley sustained their parts well. Plenty of humour was introduced by Mr Cecil Morand and the Misses Lilian Warren and Edie Macklin. There should be a bright future in store for Miss Renie Douglas and Miss J. Love, two youthful actresses, both of whom exhibited histrionic ability.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr J. Field; Acting-Manager, Mr Carlton.—A judiciously selected programme is attracting big houses here. First and foremost is Miss Alexandra Dagmar, the popular comedienne, whose vocalism and vivacity nightly win for her enthusiastic recalls. Dan Crawley is another favourite, his répertoire including some very amusing songs. In the one-man opera Jake Friedmann is very funny; and Conway and Leland, one-legged acrobats, are clever executants. Rhoda Brothers are skilful equilibrists, and a very entertaining turn is that provided by Starr and Leslie. A laughable trap scene is forthcoming from the Five Bon Bons, and the Maples and Miss Minnie Moran introduce good dancing, the latter also singing in pleasing style.

PONTYPOOL.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs Poole Bros.; Resident-Manager, Mr Stephens.—Bugler Dunne, the boy hero of Colenso, is the chief attraction here this week, and receives each evening an enthusiastic reception. Included in some good variety turns are Miss Queenie Barnes, vocalist, and Herman, a comedian who amuses the audience with his funny patter and his performances on various musical instruments.

PRESTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr Stephen Pritt.—The Cherry Girl, presented by Mr C. Lubbock's company, is here this week. Mr Frank Lincoln gives a lively and distinctly successful impersonation of Moonshine. Starlight has a capital representative in Mr Hew Walker. Miss Helen Hart pleasingly embodies Pansy. Mr Albert Fellino merits special commendation for his amusing antics as Esau. The personal charm of Miss Ethel Newman in the rôle of the Queen is remarkable, and her vocalism, acting, and dancing are excellent. The part-songs contributed by the Steinway Quartet are received with enthusiastic applause. Miss Lottie Stone's Four Chameleons do some clever dances.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs Sawyer and Woodruff.—Kioto, the Japanese equilibrist, goes through a clever performance here; Edgar and Gaskell are amusing in their musical absurdity, Temptation; Bob Gardner, double-voiced vocalist, brings the house down; James M'Nab causes great amusement; the Zaro Troupe are a wonderful party of lightning acrobats; Mollie Doon is a charming songstress; Sara Macanni supplies some good songs; Wat Tyler is an excellent singer; and Oma and Caldron are expert acrobats and tumblers.

RADCLIFFE.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Geo. T. Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr Jas. Boothman.—Messrs John A. Atkin and Walter Howe are presenting the domestic drama entitled A Victim of Villainy. The rascally conduct of Stephen Cavanagh has a powerful exponent in Mr Sydney Arnold, and the wronged Frank Manton is ably depicted by Mr Walter Howe. Mr Arthur Staples is a comical Tom Leckie; Mr John Wybrett is a good Dr. Lennox; and Mr S. R. Fenton is a capable Patrick Maloney. Miss Mariette Hyde is good as Mary Manton, and Miss Helena Walbran displays much talent as Alice Cavanagh. Miss H. E Russell is interesting as Mrs Leckie, and Miss Connie Meadows is a typical Vera Diamond, a music hall artiste.

RAMSGATE.

AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General Manager, Mr Henry Bowman.—Honour Thy Father, a drama of strong human interest, played by Mr T. Morton Powell's company, has occupied the boards here. In the rôle of Mercy Merry Mrs Morton Powell appears with admirable effect, and Mr J. W. Evelyn proves himself a capable actor as Gabriel Garth. A similar remark applies to the Jack Halyard of Mr D. B. Watson and the Duncan Bly of Mr E. Hartington. Miss Kate Newton sustains in capital manner the character of Gertrude Garth.

ROYAL VICTORIA PAVILION.—Proprietors, Ramsgate Corporation; Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Herbert Jay; Business Manager, Mr G. B. Richter.—The week-night programme here has been one of considerable merit. A star turn is supplied in the Eugene Family; "Dusty Rhodes," comedian, has caused laughter loud and long by his drolleries; and Billy Tucker, champion ball-puncher, has given evidence of his skill. Turns have also been furnished by George Barrow, eccentric comedian; Jessie Reed, serio and dancer; Frank and Violet Payte, sketch artistes; E. J. Sheldon, character comedian; and Jessie M. Lyons.

RAWTENSTALL.

GRAND THEATRE.—Co-Proprietors and Lessees, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr J. Ellis Miller.—This week Mr J. A. Campbell's company is appearing in The Sin of her Childhood. Miss Mary Fulton as Mary Haysel is exceedingly good, and she is ably supported by Mr Charles Fancourt as the Rev. Alan Grey. Mr Hartwell J. Kirby as Captain Thornton also gives an artistic reading, his fine acting being thoroughly enjoyable. As Stephen Haysel Mr Austin Milroy shows exceptional ability as the heavy man, and Miss Jennie Hicks also makes a hit as Maria Haysel. Little Dot Moss sings, dances, and plays the banjo in excellent style, and her items are heartily encored.

READING.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr W. E. Barnett; Secretary, Mr Reginald Taylor.—Little Mary is paying a visit here this week, J. M. Barrie's uncomfortable play being well presented by Messrs Addison Bright and Walter Maxwell's company. Mr Arthur Holmes Gore as the Earl of Carlton gives a masterly performance, and Miss Christine Silver is successful as Moira Loney. Mr Arthur Kightley as Lord Rolfe, Mr G. Mudie as Sir Jennings Pike, Mr Ean Macdonald as Dr. Topping, and Mr F. J. Watts as Mr Deignton all contribute to the success, as does also Miss Elspeth Dudgeon as Countess of Plumleigh, Miss Evelyn Neilida as Lady Milly, and Miss Faith Reynolds as Eleanor Gray.

ROCHDALE.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr W. Robinson; General Manager, Mr Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr Charles Clucas.—Two Little Vagabonds occupies the boards here this week. The play maintains its popularity and is capitally staged. Mr Talbot Homewood fills the part of George Thornton with every success. Captain Darville has a clever exponent in Mr Douglas Cecil. Mr Harry B. Major as John Scarth and Mr H. Hesslegrave as Bill Mullins both give entire satisfaction. Miss Freda Ettrick and Miss Violet Carr as Dick and Wally deserve every praise for their embodiments. Miss Elena Lonsdale is effective as Marion Thornton; Miss Edna Eden is all that can be desired as Barbara Scarth; and Miss Eleanor Popera makes the most of Biddy Mullins.

ROTHERHAM.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr W. Manning.—Mr Bert Coote and company are paying a welcome return visit with The Fatal Wedding. Mr Ernest Outtrim is a manly Wilson, and Mr Oliver Rogers evokes marked disapproval as Robert Curtis, the villain. Toto is amusing in the capable hands of Mr W. R. Chewd, and Mr John Wheatman is a phlegmatic Peter Schwartz. Mr Jack Waring is also deserving of mention as O'Reilly. Miss Helen Russell is pleasing and emotional as Mabel Wilson, and Miss Doris Gilham is seen to advantage as Cora Williams. Miss Maud Locker is a typical Bridget, and Miss Rosie Dane as Jessie, the little mother, receives well-deserved applause. Misses Gladys Payne, Mary Thompson, and E. Abbott sing and dance with great success, and the trained choir are heard with pleasure.

RUGBY.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing Director, Mr A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Kingsley.—On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday Mr William Greet's company presented The Lady Slavey. Miss Addie Lennard scored an unqualified success in the title-rôle; Miss Jean Van Dalle and Miss Ethel Ashton as Maude and Beatrice were excellent in their dancing; as Flo Honeydew Miss Millicent Marsden was well suited; Mr Harry Walsh as Major O'Neill was humorous; and Mr Frank Sherlock as Roberts scored a great success. Mr Walter Hybert as Lord Lavender acted and sang agreeably, and Mr Allan Morris as Vincent Evelyn played capitally.

RUNCORN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr H. W. Caddick.—Messrs Carson and Granville's company is here in the drama, entitled Defending His Honour. Good work is done by Mr John Davidson as Douglas Bruce and Miss F. Melrose-Millett as Ethel Bryce. As Stephen Graed Mr Clifton Boyne gives a study of exceeding merit; Mr Chas. H. Herbert is equally noticeable as Douglas Duncan; Mr Kenneth Black combines well the investigating and comedy character of Dick Verison; and Mr Willie Black succeeds admirably as the hen-pecked husband, Richard Verison. Mr Thompson Carruthers scores as David Peller; Mrs Edmond Lyons is prominent as Mrs Theresa Verison; Miss Lilian Matthews is acceptable as Trixie Lucien; and Miss F. Elton's Jack Bryce is a very entertaining piece of juvenile work.

SALFORD.

PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr Harold Goulden.—On Monday a large audience witnessed with evident appreciation the various incidents unfolded under the title of The Drama of Life, written by Lingford Carson, and presented by Mr Oswald Lingford, general manager for Messrs Carson and Granville. Mr Jerrold Ord is responsible for an excellent study of the sorely-tried hero, Harry Beech; villainy is successfully embodied in the portrayal of Walter Beech by Mr John J. Hooker; Mr Owen Remonde as Sir Dobson Wilde and Miss Muriel Inglis as Lady Jane Wilde furnish plenty of matter for laughter; and Mr Oswald Lingard as John Walsh is also very comical. Good support is afforded by Miss Cissie Bellamy as Sylvia Beech, Miss Marie Murray as little Robert Beech, Miss Nellie Daly as Betty Black, Mr Bulwer Pitt as Jack Lawton; Mr Walter Steele as Richard Brenton, and Mr Edward Bikker as the Count De Foi. The scenery and staging are very good.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford; Licensee, Mr James M. Hardie; Secretary and Manager, Mr C. Shayler.—This week's bill is headed by Miss Minni Letta's Sporting Girls, who go through a series of walking races on an electric movable track. Other good turns are provided by Hurman, a clever hoop manipulator and juggler; Will Johnson, comedian; Tom Lloyd, eccentric comedian; Marie Blythe, vocalist; the Lombarts, in a modern gymnastic speciality; Harry M. Stewart, Hebrew comedian; Daisy Martell, comedienne and expert dancer; George Martinengo, baritone, humourist, and 'cellist; and the animated pictures.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy B. Broadhead.—A screaming absurdity, His Lordship's Birthday, is given by Fred Southern and company. The vetern stump orator, Billy Richardson, is well received; Rosemont and Clare's Philadelphian vaudeville company (seven in number) do some amusing business; Brothers Llodge give a smart acrobatic exhibition; and roars of laughter accompany George Prince, the crazy comedian. The programme also includes good turns by Primavesi, juggler; George Reeves, with comic songs; Hart and Rudd, comedians and dancers; Florrie Bray, burlesque actress; Will Ellerslie, comedian and mimic; and the animated pictures.

L. AND N. W. PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietress, Mrs S. A. Higham; Manager, Mr Sam Higham.—The Danvills, with their songs and living pictures, top this week's programme; and the artistes following them include Joe Hunt, eccentric comedian; George Russell, laughing comedian; and Charles Hughes, comedian.

SEACOMBE.

IRVING THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr James Kiernan.—A capital and well diversified variety company is in occupation here this week, including Mat Wilson's company in a clever musical olio and mélange entitled "If all the stars were mine." Chris Masters, actor-vocalist; Lee and Arden (Phil and Lily), in a smart little musical comedy sketch, The Lady and the Watchman; the Sisters Solari, a talented pair of vocalists and instrumentalists; Tonini, the man of mystery, who performs some marvellous feats of legerdemain; the Freans, drawing-room entertainers, vocalists, and dancers, who have a good stock of patter; Edie Endon, burlesque actress, with acrobatic dances; The Two Countees (Charlie and Marion), humorous duettists; Mdlle. Henriette, who introduces some excellent imitations of various musical instruments; and an amusing farcical comedy entitled The Registry Office.

SOUTHPORT.

OPERA HOUSE.—General Manager, Mr Alfred Hemming.—The clever comedy Joseph Entangled is seen here this week. Mr H. B. Warner, in the part of Sir Joseph Lacy, plays with distinction; Hardolph Mayne is cleverly portrayed by Mr Stanley W. Ashworth. The part of Lady Verona Mayne is most realistically presented by Miss Mona K. Oram; and Mr Laurence Grant is seen to great advantage as Jermyn Pyecroft. Mr Henry Arthur

NEW ENGLISH & FOREIGN PLAYS.

In order to assist managers and others in the selection of pieces for production and adaptation, we shall publish from time to time synopses of likely English and Continental plays, so that dramatic speculators may judge for themselves of the suitability of the plots for their purposes. Authors wishing for this publicity should forward synopses to "Playrights," care of The Era, from whom further particulars can be obtained.

"THE WAXWORKS."
Farcical Comedy, by Frank Wolff,
English Version by Ester Dale.

ACT I.

The scene is laid in the drawing-room of a bijou residence in a fashionable English watering place. Geoffrey and Muriel Scott married from diverse motives—he because he had run through all his money and preferred retrieving his fortune by marriage with a wealthy girl to applying himself to any business or profession, she because she was attracted by the style, dash, and general aplomb of the fashionable man of the world. The experiment has not proved successful, and on this, the eighth anniversary of their wedding day, when they are momentarily expecting the arrival and congratulations of Muriel's parents, Mr and Mrs Bradbury, they are "getting on each other's nerves" to a more than usual degree. Mrs Bradbury is a lady of "views"—mostly unfavourable to "mere man"—and having for some thirty years ruled her unfortunate husband with a rod of iron, she seeks a further victim in her son-in-law, and shortly after her arrival announces her intention of taking him and Muriel to live with them in the country, where Geoffrey may find plenty of "healthy, active occupation." Scott, weary of being reproached for his idle habits, resolves, as a means of escape from home tyranny, to go into business. He consults his friend Paulus, the proprietor of a so-called waxwork show (which is in reality a private club used as a rendezvous by those wishful for a quiet gamble or for a "little chat" of a more or less compromising nature) and, on his advice, decides to pass himself off on his friends and relations as a private detective The news that Geoffrey has at last found something to do is greeted with joy by his wife, who feels herself thus freer to carry on a budding flirtation with a certain Captain Curzon, a man of fiery emotions and uncontrollable impulses. Ignorant of the connection between Paulus and her husband, she agrees to meet Curzon at the waxwork show the following morning. She is just agreeing to this when her friend, Miss Agatha Strong, with her fiancé, the Rev. Ferdinand Meek, areannounced. Flurried at the interruption and the suspicious glances and hints of Agatha, she introduces Curzon to them as her medical adviser—a leading nerve specialist—whereupon Agatha who has been suffering from a slight attack of nerves—or temper—resolves to consult the great doctor. The impressionable Curzon, unable through the jealousy of his wife (whom he represents as a victim of hallucinations) to make a "professional" appointment at his own home, offers to meet Miss Agatha Strong also at Paulus' Waxwork Show] the following morning. In the meantime Mrs Curzon, who has watched her husband enter and leave Mrs Scott's house, decides on warning that lady's husband, and unexpectedly introduces herself to Geoffrey Scott. The latter on hearing her errand at once recognises her as the lady with the hallucinations, but charmed by her handsome presence and the prospect of reaping reward in his new profession, he offers to "shadow" Capt. Curzon and see that his injured wife obtains her revenge. He makes an appointment with her at Paulus' Waxwork Show for the following morning. The Rev. Ferdinand Meek—a disciple of Plato and advocate of a chaste but deathless devotion—forgets the legitimate object of his calm affections and falls head over ears in love with the handsome Mrs Curzon. He mentally resolves to also put in an appearance at Paulus' Waxwork Show the following morning. Whilst the younger members of this topsy-turvy company are thus preparing ingenious complications for themselves and one another, old Mr Bradbury has determined, whilst he is in town, to make at least one bid for freedom, and tries by Geoffrey's aid to concoct a letter summoning him to attend that evening a meeting of the Society of Busy Bees, a society for promoting industry amongst country gentlemen. His wife, however, sees through the ruse—as she sees through most deceptions, innocent or otherwise—and the poor old gentleman's plans for a happy evening are ruthlessly frustrated.

ACT II.

Scene:—Paulus' Waxwork Show—the following morning. A room of studied elegance and comfort is shown, with heavy curtains at back concealing a raised dais. On either side are various entrances to smaller rooms for the use of Herr Paulus' numerous clientèle. Half concealed amidst flower and foliage is a gramaphone, destined to play a very important part in this Comedy of Errors. To this seductive spot come—the following morning—all the various personages of the play, and it is not long before general confusion and misunderstanding reign. The Rev. Ferdinand Meek, driven into a corner to explain his presence in such a very secular atmosphere, seeks to screen his real motive (admiration for Mrs Curzon) by professing a violent attachment to Mrs Bradbury, and the elderley lady, charmed by his flattery, eggs him on to an avowal that he loves her "passionately—madly." The gramaphone, skilfully arranged so as to record conversations of a compromising character, stores up this indiscreet confession for further use. Matters have reached an almost indescribable state of complication—all the characters having got wrongly paired off in the various ante rooms—when the sharp ringing of an electric bell announces the unwelcome arrival of the police upon the scene! At the sound all the various couples rush out from the different ride entrances and midst darkness, confusion, and surprise, they are driven by Paulus on to the raised dais at the back of the stage and there forced to place themselves so as to form a set group. They become, in fact, the waxworks—the only ones that Paulus possesses! The lights go up, a police sergeant enters, accompanied by Mr Bradbury, and with utmost gravity Herr Paulus displays and explains the life-like group. This to to the characters themselves is injury enough, but insult is added when, on Paulus pressing an electric button, the figures—according to instruction—must move! Mrs Scott fervently embraces Captain Curzon before her outraged husband's eyes, whilst he in his turn is made to impress a dutiful kiss upon his sworn foe—Mrs Bradbury! Old Bradbury watches in amazement. Surely the figures are very familiar to him! Can he be mad or drunk? The police sergeant, duly impressed and taken in by the realism of the waxworks, assures him soothingly that this no doubt is the explanation of his delusion, and as the old gentleman sinks bewildered on to the sofa the curtain falls.

ACT. III.

The scene is once more laid in the drawing-room of Scott's house, on the afternoon of the succeeding day. All the characters have passed a most unhappy night, and the afternoon is taken up with mutual recrimination and incrimination. The women seek to gain the upper hand by bitter reproaches on the infidelity of their husbands, only to be in their turn confused and routed by their inability to give any satisfactory explanation of their own presence at the Waxwork Show. The odds do, however, seem to be in the ladies' favour, when, by an unexpected turn of fortune's wheel, their whole cause is ruined. This is effected by the sudden appearance of Paulus upon the scene, armed with the fatal gramaphone! The Rev. Ferdinand Meek is just endeavouring to assuage the wrath of his hysterical fiancée, when, to the bewilderment of all present, Mrs Bradbury's voice is heard saying in shrill gramaphonic accents, "Do you love your little sweetheart, Ferdinand?" and then Meek's voice replying "Passionately! Madly!" The sound of a firm, rapid kiss completes the overwhelming evidence. From that moment, the woman's cause—as led by Mrs Bradbury, is a lost one. Meekly she has to submit to being ordered by her erstwhile submissive spouse to return at once to the country—the pigs and the cabbages—as the temptations of the town are obviously too much for her! Muriel is to accompany her mother in this ignominious return to rural delights, whilst Scott and Bradbury, intoxicated with victory, exuberantly announce their intention of enjoying their freedom to the full, as a proof whereof they dance off arm-in-arm as "free-born Britons to the Waxwork Show," and the curtain falls.

COUNTY COUNCIL AND AMUSEMENTS.

(SPECIALLY REPORTED FOR THE ERA.)

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held, on Tuesday, the 11th inst., at the County Hall, Spring-gardens.

THE CHAIRMAN'S SPEECH.

In accordance with annual custom, the chairman, Mr J. WILLIAMS BENN, M.P., delivered his address upon the work of the past year. In opening, he said:—"The London County Council is becoming more and more the guardian—may I say the guardian angel?—of the citizen. It now follows and guards him from the cradle to the grave." The address, which occupied an hour in delivery, dealt with the work of the various committees of the Council.

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS COMMITTEE.

Referring to the Theatres and Music Halls Committee he said:—Prevention is proverbially better than cure, and it is hardly possible to overestimate the importance of making our theatres safe. Since the terrible Chicago fire of 1903 the Lord Chamberlain and the Council have properly required all scenery to be treated with a fire-resisting solution, and theatres and music halls to be placed in direct communication with our brigade. The Theatres and Music Halls Committee, presided over by Sir Algernon West, amid much other detail work, made during the year a most exhaustive and useful inspection of forty-three theatres licensed by the Lord Chamberlain. Many of the committee's suggestions have been adopted, and the public may now rest assured of the general safety of London theatres and music halls. The licensing sessions of the year passed smoothly, 336 premises securing licences. I am glad to notice the success of the Council's policy of encouraging the establishment of places of amusement innocent of the temptation of intoxicating drink.

STRAND TO CRYSTAL PALACE.

The chairman also made reference to the Special Committee on Locomotion. On the appointment by the Government of a Royal Commission on Locomotion, the Council at once decided to give evidence and appointed a special committee, of which Mr W. H. Dickinson became chairman. A mass of evidence was presented to the committee. Amongst other matters, "the construction of a new hypothetical north and south street from the Strand to the Crystal Palace, designed for separate slow and quick traffic with tramway subway (or two deep-level tubes) and pipe subways, with the approximate cost for work per mile and the estimate of the probable cost of buying the necessary property, were submitted in evidence, as was also the question of the finances of existing tube railways and of the Underground Electric Railways Company, thus indicating the necessity of having a tribunal to deal with all proposals affecting the county. It is expected that the report of the Commission will be issued at an early date."

MUSIC IN THE PARKS.

Commenting on the work of the Parks and Open Spaces Committee, the chairman remarked:—The citizen seldom seems to grudge money spent on more lungs for London, nor does he object to pay for an innovation made by this Council, viz, municipal music in the parks. Last year we spent £10,000 on over 1,200 performances, and gave delight to myriads of poor people who, but for the Council's bands, would hear very little good music.

A vote of thanks was accorded the chairman, and it was resolved that the address be printed.

INSPECTION.

At the weekly meeting held on Tuesday last, the Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported the expenditure incurred with regard to the inspection of places of public entertainment with reference to the character of the performance, &c., during the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1904, was £6 2s. 4d.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

The committee reported that the Council on March 29, 1904, approved, subject to certain conditions, plans submitted by Mr B. Crewe on behalf of the Lyceum (1903), Limited, showing how it was proposed to reconstruct the existing theatre as a music hall. The plans showed that two fire resisting curtains would be provided to separate the stage from the auditorium, one on each side of the proscenium wall. The directors of the Lyceum Company have now asked that the Council will accept the provision of one fire-resisting curtain. The regulations of the Council at present in force only require the provision of one curtain, and there is not any theatre or music hall where more than one curtain is provided. Moreover, in the recent arbitration proceedings respecting the requirements of the Council with regard to Drury-lane Theatre, the requirement for the provision of a second fire-resisting curtain was disallowed. The question as to whether the advantages of two fire-resisting curtains outweigh the disadvantages sufficiently to justify the Council in making a regulation that in every new theatre two such curtains shall be provided had not been considered by the Council, and the committee did not think that two curtains should be required in any case before such an important question of principle has been decided. The committee recommended "That in the special circumstances of the case, the provision of the second fire-resisting urtain shown on the plans submitted by Mr B Crewe with regard to the Lyceum Theatre, be not insisted upon." Agreed to.

NEW THEATRE, CHARLOTTE-STREET.

The Council, on July 21, 1903, approved drawings submitted by Mr F. T. Verity, of the New Theatre, Charlotte-street, Tottenham-court-road. An amended drawing has since been submitted showing the rearrangement of the seating of the pit and stalls. The committee recommended "That Mr F. T. Verity be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the plan, dated Oct. 7, 1904, submitted by him with regard to the proposed rearrangement of the seating of the pit and stalls at the new theatre, Charlotte-street, Tottenham-court-road, on condition that the gangway at the back of the pit be widened to 3ft. 6in. throughout." Approved.

THE PARAGON.

The committee had considered plans, submitted by Mr A. Parnacott, of a new scene dock proposed to be provided at the Paragon Theatre of Varieties. The drawings showed arrangements for cutting off the scene dock from the stage by a brick wall below the level of the stage, and by a double-thickness wire-woven asbestos fire-resisting screen on an iron frame above that level. The proposals appeared to be unobjectionable, and the committee recommended "That Mr Parnacott be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the two plans submitted by him with regard to the proposed new scene dock." Adopted.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.

The committee had considered a drawing submitted by Mr C. E. L. Parkinson, showing an asbestos curtain which it is proposed to fix to the scenery store at the Royal Court Theatre. The arrangements appeared to be satisfactory, and the committee recommended accordingly. Agreed to.

HISTORIC PROVINCIAL PLAYHOUSE.

BY T. H. BARROW.—V.

Two years later John Philip Kemble made his mark in the city as Teribazus, in Zenobia, Mrs Mason being in the title-rôle. Defending that lady from the ill-timed jeers of a spiteful woman of good family who was accompanied by some militia officers in a box, he got into hot water; but he stood to his guns, and, flashing looks of defiance at the fashionable party, drove them pale, sick, and enraged from the theatre! The following Saturday Kemble appeared as Douglas in the play Percy. Expecting a row in consequence of the previous night's unpleasantness, he filled the theatre with his friends, who put an end to the feud by shouting down his opponents The "revengeful party" interviewed Tate Wilkinson, and it was arranged that Kemble should state his own case before the next audience, whom he completely captivated.

and abilities for more valuable prizes than the northern city could afford. In July, 1787, Tate introduced to the public his son, John, aged eighteen years, as Charles, in The Hypocrite. Miss Farren, afterwards Countess of Derby, was the Charlotte, and there was a brilliant house. The Prince of Wales, afterwards George III., came to York in 1789 for the autumn races. He patronised the theatre in honour of Miss Farren, when the receipts amounted to £197 10s., a sum at that time not often received out of London.

The year 1791 witnessed several figurative tugs-of-war between the management and the public. Mrs Jordan, who had been engaged for the summer assize week, seems to have been involved, for she did not strive to please, and the audiences were meagre. The week following she positively declined to appear, and Tate was compelled to close the theatre. Mr John Kemble, who had been engaged for the week, was the guest of the Lord Mayor.

One may imagine the managerial responsibilities of Tate, who was not only patentee of the York and Hull theatres, but manager of the playhouses at Pontefract, Wakefield, Beverley, Doncaster, Bradford, and Leeds, and occasionally took his stock company to large towns further north. "He was liberal in the way of salaries," says Mr Benson, "but is said to have compelled his troupe to tramp on foot from one town to another, whilst he preceded them in his carriage; nevertheless they always found that he had provided a bountiful dinner for them on the road." There is something quaint and pathetic about that "nevertheless!" But whatever might have been Tate's treatment of and relations with his company, he raised the character of the drama and imparted to the York theatre a more than county reputation Of those members of the profession who gained experience under his and succeeding managements were Bridge, Frodsham, Jarman, Jordan, Mrs Siddons, Mrs Crawford, Mathews, Mr and Mrs Hitchcock, Fawcett, Emery, Herman Vezin, Cooke, and Kemble.

It should be explained that at the period to which I refer, York had a season all its own. Those were the pre-railway days, when coach-rides to London over desolate wastes and ill-kept roads were irksome, trying to the temper, and occasionally attended with physical danger. Fashion and splendour marked the society assemblages; in fact, in many respects York excelled even Bath and Leamington. Tate thus records his opinion of some of his patrons:—"The ladies of York, without any compliment, have a grace, a manner, a decorum, not often met with out of the metropolis (Bath excepted); for York certainly boasts a pre-eminence when the boxes in public weeks are crowded, that dazzles the eye of a stranger."

Tate Wilkinson's managerial reign at York was very long; it extended over thirty years. As he grew older he lost much of his vivacity and became morbidly eccentric. Hundreds of good stories of him have gone the rounds. One was told by Mathews, who as a novice went to him in fear and trembling to apply for an engagement. He expected to find him in a gilded chamber ablaze with oriental splendour; he actually unearthed him in a garret, his clothes unbuttoned and unbraced, his hose slipping over his carves, his wig awry, a grotesque figure indeed. The great manager was polishing some buckles presented to him by Garrick. As soon as Mathews had managed to attract his attention, Tate exclaimed, "I never saw anybody so thin to be alive! Why, sir, one hiss would blow you off the stage!" Finally he endeavoured to assure Mathews that he really had no talent for the stage and had better stick to the counter—but engaged him on the spot!

"SIR ARTHUR SULLIVAN: HIS LIFE AND MUSIC."

By B. W. FINDON,
London: James Nisbet, 21, Berners-street.

The task of Mr B. W. Findon in writing an account of his friend Sullivan's life and music must have been a labour of love; and the desire to be just to a great reputation is to be discovered in many passages in the book. Indeed the warm friendship of the man is not allowed to obscure the judgment of the critic. When Sullivan died in November, 1900, he was, said the journalists, the greatest English composer of any time; his works, whether serious or comic, had obtained him a European reputation, and as the head of a music-school he was a conspicuous success. As Mr Fuller Maitland has pointed out in an admirable article "We must agree upon what the standard of merit is to be, and it is surely possible that some such definition as this may be generally accepted. The finest music is that in which melodic ideas that are original, expressive, and beautiful, are combined with a treatment perfectly suited to the purpose of the work. From a fugue to a comic song, each form has its own ideal style of treatment, and a man is great in proportion to the frequency with which his creations conform to this ideal. Those who never fall below this standard, whose every work, if not an actual masterpiece, is yet deserving of reverent admiration, are the supremely great writers, and most people would agree that the fingers of one hand would be enough to count all of them that history has yet known. The most corybantic of Sullivan's admirers have not claimed for him a place among these creative geniuses." "Sufficient time has elapsed," says Mr Findon, "to put forward a tolerably accurate narrative of his life and artistic achievement. We are not justified as yet in placing him among that select number who belong to men for all time; to endow him with the reputation of a classic, or to say with any degree of certainty from what standpoint he will be regarded by posterity. In his art we recognise an original personality, a something racy of the soil, which we believe will keep him high above the oblivion that overtakes the mass of mankind." Sullivan, who came of Irish stock, was born on May 13, 1842, at 8, Boswell-terrace, Lambeth. His grandfather, a native of Kerry, after fighting in the Peninsula War, was drafted to assist in guarding the exiled Napoleon in St. Helena. Thomas Sullivan, Sir Arthur's father, was admitted to the Duke of York's School, where his aptitude for music won him the good opinion of the bandmaster. He was engaged at the time of his distinguished son's birth as first clarinettist at the Surrey Theatre. After a course of study at a private boarding school at Bayswater, the boy Arthur was sent to the Rev. Thomas Helmore, and became, in 1854, a chorister at the Chapel Royal, St. James's. Here are the boy's views of his life at the time,

"I always recall my old master, the Rev. Thomas Helmore, with affection and respect. I was greatly influenced by his great idea of relying upon the boys' sense of honour, and he certainly did make us very conscientious in the performance of our work. We had to practise the music for the Chapel Royal service every Saturday morning for the following day. He would say to us, 'Now, boys, if you get the music thoroughly well done, you may go as soon as you like. There will be no need for you to stay in during the afternoon.' I directed the practice of the music, whilst my schoolfellow, Alfred Cellier, the composer of Dorothy, played the accompaniments. It was, I think, something to our credit, and to the credit of Helmore's manner of dealing with us, that, with the temptation of an afternoon's holiday in front of us, we never scamped anything, and on more than one occasion we stayed on well into the late afternoon in order to get the music correct. Nor did we have any assistance of any kind. Helmore relied upon Cellier and myself."

The Mendelssohn Scholarship was offered for competition in 1856, and won by Sullivan, who had, however, a strenuous rival in Joseph Barnby. A year after gaining the Mendelssohn Scholarship his voice "broke," and he then devoted himself entirely to his musical studies at the Academy until the time came for him to leave for Leipzig, where he went in the autumn of 1858. Here he met Von Bulow and Liszt, and won no inconsiderable fame as a student by his overture to Tom Moore's poem "The Feast of Roses," from "Lalla Rookh." Of his training and tuition at Leipzig Sullivan himself wrote:

"I often try to think what would have become of me had I never come to Germany. In England there was very little more for me to learn. I had heard and knew well almost all the small stock of music which is ever performed in London (and it is very little compared to what one hears here). I should have made very little improvement in pianoforte playing, whereas now, thanks to Messrs Moscheles and Plaidy, I am a tolerably decent player. . . . Besides increasing and maturing my judgment of music, it has taught me how good works ought to be done."

In April, 1861, his music to The Tempest was performed with great success in Leipzig previous to its performance at the famous Crystal Palace concerts on April 5, 1862. We may quote the remarks of Mr Fuller Maitland concerning the impression made by this music.

"There was no exaggeration in the enthusiasm with which the music to The Tempest was received. It may seem difficult for us, over whom the full tide of the English musical renaissance has swept, to realise what a sensation the music made, without minutely comparing it with the average level of our national music before 1862. We cannot fail to see the great contrast between the dry, scholastic, uninspired work that represented English music at the time, and the blithe loveliness, the truly English note—unsounded for so long—and the masterly invention that distinguished this work of a stripling, fresh from his studies in Germany.'

Mr Findon also justly says: "In The Tempest music there are no signs of inexperience or crudity, and, by the light of the criticism of the day, it was justly regarded as a minor masterpiece."

He commenced his connection with the theatre by writing with Burnand the triumviretta, Cox and Box, which was given publicly at a benefit performance at the Adelphi. The Contrabandista and Thespis gave the young composer confidence in his powers until, with the production of Trial by Jury at the Royalty in 1875, he "must have been convinced that he could beat the Frenchmen on their own ground." We need not follow Mr Findon in his account of Savoy opera, a delightful form of lyric art that reached a standard never attained by the modern French school, and which at the time raised the taste of the London public above opera bouffe to a loftier plane. It is only necessary to add that the book gives an admirable sketch of a distinguished career. For forty years the deceased composer poured forth oratorios, anthems, part songs, operas, cantatas, and his work, to say the very least about it, raised the status of English music to a position it never before held.

MISS VIOLET SIMS'S father (Mr G. Sims) is, we are sorry to hear, lying seriously ill in the Royal Eye Hospital, and it is feared he will lose his eye sight.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of Brown's Bronchial Troches. People troubled with a hacking cough, a slight cold, or bronchial affections cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious pulmonary and asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government stamp around each box. Sold by Chemists everywhere, 1s. 1½d. per Box.—[ADVT.]

"THE HARVESTER."

An Adaptation, in Five Acts, of Jean Richepin's Drama Le Chemineau, Produced at the Lyric Theatre, New York, on Oct. 10.

(FROM OUR NEW YORK CORRESPONDENT.)

Originally produced at the Paris Odéon, an English version of this play was made familiar to London playgoers about six years ago under the title of Ragged Robin. The American version was prepared for Mr Otis Skinner, who sustains the title-rôle, by his brother, Mr Charles M. Skinner, the poetic text of the original play having been translated into graceful prose. This is probably the first of Jean Richepin's plays to be acted in the English language in America. Last summer Mr Skinner saw the play in Paris and decided to create in this country the romantic rôle of the restless gipsy-like hero. To bring the play nearer home to American audiences, the scenes have been transferred from the sunny lands of France to the picturesque fields and hamlets of French Canada. The mysterious character who is known only as the Harvester is a wanderer and a vagabond through temperamental and racial attributes. He is a man of the soil, close to nature; a handsome, debonair fellow, who, with a song on his lips and a sickle in his hand, wanders from farm to farm, reaping by day and making merry by night. The girls all adore him for his good looks and easy manner, and the men respect him for his physical strength and his knowledge of the great world that lies off somewhere beyond the hills. Among the girls is Toinette, the village beauty, who loves the Harvester too well and to her sorrow. François, the head reaper, asks her to become his wife, but she rejects him, for her hopes are built on the Harvester. But the man cannot settle down into regular ways of life, and the first act ends with his slinging his pack over his shoulder and starting off again down the white road, to wander as his gipsy spirit prompts him.

Eighteen years elapse. Toinette has married the head reaper, and their son Tony has grown up and fallen in love with Aline, the Seigneur's only daughter. But her father, Master Pierre, has grown richer and meaner every year, while François has worked so hard on his little farm that he is now only a helpless paralytic, shaking and mumbling in his chair by the kitchen fire. When old Pierre hears of the love-making he comes in hot haste to the little cottage, and berates the poor cripple and his wife, finally blurting out that Tony is nothing but a bastard. François leaps to choke him and collapses at his feet. In the days that follow Aline falls sick, and Tony drinks to forget. The village folk wag their tongues, and as they gossip by the village inn fate brings the vagabond and his song down the road once more. His fellow reapers recognise him. He recalls them—the harvest nearly twenty years ago—and Toinette. They tell him what they know, and the Harvester guesses the rest. He goes to find the boy, asleep in the inn stable, and comes face to face with Toinette. She has forgiven him, as one forgives the dead. But the boy Tony must never know. They must bring back his spirit—make him happy again. So the Harvester sings his old reaping song and capers to amuse the lad and cheers him affectionately. But to Tony he is merely a jovial and sympathetic stranger. He stays, and both Aline and François are the better for his coming. Meanwhile, there is trouble in the big farmhouse. Master Pierre's cattle die, his crops fail. He hears of the Harvester's return and remembers him as the possessor of wondrous secrets and magical healing powers. He sends for him, and the vagabond plays upon his fears. He makes solemn incantations, and the Seigneur trembles before him. His price for doing what the Seigneur asks is the consent of the latter to the marriage of Aline and Tony, and he gains his point.

Happiness reigns once more in the little cottage, and Aline helps Toinette to prepare the Christmas feast before going to midnight Mass. Even the dying François is happy, and, in a sudden return of speech, utters a last wish that the Harvester shall remain. Toinette, as she dons her cloak and follows the others to the church, has no thought of his leaving them. Master Pierre tells him, in his blunt way, that all the villagers expect him to marry Toinette when François dies. But the old wandering instinct is stirring within him. It is not for that he has done what he has for them. He must follow his fate and press on, and with a silent farewell to the dying man he passes out into the snow.

Mr Otis Skinner's acting of the title-rôle gave genuine pleasure to the audience, and evoked the heartiest expressions of approval. After the admirably enacted scene in the third act, in which the Harvester for the first time looked into his son's face and passionately embraced him, the house showed its appreciation, not by mere hand-clapping, but by loud shouts; a spontaneous tribute to an actor's art such as is seldom rendered in a New York theatre. Miss Lizzie Hudson Collier gave an ideal embodiment of Toinette; Mr J. M. Colville's François was a remarkably fine character study; Mr George Clarke gave an able representation of the Seigneur; Mr Russell Cranford made the part of the reaper, Martin, stand out well; Miss Maud Durbin (Mrs Otis Skinner) was a charming Aline; and Mr Walter Lewis a capital Tony.

MUSIC AND LISTENERS.

DR. STEWART MACPHERSON lectured on the 12th inst. at the Royal Academy of Music on "Listening to Music." He sketched a picture of the modern concert room with its rows of people listening with an air of quiet endurance to some abstruse work of modern art, which to the majority of the hearers who had not studied music must represent little more than chaos. He touched on the lack of discrimination displayed by the audience, which after conventionally applauding some great masterpiece, would go into raptures of delight over some showy, tricky piece of executant skill, and finally shout itself hoarse over a threadbare song by a popular composer. Music, he remarked, was not a mere ear-tickling sensation, but an expression of the emotions, and to be of value must appeal to the intellectual side of our nature. He pointed out the importance, in listening to a piece of music, of having regard to the period of its composition and the characteristics of the time, and this led him to give an interesting review of the salient landmarks of European music and the successive development of the art. In conlusion, he advised his hearers to aim at broadmindedness and catholicity of taste. The man who pinned his faith to Wagner, Tschaikowsky, or Richard Strauss was as egregiously narrow-minded as the man who would not acknowledge that anything had happened in the development of music since Handel's Messiah. Art must be influenced by the zeitgeist or spirit of the age. In these days of stress, complexity, unrest, and even in some cases of pessimism, they would find that the prevailing tendency among ninety-nine out of a hundred young composers was to choose lugubrious subjects and to make their listeners as depressed and morbid as they themselves appeared to be. "Let us hope," he remarked, "that the next genius to appear on the scene will be a little more hopeful." The subject of Mr Macpherson's lecture next Wednesday will be "The Elementary Principles of Musical Structure."

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

THE GRAND.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Drama, in a Prologue and Four Acts, by Robert Buchanan and Harriet Jay, entitled "ALONE IN LONDON."

Mr J. F. Elliston's company is paying Islington a visit this week, and excellent performances of this favourite drama have been given. Miss Madge Devereux as Annie Meadows submits a performance of signal merit, particularly so in the later portions of the play, where the value of her reading is much in evidence. Miss Ada Tilley as Gipsy Tom is exceedingly artistic. Miss Lily Lewis as Ruth Clinton is responsible for an acceptable performance, and Miss Ella Gillette as little Paul shows natural intelligence. A special word of commendation is due to Miss Ada Elliston for her humorous performance of Liz Jenkinson, which supplies a welcome note of light relief. Mr Henry George's portrayal of John Biddlecombe, the honest countryman, is an earnest and excellent effort; Mr Stephen Ewart's Redcliffe is quite an excellent performance, and for every detail of his performance we have only warm praise. Mr Stafford Smith as Mr Burnaby submits a dignified and well-balanced performance; Mr Hugh Brady as Spiffins portrays the humorous propensities of that character with success; Mr Walter Burnaby is capably acted by Mr Herbert Light; Mr J. W. Wilkinson as Jenkinson is richly humorous; and Mr Lonnen Meadows as Johnston also deserves congratulations on a successful embodiment. Mrs C. Woods deserves special mention for a really good performance of Mrs Maloney.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Drama, by Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck, entitled "TOMMY ATKINS."

An audience which packed the house from floor to ceiling on Monday welcomed with tremendous enthusiasm the return of the Pavilion stock company, in a revival of Messrs Shirley and Landeck's popular play, Tommy Atkins, a drama which is full of vigour, activity, pathos, and realism. On the present occasion the piece has the advantage of all the original scenery and effects, which provide a series of excellent stage pictures—Riverdale Glen, Exterior and Interior of Barminster Church, and the Malaki Fort calling for special mention, while the admirable work of the talented company is marked by a zeal which is maintained from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Nothing better could be desired than the brave, manly dignity graceful bearing, and good elocution of Mr Ashley Page as Harold Wilson; he is at home with his audience, and elicits rounds of ringing applause with his expressive acting throughout the piece. An extremely good performance of the cool, machinating scoundrel Captain Richard Maitland is given by Mr Frank Harding, who enters so thoroughly into the character that he succeeds in drawing excited howls of execration from the "gods." Mr J. C. Aubrey as Private Mason contributes a rendition of a difficult part with such effective discrimination and powerful artistic skill which does not fail to meet with due recognition, and Mr Charles Langley presents a convincing portrayal of the stern, unforgiving Stephen Raymond. Mr Wilfrid Shine as Sergeant Paddy Molloy is a typical Irishman, and is the cause of much merriment, whilst Mr Harry Barford is exceedingly droll as Ebenezer Skindle. Mr Ernest Stern does good service as Captain Robert Sparrow, and Mr G. L. Eveson is satisfactory as Colonel Hardwick. Mr Harry Bristow, well made-up, submits a capital portraiture of the good-hearted magistrate, Sir Simon Redgrave; and Mr Fred Boustead is efficient as Private Harris. Mr Garnet Vayne is a diverting Tommy Trotman, Mr C. Ferry a commendable Perkins, and Mr W. Dempsey an imposing Arab Chief. Miss Marion Denvil as Ruth Raymond has a very exacting task, of which she acquits herself with much ability and feeling, depicting the tribulations and sorrows of the sorely-tried heroine with considerable sympathetic power. Miss Daisy Scudamore is pretty and lovable as Elsie Wilson, investing the part with a tender sweetness which is most attractive. Great praise is due to Miss Tina Mavro for her smart impersonation of the vivacious Kate Perkins, and the ill-fated Margaret Maitland receives due dramatic treatment from Miss Kate Leslie. Miss Alice Beaumont is pleasing as Rose Selwyn, and Miss Milly Murray is a responsible Martha, whilst Miss Sara Besant is a capable Jack. The drama in every respect was correctly and superbly mounted, while it is almost needless to add that the production, being under the direction of that past-master master of stage-craft, Mr Isaac Cohen, was stage-managed with an excellence that was perfect in every detail. Many thanks are due to the acting-manager, Mr Fred Brown, for his kindness and courtesy in looking so successfully after the comfort of those in front of the house, and we are pleased to learn that he will be accorded a well-deserved benefit on Nov. 17.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Drama, in Four Acts, by W. P. Sheen, entitled "THE TEMPTRESS."

The West Londoners found much to enjoy this week in witnessing Messrs Gordyn and Gellings' capable company in their excellent interpretation of this powerful play of Mr Sneen's. Mr George Dalper as Philip Welford acted with plenty of life and go, being repeatedly cheered for his efforts. The rascally scoundrel, Lucas Denbigh, found an able exponent in Mr Percy Ballard, who portrayed in telling fashion the doings of that plausible villain. Mr Herbert Williams was most lively and energetic as the ex-circus clown, Bob Tanner, and Mr Henry W. Hatchman, in his original character of Pedro Gonzales, deserves every praise. Mr Arthur Sheldon did exceedingly well as Sir Oswald Fordyce; Mr Allen Charles was humorous as Francis Fitz-Fluke; Mr Johnny Chippendale was genuinely funny as the jealous butler, John Gregory; Mr W. Grahame was very dignified as the Rev. Austin Dale; and Mr Philip Waldron, in a capital make-up, was more than creditable as Caleb Blake. Miss Violet Crauford sustained the rôle of Stella, Lady Fordyce, most effectively, acting throughout with grim determination; Miss Ada M. Ryder realised the character of Madge Denbigh, the mad wife of Lucas Denbigh, in admirable fashion; and Miss Nellie Cross deserves mention for her playing as Keziah Blake. As the long-suffering Marion Fordyce Miss Vashti Wynne cuts a pathetic figure, her acting being especially fine; Miss Eva Temple does the little she has to do as Trixie Templeton in good style; and Miss Mattie Everett is a pronounced favourite as the bright and cheery servant Rhoda Brown. The piece was well mounted and staged and most favourably received by a crowded house.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Negro Musical Comedy, by W. M. Cook, "IN DAHOMEY."

An enthusiastic audience welcomed this unique musical comedy here on Monday. The scene of the prologue is a Dahomien swamp, and as the Chief of Caboceers Mr Norris Smith, who has a fine voice, gives a most realistic performance. In the play proper Mr Dan Avery plays Rareback Pinkerton and Mr Charles Hart is Shylock Homestead. On these two fall the burden of the acting, and right well do they acquit themselves. A more amusing couple it would be scarcely possible to imagine, the house being convulsed with laughter at their songs and business. Mr Avery's song with chorus, "Castle on the Nile," is honoured by triple encores; and Mr Hart in the famous "Jonah Man" song scores a double encore. As Hamilton Lightfoot (President of a colonisation society) Mr Pete Hamilton leaves nothing to be desired; as Dr. Straight (in name only) Mr Fred Douglas is well suited; and Messrs Walter Dixon and Leon Williams are both well cast in the parts of Hustling Charlie and George Reader respectively. Miss Pauline Freeman as Rosetta Lightfoot acts the part very pleasantly and moreover sings with effect; and as Mrs Stringer (a Boston school-mistress) Miss Stella Hart receives much applause. The minor parts are all capably sustained, and the cake-walk competition at the end of the play is much appreciated, each couple of dances being loudly encored. The chorus is powerful and well trained; and the orchestra is under the bâton of Mr Oscar Hanke. The mounting and dressing of the production are all that can be desired.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Play, by David Belasco and J. L. Long, entitled "THE DARLING OF THE GODS."

Local playgoers have this week an opportunity afforded them of witnessing the much-talked-of Japanese play The Darling of the Gods, of which Mr Tree made such a success at His Majesty's Theatre. The company is toured under Mr Tree's direction, and needless to say the piece is staged in a most complete manner, an excellent company being engaged. The weird effects are cleverly produced, and the scenery is typically Japanese. It is evident that no pains or expense have been spared in sending out this magnificent production. Mr G. W. Anson appears as Zakkuri, and gives a very fine rendering of this crafty character. It is a clever piece of acting, and Mr Anson is seen to much advantage in the part. Perhaps the most striking performance of the play, however, is the Kara of Mr Alexander Calvert, who makes a great impression by his fine assumption. Yo-San is charmingly played by Miss Lilian Stafford, who is to be complimented on her performance in the latter part of the play especially in which she shows great power. Mr A. P. Kaye is good as Saigon; Mr P. R Goodyer makes a satisfactory Tanda-Tanji; Mr Ernest Stallard is seen to advantage in the small part of Cato, the fisherman; Miss Augusta Haviland is particularly good as Rosy Sky; and Mr Robert Gray is dignified as Banzo, the Samurai priest. The stage-management of Mr Stanley Wade is in every way praiseworthy; Mr A. L. Spittle conducts the orchestra, which plays the special music composed by Mr William Furst, in a most creditable manner.

THE KING'S, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Play by A. W. Pinero, entitled "THE SECOND MRS TANQUERAY."

Miss Olga Nethersole appeared at the King's on Monday night in The Second Mrs Tanqueray, portraying the title-part with her usual ability. She was supported by an exceedingly well-balanced company. Mr G. Titheradge essayed, not for the first time, the part of Aubrey Tanqueray, and he admirably succeeded in portraying it. An excellent and really clever performance of Cayley Drummle was given by Mr Berte Thomas, and Mr Edward Fielding was most convincing as Capt. Hugh Ardale. Mr Wm. Burchill's impersonation of Sir G. Orreyed was very effective. Frank Misquith and Gordon Jayne were satisfactorily played by Mr Slaine Mills and Mr Henry Dodd. Very amusing was Miss Rosalind Ivan as Lady Orreyed, Miss Francis Ivor was a pleasing Mrs Cortelyon, and Miss Madge Field made the most of the part of Eilean. The scenery and appointments were very elaborate. Sapho was given in the latter part of the week to delighted audiences.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Oct. 17, "COUSIN KATE."

Cousin Kate still weaves the spell of her subtle charm around suburban and provincial playgoers, just as she was wont to do with London audiences at the Haymarket. Miss Emma Hutchison's clever comedy company, under the direction of Mr Percy Hutchison, is this week interpreting Mr Hubert Henry Davies's charmingly witty, fresh, and fragrant comedy, and its wholesome humour and pathos appear to appeal to the heads and hearts of Brixtonians in due proportion to their merits. Miss Lillas Earle makes a delightful and attractive Cousin Kate, and every time we see her this delightful actress seems to have improved. Time has but mellowed and perfected her performance in the part. Mr Yorke Stephens as the easy-going artist who loves both wisely and well gives a good, sterling embodiment, and is at his best in the more serious phases of the character. Mr Walter Ringham as the specious opportunist curate, the Rev. James Bartlett, is admirably well suited. Miss Helen Leyton acts capitally as the dear, motherly, short-sighted old soul, Mrs Spencer, whose efforts to conciliate and set people at their ease are always baffled by her lack of discretion. Miss Hilda Honiss as the irresolute and malleable Amy Spencer, whose convictions are always more or less subordinate to her desires, is charmingly ingenuous and insincere. Master Vyvian Thomas scores as the young brother, Bobby Spencer. Miss Betty Castle is effective in the small part of the giggling maidservant Jane, a typical country wench of the menial order. The pièce de résistance is preceded by Theyre Smith's amusing and well-known comedietta A Case for Eviction, which is capitally rendered by Mr Walter Ringham as the young doctor, Miss Betty Castle as Dora, his wife; and Miss Hilda Honiss as Mary the maidservant.

NEW EALING THEATRE.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Play, in Four Acts, Adapted by Clyde Fitch from Daudet's Novel, entitled "SAPHO."

A very powerful rendering of Sapho is being presented at the New Ealing Theatre by Miss Olga Nethersole's company, and a full house manifested its approval on Monday. For the Sapho of Miss Cecil Cromwell nothing but praise can be given. In all the varying moods of the character—pathetic, loving, raging, and despairing—Miss Cromwell gives us a true realisation of Daudet's frail heroine. The Jean of Mr Arthur Royston bears traces of well-considered and painstaking effort, and he is to be complimented on the presentation of the part. As Uncle Césaire Mr Cremlin acts excellently, and supplies a good personification of the "gay old dog." Mr Arthur Poole as the cool, calculating Déchélette could scarcely be bettered, and Mr Frank Melrose as Caoudal is most convincing. Mr Hodgson Taylor does good work as Flamant, and the same remark applies to Mr James Kenning as Hettéma. Miss Jessie Melville as the burly Madame Hettéma is excellent, and Miss Gertrude Wynter as Irene plays the part prettily. The tender yet practical Divonne is carefully enacted by Miss Isabel Derrie, and Miss Rosa Sullivan makes a very effective Francine.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Comedy, by George Rollit, entitled "THE MONEY-MAKERS."

Full houses have assembled to make the acquaintance of Miss Emma and Mr Percy Hutchison's company in the above piece, and have been kept in intermittent laughter. The company is efficient in all respects, and Mr George Rollit's clever and enjoyable sporting farce is certainly seen to advantage, leading characters being successfully impersonated by Miss Muriel Ashwynne, Miss Lorna Lawrence and Miss Frances Davie. Miss Ashwynne's performance in her original part of Dot, as played at the Royalty, is especially meritorious, and the Misses Lawrence and Davie by their clever embodiments of Mabel and Bella keep up the interest of the play throughout. Miss Mary Griffiths is excellent as the old housekeeper, making her reading as amusing as it is characteristic. Mr Frank Lacy, a refined comedian, makes the most of the part of Captain Archie Fitzgerald, and Mr Edward Bonfield cleverly sustains that of Charles Clifton. Mr Edward Sidney gives a humorous reading of the rôle of Fred; and Mr Townsend Whitling makes a hit as the butcher. Master L. Look gives a breezy rendering of a messenger boy; Mr Allan Thomas keeps the house convulsed by his fun as Matthew M'Dougall; Miss Violet Ley, praiseworthily unconscious of her good looks, admirably impersonates Baby Berkeley; and the other characters are all in capable hands. As a prelude, Mr Frank Lacy and Miss Violet Ley give an excellent interpretation of Mr A. E. Drinkwater's comedietta Two in a Trap.

SHAKESPEARE, CLAPHAM-JUNCTION.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Melville, entitled "A DISGRACE TO HER SEX."

Mr Walter Melville not only knows just what suits the public taste, but is also exceedingly happy in the selection of his companies. Miss Grace Heywood in the title-rôle evokes at first disgust and hisses, but finally sympathy and applause. Mr Eugene Santley as the man who deserts the woman and his child plays the part of David Carrington with emphasis and success, his vigorous, breezy style contrasting well with the sleek, oily, insinuating methods of Mr Augustine Knight as the spying Frenchman Jules Delarnet. The fun was chiefly supplied by Mr Arthur Byron as Barnaby Mugg and Miss Madge Yates as Bella, and the former's claim to be called a dog fancier was thoroughly justified by the number and variety of the dogs he brought in front of the footlights. Mr Phil Harper as Jack Dawes and Mr D. G. Nobleas Arnold Travers played satisfactorily; Miss Winnie Tempest as Mabel Valley acted with sincerity and charm; and Miss Nellie Lucas as Mildred Carrington was tender and sweet as the deceived prospective bride. Mr Arthur Chisholm made a good detective; Mr Fred Carson was amusing as a dog thief; and Miss Daisy Norman made the most of the small part of the drunken landlady. The minor characters were all in capable hands; the scenery, costumes, and uniforms were consistent and effective. The scene—number three, act two—of the entrance to the hotel, with its large fountain with real water, was much applauded.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Drama, by Henry Arthur Jones and the late Henry Herman, entitled "THE SILVER KING."

That The Silver King still draws was evidenced on Monday, when Messrs Austin Melford and G. M. Polini's company reproduced it here. Mr Austin Melford is very happy in his treatment of the part of Wilfred Denver, his delivery of the "Dream" speech in particular being extremely fine. Miss Emilie Polini ably supports him as Nellie Denver, Mr C. C. Grattan worthily upholds the traditions of dear old Daniel Jaikes with sound discretion; Miss Amy Manfree is easy and natural as Cissy, and Ned has a clever little impersonator in Master Jack Evan. Mr Charles Levey is resolute and thorough as that prince of cracksmen, Captain Skinner, alias the Spider. The requisite touch of ironical humour is imparted to the labours of Henry Corkett by Mr James L. Power. Mr Arthur H. Rooke works effectively as the old rascal, Elijah Coombe; and Cripps is well realised by Mr C. P. Amalia. Mr Arnold E. Palmer is sarcastically excellent as Geoffrey Ware; Samuel Baxter is capably portrayed by Mr Warriss Lindon; Mr Phil Redmayne is good as Frank Selwyn; and the excellent character work of Mr Eric Store as the self-sufficient parish clerk, Mr Parkyn, is one of the features of the production. Messrs A. Bingham and S. Hathway also render ready support as the gossips, Binks and Bronson. Miss Phyllis Bailly is a pleasing Olive Skinner, and Miss Amy Wood amuses as the unabashed rural widow, Tabitha Durden. Many smaller parts are capitally treated, and the mounting is excellent.

OPERA HOUSE, CROUCH-END.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Comedy, in Three Acts, by Arthur Law, entitled "A COUNTRY MOUSE."

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr Percy Hutchison's company is this week presenting the comedy A Country Mouse, by Arthur Law. The Hon. Archibald Vyse is capitally played by Mr Sydney Stirling; Mr Charles Harley takes good care of the part of John Bowlby, M.P.; as the Duke of St. Kitts Mr Arnold Lucy makes an extremely meritorious effort; Mr Wilson Lumley calls for favourable mention as Lord Robert Wykeham; Mr J. E. Watson is conspicuous in the cast for his pathetic portrayal of Jephcot, the butler; Miss Dorothy Drake smartly enacts Lady Sylvia Bowlby; Miss Eva Erskine wins popular tributes for her genial portraiture of Violet Aynsley; Miss Emily Levettez furnishes a humorous study of Mr Cropper; and Miss Dido Drake puts convincing work into the rôle of Angela, in which she was thoroughly successful. The piece is preceded by the farce His Landlady.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Military Drama, by Arthur Shirley and Ben Landeck, entitled "TOMMY ATKINS."

Patrons of the Dalston Theatre must be quite familiar with the incidents of the military drama, Tommy Atkins, so frequently has it been played at their local theatre; but, notwithstanding that fact, fairly large audiences have put in an appearance this week, and have shown no lack of interest in the incidents. The drama is well played by Mr Milton Bode's company. Mr Frederick Ross makes a dashing Harold Wilson, and his many adventures are followed with the keenest sympathy. Mr George Doughty is the Captain Richard Maitland, and does well in the part; and Mr Reginald Holmes is an effective Captain Robert Sparrow. Mr John Nolan's Sergeant Paddy Molloy provides the audience with plenty of opportunity for mirth, and the Ebenezer Skindle of Mr Billy Harman is also a good specimen of broad comedy. Mr Charles A. Wenman as Private Mason, and Mr Henry G. Parsons as Private Harris, impart interest to those characters; and Mr Morris Drew's Stephen Raymond is also a part which has evidently been well thought out. Mr Augustus Hammond is good as Thomas Trotman, and Mr Christopher is a sufficiently relentless Sir Simon Redgrave. Miss Kitty Omer is a decided favourite as Rose Selwyn, being particularly good in the emotional passages; Miss Lola Patey does well as Ruth Raymond, Miss Ethel Tinsley is a sprightly Kate Perkins, and other parts are taken by Miss Kate Priddis, Miss Marie Fontaine, Miss Florrie Vickers, Mr Alex N. Phillips, Mr Fred Barclay, and Master Philip Priddis.

GREENWICH THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Comedy, entitled "WHY SMITH LEFT HOME."

Mr Horace Lingard and Why Smith Left Home company are the attractions offered to Greenwich playgoers this week. The entire performance is remarkably satisfactory. Mr H. Lingard plays with a quiet humour that is irresistible; Mr Robert Grey as Count Von Guggenheim presents a clever character study that does him the greatest credit, and the same remark applies to Mr Herbert Dickenson as General Billetdeux. Mr Joseph Hudson is very good as Major Duncombe; Mr Henry Grey is a manly and earnest Robert Walton; Miss Keith Lytton is an amusing Mrs Billetdoux; Julia is cleverly acted by Miss Marie Vere; Rose Walton is prettily played by Miss Rue Daryll; and Miss Smith is entrusted to Miss Ethel Russell with excellent results. Mrs Smith is an admirable performance by Miss Hilda Stericker, and Miss Constance Stephens makes a great success as Lavinia.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Comedy, entitled "CHARLEY'S AUNT."

That evergreen attraction Charley's Aunt is this week fulfilling its mirth-making mission at the Stratford Borough Theatre, where it is giving emphatic proof, by its cordial reception nightly, that its drawing powers remain undiminished with time. Long familiarity with the rôle of Lord Fancourt Babberley does not render Mr Edwin H. Wynne's performance one whit the less artistic and finished, and his success is most pronounced. The peppery nature of Stephen Spettigue is realised with a subtle humour which is highly effective by Mr Walter Pemberton, and Sir Francis Chesney has a brisk and alert representative in Mr E. Savery. Mr Aubrey Mallalieu is decidedly good as Jack Chesney, Mr Mark Wylton does well as Charley Wykeham, and Mr Fred Epitaux embodies the duties of stage-management with a capital performance as the imperturbable Brasset. Miss Mary Morison plays Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez with distinction; Kitty Verdun has a very pretty and graceful exponent in Miss B. Fitzgerald; Miss Marie Grogan is a charming Amy Spettigue; and Ella Delahay is daintily played by Miss Mary Mallalieu. An Ideal, a drama in one act, by Horace W. C. Newte, precedes, and is capitally presented by Mr Walter Pemberton, Mr Savery, Mr Mark Wylton, Miss Mary Mallalieu, and Miss Mary Morison.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Drama, in Four Acts, by George A. De Gray, entitled "A TRAITOR PRINCE."

To popular audiences who like their dramatic fare served "hot and strong," A Traitor Prince will undoubtedly appeal, for there are thrilling situations and sensational incidents galore in it; and the piece contains an abundance of comic relief. The air of mystery which surrounds Prince Rao Dalmierez, the Hindoo mesmerist, who dabbles in the "black art" to serve his own nefarious ends, adds much impressiveness to the character, and Mr G. M. Montanini, aided by an excellent stage presence, makes the utmost of his opportunities. Mr Austin Mortimer speaks his lines in manly and convincing style as Lieutenant Frank Derrick, and Mr T. G. Vane is eminently suited as the vacuous Hon. Bobby Dalrymple. Mr E. Carter Livesey in the important rôle of Billy Bright is exceedingly droll and amusing, and his catchword, "Hello," is only uttered to the accompaniment of laughter. A grim and well-defined sketch of the half-caste Cara comes from Mr G. Edward Hall, and Mr Austin H. Longford plays with ability in the dual-rôle of Richard Vane and Colonel Vane. Miss Lilian Rosebery makes a sympathetic and charming Lolo Vane, and an incisive performance as the Indian snake charmer Vashti is contributed by Miss Beatrice Western. Miss Maudie Grayson is a bright and sprightly Pansy Blossom, and Mrs Blossom is naturally played by Mrs E. C. Mathews. The remaining parts are in capable hands.

BROADWAY THEATRE, S.E.

On Monday, Oct. 17, "THE BROKEN MELODY."

The Broken Melody is being played this week to large and enthusiastic audiences by M. Auguste Van Biene, Miss Lena Burnleigh, and company. The great musician's 'cello solos are, of course, the most attractive item of the performance, excellently as the delightful play is interpreted. M. Van Biene repeats his powerful rendering of the character of the musician Paul Borinski. He is ably supported by Mr Arthur Bawtree, whose General Ivanoff is a remarkably clever and consistent performance. Mr John Cummings is very good as Beaujour, and Mr H. Ludlow is well placed as the Hon. Richard Spinacher. Mr T. P. Haynes, always an excellent comedian, is thoroughly suited to the part of the musical agent, Dudley Mortimer, and responsible for much merriment. Mr Edward Laceby is good as Dixon, and Mr E. Edwards makes Dr. M'Grath an interesting character in the play. Miss Lena Burnleigh is very pleasing and womanly as Mabel, the gentle and devoted wife of Borinski. Miss Ida Chapman is an excellent representative of the part of the Duchesse De Verviers. Miss Avis Graham is a capital Mrs Dixon, and Miss Monton an attractive Mrs Spinacher.

GRAND, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Musical Play, entitled "THE DUCHESS OF DANTZIC."

Woolwich theatre-goers owe Mr Sounes a hearty vote of thanks this week for the opportunity afforded them of seeing that charming play The Duchess of Dantzic, and no doubt the box-office returns will show that this vote has been recorded in the best manner possible. This musical play is certainly one of the most delightful of modern times, and, capably interpreted as it is by the talented members of Mr George Dance's company, should achieve as great a success and popularity in the provinces as it has done in the metropolis. As Catherine Upscher Miss Rita Presano scored an instantaneous success, playing the lighter scenes with inimitable naturalness and bonhomie, and rising to really tragic heights of expression in the more serious parts of the play. Miss Presano is also the possessor of a fine and well-trained voice, which was heard to advantage in several songs, her greatest successes being perhaps "That's why they call me Sans-Gêne" and "The Mirror Song." Miss Alice Coverick was charmingly effective as Renée De St. Mézard, acting and singing with a naïve simplicity which was altogether delightful; her best songs were probably "The Petit Corporal" and the duet in the second act with Adhemar, Vicomte De Bethune. This last-named character was admirably played by Mr Thomas C. Maxwell, who gave a good representation of the part, and, hampered though he was by a nasty cold, rendered with effect the songs entrusted to him. Mr Albert Chapman was responsible for an excellent rendering of Lefebvre, looking every inch a soldier, and making his strong but perfectly controlled voice heard all over the theatre. His best received song was, perhaps, that in praise of "The women, the warriors, the wine of France." The Napoleon of Mr Frederick Moyes could scarcely have been bettered; the quick step, brusque speech, and subtle sense of humour were well in keeping with the part, and added to the value of Mr Moyes's characterisation. Mr Colin Mackay was in his element as Papillon, his Pedlar in the first act being exceedingly funny; while anything more droll than his enactment of the Court Milliner it is hard to conceive. His song and dance in this character were repeatedly encored. Miss Mabel Bailey was a distinguished Empress, and Misses Edith Carlyle and May Harris did well as Napoleon's sisters.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Comedy, in Three Acts, by Sir Frank Burnand, entitled "BETSY."

There was a numerous audience at the Royal County Theatre on Monday evening to witness the first of four performances of this popular comedy, which was presented by Mr W. H. Denny's company, and was received with unmistakable approval. Mr Denny, who appeared as Mr Dawson, the tutor, caused no end of fun with his characteristic whimsicalities, and was the life and soul of the play. A pleasing representation of the part of Betsy also was given by Miss Florence Trevalion. The other members of the company acquitted themselves satisfactorily in their respective parts. An original comedietta, by Mr W. H. Denny, entitled A Mutual Mistake, preceded the comedy. The parts were sustained by Mr Denny (Mr Owen Smith), Mr Sebastian Smith (John), and Miss Florence Trevelion (Miss Letitia M'Gilligan). The comedy was presented on the first three evenings of the week and at a matinée on Wednesday. On Thursday Dandy Dick was presented, in which Mr Denny appeared as the constable, Noah Topping. Both plays were admirably staged.

The directors of the Leas Pavilion, Folkestone, have decided to close this house during the winter months. Mr Frank Seabrook, the manager, concludes his engagement to-day.

That delightful musical comedy The Three Little Maids will be presented to suburbanites during the next three weeks by Mr Charles Macdona's principal company, which visits Hammersmith, Richmond, and Holloway.

"FORGET-ME-NOT" AT THE SAVOY.

On Saturday, Oct. 15, Revival of the Play, in Three Acts, by Herman Merivale and F. C. Groves.

Sir Horace Welby	Mr Frederick Kerr
Prince Malleotti	Mr Herbert Dansey
Barrato	Mr Richard Boleyn
Manservant	Mr Sydney Hamilton
Alice Verney	Miss Amy Ravenscroft
Miss Foley	Miss Kate Wingfield
Stephanie	Mrs Brown-Potter

Mrs Brown-Potter may certainly be credited with plenty of "pluck." Undismayed by the failure of The Golden Light, she has again returned to the charge at the Savoy with the revival of Forget-Me-Not. Messrs Merivale and Groves's piece was originally performed at the Lyceum Theatre in the August of 1879. On that occasion, the character of the invalid widow existed in the cast; and a notable item of the production was the admirable performance of the part of Sir Horace Welby which was given by Mr Forbes-Robertson. The revival at the Savoy on Saturday showed an immense amount of good-will, but was a little uneven owing to the differences between the styles of the artists engaged. Each individual reading, however, was doubtless quite defensible. Mrs Brown-Potter makes the Marquise De Mohrivart a kind of luscious Lalage; and embellishes her embodiment with an abundance of seductive oglings, insidious smiles, and musical intonations. She also introduces several new "bits of business," which make the Marquise much more ill-bred than before. For instance, at the end of one of the acts, in the original, the Marquise remarked to the companion with whom she was left alone on the stage, "Shall we follow, Mrs Foley?" Mrs Brown-Potter, at this point, "chucks," her cloak at the lady, and tells her to take it upstairs. On another occasion, Mrs Potter "edges" Mrs Foley, by superior weight and strength, off the couch on which the companion is seated. En revanche, the part of Mrs Foley is played with an aggressive energy which makes us feel less keenly for the lady. Miss Kate Wingfield makes her excessively ill-tempered, and is almost violent in her expressions of indignation, putting an immense amount of energy and spirit into her performance. Mr Frederick Kerr, always at ease, always in good form, and always artistic and effective is deliberately resolute and stolidly genuine as Sir Horace Welby; and gives a very good reading of the rôle. Mr Herbert Dansey plays Prince Malleotti with all the necessary Continental polish and artificial grace; Mr Richard Boleyn is vigorously dramatic as Barrato; and Miss Amy Ravenscroft contributes a discreet and pleasing impersonation of Alice Verney. Forget-Me-Not is followed by a dramatic version, taken from G. Verger's novel, of

"CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA."

Turrida Macca	Mr Jerrold Robertshaw
Neighbour Alfio	Mr W. Lawson Butt
Uncle Brasi	Mr Richard Boleyn
Peppi	Mr Bridges
Pippuzza	Mr Sydney Hamilton
Lola	Miss Sarah De Groot
Nunzia	Miss Elsie Chester
Neighbour Camilla	Miss Anna Inglett
Aunt Filomena	Miss Wilde
Santuzza	Mrs Brown-Potter

Though much of the music of the opera is played incidentally in the orchestra, the piece is practically a rural melodrama in one act; and the tale how Santuzza, seduced and deserted by Turrida Macca, revenges herself by informing the carrier, Alfio, that Turrida has dishonoured him with his wife, Lola, is told in dialogue. Mrs Brown-Potter plays Santuzza with much theatrical force, and her picturesque appearance, with dishevelled hair, adds much to the effect of her impersonation. Mr Jerrold Robertshaw acts with strong characterisation and vigorous individuality as Turrida; and Mr W. Lawson Butt plays Alfio with an intensity of expression and a virility of action that are very effective. Mr Richard Boleyn makes a quaint and comical Uncle Brasi; and Mr Bridges is good as Peppi. Mr Sydney Hamilton is praiseworthy as Pippuzza; and Miss Elsie Chester is very commendable as Nunzia. Miss Anna Inglett is excellent as Neighbour Camilla, Miss Wilde doing useful work as Aunt Filomena. Mr Julian Hicks's village scene, with its Church and cross, is pretty and well-painted; and the execution of Mascagni's music by Mr Raymond Roze's orchestra is in every way admirable. Cavalleria Rusticana went extremely well on Saturday, greatly owing, no doubt, to the sound and attentive stage-management of Mr Gilbert Hare.

PRINCE OF WALES'S, RICHMOND.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Comic Opera, in Three Acts, entitled "MY LADY MOLLY."

Mr Frederick Mouillot's principal company, in the pretty comic opera My Lady Molly, is charming the Richmond playgoers this week. Miss Edith M. Dinorben is a dashing Lady Molly, and is to be congratulated upon her performance, especially as she is playing the part for the first time this week. Miss Zoe Gilfillan is extremely arch and dainty as Alice Coverdale, and sings and dances prettily. Lady Molly's maid Hester is played with ease and effectiveness by Miss Mabel Carr, and Miss Ebba Darcier renders good service as Mdlle. Mirabeau. The part of Captain Harry Romney is capitally presented by Mr Leicester Tunks, of fine presence and voice, and Lionel Bland has an equally good representative in Mr Harold E. Payne. Mr H. Godwin Hunt is a bluff and hearty Sir Miles Coverdale, and Mr R. Cooper is good as Reuben Oats. The hardest work of the evening falls to Mr Stephen Fitzgerald as Mickey O'Dowd, the Irish servant of Captain Romney, and ably he bears the burden. While Mr Fitzgerald is on the stage there is not a dull moment, and for the greater part of the time the audience is convulsed by his eccentricities and antics. He is a most accomplished dancer. The smaller parts are capably played, and the chorus sings well together. The mounting is very effective, and the orchestra is ably conducted by Mr Leonard Leslie.

It is given to comparatively few men to celebrate the jubilee of their association with their professional calling. This, however, has just been achieved by Mr Lionel Brough, who celebrated the day by playing Trinculo, the jester, in Mr Beerbohm Tree's production of The Tempest. In private life Mr Brough, to use the Shakespearian phrase which is, under the circumstances, singularly appropriate to him, is "a fellow of infinite jest," and, like Yorick, of whom the lines were written, he can "keep the table in a roar" with his "flashes of merriment" no less than by his humorous stories, of which he has an apparently inexhaustible store. To all his contemporaries he is invariably known as "Lal," while the younger generation, with whom he is always persona grata, invariably testify their regard by speaking of him as "Uncle Lal." The most humorous men are invariably those most dowered with shrewd common sense and observation, and it is to them, therefore, that their more staid comrades invariably go for assistance and advice. Mr Brough's characteristic capacity for discovering what is best naturally led him to make the acquaintance of Odol for his teeth, and the advice he offers may be profited by all who are smokers like him. There are many people who would like it "laid on in the bath-room like water." Though it cannot "come to this," it is perfectly possible for everyone to use it, for it is the most economical as it is the best of all dentifrices and mouth washes, purifying, cleansing, and stimulating the mouth in exactly the same way as the whole body is purified, cleansed, and invigorated by the use of a Turkish bath. Mr Brough's view of Odol is expressed in his own words in the following way:—"Both my family and myself are very pleased with the new mouth wash, Odol. I am a confirmed smoker, and find it most comforting in the morning. The younger branches use it as a dentifrice and wash, and are so satisfied that they would like it 'laid on' in the bathroom like water."—From "Lionel Brough's Stage Life."

"THE MASTER OF KINGSGIFF."

A Romantic Drama, by Mrs Tom Kelly,
Produced at the Avenue Theatre, on Monday, Oct. 17.

King Charles II.	Mr EDWARD O'NEILL
Richard, Lord De Bellingham	Mr FRANK COOPER
Rupert Charlton	Mr CONWAY TEARLE
The Duke of Buckingham	Mr E. HENDERSON BLAND
Sir John Dereham	Mr MAURICE MANCINI
The Earl of Chesterfield	Mr R. P. HAMILTON
Dr. Ludovic Vennor	Mr WALTER MACLEAN
Colonel Somers	Mr EDWIN PALMER
Captain Foster	Mr J. M. TROUGHTON
Cornet Fox	Mr BARNFORD
Gregory	Mr JOHNSTONE
Chamberlain	Mr ROWE
Servant to Lord De Bellingham	Mr A. MUNRO
Lady Dereham	Miss HELEN PALGRAVE
Rosamund Charlton	Miss LILIAH M'CARTHY
Katharine Gordon	Miss DORA BARTON
Barbara Palmer	Miss RUBY CHESTER
Mrs Gregory	Miss MARION STERLING
Bessie	Miss WINIFRED SADLER

There is evidently a "run" on Charles the Second in drama. The "merry monarch" has always been a favourite with playwrights, probably on account of the prettiness of the dresses of his "period;" and the depiction of the Stuart King on the stage is generally flattering. Mrs Tom Kelly has been infected with the prevailing craze for Charles the Second plays, and has written a "1660" piece. Unfortunately she appears to have neither the instinctive gift nor the technical training which make a successful dramatist; and The Master of Kingsgift, though it might make a fairly interesting novel, fails to interest or convince on the stage. The authoress has committed the initial error of making it doubtful with whom the audience is expected to sympathise. The pseudo-hero, Rupert Charlton, is a bigoted partisan, who talks of hanging up Parliamentarians like dogs, and is in the wrong all through. As to another personage, Richard, Lord Bellingham, suspicions are created at the outset that he is going to be the "villain of the piece." He is found acting for the Parliament while secretly favouring the King's cause; and these doubtful circumstances make us afraid to entrust our affections to him. Then there is a prudent and over-maternal lady, who, deeply in love with this De Bellingham, refuses to marry him because, according to a preposterous will, if she wed again her son will lose the family estates. Inconsistency and imperfection in character are all very well in connection with subtle and artistic analysis; they are simply fatal in a romantic drama of incident, where there is no time to dissect motives, and all depends on what the Duke of Wellington used to call "bludgeon-work." So The Master of Kingsgift must be relegated to the limbo of well-meant but "impossible" attempts at playwriting.

In addition to the plot which we have shadowed forth, there are various "alarums and excursions." De Bellingham, who, strange to say, is not personally acquainted with Rupert Charlton, the son of the lady he loves, arrests the said Rupert while he is on the King's business, i.e., assisting to work up a Royalist rising at Chester. De Bellingham, still in his capacity of Parliamentary "Commissioner," also arrests his lady love, Mistress Rosamund Charlton. Rupert escapes, after wounding one of his guards; and De Bellingham, after sending out soldiers to pursue and, if necessary, shoot him, discovers, to his dismay, that the fugitive is the son of his divinity. Of course, there is bad blood between Rupert and De Bellingham, and their dislike culminates in a duel, notwithstanding that Charles II.—recently "restored"—has issued an edict against such combats. De Bellingham generously allows himself to be wounded; and, in the last act, King Charles, who holds a judicial inquiry into everybody's business, overcomes the will difficulty by agreeing to give back the Kingsgift estates if Mistress Rosamund marries De Bellingham. There is a good deal of superfluous dialogue in the piece. The Master of Kingsgift, however, suggests Bailie Nicol Jarvie's comment on the "Dougal Creature" as being "no' entirely devoid of intelligence." There are some spirited scenes in it, and some flashes of real dramatic fire; but the piece, as a whole, is hopeless.

Actors and actresses in connection with a play of this kind have up-hill tasks, and can only be condoled with in their conditions, and commended for their conscientiousness. Mr Edward O'Neill, one of the best representatives of bitter melancholy and acid villainy on our boards, played Mrs Kelly's serious Charles II. with great ease and firmness; Mr Frank Cooper, richly and picturesquely clad, acted with manly earnestness and spacious dignity as the "trimming" De Bellingham. Mr Conway Tearle did full justice to the stubborn sullenness and crude combativeness of Rupert Charlton; and Mr Walter Maclean played an unnecessary tutor with benign solemnity. Mr Johnstone as the steward Gregory, depicting senile and bow-legged fidelity. Miss Lillah M'Carthy acted with delicate emotionality and winning refinement as Rosamund Charlton; and a bright, sparkling, and merry embodiment of a lively Royalist young lady was given by Miss Dora Barton. Mr Walter Maclean's incidental music was very acceptable and appropriate. At the conclusion, in answer to repeated applause from the friendly audience, Mr Frank Cooper appeared, and announced that the authoress was not in the house.

'THE SORCERESS.

A Play, in Five Acts, by Victorien Sardou,
Translated by Louis N. Parker,
Performed for the First Time in New York on Oct. 10, at the New Amsterdam Theatre.

(FROM OUR NEW YORK CORRESPONDENT).

After a brief stay in Washington Mrs Patrick Campbell began a five weeks' engagement in the Empire City last Monday, when the first performance here of Sardou's powerful play attracted a large and brilliant attendance. As the Moorish woman, Zoraya, Mrs Campbell made an instantaneous success, her portrayal of this character being undoubtedly the finest bit of dramatic work that she has ever done here. She was recalled many times at the close of each act, and the applause was most enthusiastic. Mr Guy Standing distinguished himself in the character of Don Enriquez De Palacois. Mr Frederick Perry presented a conscientious study of Cardinal Ximenes, and Messrs Fuller Mellish, George Riddell, and L. Rogers Lytton did excellent work in prominent rôles. Miss Gertrude Coghlan's Manuela showed conspicuous merit, while Miss Martha Waldron's Joana and Miss Alice Butler's Afrida were capable representations. The piece was produced in a manner which reflects great credit upon Mr Charles Frohman and his stage-manager, Mr William Seymour.

The story belongs to the early years of the sixteenth century, soon after the expulsion of the Moors from the greater part of Spain. In their retreat the Moors did not carry away their superstitions with them, and at the beginning of the play a fair young Moorish widow, Zoraya, is accused of witchcraft. She is the daughter of a wise and learned physician, whose wisdom and learning she has inherited. The cures she effects through her medical knowledge and skill are by the agents of the Inquisition attributed to sorcery. Don Enriquez, the newly-married husband of Joana, daughter of Lopez de Padilla, Governor of Toledo, becomes infatuated with her and she with him. Owing to a supposed spell which she has cast upon the young bride, Zoraya is brought before the Inquisition and condemned to the stake. But Joana falls into a sort of cataleptic sleep, from which Zoraya alone, with her magnetic powers, can awaken her. This, on condition of being liberated, Zoraya does, but the pardon she has received is set at naught by the raging multitude, and she ends by dying in the arms of Don Enriquez.

THE "HIPPOLYTUS" OF EURIPIDES.

Translated from the Greek by Gilbert Murray, and Reproduced at a Matinée at the Court Theatre on Tuesday, Oct. 18.

The Goddess Aphrodite	Miss ELINOR FOSTER
The Goddess Artemis	Mrs GWENDOLEN BISHOP
Theseus	Mr ALFRED BRYDONE
Phædra	Miss EDYTH OLIVE
Hippolytus	Mr BEN WEBSTER
Henchman	Mr GRANVILLE BARKER
An Old Huntsman	Mr A. E. GEORGE
The Nurse	Miss ROSINA FILIPPI
Leader of Chorus	Miss TITA BRAND

To those studiously inclined there was much interest to be derived from the representation at the Court Theatre on Tuesday afternoon of Prof. Gilbert Murray's translation of the Hippolytus of Euripides. Schlegel, in his lecture on this Greek dramatist, said of him, "His constant aim is to please—he cares not by what means; hence is he so unequal. Frequently he has passages of overpowering beauty, but at other times he sinks into downright mediocrity. Passion with him is the first thing; his next care is for character, and when these endeavours leave still further scope, he occasionally seeks to lay on a touch of grandeur and dignity." He quite succeeded, at any rate, in giving to his play Hippolytus both grandeur and dignity, and he handled that tragedy with a powerful touch that was beyond the genius of Racine, who imitated him. Mr Murray's work, it will be remembered, was produced at the Lyric Theatre on May 28 last, when it evoked much favourable comment, and the impression created on a first hearing was deepened in the minds of many who witnessed the tragedy for a second time on Tuesday. The unhappy passion of Phædra, the victim of the Goddess Aphrodite's spell, was once more pathetically shown by Miss Edyth Olive, who was most impressive in her final speech of despair. Mr Alfred Brydone's fine elocutionary method and powerful voice again were of admirable assistance in the part of Theseus, and the curse of the hapless King of Athens launched against Hippolytus over the dead body of Phædra was a particularly fine effort. Mr Ben Webster had scarcely the grand manner in his rendering of Hippolytus, but his acting was distinguished by real pathos in the departure of the ill-requited son after his father's curse. There was nothing better in the representation than Mr Granville Barker's recital of the catastrophe that overtakes Hippolytus, who is mortally wounded by the overturning of his chariot; and here we may praise this clever actor's production of the play, which was very skilfully managed. Miss Rosina Filippi played with considerable feeling as the Nurse; Miss Tita Brand's perfect elocution as the leader of the chorus sounded the true note of classical dignity; and Mr A. E. George may be highly praised for his old huntsman. The name of the young lady who recited the "Maiden's Song" was only given among the members of the chorus, so that we are unable to single her out, but a particularly sweet and expressive voice and admirable clearness of articulation made the recital very perfect. Mrs Gwendolen Bishop played the Goddess Artemis with care and discretion; and Miss Elinor Foster was interesting as the Goddess Aphrodite. Notwithstanding the fact that Schlegel charges Euripedes with using the chorus as an essential ornament, it certainly presses home the significance of the tragical theme in Hippolytus, even though Miss Florence Farr's music is monotonous rather than impressive. To the great composer there seems to be much opportunity in the spacious theme of the tragedy, and it is a pity that Wagner did not tackle it. To his genius it would have been an inspiring subject.

"THE DECREE NISI."

A New Play, in One Act, by Joshua Bates,
Produced at the St. James's Theatre, on Tuesday, Oct. 18.

Sir Adrian Hudspeth, Bart.	Mr CHARLES FULTON
Dick Blundell	Mr LESLIE FABER
Waiter	Mr GERALD JEROME
Harper	Miss BARBARA HANNAY
Lady Hudspeth	Miss MADGE M'INTOSH

Lady Hudspeth, the leading character in this little piece, which was produced at the St. James's Theatre on the occasion of the fiftieth representation of The Garden of Lies, is a rather unsatisfactory personage, and quite possibly the author may intend the character as representative of a frivolous society lady of the day. At all events, she appears to have acted foolishly in compromising herself in her association with Mr Dick Blundell. Her husband, Sir Adrian Hudspeth, has been successful in the action he has brought in the Divorce Court, and when a visit is paid the lady by her admirer, he finds her in her most frivolous mood. She is in such good spirits that she jests about the case and the incidents of the Divorce Court, the learned judge being irreverently described as "a cock-sparrow in a big wig." However, she becomes more serious, and indulges in some phrases, the precise meaning of which it is not quite easy for the average man or woman to understand. In response to a message her husband appears on the scene, whereupon the lady talks mysteriously about "the mountain peaks" and death, and then goes into a dead faint. Finding that Sir Adrian has gone, she hands her maid various trinkets, but retains her wedding ring, which she is entitled to wear six months longer. Whether the couple will become reconciled before the decree nisi is made absolute the audience is left in doubt. Miss Madge M'Intosh proved to be a charming representative of Lady Hudspeth, Mr Leslie Faber was excellent as Dick Blundell, and Mr Chas. Fulton played admirably as Sir Adrian. Miss Barbara Hannay did well as the maid, Harper.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

The Royal College Concert on Wednesday last opened with the Quartet for Strings, in G minor, Op. 10, by C. A. Debussy, a work which is somewhat peculiar in style in some portions, and we are so accustomed to the Italian and German descriptions of the various movements, that the French expressions seemed a little strange. For example, the first movement of the Quartet was headed "animé et très décidé." It expressed thoroughly the character of the music, and the executants followed their instructions accurately. The second movement was labelled "assez vif et bien rhythmé," the third, and unquestionably the most attractive, being thus described "andantino doucement expressif." The music here was sweet, expressive, and melodious, and made a most agreeable impression deepened by the skill of the students who took part. They were Miss Vera Warwick-Evans, and Messrs Herbert Kinze, Frank Bridge, and Ivor James. Miss Theresa M. Lightfoot then sang two songs of Dr. Elgar creditably, and then came the sonata for pianoforte and violin, op. 96, G major, of Beethoven, charmingly rendered by Messrs Herbert Kinze and James Friskin. The Chanson Espagnole of Delibes brought out in a most effective manner the vocal talent of Miss Grace Frantz, whose command of scale passages and intervals showed good training, combined with ease and grace in delivery. Chopin's Impromptu in F sharp major, op. 36, was played with great ability by Miss Mildred M'Cheane, A.R.C.M. All the distinctive qualities of Chopin's music were fully expressed by this gifted young lady, who was rewarded with enthusiastic applause. "Alt Heidelberg," by Jenson, was well delivered by Mr Sidney Jarvis, and the concert concluded with the trio in B Major, op. 8, by Brahms, played by Miss Olive Blume and Messrs Herbert Kinze and Ivor James. As usual, the beautiful new concert-room was completely filled.

THE Dramatic Debaters will discuss Mr Pinero's play, A Wife Without a Smile, at the Queen's Hotel, W., to-morrow (Sunday) night. The debate will be opened by R. C. Levitt.

PERSONATING AN ACTOR.

James Moss, lately a tram conductor, giving the name of George Alexander, was charged last week at the Westminster Police-court, before Mr Shiel, with personating the well-known actor-manager of that name, and obtaining goods by fraud from Harrod's, Limited, Brompton-road. Mr P. Conway prosecuted.

An assistant in the turnery department deposed that on Thursday afternoon the prisoner selected an ivory-handled shaving brush. In reply to the usual question of "Cash or account?" the prisoner said the latter, and gave his name as George Alexander, of 57, Pont-street. The witness presented the account to the prisoner, and he signed it "George Alexandra." He was allowed to walk away with the brush, and was then stopped and interrogated as to the spelling of the name. The prisoner said "Quite right. I always sign it in that way."

Wm. Kashnor, chief detective at Harrod's, stated that the prisoner was requested to proceed to Mr Alexander's house in Pont-street for inquiries. The prisoner then said that he was Mr Alexander's butler. On his way to the house he broke away, but was caught after a chase.

Mr C. T. H. Helmsley, manager to Mr George Alexander, said the prisoner was not known to the gentleman, and had never been in his service.

Sergeant Dougall mentioned that the prisoner gave a false address at Pimlico when charged. It appeared that he had been employed on the electric trams, and that he resided at The Terrace, Hounslow. The man had done no work for sixteen or seventeen weeks.

Mr Shiel remanded the prisoner in custody.

Shortly afterwards a medical certificate was handed to the magistrate as to the prisoner's mental condition.

Mr Conway remarked that there was a good deal of method in the prisoner's actions.

Mr Shiel.—I will leave him where he is in prison, and call the doctor's attention to him.

THE LATE WALTER SEALBY.

The late Mr Walter Sealby started his career as a solo choir boy in Nolan's choir at the age of fourteen at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, pantomime, in which the late Miss Farren was principal boy. He then returned to business life for a short period, after which he adopted the stage and played a stock season with Miss Gertrude Warden. He also joined Mr R. A. Chute at Bristol, and later on was engaged at producing stock work at Hull. He was a well-known pantomime comedian, having appeared as Dame, at the Prince's, Bristol (two seasons); the Prince's and Royal, Manchester; the Court and Shakespeare, Liverpool; Theatre Royal, Nottingham; the Tyne and Royal, Newcastle, &c. Mr Sealby was for some time at the Palace Theatre, London, when that house was originally opened as the Royal English Opera House. He also had a remarkable run in A Trip to Chicago, playing the part of Mrs Murphy for seven years with great success. His last season was at the Grand Theatre, Douglas, Isle of Man, where among the many parts he played might be mentioned Nathaniel Glover, in Our Flat; Amos Dunn, in Niobe; William, in Jane; and Cattermole, in The Private Secretary. He also produced a new piece for Mr Willie Edouin entitled Off the Rank, and played Mr Edouin's part. Mr Sealby belonged to the Manchester Dramatic Lodge, and was on the committee of the Theatrical Managers' Association. He had been ailing since May last, and died at St. Thomas's Nursing Home, on Monday last, the cause of death being pernicious anemia. He leaves a widow, known professionally as Miss Chrissie Ralland, and one daughter (Miss Mabel Sealby. The deceased was forty-three years of age.

The family have decided to have an inquest held. Therefore the funeral will not take place to-day, as arranged. Directly the date of interment is fixed notice will be given in the daily papers.

MR GILBERT HUDSON'S company paid a flying visit on 12th and 13th inst. to the Lecture Hall, Public Library, Stoke Newington, under the patronage of his Worship the Mayor. The piece chosen for representation was George Colman, the younger's, successful comedy in five acts, The Heir-at-Law. The cast was an efficient one. Mr C. L. Arthur played Daniel Dowlas (Baron Duberly) with conspicuous ability; a well-elaborated impersonation was that of Dick Dowlas by Mr E. L. Noel; Mr William Pimm gave an entertaining rendition of Dr. Pangloss; Mr Stanley Roberts made the most of his opportunities as Henry Morland; and the indefatigable Mr Gilbert Hudson played Zekiel Homespun with humour and eccentricity. Mr T. Ireby Cape made the most of Kenrick, and John was well placed in the hands of Mr R Stanley. Miss Ketura Brookes acted extremely well the part of Deborah Dowlas (Lady Duberly); Miss Florence Shean was an attractive Caroline Dormer; and Miss Kittie Selba deserves special praise for her charming and piquant delineation of Cicely Homespun. The original epilogue of the play was spoken.

"THE other night in a London theatre a lady sitting in the stalls noticed that one of her neighbours was continually moving in her seat as though in much discomfort. Suspecting that her neighbour's dress was caught in the seat, the first lady asked if she could help to release it. The uneasy one then said that the chair on which she was sitting was broken, that she was supporting most of her weight on one foot, and that the exhausting and painful position explained her restlessness, for which, however, she must apologise. She added that nearly three months before she had sat in the same seat, and that it was broken then. Surely even the great reputation of Londoners for long-suffering is not great enough. Has anyone ever heard of more meekness and patience than is indicated by this broken stall, for the privilege of supporting which with one foot someone has paid half-a-guinea?" By seating theatres with the well-known Lazarus chairs such a contretemps as described above could never have happened. The chairs from the famous house of Lazarus give the maximum of comfort, take up the minimum of space, and are the acme of upholstery. Besides, they never break.—[ADVT.]

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.

The autumn season of opera in Italian opened on Monday last with a success of the most triumphant character. Indeed we do not remember in the annals of Italian opera in London any performance meeting with such instantaneous recognition from an audience crowding every part of the magnificent theatre. Messrs Rendle and Forsyth have timed their experiment perfectly. Just when the season at the seaside is beginning to wane Covent-garden opens its hospitable doors with a company of artistes of the finest quality representing the cream of Italian musical art. It is simple nonsense to speak of Italian opera as "played out" while such splendid performers as the San Carlo Company brighten a London autumn with the perfection of their art, and not only do the principals distinguish themselves in a manner recalling the "palmy days" of Italian opera, but throughout the troupe the same lofty ideal may be traced in the splendid ensemble, the brilliancy of the orchestra, the sonority of the chorus, and the finish of the entire representation. The opera of Manon Lescaut being chosen for the opening night, it may be well to state that the general performance was far in advance of that given at Covent-garden in 1894, when Puccini's opera met with but a moderately favourable reception. On Monday last it was brought forward under special advantages, the greatest being that it exactly suited the San Carlo company. In some respects it may frankly be admitted that Massenet has employed the same subject with greater felicity than Puccini, simply because Massenet has a vein of sentiment entirely lacking in the Italian composer, who, however never fails in vigour or animation. All the melodramatic scenes of Manon Lescaut appeal to Puccini, as to most modern Italian composers, with great force, and in these portions of the opera he is heard at his best. He makes rapid changes of time and style, but always with complete command of resources, and invariably with a correct illustration of the particular scene or incident. Thus we can always follow Puccini with satisfaction, and recognise that he has provided the artistes with admirable materials for the display of their talent. That this was the case on Monday, ample proof was afforded in the rapturous expression of approval bestowed on the chief soloists. Signor Caruso, who has been engaged to take part with the Neapolitan company, sang with his old charm of style, beauty of tone, and impassioned expression, although we have heard him even more perfect in voice, and it was rumoured that a slight cold due to our fickle climate affected the popular tenor, who was supported by an artiste of first-rate quality in Madame Giachetti. This lady possesses merit so remarkable that the Covent-garden syndicate will assuredly not allow her to return to Naples without a hearing during the regular season. She is a vocalist whose art is perfect, and an actress capable of expressing every shade of character. Signor Fornari as Lescaut proved himself an artiste of ability, and as Geronte Signor Arimondi—who has before now been heard at Covent-garden—pleased every visitor by the fine quality of his voice and his artistic gifts as vocalist and actor. The remainder of the company may be spoken of as thoroughly efficient, and the chorus and orchestra did themselves great credit throughout. In fact it was impossible for an opening performance to have gone with greater smoothness. The conductor, Signor Campanini, a brother of the famous tenor of that name, once a brilliant star of Covent garden, is evidently a musician of experience and high capacity. He controlled his forces with perfect ease and certainty, and left not a loophole for adverse criticism. A hearty call to the front showed the satisfaction of the vast audience. The scenic effects were altogether excellent, and previous to the commencement of the opera the National Anthem was given, and followed by that of Italy, the "Marcia Reale," both being greeted with deafening plaudits. The brilliant audience included H.R.H. Princess Louise, the Duke of Argyll, the Duchess of Manchester, Lady Esher, Lady Sherborne, Lady Shrewsbury, Mr and Mrs Vagliano, Mrs Cornwallis-West, Mr and Mrs Carl Mayer, and a host of visitors known in society circles. The list of operas to be presented during the six weeks' season could hardly be more varied or attractive than the works announced, and performed in the same finished and artistic style as on the opening night we may safely predict a successful issue, none the less welcome for the fact that Mr Henry Russell is the director.

The brilliant effect of the opening performance by the San Carlo company was again fully maintained on Tuesday, when Verdi's opera Aïda was given with complete success. The opera, first heard at Cairo in 1871 and at Covent-garden in 1876, has long since been accepted as one of the most dramatic and striking of the composer's works. In its representation by the Neapolitan company it could not fail to be noticed that the Italians brought the vocal portions of the opera into greater prominence than the instrumental. Hence in the imposing ensembles and concerted passages we heard less of the sounding brass and other strident orchestral instruments than on some previous occasions, when Aïda has been given, and some slight changes may also be noted in minor details, such, for instance, as the dance of black boys, which was not performed at the express speed once popular. Happily the representative of the heroine, Signora Buoninsegna, was a genuine artiste, and, although we have heard vocalists in Aïda of greater volume, we have seldom listened to a voice of purer quality or one controlled with more artistic effect. Her greatest success was in the third act, where Signorina Buoninsegna sang with exquisite purity of tone and with a splendid appropriateness to the dramatic situation. Her reception was, as it deserved to be, enthusiastic, and throughout the opera her many fine qualities never failed to obtain the fullest recognition. Madame De Cisneros as Amneris had the advantage of a singularly attractive presence combined with a voice of large compass and good quality. She was, besides, an actress of exceptional powers, and her gifts were fully revealed in the duet with Aïda in the second act, the jealousy and imperious character of the Princess being demonstrated in the most striking manner. Her chest notes rang out with bell-like clearness, and her dramatic vigour expressed every emotion of the scene. Signor Vignas, who has been seen at Covent-garden before as Radames, again appeared in that character, and proved himself in every respect a gifted artiste. The exacting character of Amonasro was undertaken by a new comer, Signor Amato, who represented the part in the melodramatic style usually accepted and generally approved. As the High Priest Ramfis Signor Arimondi's fine voice and broad style suited the character, and made the best possible impression, and Signor Thos did well as the Egyptian King. In all stage details the company proved thoroughly efficient, and the choral and orchestral forces, under the able guidance of Signor Campanini, again deserved the unqualified approval of critic and visitors.

On Wednesday Puccini's tragic opera, La Tosca, was performed with great success, and attracted an immense audience. When produced at Covent-garden in 1900, we commented on the propensity of the modern Italian composers for introducing violent and sensational subjects, and we see no reason for modifying our ideas that such melodramatic themes hardly agree with the beauty and grace which the immortal Mozart said should be the composer's first consideration. But "other times, other manners," and, we may add, other music, and it must be allowed that La Tosca, with all its faults of style as a libretto, has afforded Puccini an opportunity of displaying remarkable skill as a musician. He is frequently brilliant and artistic and always effective. The performance was generally attractive, and in some portions thoroughly excellent. Madame Giachetti as Floria Tosca might not, perhaps, quite equal Termina in dramatic ability, but she sang extremely well throughout, and in the second act was tempted to repeat an air in a situation not really suitable for such a display. But we do not expect Italian artists to be as reserved as Teutonic performers. The audience expressed their admiration freely for the artiste, and Madame Giachetti graciously responded, so we need not comment further on an incident which Bayreuth would not have tolerated. As Mario Cavaradossi Signor Anselmi hardly possessed sufficient physical power in one or two instances, but as a whole he played cleverly and sang efficiently. Signor Sammarco as the Baron fully realised the objectionable character, and made it most impressive. Signor Sammarco is renowned as a vocalist, but as Scarpia his greatest gifts were not employed to their full extent. He will have a finer opportunity as a singer in Rigoletto. Signor Thos made the most of Angelotti, and as the fussy Sagrestano Signor Tavecchia displayed genial humour, most welcome in a work so tragical as La Tosca. The beautiful Church scene of the first act hardly needed such brilliant lighting; a slightly subdued tone would improve it. Signor Campanini conducted with care and zeal, and was called to the front after the second act.

On Thursday Rigoletto, regarded by some admirers of Verdi as his best opera, was produced by the San Carlo Company, with Miss Alice Nielsen as Gilda. Since Rigoletto was first heard at Venice in 1851, it has never ceased to be popular. Its captivating melodies, rendered all the more effective by contrast with strong dramatic situations, invariably appeal to modern audiences. Much interest was felt in the appearance of Signor Sammarco as the unhappy jester, for the baritone has an extraordinary reputation in Italy as a vocalist, and, as everybody knows, some of the finest music in the score falls to his share. That Signor Sammarco did not disappoint expectations may be emphatically said, and the accomplished vocalist, aided by a resonant voice and a true Italian style, produced a great impression, his acting also being masterly and artistic. Signor Arimondi as Sparafucile made good use of his fine voice, and his stolid manner of representing the callous bravo was thorough appropriate. Signor Anselmi could not quite reach the high level of Signor Caruso in the character of the Duke, but he sang the pretty airs of the part with acceptance, and proved himself a capable artist in his acting. The favourable impression recently made by Miss Nielsen as Zerlina, in Don Giovanni, probably accounted for her appearance as Gilda, a part chiefly depending for its interest on the delightful music allotted to the character. One melody alone, the exquisite "Caro nome," secures for Gilda the favour of the audience. The remaining characters were efficiently sustained, and the conductor was Signor Tanara, a gentleman who was new to us, but evidently a capable musician. The chorus and orchestra were safe under his direction. With Carmen on Friday and a matinée of Rigoletto on Saturday, and Manon Lescaut in the evening, the week's varied and attractive programme surpassed any autumn scheme we can remember for many years past.

PARIS THEATRES.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

ANTOINE offers a very interesting programme at his theatre. We have The Monkey's Paw, by Louis Parker, adapted by Robert Nunès, which succeeded in thrilling the first-nighters as thoroughly as they anticipated. It was admirably played by Antoine, Desfontaines, and Madame Miller. The pièce de résistance was a two-act play by Conring, adapted from the German by Jean Thorel. It deals with the conflict between two German officers, one a brusque old war-loving Major who has risen from the ranks, and the other a cold, ironical, satirical, aristocratic Colonel, who cordially detests the former. The story is very slight, but the characterisations are excellent. Signoret made a hit as the Colonel. It was a remarkable character study. Signoret distinguished himself again later in the evening in Max Maurey's delightful little one-act comedy, Asile de Nuit, in which Signoret, as a tramp, is taken by the manager in charge of the night refuge to be an eccentric journalist in search of "copy." His disgust when he finds he has been mistaken is highly diverting.

ALL Paris is talking of Armand Bour's new departure at the Bouffes-Parisiens, a theatre whose name has been associated so long with failures; but Bour has hit on the idea of producing the late Emile Veyrin's comedy in verse, L'Embarquement pour Cythère. It achieved an immediate success. The comedy itself is charming. It deals with the career of La Marquise Pomponette, as the dainty little cocotte is called by her friends, Pomponette is the mistress of President Hénault, who keeps her in luxury. We are in the very atmosphere of the Louis XV. period. Abbés and marquises fill her dainty salons, and Pomponette, though she coughs and grows easily fatigued, is yet never weary of the endless course of pleasure. At last love comes into her life and changes everything. A certain Florestan has admired her for long, and writes her a daily love-letter. At last he reveals himself to her. They meet; but alas! at the moment when he is embracing her a noise in the adjoining room announces the arrival of Hénault. Florestan immediately accounts for his presence in her chamber by posing as the celebrated Doctor Gilbert. This scene is admirably conceived and capitally acted. Pomponette's soul is awakened by love. She wearies of the heartless frivolities which once so entirely satisfied her. She is dying, and her death scene, surrounded by all the gay train of thoughtless pleasure-seekers, is as sad as it is touching and convincing. Mdlle. Yahne, who made such a success at the Athénée in Madame Flirt, looked a perfect picture and played the comedy scenes admirably; but she lacked the heart, tenderness, and sentiment, and was ill at ease in the delivery of the verse. The scenery was a dream of Watteau. The music chosen was by Lulli and Gluck.

THE Vaudeville management announce that in the first twenty-six days of Les Trois Anabaptists they took 101,820f.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, Oct. 17, the Drama,
by Walter Melville, entitled
"THE FEMALE SWINDLER."

Crowded houses are being attracted this week to this popular suburban playhouse to witness the representation of the above drama by the company organised by Mr Tom E. Taylor. The play abounds with thrilling and exciting incidents, and the interest is sustained from the rise to the fall of the curtain. The character of the female swindler Lu Valroy is undertaken by Miss Violet Ellicott, who succeeds in giving a clever study of the part. Mr Jerrold Heather enacts Jack Coulson, a criminal investigator, and the rôle is well suited to his methods. The battle of wits between Coulson and Lu Valroy is watched by the house in breathless silence, and the efforts of the two clever artistes are hugely appreciated. Mr Luke Forster as an amateur detective is irresistibly comical and creates much mirth. Mr Weldon Atherstone as Geoffrey Warden makes a refined and polished scoundrel, and Mr Kenyon Gray is dignified and natural as James Oliver. Harold Travers is depicted in a manly fashion by Mr George Unwin, and in the part of Mary Ann Mee Miss Evelyn Marrable appears to advantage. Miss Florence Kelsey is a charming May Andrews, and Mr Rule Pyott is a typical Abraham Mikestein. The numerous minor characters are all intelligently treated, and the scenery and dresses are excellent.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

MR ARTHUR WING PINERO'S piece, A Wife Without a Smile, at Wyndham's Theatre, has been modified so far as the movements of the lively doll are concerned. Those who see the play will find the puppet's motions quite different to what they were on the first night. Mr Pinero has now gone on the Continent, after creating a great sensation in the theatrical world. The members of the staff at Wyndham's Theatre have received a present from Mr Pinero. It is almost needless to say that the gift was not received "without a smile."

MR W. S. GILBERT, when acting as chairman of the Edgware petty sessions on Wednesday, found fault with the fact that a man who was summoned for betting had been allowed to go on offending for three days when one offence was sufficient. Recently at that court, he said, a betting man had been fined £30, the full penalty on six summonses, and thinking the penalty excessive he had written to the Home Secretary pointing out that if the police allowed a man to bet day after day, and the magistrates continued to impose the maximum penalty of £5 for each offence, the amount of the fine would really rest with the action taken by the police, and they would become the judges. The Home Secretary replied that there was no need to permit a betting man to go on betting for several days, and added that the sum of £5 was the maximum penalty, and if there were several summonses it would be a good reason for reducing the penalty. The magistrates fined the defendant £3 on each summons.

THIS reminds us of Mr Gilbert's alleged reply to the High Sheriff when the great librettist waited upon him in connection with his—Mr Gilbert's—appointment as a Justice of the Peace. "You have, I believe," said the Sheriff pleasantly, "studied the law in your barrister days, and have a sound knowledge of it?" "That is true," said Mr Gilbert; "but I hope, sir, you will not consider that as an impediment!"

MR JOHN HARE delighted those who saw Little Mary at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham, on Saturday evening, and, in response to a most enthusiastic call, said that the older he grew the more he disliked to make a speech before the curtain; but there were occasions when to refuse to do so was like refusing to take the hand of a friend. It was no mere figure of speech to say that he regarded the Birmingham audiences as the best of his theatrical friends. He had been here now for upwards of twenty years, and on no occasion had he ever received anything but the most cordial welcome. To visit Birmingham had been in the past, and would be for the few years that remained to him, one of the greatest pleasures of his theatrical life.

"ON that stage on the previous Saturday, continued Mr Hare, his old friend and their old friend, Sir Henry Irving, said many generous things about him, which he felt very deeply, because they were so soon to lose Sir Henry from their midst. When he had gone his loss would be irreparable, for they would never look upon his like again. They hoped that he would be spared for many years to enjoy his retirement. Two years ago he (Mr Hare) foreshadowed his own retirement. He little thought that Sir Henry would precede him, but so it was. For himself he might say that once, possibly twice, more he would have the honour of appearing before them, and then he must make his final bow. He hoped they would find him some place in their memories, and when he had altogether gone, and when other favourites had established themselves, they would still have pleasant recollections of him.

MR J. HARE has been before the London public as an actor for nearly forty years, and is now sixty years of age, having been born in London in May, 1844. He first appeared before a London audience in Naval Engagements, at the old Prince of Wales's Theatre, in 1865. Mr Hare's retirement in the prime of his artistic ability will be a great loss to the stage which he has adorned by the high polish, the finished art, and the keen intellectual quality of his many fine creations.

WE are very glad to say that the subscriptions to the fund for the blind actor, Mr Henry Crisp, are coming in very well. Mr Lionel Rignold has forwarded to us £1 to be added to the fund. A number of touring managers are kindly interesting themselves in collecting from their companies, while many resident managers are helping to swell the amount which will be handed over to this deserving case.

MR EDWARD TERRY will shortly be married to Lady Harris, the widow of Sir Augustus Harris. The marriage will take place before Christmas, and the bride will accompany her husband on his tour in America, which will commence in January. Lady Harris's daughter, Miss Florence Harris, lately went on the stage, and has been appearing in the provinces in Mrs Michael Gunn's company. We shall wish Mr and Mrs Terry every happiness.

MR GEORGE GIDDENS, who recently returned from a long Colonial tour, relates an instance of endurance by Colonial playgoers. "One night—it was in New Zealand"—he says, "I was playing Mr Bloodgood, in Are You a Mason? Just before the curtain rose my business-manager came on the stage. 'Must have a chair,' he said. 'There's a farmer come to the box-office. He's ridden forty-five miles to see the piece, and he's plastered with mud from head to foot. Wants a five-shilling seat, and they're telling him he can't sit on one in his present state if he pays five pounds.'"

MR FORBES-ROBERTSON is, perhaps, the best-known actor-artist in the profession. Mr Weedon Grossmith devoted much more time some years ago to his palette than he does now. Mr Punch's brilliant draughtsman, Mr Bernard Partridge, has practically given up the stage since he became a cartoonist, for a weekly absence from an engagement, on the night of the Punch dinner, would hardly be tolerated by admiring audiences! Mr Alfred Kendrick has met with very good success as an artist. Mr John Le Hay paints—and sells—very fair little water colours. Miss Mabel Terry Lewis (Mrs Ralph Batley) is the only well-known miniaturist on the stage. Miss Evelyn Millard's sister, by the way, also paints "pictures in little." Mr Malcolm Cherry and Miss Nancy Price both attempt caricatures, and Mr Frank Cooper spends much of his spare time at the easel. On the music hall stage Mr Dan Leno "plays with the brush," Mr George Robey wields an amusing pencil, and even the Happy Dustman (Mr Seth Egbert) has yearnings towards art.

THE committee of the O. P. Club, through their solicitors, have resented the insertion in the Daily Express of a paragraph with regard to the production of Mr Pinero's play, A Wife Without a Smile at Wyndham's Theatre, which stated that an irreverent "god"—believed to be a member of the O P. Club—remarked when it was announced that Mr Pinero was not in the house, "And a (unmentionable) good job too." "Why," they ask, "should your correspondent have believed the person who interrupted to be a member of the O P. Club? He would have been unable to distinguish this from the stalls of the theatre, and there is strong evidence that the person who interrupted from the gallery was not a member of the club at all."

A TAX on theatre or amusement tickets is proposed in the daughter state of Victoria, Australia, and much anxiety exists in the colony as to whether the new ministry of New South Wales will follow the example of Victoria.

CONGRATULATIONS to Mr and Mrs A. S. Homewood (Miss Joan Blair) on the birth of another son. It is a rather singular coincidence that both boys were born on Sunday (one being exactly three years his brother's senior), and that their father also made his advent on a Sunday. Further it is curious that the eldest boy was born while Mr Homewood was on the water—going to Montreal—and the latest comer arrived at the very hour that his father was crossing from Dublin to Holyhead.

MR FRED EMNEY, who gives such a capital performance as M. Loustot, in Veronique, at the Apollo Theatre, met with many amusing experiences in the days of his youth. He has played seven parts in one piece on the same night. Other actors can doubtless boast of equal versatility but few of them have figured, as he once did, as the whole of a Prussian army and French garrison at one and the same time. The play was The New Magdalen, and after doing the approach of the soldiers behind the scenes all by himself with great energy, he fired the guns, gave orders, and finally entered victorious, having conquered and killed himself "off."

MR EMNEY was one of the best Lurchers in Dorothy, on record—his uncle, Mr Arthur Williams, played the part, it will be remembered, in the original production in London—and one of the funniest pictures he has ever seen on the stage was when an amateur club put on the popular comic opera at Malta. Not being able to procure any hounds, the stage-manager suggested that every member of the company who possessed a dog should "bring him along" on the first night, and the "Tally Ho!" chorus was consequently accompanied by dismal howling and yelping, for the pack consisted of a huge bloodhound, a Maltese terrier, two fox terriers, and a dozen miserable-looking mongrels. The stage manager no doubt flattered himself that he knew how to put on a piece with London effects.

MR AND MRS KENDAL have been enthusiastically received this week at the Court Theatre, Liverpool, where they have been appearing in the parts of Col. Blake and Susan Hartley, in the comedy A Scrap of Paper, which they have sustained so admirably since the original production of the piece. The "Kendals," as they are lovingly called, are very popular in Liverpool, and the audiences which have assembled at the Court Theatre during the week have shown their intense delight by uproarious applause.

THE first Liverpool production of Dick Hope on Thursday evening at the Royal Court Theatre impressed the audience very much, and the opinion on all hands was that Mr and Mrs Kendal had actually surpassed themselves. The delightful play was followed with the deepest interest by a crowded house, and the frequent applause which broke out was eloquent testimony to that fact. "He never played so admirably in his life" was the complimentary reference concerning Mr Kendal made by an old theatre-goer. At the close the author, Mr Ernest Hendrie, appeared in response to a strong demand.

MR FREDERICK KERR, it has been stated, has been engaged by Miss Muriel Wylford. Such, however, is not the case. Mr Kerr is at liberty after his engagement with Mrs Brown-Potter. There is little doubt that this admirable actor will not be long off the boards.

MR GEORGE MUSGROVE is of opinion that the best plays are now produced in America, and he has secured half-a-dozen of them for Australia. He took out with him to Australia a new comedy company recruited in London to produce Mr George Alexander's In Old Heidelberg and other recent successes. But his highest hopes are associated with Pretty Peggy and the other American attractions he has secured.

MISS HILDA HAMMERTON, who is engaged in The Earl and the Girl, at the Lyric Theatre, was walking near Whitehall-gardens between four and five o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, when she saw a little girl of about seven standing in the roadway in front of a fast-approaching hansom cab. Miss Hammerton rushed to the rescue, and dragged the child out of danger, having herself a very narrow escape.

TWO thousand eight hundred and ninety-two pounds four shillings and ninepence was realised by the entertainment in aid of the funds of the British Ophthalmic Hospital at Jerusalem, held in July last, at His Majesty's Theatre, at which the King and Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and other members of the Royal Family were present. After deducting £452 3s. 3d. for expenses, the entertainment committee has handed over £2,240 1s. 6d. to the council of the Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England for the benefit of the hospital.

MR WILSON HALLETT, whose child imitations are even more successful than his whistling songs, prides himself on being able to make friends with children and amuse them as easily as he amuses a grown-up audience. On one particular occasion he was introduced to a very serious little boy, whose apparent shyness he determined to overcome. So he promptly commenced to amuse that serious little boy, but did not meet with the usual quick response, and the parents and guardians who were present watched his attempts with admiration and interest. The little boy, for whose benefit Mr Hallett was making himself, as everybody thought, very amusing, presently observed, looking calmly at his entertainer, "You can't make me look silly. I'se too old. I'se five!"

THE Little Sisters of the Poor will have a benefit at the Royalty Theatre on the afternoon of Thursday, Nov. 3, by the kindness of Miss Kate Santley. Mr George Alexander, Mr Charles Warner, Mr George Graves, Mr Lionel Mackinder, Mr Edmund Payne, Mrs Brown-Potter, Madeleine Lucette Ryley, Miss Kate Cutler, Miss Haidée Gunn (her first appearance in London), Miss Ruth Vincent, Miss Sybil Arundale, Miss Marie Studholme, and Mr Lionel Brough will contribute to the entertainment.

"THE COAL KING," an entirely new drama, written by Ernest Martin and Fewlass Llewellyn, will be produced on Monday at the Elephant and Castle Theatre. It will be played for the week by the excellent stock company, Mr Ernest E. Norris and Mrs Bennett taking the principal parts. The scene of the play is laid in Lancashire, and it deals in the main with colliery life. The Entombed Scene in act four will, we are told, be most realistically treated, and will give the Elephant patrons some idea of what our brave miners may at any time be called upon to go through.

MR ERNEST MARTIN, one of the authors, in his youth had some years of practical experience in mining engineering in the midlands. He has subsequently gained his stage experience in the London theatres. He first joined the Haymarket company under the present management, in Under the Red Robe, in 1896, through the kind introduction of Mr Brandon Thomas, to whom he owes his first connection with the drama. Since then he has appeared in the casts at most of the West-end theatres. He is also not unknown in literary and journalistic circles, his first book, "Shadows," being published some four years ago.

MR FEWLASS LLEWELLYN, the other author, is better known as an actor, added to which he is a successful producer of several plays and pantomimes in town and on tour. Full particulars of his stage career appeared in our "Players of the Period" columns in last week's Era.

MR ARTHUR COLLINS will produce the pantomime of The White Cat at Drury-lane on Boxing Night. The book is written and invented by Mr J. Hickory Wood and Mr Collins. Miss Marie George will be the principal girl, Miss Queenie Leighton the principal boy, and Messrs Dan Leno, Harry Randall, Johnny Danvers, Fred Eastman, Tom Woottwell, Hugh J. Ward, Tom Hearn, Queen and Le Brun, and the Grigolatis will be in the cast.

THE Royalty will open on Monday, Nov. 7, with a series of revivals of the old dramatists, under the auspices of the Mermaid Society, whose president is Mr Philip Carr. Congreve's Way of the World will be played during the week and on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. In the cast are Mrs Theodore Wright, Mr Nigel Playfair, and Miss Ethel Irving. On Monday, Nov. 14, will be revived Beaumont and Fletcher's heroic travesty The Knight of the Burning Pestle; followed during the week beginning Nov. 21 with Ford's tragedy The Broken Heart. On Monday, Nov. 28, Vanbrugh's comedy The Confederacy will be performed; on Monday, Dec. 5, Beaumont and Fletcher's The Maid's Tragedy; and on Monday, Dec. 12, Dekker's masterpiece, which is to be given under the title of Bellafront.

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM, accompanied by his son, and Mrs Albery (Miss Mary Moore), accompanied by her son and sister, left Euston on Wednesday by the boat train to Liverpool en route to New York.

MADAME SARAH BERNHARDT and her company when on a visit to Potsdam recently were shown the places of interest by a local guide named Lockstaedt. In conversation with Madame Bernhardt, Lockstaedt remarked that he had invented a new gymnastic exercise, and in the park at Sans Souci he placed himself in the twenty-five positions he had "invented." When Madame Bernhardt reached Berlin she sent the professor her photograph, inscribed "D'artiste à artiste."

THE Corporation of London has purchased the picture "The Banquet Scene," from Macbeth, by D. Maclise, R.A., which was amongst those displayed at the Guildhall Gallery in connection with the recent exhibition of Irish art.

AT the committee meeting of the Scenic Artists Association, held at the offices, 5, Robert-street, Adelphi, W.C., on Monday, Mr Walter Hann in the chair, the following scenic artists were elected members—viz., Messrs Henry Brooke, of Covent-garden Opera House; James O. Bontor, of Glasgow; F. Browning, of Islington; T. C. Daly, of Manchester; Thos. Schonberg, of Clapham-junction; Joseph G. Symes, of Liverpool; and Charles Watson, of Leytonstone. Messrs E. G. Banks, Walter Hann, and W. B. Spong were elected a subcommittee to make the preliminary arrangements for holding the first annual exhibition of works of scenic art.

MR C. W. O'CONNOR, the courteous and enterprising press representative at the Grand Theatre, Islington, has this week been appointed to a similar position with the National Sunday League, and will control the press work for their Sunday concerts. This will not interfere with his duties at the theatre, to which address all communications should be sent.

MISS ALICE NIELSON, who appeared in Rigoletto, at Covent-garden on Thursday night, has evolved into an operatic singer from the lightest and brightest heroines of musical comedy. She was born in the far State of Missouri, U.S.A., and made her début in the famous American company known as the Bostonians. Miss Nielsen was a great favourite some years ago in a comic opera called The Serenade, and came to England in 1901, when she starred in The Fortune Teller, at the Shaftesbury Theatre.

MR GEORGE EDWARDES appealed at the Norfolk Quarter Sessions on Wednesday against the decision of the Cromer magistrates, who recently fined his chauffeur £10 and costs for reckless driving. The Court upheld the appeal and quashed the conviction, but without costs.

THE choristers engaged for the production of The Country Girl at Olympia, Paris, went on strike on Tuesday on the question of higher salaries, &c. The directors of Olympia yielded, and rehearsals were renewed. The French male chorus-singers receive ninety francs and women seventy francs monthly. For this they have to attend rehearsals from one to five o'clock in the afternoon. The choristers demanded £6 monthly for men and women alike, with an additional allowance of five francs for matinees, and the managers at the Gaité, Variétés, and Olympia have acceded to these requests.

MISS MURIEL BEAUMONT, who will appear in The Walls of Jericho, the new piece at the Garrick, has been on the stage for about six years. She commenced her career by "walking on" at the Haymarket, where she stayed for three years, playing girl parts and rarely taking even a week's vacation. She afterwards appeared in The Admirable Crichton at the Duke of York's, and was married, during the run of Mr Barrie's charming comedy, to Mr Gerald Du Maurier.

MR CLARENCE SOUNES, at the recent sale of the Marquis of Anglesey's effects, made very extensive purchases of costumes and scenery, which will be used in the forthcoming Christmas pantomime, Beauty and the Beast, at the Grand Theatre, Woolwich.

MR WIGNEY PERCIVAL, who is playing in The Tempest at His Majesty's, is a graduate from the Wilson Barrett school, having been a member for many years of the splendid company that produced such actors as E. S. Willard, Ambrose Manning, and the late Franklin M'Leay. He went to America, Australia, and South Africa with Mr Barrett. He joined the "dear old Governor" in the good old days at the Princess's. Mr Percyval was the original Philip Christian in The Manxman, and played in The Sign of the Cross from the beginning of its long run. He is one of the many actors who combine painting with playing, and many of his pictures display considerable ability.

MISS ETHEL BUCHANAN, who during the last twenty-five years has toured with the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company in England and America, has joined the Salvation Army. She was on tour in Manchester when her husband, Mr Marshall, until lately a stage manager, wrote to her from York, where he had recently settled, saying that he had been converted, and asking her to come home. She arrived at York the next day, attended a Salvation meeting, and voluntarily went to the "penitent form." She has since been singing to large crowds at open-air meetings.

MR GORDON STARKEY'S company in A Message from Mars, which is well on its way into its fourth year of tour, is maintaining its hold upon the playgoing public. The recent tour through Ireland, ranging from Waterford to Derry, has proved even more successful than the previous one of Easter, 1902.

INTOXICANTS were sold for the first time in the bars of the Grand Opera House, Middlesbrough, on Monday last. My Lady Molly opened this magnificent theatre a year ago, when the licence was granted with the restriction that no liquor should be sold on the premises. The restriction has now been removed, and a full licence has been granted by a majority of one of the Middlesbrough County Council, the voting being seventeen to sixteen, and three members of the council being neutral.

MR TREE'S Shakespeare répertoire company has had a very cordial welcome from the City and County of Worcester, a large and influential committee having been formed to receive the company on the occasion of its visit to the old cathedral city this week. The local Shakespeare Society, under the presidency of Lady Isabel Margesson, gave a luncheon party in honour of the leading members of the company, including Miss Constance Collier, Miss Margaret Halstan, Miss Cicely Richards, and Mr William Havilland, Alderman and Mrs Ernest Day being the hosts for the occasion, a great number of the local clergy being among those present. Amongst the members of the committee were the Right Hon. the Earl of Coventry, Lord Lieutenant of the county, the Countess of Coventry, the Right Hon. the Earl Beauchamp, K.C.M.G., the Countess Beauchamp, Sir Henry Lambert, Bart., Lady Lambert, Sir Richard Temple, Bart., Lady Temple, the Hon. G. H. Allsopp, M.P., the Lady Mildred Allsopp, the Lady Barbara Dudley Smith, the Lady Catherine Berkeley, Minnie, Lady Hindlip, Sir Harry Foley Vernon, Bart., the Lady Georgina Vernon, the Lady Isabel Margesson, Lady Douglas Galton, the Hon. Mrs Percy Allsopp, the High Sheriff of Worcestershire and Mrs Walter Holland, and the Mayor of Worcester and Mrs Cooke.

MR OTHO STUART will revive The Taming of the Shrew at the Adelphi Theatre about Christmas. The piece will be presented with the Induction, and will be liberally embellished with song and dance. Miss Lily Brayton is to be the Katharine and Mr Oscar Asche the Petruchio.

AT the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, on April 3 will be produced an adaptation from Mr Ian M'Laren's novel "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush." The piece has been very successful in America, where it has now been running continuously for over five years. It will be produced by Mr Mollison, who will play the principal part. The drama will be sent out with a very strong company to the bigger provincial towns.

MR MARTIN HARVEY on the 14th inst. opened the bazaar held in the Town Hall, Birmingham, in aid of the funds of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The Countess of Coventry and Lord Leigh performed the ceremony on the previous Wednesday and Thursday.

MR GEORGE DAVEY has now arranged his electric installation for use in connection with the Bioscopic pictures at the Grand Theatre, Islington, so that the light shall be thrown on the screen from the centre of the balcony, as is at present the system at the Palace Theatre. It occurred to Mr Davey that, as these Cinématograph scenes had proved so popular with his patrons, the additional trouble and expense of running the wires round the building would be well worth the advantage thereby gained.

OWING to the indisposition of Mr Frank M. Wood, the part of Glabrio this week has been successfully played by Mr Hayden Clifford, at Princess's Theatre, Glasgow.—Mr T. C. Daly, Messrs Broadhead and Son's principal artist, has been elected a member of the Scenic Artists' Association.—Mr and Mrs Frederick Loyd (Miss Florence Creagh), who are about to conclude an engagement in Her One Great Sin, have been secured by Mr Leicester Jackson, as manager and lead respectively, for his forthcoming tour of Dishonoured.

MR MARK HAMBOURG, the noted pianist, starts a short provincial tour at Glasgow next week. He will afterwards visit France, Germany, Austria, and Russia. One of his most interesting engagements is on Nov. 19, when he is to play in Moscow, on the anniversary of the death of Rubinstein. Mr Hambourg had the happiness of meeting the famous virtuoso when he was a student in Vienna, and Rubinstein's encouragement and praise will not readily be forgotten by the young musician. Mr Hambourg is a Russian, but he makes his home in England.

MR CHARLES CHANDLER'S Bells of Haslemere company rendered good service on Saturday last at the Brixton Theatre in helping the Hospital Saturday Fund. In the village smithy scene Mr Charles Cecil as the blacksmith brought on one of the collecting boxes and, with some clever gagging, obtained contributions from all the company, including, to the delight of the audience, the "villain of the play." He thus collected 6s. 2d., which went to swell the theatre collection of £8 0s. 1½d., which was over three times the amount of the previous year's collection.

AN interesting souvenir associated with the Grand Opera House and the Old Theatre Royal, Norwich, was presented by the Deputy Mayor, Lieutenant-Colonel J. R. Harvey, D.S.O., to Mr Fred Morgan, consisting of a pair of portraits, suitably framed and inscribed, one representing Mr John Harvey, chairman of the merchants and manufacturers of Norwich who opened the Theatre Royal on March 27, 1826, and the other being an excellent likeness of Lieutenant Colonel J. R. Harvey himself, who as Mayor of Norwich opened the Grand Opera House on Aug. 3, 1903. It is proposed to make a further presentation to Mr Morgan upon his leaving the Grand Opera House to resume his lesseeship of the old Theatre Royal, now the Hippodrome. Already a substantial amount has been subscribed, and further sums are daily added to the list.

MR ACTON PHILLIPS at Wednesday night's meeting of the Hammersmith Borough Council was presented, in recognition of his services as Mayor last year, with a life-size oil-painting of himself done by Mr W. J. Warren. The picture represents Mr Phillips in a Court suit, wearing the mayoral robe and chain. The picture was subscribed for by the Alderman and Councillors, the M.P., and members of the L.C.C. After he had acknowledged the gift, Mr Phillips presented the picture, through the Mayor, to the Council to be hung in the Town Hall.

MR FELIX SWINSTEAD, who gave his first pianoforte recital in London at Bechstein Hall on Monday, is an old R.A.M. scholar, where he commenced to study in 1898, having previously gained the Sterndale Bennett Scholarship. He is also a pupil of Oscar Beringer, Frederick Corder, and Tobias Matthay. He is musicianly enthusiastic, and has already added to his success as a pianist by several compositions of great promise. Mr Swinstead is a nephew of the well-known artist, Mr George Hillyard Swinstead, R.B.A.

MR HARRIS FINEBERG, the esteemed proprietor of the Star Theatre, Liverpool, is a municipal candidate for Sandhills Ward, Liverpool. This is, we believe, the first time that a gentleman closely identified with the theatrical profession in the city on the Mersey has attempted to enter public life there. Considering the manner in which the local magistrates have recently somewhat harassed theatres in regard to alterations, &c., it would be well if one directly representative of the profession was placed in a position to look after the interests of that body. There is every indication that Mr Fineberg, who is extremely popular, will be returned.

MADAME REJANE, who recently arrived in New York with ninety-five trunks and twenty members of her company, talks enthusiastically of her project of opening a theatrical training school in Paris. She will require a large sum of money and will want a place in the Champs-Elysées for fifty years. The French Government will not offer one for more than twenty-five years.

MRS BROWN POTTER is rehearsing at the Savoy Theatre For Church or Stage, the play by the vicar of Gorleston, which caused so much discussion when produced recently by Mrs Potter in the provinces. Cavalleria Rusticana, however, will be retained in the bill after the withdrawal of Forget-Me-Not.

"THE CHEVALIER" will be played at the Garrick Theatre for the seventy-third and last time on Saturday, and on the following Monday Mr Arthur Bourchier will produce a new modern play, in four acts, by Mr Alfred Sutro, entitled The Walls of Jericho. One of the scenes takes place at a London ball. The cast, in addition to Mr Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh, will include Miss Kate Sergeantson, Miss Muriel Beaumont, Miss Elfrida Clement, Miss Lena Halliday, Miss June Van Buskirk, Mr O. B. Clarence, Mr H. Nye Chart, Mr Junius Booth, and Mr Sydney Valentine. Mr Sutro is the author of the duologue A Marriage Has Been Arranged, which Mr Bourchier and Miss Vanbrugh have recently played for many nights at the Garrick Theatre. He also adapted Carrots for Mr Forbes-Robertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott from the French of Jules Renard. His translation of Maeterlinck's Aglavaine and Selysette is to be produced at the Court Theatre for a series of matinées on Nov. 15.

THE taste of Glasgow playgoers for the legitimate has been well indicated by the ballot just taken by Mr Herbert J. Montague to decide the programme of the Osmond Tearle Shakespearian and classical répertoire company at the Grand Theatre next week. Twelve plays were submitted, each person having seven votes, and the following have been elected by a handsome majority:—Hamlet, Merchant of Venice, Romeo and Juliet, Othello, David Garrick, Julius Cæsar (matinée), and Richard III. They will be presented in the order named.

A COMEDY, to be called The Fascinating Miss Kemp, by Gordon Holmes, will be produced at the Grand Theatre, Margate, on Nov. 7, with a strong cast and new scenery, prior to a season at a West-end theatre. Mr Gilbert Hare will produce the piece.

MR STERLING M'KINLAY has been appointed professor of singing to the Ben Greet Academy of Acting—not the Highbury Academy as it was erroneously stated in our Theatrical Gossip last week. The popular young basso is a member of the Green Room Club. One of the most interesting mementos of his early successes as an oarsman is a cup which he won at a regatta in a pair-oar race Mr F. R. Benson being his partner, Mrs Benson coxing. Mr M'Kinlay also prizes a cup which he won at Eton, also in a pair-oar race, in company with Mr H. S. H. Cavendish, who is now the husband of Miss Isabel Jay.

A NEW departure is being made by the Hampstead Conservatoire with the object, as the syllabus of its artist division says, of "co-ordinating the educational with the recreative side of music." With this purpose a series of concerts, musical conversaziones, and lectures has been arranged, and begins on Oct. 20 with the first of "four concert-lectures," to be given on consecutive Thursdays at 3.15, by Mr Walter Ford, in connection with the artist division of the Conservatoire. Starting with "The Volkslied," Mr Ford will trace the rise and development of the art song to its culmination in the great composers. Mr Ford is well-known as an authority upon the subject, and a year or so ago was specially invited to lecture on German mediæval folk-song before the delegates of the extension lectures at Oxford. One of the features of the lectures will be the dual-rôle played by Mr Ford as lecturer and singer of the numerous songs illustrating his subject. The lectures should prove as "recreative" as they will be "educational."

AT the Grand Theatre, Islington, on Monday Mr Oswald Brand will revive The Union Jack, in which a number of Volunteers and seamen from H.M. Navy will take part. On the following Monday he will revive The Peep o' Day, by Edmund Falconer, and in view of the time that has elapsed since its last presentation on the stage the production should be an interesting one.

MESSRS W. BAILEY, JUN., AND CHARLES BERTE'S stirring drama of every-day life, The City of Millions, returns to the home of its birth, the Royal West London Theatre, on Monday, and Mr William Bailey has been busy this week making arrangements to ensure the complete success of the production, several of the scenes having been repainted by Mr W. Charles.

M. JULES CLARETIE, the manager of the Comédie-Française, Paris, at Versailles, where he has his summer quarters, allows a company of amateurs, recruited from local society, to perform plays in a private theatre. For them he has written a comedy in one single act, which he completed in a couple of days.

YVONNE DE TREVILLE, the beautiful young American singer, whom connoisseurs acclaim as the only adequate successor to Madame Sembrich, is in Paris for a few days on her way to Bukarest, where she is engaged to sing the rôle, in Lakme, now so indissolubly associated with her name. She has been specially commanded to sing before Carmen Sylva, the Queen of Roumania. She will then return to France to give representations at Nice at the very height of the season, and then on to Buda-Pesth and Constantinople. This talented singer has created a name for herself in all the Opera Houses of Europe. She is as popular in St. Petersburg as in Cairo, in Nice as in Stockholm. Thus, from north to south, and east to west, Mademoiselle De Treville is learning her geography of Europe very pleasantly, leaving a trail of glory behind her.

BURRY PORT is a small town near to Llanelly, S. Wales, and rejoices in the possession of a fine and spacious parish hall, the property of the Church of England. At this hall from time to time performances are given by good travelling dramatic companies as well as operatic and other performances of a similar nature by local amateurs. Only the other day Les Cloches was given here, and The Yeomen of the Guard is in active preparation—but now the Nonconformist element is up in arms against the Hall, and is doing all it can to dissuade the licensing authority from renewing the dramatic licence. It is sincerely to be hoped that those gentlemen who constitute the licensing authority for the county of Carmarthen will not give the slightest heed to the ravings of those people whose ignorance in matters theatrical makes them imagine great things.

SWINDON and Reading are close neighbours, not only in the theatrical world, but also in Association football. The two teams met on Saturday last in an important Southern League game at Swindon. The players were generously invited by Mr Alfred Manners, lessee of the Queen's Theatre, Swindon, to witness the performance of The Girl from Japan, by Mr F. E. Philpotts's company. It is scarcely necessary to remark that the bright and refined musical comedy and the kindness of Mr Manners were highly appreciated.

A FIRE broke out on the fifth floor of the Haymarket Theatre, Chicago, on Wednesday night, but the manager of the house ordered the last act, which was being performed, to be continued, and instructed the orchestra to play loudly, to drown the noise that the firemen were making. The performance was hurried through, the fireproof curtain was rung down, and the audience quietly left the house ignorant of the conflagration.

A BLIND ACTOR.

APPEAL FOR MR. HENRY CRISP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—The case of Mr Henry Crisp is too sad for words. I enclose cheque for £10 10s. (from Mr and Mrs Kendal) with only too much pleasure to so deserving a fund.

Yours faithfully, W. H. KENDAL.

North-Western Hotel, Liverpool, Oct. 18, 1904.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Mr Crisp's case is certainly a very sad one, and I am very glad to enclose my mite towards his assistance.

Yours faithfully, CHARLES WYNDHAM.

Midland Hotel, Manchester, Oct. 11, 1904.

All subscriptions sent to Edward Ledger, hon. treasurer, The Era Offices, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., will be duly announced in these columns.

MR J. J. GALE, who for some time held the post of musical director of the Queen's Theatre, Swindon, during Mr Ernest Carpenter's management, recently had a grand complimentary concert at the local Mechanics' Institute. A large audience thoroughly enjoyed a high-class concert, among the features of which were the selections by the orchestra under Mr J. J. Gale's bâton.

MR ABE HOLT died on Monday morning at 2, Melbourne-street, Higher Broughton, Manchester. He was for many years with Mr George Alexander's company and latterly with the T. B. Brydge combination.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS MARY GRIFFITH.

Seldom is recorded such an "infinite variety" as is shown in the theatrical life of Miss Mary Griffiths, who commenced her professional career at Bristol, playing young character parts under Mr J. H. Chute, and then migrating to Ramsgate and Margate to take juvenile leading parts with Miss Sarah Thorne. After that came two seasons at Oxford for Shakespearian heroines and some comedy parts under the late Mr Clifford Cooper. Then there was an engagement at the old "Astley's" also two or three years at the Standard Theatre, under Mr John Douglas, and tours with Mr H. Dundas, playing Marita, in Barnes of New York. An engagement followed with Mr Arthur Williams for his season at the Elephant and Castle Theatre. She was some years with the late Mrs Sara Lane at the Britannia. Other engagements were with Henry Herman's last play, Eagle Joe, and Mr Tearle's Shakespearian company, playing Lady Macbeth, Juliet's Nurse, &c. Following this came a delightful time with Mr Stanley Hope's company, in Sowing the Wind, Miss Griffiths playing the Hon. Mrs Fretwell, and when this finished an engagement followed with Messrs Gatti, of the Adelphi, to take the part of Mrs Smithers, in The Gipsy Earl. After a tour with Mr Norman Forbes' company, in The Man with the Iron Mask, came two years of travelling with Ben-my-Chree company, succeeded by a very pleasant tour with Mr W. Maxwell, Miss Griffiths taking the part of Nannie Webster, in The Little Minister; and then another short tour with the Sowing the Wind company. A recent success was when she was engaged early this year specially to play the Nurse, in Mr G. H. Leigh's revival of Romeo and Juliet at the Court Theatre, the London press being unanimous in praising her acting. After this she appeared in The New Boy, taking the part of Mrs Rennick. Her latest engagement was at the Royalty, in Mr G. Rollit's farce The Money Makers, Miss Griffiths taking the part of Mrs Bannerman. She is on tour with this piece, but returns to London to again sustain that character should the play be reproduced there. Miss Griffiths is the widow of that well-remembered actor Mr Arthur Lyle, whose sudden death some ten months since came as a terrible blow to his wife, to whom he was devoted.

MISS CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT.

MISS CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT.

MISS CLAIRE PAUNCEFORT is the second daughter of Mr George Pauncefort, in his day a well-known leading man in England and America, and Georgiana Pauncefort, who was for many years leading lady at the Surrey and for twenty-five years of the Lyceum Theatre; also granddaughter of Mrs Edwards, of the Bath and Bristol circuit and the Grecian Theatre. Miss Pauncefort was born in Birmingham, but her father and mother going to America on a starring tour, she and her sister Rose went with them, and spent their early childhood at an old country house in Melrose, seven miles from Boston. Although a Protestant, she was educated at a convent school in London. Sir Henry Irving gave her her first line to speak on the stage, and she was with him for two years at the Lyceum, playing such rôles as Donalbain Sozel, in The Bells, and a number of parts in farces, then a regular item of the bill. She next went on tour with Mr and Mrs Chippendale as Maria, Lucy, Miss Neville, Jenny Wildbriar, and William, in a burlesque of Black-Eyed Susan, meeting C. W. Somerset, F. Terry, J. C. Buckstone, Adela Measor, Virginia Bateman, Carlotta Addison, Mrs Bernard Beere, &c. Then came a tour as Flippertijibbet, in Amy Robsart, with Marie De Grey. She next joined William Calder and played Meenie to his Rip Van Winkle for ten months, followed by a tour with Minnie Palmer. Returning to town she spent eighteen months at the St. James's Theatre, under the Hare and Kendal management, and remained two years and more with Mr and Mrs Kendal after the dissolution of partnership. This included their first tour in America. On her return she joined Miss Fortescue, with whom she has during numerous engagements played Lady Capulet, Helen, Mrs Candour, Mrs Hardcastle, and Lady Dolly Vanderdecken. She has also played five tours with Mr A. B. Tapping as Mrs Cross, Cinders, Lost Paradise; Marquise, Caste; &c., five with Ben Greet as Countess, Two Orphans, Juliet's Nurse, Lady Franklin, Audrey, Madame Deschappelles, &c. She played Rose Leclercq's part on tour with The Late Mr Castello and Mrs Jedbury on a tour of Jedbury, Junior, and went to the Globe to sustain the same rôle when Mr Penley revived the piece there, remaining for the production of M'Haggis. Then came a fortnight in Brussels with Miss Madge M'Intosh as Maria, Twelfth Night, and some of her old parts. She played Mrs Stanyon, Tree of Knowledge; Crafer, Liberty Hall; and Mrs Cross again on three tours under Mr George Alexander's management. She played Miss Parker, in The Message from Mars, for ten months and many other parts under Mr Fred Mouillot's management. She was with William Gillette through his Lyceum season and with Kate Rorke as the Countess Coryglen, in Honours Divided. She created Mrs Jutt, in Hearts and Coronets, at Fulham, and many other parts. She is at present engaged to understudy Miss Venne, in Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner, at the Imperial.

MR. BERNARD LIMPUS.

MR. JOHNNIE SCHOFIELD.

MR JOHNNIE SCHOFIELD, who is the son of William Schofield, his father being an old performer, started his career almost as soon as he could toddle. His first appearance on the stage when a lad was at the old Theatre Royal, Northampton, with the great tragedian, G. V. Brooke, and after many ups and downs in theatres and music halls, in which he has played many parts as actor, singer and dancer, stage-manager, ballet master, agent, and chairman, he, sixteen years ago, joined the Mohawk Minstrels. He stayed twelve years with this company, and was very successful. Knowing absolutely nothing of minstrel business, he started fourth on the corner, and when he left the troupe he was the principal end man of one of the finest minstrel crowds in England. Mr Schofield left the Mohawks to return to the theatres four years ago. His first engagement after leaving was with Mr E. G. Saunders for pantomime at the Coronet Theatre, and he is still under contract with this gentleman, the approaching season being his fifth under the same management. The companies he has been with as principal comedian lately include the comic opera, The Thirty Thieves, The Gay Cadets, The Girl from Kay's, of which he was the original Hoggenheimer in the provinces, and The Lady Killer, first played in theatres and then as a sketch on the Moss and Stoll tour. Mr Schofield again joined Mr George Dance's company, The Girl from Kay's, last spring at the conclusion of his pantomime at the Camden Theatre, and he is under Mr Dance's management until Christmas, when he will reappear in pantomime.

MR BERNARD LIMPUS.

MR BERNARD LIMPUS was born on May 26, 1876, at Windsor Castle, his father at that time being a minor canon of St. George's Chapel. He was educated at Merchant Taylors school and Keble College, Oxford. It was at Oxford that he became inflamed with zeal for a dramatic career, and he made his first appearance on any stage as Benvolio in Romeo and Juliet, under the auspices of the O. U. D. S. His first professional engagement was with Mr Ben Greet, with whom he stayed for more than three years, during which time he played many parts. In November, 1898, Mr Limpus played five parts nightly in The Three Musketeers, then Capt. Halliwell, in The Little Minister, which part he played for eight months. It was during this tour that he got an engagement for life, and met his wife, Miss May De Launay, who was playing Micah, and to whom he was married on Jan. 14, 1902. Next came eight weeks at the Comedy Theatre, London, during which time he played many small parts for Mr Greet and Charles, the wrestler, in As You Like It; the juvenile part in Mrs Charles Simms's little play, A Soldier's Daughter. After this he played the Duke of Berasconi, A Royal Family, for two tours. During the second tour he was seen by Mr Edward Sass and Mr James Nelson, and was engaged to go out to South Africa and play all their juvenile leading parts, i.e., Prince Victor, in A Royal Family; the dual rôle, A Man of Forty; Lieut. Mannering, Second in Command; Lionel Carteret, Mrs Dane's Defence; George Langton, Manœuvres of Jane; Lucien Edensor, Rebellious Susan; Sir Roger Fairfax, Sweet Nell of Old Drury; the Pastor, Magda; &c. On returning to England Mr Limpus again obtained an engagement with Mr Greet for a Shakespearian tour, and played Orlando, Claudio, Bassanio, Antipholus of Syracuse, Ferdinand, Demetrius, and many other juvenile parts. His next engagement was with Mr F. R. Benson for his second company, headed by Mrs F. R. Benson and Mr William Haviland, during which tour Mr Limpus played Bassanio, Laertes, Joseph Surface, Hastings, and Lucentio, in The Taming of the Shrew. After this, in April, 1903, he took out a company of his own to the small towns. The play was The Cricket on the Hearth, preceded by the Balcony Scene from Romeo and Juliet. In the autumn of 1903 he was re-engaged by Mr F. R. Benson for Romeo, Bassanio, Joseph Surface, and Orlando, and he was re-engaged again after a ten months' tour for Romeo, Charles Surface, Orlando, Young Marlow, Captain Absolute, Paolo, &c.

CHARLES WYNDHAM'S FAREWELL.

Sir Charles Wyndham, on the eve of his departure for New York, where, at the New Lyceum, he is to begin an American tour on Nov. 14 bade farewell for a time to London playgoers at the New Theatre on Tuesday afternoon. The play chosen for the occasion was David Garrick. At the close of the performance, in response to demands for a speech,

Sir CHARLES WYNDHAM said:—"I know I voice the feelings of Miss Mary Moore and my company in acknowledging the debt of obligation we are under to you for the gracious manner in which you have testified your appreciation of this farewell matinée, let me say, rather, this au revoir matinée, tendered to me so kindly by Messrs Maude and Harrison. They are my tenants here for the autumn, and for to-day I am their very grateful guest. After a brief visit to New York and a brief one to Boston, we hope to be with you again in the early spring, but—short as our absence will be, and though we are leaving you to meet kinsman only less dear to us than yourselves—the fact still remains that you and we are parting, and I cannot sever myself even for a few months from such good friends without trying to express something of what I feel. But, with due respect to those who object to managerial speeches, I fear I cannot do this without some exercise of my vocal chords. The audience can applaud the manager, but the manager cannot applaud the audience, nor can he grip the hand of each individual member of the community as if he were the President of the United States on New Year's day. Why, then, should he be limited to mere pantomime, however expressive, and be precluded from clothing his sentiments in more or less articulate speech? At any rate, that is what I am trying to do, and, as the Ghost in Hamlet says—in a terribly long speech, by-the-bye—'Brief let me be.' It is easy to understand why I have chosen David Garrick for this function. Many of you, I am sure, have noticed that when a wife has a mind to appeal to the sympathies of her husband, one of her favourite devices is to assume the dress, the manner, arrangement of her hair, and so forth, which first provoked his youthful ardour. Sometimes the device succeeds, sometimes it does not. Anyhow, I am taking a leaf out of this book of feminine strategy in appearing before you to-day in that character in which I was fortunate enough to win your approval nearly eighteen years ago. During those eighteen years—severe test of human fidelity—you have supported me in this part with a generous loyalty I can never forget. From year to year we have revived this play until it has become a hardy annual; while it has even been identified with events of importance to the public and of private interest to myself. For instance, David Garrick was running during Queen Victoria's Jubilee in 1887; David Garrick was running during Queen Victoria's Jubilee in 1897; David Garrick was one of the plays chosen on the occasion of my colleagues' celebration of my twentieth year of management; David Garrick was running during the summer of two years ago that was devoted to the King's Coronation; and whenever I have made appeals to you in the interests of some public cause or other—appeals to which you have always nobly responded—it has been in this character of David Garrick that I have sought and gained your support. Its vitality is due largely—very largely—to my audience, though I will not assume any preternatural mock modesty by pretending that I have not had something personally to do with the matter. Let me rather say we are jointly responsible for its creation. It is the child of both of us—a healthy child of nearly eighteen summers. What wonder, then, that on the eve of a temporary parting I should set before you in 1904 this full-grown offering and pledge of our affection, which, as a new-born babe, pleased us both so much in 1886. What wonder that I ask your permission to take it with me to our kinsmen across the sea. Do not be alarmed; I will not leave it there. I will take every care of it, and, if the kind fates permit, will bring it home safe and sound. With this prospect to maintain me in my absence, a bright prospect based on a happy retrospect, 'there need be no sadness of farewell when I embark.' And so, ladies and gentlemen, with no feelings in our hearts but gratitude, love, and hope, your debtors in the past, your servants in the future, your friends always, Miss Mary Moore, my company, and myself take our leave."

COVENT-GARDEN BALL.

The second of the present series of fancy dress balls at Covent-garden Theatre was given on the night of the 14th inst., and attracted a very large crowd of pleasure-seekers. The pleasant balcony supper tables were again well patronised, and make a delightful situation from which to view the revellers on the floor. Messrs Frank Rendle and Neil Forsyth offered a number of valuable prizes for the best fancy dresses, and the ingenuity which had been exercised in devising costumes likely to catch the eye of the judges was once more in evidence. One striking dress was intended to represent the current controversy on "The Handicap of Marriage." It resembled a bridal robe, and consisted of a white satin Empire gown having on the skirt panels paintings representing the wedding breakfast, a domestic quarrel in which blows are being exchanged, and another where the wife is leaving her husband and children when the ten years contract is concluded. The cloak was trimmed with silver and orange blossoms, and bore pictures showing scenes connected with the marriage ceremony; while the head-dress was made up of orange blossoms, wedding bells, and a dove carrying the ring. This handsome dress was produced by Mr W. Clarkson, and among others from his atelier was a realistic snake charmer with a coiled snake for a hat, "Nuts in May," a "Runaway Girl," and "The Catch of the Season," a perfect representation of a very ragged Cinderella. From Madame Jeanne came a charming costume called "The Little Village," composed of a gown of white satin and frilled chiffon. Three large satin frills on the skirt were covered with paintings of London town and life. The wearer had a large picture hat, and carried a wand, on which were the Houses of Parliament in white roses. The same costumier also sent "By the sad sea waves," a painted chiffon dress descriptive of the sea, which was very effective. The first prize was a solid silver tea and coffee service with engraved tray.

THE officials of the Music Publishers' Association seized 150,000 copies of alleged pirated music in a stable off Well-street Hackney, on Thursday.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, AUG. 25. — HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Mr J. C. Williamson is part author of a new drama produced at Her Majesty's Theatre, on which house he has spent so many thousand pounds in beautifying and bringing up-to-date, transforming it from an almost delapidated building to the very front rank, both as regards elegance and comfort. In the play above referred to Mr. Williamson has had as collaborator Mr Alfred Hill, and their joint effort is entitled Tapu. That popular combination The Royal Comic Opera company has been specially recalled to Melbourne from New Zealand for the initial performance, which took place on Saturday evening before a packed audience. The plot of Tapu is somewhat obscured by its medley surroundings, but any deficiency in this direction is fully compensated for by the novel and beautiful dances introduced during the performance, two of the most notable being the Haka Haka or war dance, performed by a dozen Hawks Bay Maoris, and the beautiful Poi song and dance, one of the most graceful dances that Melbourne has hitherto been treated to. Each individual member of the company was accorded a hearty "welcome home" by the audience. It is understood we are to have a number of revivals of favourite operas, such as The Mikado, Gondoliers, Lady Molly, &c., so that Tapu will only be performed for a limited number of nights.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—The Dandy Doctor still continues to prescribe for his numerous "patients," if one may so describe the patrons of this theatre. For those who suffer from that annoying complaint the "blues" a visit to his surgery will result in the patient leaving perfectly cured. It is correctly described by the management as a "musical cocktail." Mr Edward Lauri is quite at home in the character of Melchisedek Brown, the American millionaire, and introduces a couple of really clever dances. Mr M'Naughton and the Bovis Brothers still evoke loud applause for their song "He was a sailor," while the dancing of Miss Alice Nixon is as natty as ever. Miss Garstang and the rest of the company contribute largely to the success.

THEATRE ROYAL.—This theatre was crowded on Saturday last, when Mr Anderson's company repeated the stirring melodrama A Sailor's Sweetheart. The sensational situations in the play seem to hit the public taste exactly, especially the rescue in mid-ocean. The scenery also is above the average. The principal characters are taken by Mr Willard, Mr Sterling Whyte, Mr Inman, Mr Bert Bailey, Miss Eugenie Duggan, and Miss Flo Buckley.

OPERA HOUSE.—Mr Will Van Allen, an American musical artist, made his first appearance at this theatre on Saturday, and quickly proved himself to be a capable musician. His overture to William Tell was played in a masterly manner on the banjo. Mr Allen also has a large stock of up-to-date jokes which keep the audience laughing throughout his turn. Mr George Dean, descriptive vocalist, appeared for the first time. Possessed of a fine robust voice, Mr Dean showed himself to be an actor of ability. The rest of the company also furnished interesting items.

MR FRANK CLARK'S Folly company at the Gaiety Theatre repeated their entertainment to an excellent house. At the Waxworks Abomah, a native of South Carolina, and described as the tallest woman in the world, daily holds receptions, and seems quite at home amid the models of dead and gone "great ones." Her height is 7ft. 5ins.

SYDNEY, AUG. 30.—Three Little Maids, with Mr G. P. Huntley as Lord Cheyne, is the greatest hit of the Williamson-Edwardes musical comedy season at Her Majesty's Theatre. His Excellency the Governor and Lady Rawson were present on the 27th, and the theatre was packed with a highly hilarious audience. True to nature and well recognised types as Mr Huntley's characterisations all are, his Lord Cheyne is absolutely great. Another capital impersonation is that of the Rev. Theodore Branscombe by Mr R. St. George. A somewhat colourless part of Lady Mallory is adopted by handsome Maud Hobson, announced as about to marry a rich ranchowner in America at the close of this season. Mr Maurice Farkoa, an intense favourite at home, as M. De Lorme charms with his singing and dainty acting. Miss Madge Crichton is Ada, Miss Delia Mason is Edna, and Miss Elsa Ryan is Hilda, the three daughters of the rector, and our stage never welcomed three more apt or better rehearsed portraits. The three "town mice" were embodied by Misses Vera Edwardine, Eva Kelly, and Kathleen Warren, all charmingly dressed. Mr George Carroll made a decided hit as Cupid, and was encored almost as vehemently as was Mr Farkoa. A very funny dance "Little Pigs" was cleverly performed by Mr Huntley and Miss Madge Bennett. Molineaux was cleverly acted by Mr J. Edward Fraser, and the village postmistress had a humorous representative in Miss Barbara Huntley. The smooth performance was conducted by Mr Frank Tours, and its production directed by Mr George P. Stephenson. The staging, scenery, and dressing were up to Williamson standard, and the present advance booking points to a run of Three Little Maids until the end of the company's engagement.

"A LIFE'S ROMANCE" will run at the Royal until Sept. 3, when, without any apparent necessity for a change, Mr Bland Holt will produce The Flood Tide, which he announces as a Drury-lane melo-farce. In the next piece Mr Ernest Truman will play a part, and the accomplished vocalist will sing several songs.

"HOITY-TOITY" at the Palace has hit the public taste and the matinées, as well as the night performances are largely attended. These American Travesty Stars have quickly grown into favour, and their rollicking fun, free from coarseness, is delightful. Then again, apart from the comedians, Bernard, Dill, and Koll, the "serious" artistes, Miss Maud Amber and Mr Winfield Blake, are charming singers and attractive personalities.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN" is well told by Sanford's American Players at the Lyceum, and the pictures of plantation life interpreted by real negroes are well drawn.

MR W. F. HAWTREY comes to the Criterion for four weeks, beginning on Sept. 3d, with Tatterley. This character should most admirably suit the experienced actor, and a treat should be in store for Sydney.

THE Tivoli welcomed back with enthusiasm Miss May Moore-Duprez on Saturday, and the Angelos made a welcome reappearance. Another novelty was a set of biograph pictures of the ascent of Mount Snowdon in a motor car, a series introduced lately by Mr Harry Rickards. Burke, Moller and Teller could not appear owing to the illness of Mr Burke. To-night Mr Frank Harwood will make his first Australian appearance, and Mr Nat Clifford will reappear for a few nights.

SYDNEY, SEPT. 6. — THEATRE ROYAL.—On Saturday The Flood Tide was produced in a most lavish style by Mr Bland Holt. Into this play are crowded realistic opportunities, and the beautiful scenes supplied by Mr John Brunton are settings for pictures of stirring events. Real horses, carriages, crowds, a railway express with smoke and steam, all keep things lively in Cecil Raleigh's play. Without giving any one character undue prominence, the author has made all parts important in a strong plot. Mr W. E. Baker is a self-possessed hero as Jack Champion, V.C., and Mr Albert Norman is a soldierly Earl of Sutton. Bluff old Dick Champion has a hearty representative in Mr Charles Brown, whose daughter Polly is an embodiment of fun and vivacity as acted by Mrs Bland Holt. The chemist's assistant, George Wellington Clipp, in his many scrapes, troubles, and escapes, is a fund of humour as depicted by Mr Bland Holt. The Baroness Pitchioli gives Miss Fraleis Ross chances for much dash and verve; Miss Harrie Ireland is cleverly placed as Maria; and Miss J. Pollock makes a handsome Mabel Corry. Mrs Ernest Truman is a sweet unseen singer. Mr M. F. Kemp (Colonel Sir Russell Corry), Miss Adela Kerr (Mrs Meredith), Mr A. Scarlet (Jimmy Lawkins), Miss Canty (Madame Muriel), and Mr Parkes (Steward Hakes) are all good. The millionaire Thompson, alias M'Naughton, is skilfully depicted by Mr Arthur Styan. The dipsomania of this vulgar rich man gives opportunities to all the adventurers of the story. It is a clever impersonation, and stands out strongly.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Crowded houses witness Three Little Maids at every performance. Last night their Excellencies the Govenor General and Lady Northcote were present with their suite.

LYCEUM —Uncle Tom's Cabin has now a completely new répertioire of plantation songs and dances, and the story is strongly told, as before. The impersonator of Little Pete is only eight years old, his buck dancing being very clever.

THE PALACE.—Hoity-Toity is announced as in its last nights, though no abatement is shown in the attendance or the enjoyment of the audience. The singers, Maud Archer and Winifred Blake, and the comedians, Dill, Kolb, and Bernard, are prime favourites. The chorus is sprightly and beautifully costumed.

"THE GAME OF LOVE"

By GERTRUDE WARDEN.

London: Digby, Long, and Company.

Miss Gertrude Warden always writes an interesting love story, and her latest novel will bear favourable comparision with any of its predecessors. The heroine is not the immaculate young person whom we sometimes encounter in the realms of fiction; and it does not take long to come to the conclusion that she plays the "game of love" very badly. Moya Reeves is a woman with a fatal weakness. At critical moments she is silent when she should speak out in justice to herself and others. "The Game of Love" is a story of an unhappy marriage, the result of a fatal mistake on the part of one of the contracting parties. Sir Harold Spencer-Montagu—an admirably drawn picture of a self-made man—is left a widower with one daughter, Judith, who inherited all her Jewish mother's plainness. Left free to choose a wife more in accordance with his rising greatness, he, like a wise man, took took time over it, "and, as in so many other of his speculations, when he made his choice it seemed at first hardly a suitable one. A beautiful girl playing a small part in one of his provincial companies attracted his attention. She was an inexperienced and poorly paid actress, but in the part for which she was cast—the wife of an Earl and a woman of high breeding and distinction—face, dress, voice, manner, and figure all completely realised Monty's ideal of what a great man's wife should be.

"He looked up Miss Moya Reeves's antecedents with business-like promptitude. Orphan daughter of a clergyman, mother member of a respectable Irish theatrical family, well-educated, beautiful, witty and clever, exquisite taste in dress, lovely voice and irreproachable reputation. Great man though he was, he never for one moment made the mistake of offering the penniless actress other than honourable attentions. It was a wife Monty wanted — a wife with a handsome appearance, and beautiful manners 'for dinners and bazaars and afternoon teas,' as he comprehensively put it. On the whole he preferred that she should have no money. One of his favourite axioms was that 'more was to be made by spending than by scraping' on certain occasions, and, bank-book in hand, he began the wooing of Moya Reeves.

"First of all he raised her salary. Then he gained over her aunt, who was playing in the company, by handsome presents. He treated the actors and actresses to suppers and a ball, and singled out Miss Reeves for such special attentions as could leave no doubt on the subject of his feelings towards her. Every woman in the company forthwith openly, and in many cases bitterly, envied Moya. The girl was, not unnaturally, flattered and pleased. In theatrical circles Spencer-Montagu was a power; when he condescended to visit provincial towns at which his companies were performing, he did so 'en grand seigneur,' putting up at the best hotels, with his secretary and his valet in attendance, and driving daily down to the theatre in an open two-horse carriage. Moya admired him, and was a little afraid of him; to love him hardly occurred to her. He was too ostentatious, too autocratic and domineering to appeal to her from the point of view of sentiment; but he impressed her strongly, nevertheless, for his was not a personality it was possible to overlook."

It was while Moya was engaged to Spencer-Montagu that she met Morton Wetherby, and they fell in love with each other at their first interview. The young man is private secretary to Lord Tremlyn, and he is compelled to accompany him abroad on a two-and-a-half years' tour. Moya makes no mention of her engagement to Morton, and they part as lovers.

"She ran sobbing upstairs to her own room, locked the door, and flung herself, dressed as she was and without lighting the candle, face downwards on the bed.

"'I love him! I love him' she hissed into the pillow, while tears rained from her eyes. 'I shall never love anyone else—never, never! And he is only a flirt, and I am one of his conquests! I would give my soul to marry him, and yet to-night, his last night, I ran away from him. I can't even write to him. I must wait until I hear, and if what Teresa says is true, he will forget. God help me! When I think I must marry that other man I feel that I shall go mad!'

"All through the night she lay sobbing her passionate heart out, torn with rage against fate which would part her from Morton, with doubts of his fidelity, with self-scorn for her own disingenuousness and for her readiness to fall fathoms deep in love with a stranger, and with a shrinking dread of the future."

Moya does not receive a line from Morton Wetherby, and believing that he has proved false, she marries Spencer-Montagu—and is miserable, though she is the wife of a great city magnate, and can enjoy all the luxuries that wealth bestows. At the end of a little more than two years-and-half, she again meets Morton Wetherby accidentally just after she has seen her husband off by train at Victoria Station. Morton is under the belief that she has come to meet him, and takes her off to dine with him at a quiet restaurant. He cannot understand why it is the letters he has sent her while on his travels have never reached her, and Moya does not inform him that she is a married woman. A fatal mistake; for the knowledge comes to him in a manner that shakes all his faith in Moya and in womankind generally.

The logical conclusion to such a story as this is a sad one, and readers who favour the conventional happy ending may possibly feel disappointed with the tragic finish to Miss Warden's latest novel. However they will find their interest in this well-written love story maintained until the last page.

AT North London Police-court, on Monday, Mr Fordham was asked to grant a licence permitting a boy of eleven to appear in a stage play at Dalston Theatre. It was admitted that the child would be on the stage at intervals until nearly eleven o'clock at night. Mr Fordham was of opinion that a boy of eleven should be in bed by eight o'clock at night, and he thought he should only be doing his duty to the boy by refusing to grant the certificate. The manager said it would put the company to great inconvenience, and it would be a difficult matter to find a substitute. Mr Fordham said that was the concern of the management. He did not think this was a case in which a licence should be granted, and he refused the application.

THEATRICAL PATENTS.

The following abridged description is specially drawn for The Era by Messrs Hughes and Young, patent agents, 55 and 56, Chancery-lane, London, W.C., who will give advice and assistance free to our readers on all patent matters.

13,364. Theatrical appliances. Patentee, Lytton, E., 18, Fielding-road, Bedford-park, London.—Relates to theatrical apparatus described in Specification No. 24,261, A.D 1901, for raising and lowering stage scenery, cloths, &c. The ropes carrying the scenery are each wound on a drum mounted loosely on a shaft driven by an electric motor, and actuated through a clutch, controlled by an electro-magnet. A brake and pawl, engaging rachet-teeth on the drum, are also operated with the clutch by means of an inclined groove in a sliding rod. The motor is reversed from the stage. The clutch is brought out of gear by a spring or a second electro-magnet. In a modification, the clutch lever is mounted on a tubular shaft carring an arm, which, when the clutch is in gear, is held by a catch, but is automatically released by tappets on the screen engaging stops on cords attached to arms on the internal shaft. A cam thereby turns the catch and frees the lever. A pawl engaging the ratchet-teeth is also operated from the shaft by an arm. The annular space round the ram is connected to the main; so that when the valve, actuated by an electro-magnet, opens the rear end of the cylinder, the ram is forced in and allows the scenery to descend by gravity.

13,735. Caroussels, &c. Patentees, M'Cormick, J. J., and M'Daniel, L. H., both of 340, Seventh-avenue, Brooklyn, New York, U.S.A. In amusement apparatus such as merry-go-rounds, caroussels, or roundabouts, two shafts are adapted to be turned in opposite directions through the gear wheels. Double arms are secured to the upper ends of the shafts respectively. The upwardly-inclined branches of the arms carry cars for the accommodation of passengers. When the shafts are caused to rotate, either by turning the crank or by suitable power, the arms revolve in opposite directions and pass alternately over one another. In a modification the shafts may be so geared together that they will both turn in the same direction. The apparatus may be made for use as a toy, if desired.

21,385. Walbanoke Bruce Smith, Birkbeck Bank Chambers, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Improvements in or relating to stage scenery or the like.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

(SPECIAL TO THE ERA.)

MR E. TUPPER, who for many years has been master carpenter at the (Theatre Royal, Worthing, has, owing to change of proprietorship, retired from that position. The management and staff have given Mr Tupper several handsome presents.

MR C. SQUIRES, who is master carpenter at the Avenue Theatre is one of the most experienced stage machinists in London. He was at one time with Sir Henry Irving, and has toured many times in this and other countries.

MR F. LERSH, who has been appointed property master at the Avenue, was also formerly with Sir Henry Irving, and has acted in a similar capacity with several touring companies sent out from His Majesty's Theatre.

A MEETING of theatrical carpenters will be held on Sunday evening, at 8.30, in the Salisbury Tavern, St. Martin's-lane. All present and former members are urged to attend, to hear full particulars of the new benefits which are being created.

THE Stage Employees' and Musicians' Benevolent Funds Concert Committee has already secured the patronage of the Earl and Countess Carrington, Sir Henry Irving, the Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P.; Mr George Edwardes, Mr H. E. Moss, Mr Arthur Bourchier, Mr Frank Curzon, Mr W. S. Gilbert, Mr Alfred Mout, Mr Henry Arthur Jones, Mr J. Martin Harvey, Mr Tom B. Davis, and Mr Lewis Waller. The next meeting of the committee will be held on Tuesday, at 10 o'clock, at 29, Wellington-street, Strand.

THE friends of Mr R. Andrews, master carpenter at the Criterion Theatre, will regret to hear that he is seriously ill. Mr A. Palmer is acting for Mr Andrews.

MR W. MARTIN, formerly stage dayman at the Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, who was employed at the new theatre being built in Tottenham-court-road and met with an accident there last August, has now received compensation for the injuries he sustained from the insurance company on behalf of Messrs Lyon.

THE staff of the Tunbridge Wells Opera House, numbering nearly sixty, had their anniversary outing on Sunday at Hastings. Everyone appreciated the well thought out and liberal arrangements made by Mr F. Edgar Manaton, the popular acting-manager. Dinner was served at Ferraris' Restaurant. Mr Manaton occupied the chair, and was faced in the vice-chair by Mr W. I. Urquhart. After the loyal toasts, the chairman gave the health of Captain Welton Dale, the esteemed principal and sole lessee. General regret was expressed that Captain Welton Dale could not be with the party, and specially that the illness of Mrs Welton Dale was the cause of his absence. By the unanimous vote of the company the chairman sent a telegram of greeting to Captain Welton Dale, congratulating him on the second anniversary of the theatre and wishing him still greater success under his sole management. The heads of the various departments were duly toasted, including Mr Walker, the stage carpenter, and the health of Mr Manaton was proposed in a most eulogistic speech by Mr Urquhart and duly acknowledged. The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to a two hours' drive, and the party then returned to Ferraris' for high tea.

NOTICES and reports of meetings, &c., are invited from the various societies with which stage employees are connected.

"THE GEO. GROSSMITH BIRTHDAY BOOK" consists of a collection of apt quotations for every day in the year from the original works—musical and otherwise—of the well-known comedian and entertainer. How it came to be compiled is explained in the dedication:—"Dear Father,—The compiling of this little book has been a great pleasure to us. It has not only reminded us of your later sketches, but it has recalled the songs you composed and sang to us when we were children.—Your loving daughters, SYLVIA and CORDELIA." The quotations have evidently been selected with much care, and at the beginning of every month a portion of the score of some of Mr George Grossmith's most popular songs is given. The Birthday Book, which contains a recent portrait of Mr Grossmith, is published by the enterprising Mr J. W. Arrowsmith, of Bristol.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, OCT. 5.—Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who won high honours at the Metropolitan Opera House in Wagnerian rôles, began an engagement last Monday at the Broadway Theatre, appearing as Lina, in Love's Lottery, a comic opera, in two acts, constructed specially for her by Stanislaus Stange and Julian Edwards. The scenes are laid in the village of Deanswold, England, in the year 1818, during the reign of George III. The first act takes place in the courtyard of Lina's house, and the second in a secluded part of Deanswold Park. Lina is a German laundress. A scheming lawyer learns that she has drawn the capital prize in a lottery, and he plans to transfer to his own pocket her newly acquired wealth through the medium of a marriage ceremony. But Lina is in love with Sergeant Bob Trivet, and as he declares that he could never marry her if she were wealthy she exchanges tickets with him. The one with the winning number is alternately lost and found, the resulting complications involving three pairs of lovers. Mr Edwards has composed a brilliant and melodious score. The costumes were appropriately picturesque, and the chorus had been well trained. The opera was produced by Mr F. C. Whitney, and it scored a decided success.

MISS DELLA FOX is appearing at the Princess Theatre in a musical comedy called The West Point Cadet, adapted from the French by M. Norden, which has lots of fun and melody to compensate for a very shadowy story.

"HER MAD MARRIAGE," written by Frank Allen, and now on view at the American Theatre, gives the devotees of genuine melodrama all the excitement they crave for. The scenes are laid in New York, and the story deals with the efforts of Ralph Richmond, a dissolute actor, to gain possession of a stage-struck heiress named Josie Randall. Her father opposes the match and is seconded by Richard Lawson, who loves Josie. Richmond goes through a mock marriage with the heiress in a mill, incidentally trying to "fix" Lawson for good and all by tying him to the moving carriage of a band saw. This little job is spoiled by Scrapple, the office boy, who stops the motor by cutting the electric wires. Fearing that Josie's father knows too much, Richmond kills him in his office. So far the performance has been confined to the stage, but in the last act it overflows into the audience. The curtain rises on a bare stage on which a scene is quickly set for the opening act of East Lynne, Richmond having given the stage-struck girl a part in this play. She begins to suspect him, and he puts poison in a glass for her and drinks it himself by mistake. The curtain falls, and the stage-manager summons a physician from the audience. At the same time a detective who happens to be in one of the stage boxes takes steps to arrest Josie for murdering her husband. Richmond's accomplice in villainy, described as a "lady reporter," rises in another box and accuses the heroine, whose mother, supposed to be witnessing the performance of East Lynne from the stalls, jumps up and frantically cries for justice. The hero, Lawson, tries to save the heroine from arrest, but fails until his office boy, Scrapple, shouts from the gallery that he has proof that Richmond killed Josie's father, and slides down a rope to the stage with a flashlight photograph of the murder. Tableau. Curtain.

"MRS BLACK IS BACK," in which Miss May Irwin recently made her reappearance after two years' absence from the stage, is a farce of the kind known as "roaring." The plot is built on a lie, a little white lie, that rapidly assumes terrifying proportions, as complication after complication results from it. Mrs Black, whom Miss Irwin impersonates, is a widow who is fat, fair, and nearly forty. She marries a professor of geology in a New York university, and starts off by telling him that she is twenty-nine. This is a bad beginning, as she has a son at school in England who is nineteen, and she adds to her future troubles by telling the professor that her boy is ten. Of course the lad turns up, and the trouble begins, trouble for the son no less than the mother, for he is forced to assume various disguises. Her preoccupation in extricating Mrs Black from her troubles does not prevent Miss Irwin from singing several coon songs in her own pointed and inimitable way. Two that have hit the mark are called "Nothing but talk" and "'Taint no sense in lovin' that way."

MRS ESTELLE MORTIMER, who appeared with Mr Nat C. Goodwin as the pianist in the dance hall scene in The Cowboy and the Lady, died in Kansas City on the 28th ult., at the age of fifty-two. Mrs Mortimer was born in Philadelphia of English parents.

"MILT" G. BARLOW, who originated the character of "Old Black Joe" thirty-five years ago, and made the song popular during his long engagement with Haverly's Minstrels, died of cancer in the Home for Incurables, New York City, on the 27th ult., at the age of sixty-five.

THE HISTORY OF MUSIC.

At the Guildhall School of Music, on Wednesday afternoon, Dr. W. H. Cummings delivered the first of a series of four weekly lectures on "The History of Music." He dealt with music from the early musical productions of the Egyptians, at least 4,000 years before Christ, to the middle of the sixteenth century. The lecturer pointed out that there was little doubt that from the Egyptians the Hebrews learned all they knew of the art; the Egyptians extended and passed on to them a perfect scale of music and some harmony. The music transplanted from Greece to Rome became decadent and corrupted. For several centuries, during the persecution of the early Christians, there was no progress in regard to music; but in 314 or 320 A.D a school was established in Rome by Pope Sylvester for the education of choristers. After showing how the Gregorian music was derived from the Greeks, who had produced their own music, Dr. Cummings gave an interesting account of the introduction of organs into Spain about the year 450, and subsequently into Rome, France, England, and Germany. The subject of musical notation—neumes, used as indications of sound, notes, lines, and bars, and their gradual evolution—was touched upon, together with other matters of interest to the student of music and its history. Passing from the troubadors of the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries, who refused payment, playing for the sheer love they bore their art, and the minnesingers and meistersingers who succeeded them, Dr. Cummings dwelt on folk-music, and explained the origin of the old English song, "Sumer is icumen in." Following the improvements to the organ in later days, he gave an outline of the work of the early writers on music - Dufay, Jean De Muris (who was the author of the earliest known printed music book, dated 1473), and Dunstable. The compositions of Palestrina, Marbecke, and other musicians whose lives had an important bearing on their art were dealt with, and a comprehensive and instructive lecture also included a review of the early instruments and their capabilities.

* "GIVE ME ONE THOUGHT"
(a Pure, Simple Haunting Strain).
Written by Arthur Anderson, Music by John Neat.
Give me one thought whene'er the way seems lonely,
When dark clouds gather, gather round the sun,
What time you need one true companion only,
Contented I to be that one.
‡ "HANDS ACROSS THE SEA"
(a Song of Greater England),
by Byron Webber and Florian Pascal.
* "LAZULI,"

By Adrian Ross and Florian Pascal.
REFRAIN.
Oh, heigh oh! for thus and thus we go,
An ankle revealing half way to the ceiling,
And so, and so, and so!
Oh, heigh ho! for thus and thus we go,
With Johnnies and Tommies, and breaches of promise,
And so, and so, and so!

SHAKESPEARE AND CALIBAN.

The revival of The Tempest at His Majesty's Theatre has also revived old theories and imaginations as to the character of Caliban. There is nothing so easy as to apply imaginary conceptions to contemporary facts; and Mr STEAD, after his visit to His Majesty's, instinctively dropped into symbolism, and found parallels to Prospero and his island family in contemporary politics. It would have been just as easy to see an equivalent of Caliban in the Boer nation, and take Prospero as foreshadowing Lord MILNER, and Ariel as a combination of Lord ROBERTS, Lord KITCHENER, and the British Army. Caliban was undoubtedly in possession of the island when Prospero the "medicine man," arrived as an emigrant; so were the Boers. To put it mildly, he was somewhat rude and primitive in his ideas; so, admittedly, were the Boers. Prospero tried giving him personal independence, but he behaved so badly that his republican arrangements had to be extinguished; thus it was with the Boers. And Mr STEAD—who, of course, believes that eventually we shall be outnumbered by his friends in the Transvaal, and ejected from South Africa—may complacently complete the parallel by pointing to Prospero's exit from the isle after burning his books and breaking his rod. How explicit a prophet SHAKESPEARE was may be proved by Caliban's straightforwardly expressed intention to "people the isle with Calibans"—evidently a clairvoyant allusion to the extinction of the British from South Africa by the sheer force of multiplication of the Dutch.

The idea of SHAKESPEARE symbolising Democracy in the person of Caliban originated in a superficial view of the personage. Caliban, until Mr TREE took him up, had usually been played as a cross between a gorilla and a sabre-toothed tiger. SHAKESPEARE'S description gives no sound warranty to this reading. Caliban is a "savage and deformed slave." The word "savage" did not have in SHAKESPEARE'S time the significance which it possesses at present. It meant wild and sylvan, and the term had a suggestion of the faun in it. Yet EMERY'S Caliban, with its "occasional prowlings" and "grinning eagerness of malignity," was considered by the representative GENEST to be admirable. Analysed, Caliban is much nearer to a modern decadent Frenchman than he is to the chimpanzee or the Wild Man of the Woods. He is like the hero of GAUTIER'S "Mademoiselle de Maupin"—absolutely unmoral. Miranda's purity and beauty create in him no more reverence than the statues of the Virgin MARY did in that extremely frank and effeminate young gentleman. Yet Caliban is essentially poetical. He thinks in cadences, and music inspires him with most rapturous emotions. He is an aristocrat, "going strong" on his witch lineage, and his hereditary right to the island. No one who sees clearly can confuse Caliban with Democracy.

The other hypothesis—that SHAKESPEARE had the common herd in his eye when planning the play—is equally untenable. In SHAKESPEARE'S time, the "condition of the people question" did not exist. The treatment of the poor in the reigns of ELIZABETH and JAMES II. was indeed abominable The landgrabbers made it impossible for them to live by working; and the law-makers completed the circle by flogging, hanging, and branding them for being out of employment. But the JOHN BALL point of view was impossible to SHAKESPEARE, bred and born as he was. The greatest genius is the slave of his conditions SHAKESPEARE, outside of his gift for writing inspired plays, was simply a country gentleman of his period, with a country gentleman's ideas, prejudices, and limitations. For all his satire on Justice Shallow, his ideal existence was that of an intelligent Shallow—say that of Master Page in The Merry Wives of Windsor. He ridiculed the "dozen white luces" in Shallow's coat; but, as soon as he could, he applied for the immortal "Falcon, with his wings displayed, Argent, standing on a wreath of his colours, supporting a spear, gold; the motto 'Non Sans Droict,'" and all the rest of the arms which were granted by WILLIAM DETHICK GARTER to "WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, the renowned poet." He wrote scornfully about being "spacious in the possession of dirt;" but SHAKESPEARE was always on the look-out for an odd yard of land or so to be had cheap at Stratford-on-Avon. So entirely was his point of view that of the landed proprietor that he was on the unpopular side in the matter of "enclosing" the local commonlands. "The design," says HALLIWELL PHILLIPS, "was resisted by the Corporation, under the natural impression that if it were realised, both the number of agricultural employees and the value of the tithes would be seriously diminished. There is no doubt that this would have been the case. WILLIAM COMBE, who originated the movement, tormented the poor and coaxed the rich into acquiescence with his views. It appears most probable that SHAKESPEARE was one of the latter who were so influenced. However that may be, it is certain that the poet was in favour of the enclosures; for, on Dec. 23, the Corporation addressed a letter of remonstrance to him on the subject." When the common people are introduced into SHAKESPEARE'S plays they are always represented as stupid and ridiculous. But that was simply because they and their aspirations appeared stupid and ridiculous to SHAKESPEARE, as they did to other country gentlemen of his day. It is probable that he did not care much one way or the other about the enclosures above mentioned; but, feeling himself rather a parvenu in Stratford, he may have been seduced by the arguments of the long-established COMBE. To imagine SHAKESPEARE to have been a marvellous poet and dramatist and also a political philosopher centuries ahead of his time is to be excessively unreasonable.

"THE SHO-GUN."

A Corean Comic Opera, in Two Acts, by George Ade and Gustave Luders. Produced at Wallack's Theatre, New York, on Oct. 10.

(FROM OUR N&W YORK CORRESPONDENT.)

A year or two ago Mr George Ade's fame rested on his humorous Fables in Slang. Then he provided the American stage with fresh and delightful material in such plays as The Sultan of Sulu, The County Chairman, and quite recently The College Widow, and now his name attached to a play acts as a veritable magnet. In the work under notice Mr Ade has joined hands with Mr Luders, the composer of the music of The Prince of Pilsen and other popular operas. He calls his latest effort an "indirect treatise" on the worship of titles, the formation of trusts, the potency of the American "pull," the Yankee commercial invasion, and other subjects of timely interest. The central character of the story is an American promoter, William Henry Spangle, who has accumulated a fortune by the sale of chewing-gum. He was born in Iowa, made his money in Chicago, and polished off his education in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria. Spangle is anxious to break into society, and a handle to his name being indispensable, he starts on a tour of the world in search of a title. He reaches the island of Ka-Choo, in the Sea of Japan, and during the absence of the native ruler, the Sho-Gun, gets into trouble with local authorities through his disregard of their most sacred traditions. He is imprisoned in the Forbidden City, and in order to kill time begins an active commercial campaign, the Sho-Gun's officials being initiated into the latest and most approved American business methods. Spangle forms trusts, dips into the Royal treasury to form imaginary companies, and plays high jinks generally by way of introducing American civilisation into the behind-the-age kingdom. One of his stock companies makes a pool in ancestors, "preferred and common, with libraries thrown in." A trust, he explains, is "a large body of money entirely surrounded by water."

Spangle's crowning piece of audacity takes the form of a flirtation with Omee-Omi, the widow of a departed Sho-Gun, and for this he is condemned to be beheaded. But none of the executioners will raise a hand to put him out of the way, as the American has "unionized" the beheading industry, and is their walking delegate. The Sho-Gun appeals to the Royal Guard, but they have gone on strike, demanding an eight-hour day. The Sho-Gun then determines to do the job himself, but finds there is an order against a non-union man performing the work of the executioners. So Spangle is not beheaded, but a compromise is effected. There being no money left in the treasury, the Sho-Gun issues bonds. Spangle buys them all up, and takes as security a first-class title guaranteed to stand wear and tear in American society. Armed with this, and accompanied by the widow, the American sails for home, his parting reflection being that he never could be downed "with a lawyer, a bank account, and a 'pull.'"

The piece is mounted in two gorgeous scenes, the first act being laid in the ancestral Temple of Ka-Choo, and the second in the Wistaria-gardens of the Forbidden City. The Oriental atmosphere is well maintained, and Mr Henry W. Savage has credited himself with another very handsome production. Mr Ade's book is full of the quick sort of wit that American audiences enjoy, the worship of titles and the enterprising tactics of the Yankee trader being satirised in nearly every line. The music is pretty, and there are no end of songs and dances. Mr Charles E. Evans made a decided hit as William Henry Spangle, and others who rendered good service in important rôles were Mr Edward B. Martindell, Mr David Torrence, Miss Georgia Caine, Miss Christie MacDonald, and Miss Carrie Perkins. The Sho-Gun is booked for a long stay at Wallack's Theatre.

MR LEONARD RAYNE has secured the South African rights of Mr George Rollit's amusing farce The Money Makers, originally produced at the Royalty, and now on tour in the suburbs.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"L'EMBARQUEMENT POUR CYTHERE,"
Comedy, in Four Acts, in Verse, by M. E. Veyrie, Produced at the Bouffes-Parisiens, Oct. 13.

Le Chevalier	M. HENRY KRAUSS
Le Président Hénault	M. ARMAND BOUR
Le Prince De Rohan	M. RIVERS
Frontin	M. PAUL VILLE
Le Duc De Nivernais	M. COLIN
Le Baron Grimm	M. SCHOEFFER
Pomponnette	Mdlle. LEONIE YAHNE
Lise	Mdlle. BERTILE LEBLANC

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, OCT. 20.—It has rained premières this week, and more novelties are still to be brought this week. The Bouffes-Parisiens, under Mr Bour's able management, opened the ball with a delightful work, written in excellent verse and staged in a manner which reflects the highest credit on the artistic taste of the management. The pretty story plays under the reign of Louis XV. The little Marquise De Clvrac, called Pomponnette, has a protector in the person of Monsieur le Président Hénault. Pomponnette is a sweet little creature, and, like a dainty doll, moves among the princes, the dukes, and the barons who worship her. But Pomponnette's health is as frail as her morals. The dinners, the fêtes are undermining her constitution, and she wants to consult a medical man. A doctor is announced. It is the young and handsome Chevalier Florestan, who happens to be Hénault's nephew. For the first time Pomponnette learns what love is; but, alas, the lesson comes too late. She dies in the arms of Florestan. The autumn leaves are beginning to fall; she will never see spring. These four acts, of a delicate and refined taste, were loudly and deservedly applauded. Mdlle. Yahne was the exquisite heroine in this poetic tale; M. Bour supplied a decidedly clever sketch of Monsieur le President; but M. Krauss was a somewhat too heavy Florestan.

"DISCIPLINE,"
Play in Two Acts, by MM. De Conrieg and Jean Thorel, produced at the Théâtre Antoine, Oct. 13.

Commandant De Besser	M. CHELLES
Colonel De Ruch	M. SIGNORET
Commandant Marck	M. DESPONTAINES
Lieutenant De Boeen	M. MOSNIER
Lieutenant De Warth	M. VARGAS
Commandant De Glocke	M. SAVERNS

The work, of German origin, created a deep impression. In a German garrison town, a young lieutenant is to be expelled the army for having played cards in a beer-house. The Commandant De Besser having interceded for him with the colonel, an austere man, the latter avenges himself on De Besser by getting him transferred to a post where he will not be able to take an active part in the war which has just been declared. De Besser, smarting under this insult, has an explanation with his colonel, and finally insults him. De Besser knows that his military career has come to an end. He earnestly implores his subordinates who want to assist him in his trouble with the colonel not to follow his example, and always to respect discipline. Then he withdraws. A shot is heard; De Besser has blown his brains out. These two acts, full of emotion and intensely human, were excellently interpreted by those two splendid actors MM. Chelles and Signoret.

"ASILE DE NUIT," by M. Max Maurey, is a one-act humorous trifle. A wretchedly-clad tramp applies for shelter in a night refuge, where the official in charge adopts towards him the usual bullying tone. All at once, however, the official becomes all honey, and the bewildered tramp is overwhelmed with attentions. What has occurred? The official thinks the man is a journalist in disguise in search of "disclosures," and he is afraid to run any risks.

"LA MAIN DU SINGE," the French adaptation of MM. Parker and Jacobs's The Monkey's Paw, also met with an excellent reception, although to a Paris audience this kind of play is somewhat disconcerting. M. Nunes's adaptation, however, is excellent, and M. Antoine found in old White a rôle that suited him to the ground.

"LA DESERTEUSE,"
Comedy, in Four Acts, by MM. Brieux and Jean Sigaux, Produced at the Odéon, Oct. 15.

Forjot	M. GEMIER
Le père Noble	M. ALBERT LAMBERT
Rametty	M. MARIE DE L'ISLE
Sabarrot	M. DARRAS
Le Maître	M. CAZALIS
Gabrielle Forjot	Mdlle. MARIE MARCILLY
Pascaline	Mdlle. SYLVIE
Hélène	Mdlle. JEANNE EVEN
Marion	Mdlle. DEHON
Madame Crinoné	Madame CARLIER

M. Brieux has given us a real comedy and not a problem play with a point of interrogation at the end. The work, therefore, came upon us something like a surprise, and was listened to from beginning to end with undisguised pleasure. Madame Forjot is the wife of a music publisher in Nantes. She is the mistress of Rametty, a theatrical manager, and has no thought for her husband or her thirteen-year-old daughter, Pascaline. The long-suffering Forjot then divorces her and marries Hélène, the young governess who has had charge of Pascaline's education. Gentle and kind-hearted, Hélène is a real mother to her step-child. Four years elapse, and we find Forjot established in Paris. The first Madame Forjot also inhabits the capital, where she has founded a musical agency. She has had the desire to see Pascaline, who, the moment she came into touch with her mother, has taken a violent dislike to Hélène. Pascaline wants to go to her mother, and Hélène is ready to sacrifice herself for the girl's happiness, but Forjot intervenes, and has a violent interview with his former wife, wherein he tries to make her understand how wrongly she is acting towards her daughter. His efforts are fruitless; the divorced woman will not listen to reason, and Pascaline will have to choose between her father and her mother. The girl hesitates, for she does not know the real cause of her mother's divorce. And the first Madame Forjot then discovers that Hélène has been truly magnanimous, and has never told Pascaline of her mother's misdeeds. Hélène, therefore, is worthy to be Pascaline's mother, and the divorced woman, "La Déserteuse," will disappear for ever. Mdlle. Sylvie was quite unequal to imparting any sympathy or conviction to the unpleasant rôle of Pascaline, though she wept with profusion. Marcilly, as the "Déserteuse," played with force; Gemier acted with his accustomed mannerisms as Forjot. His part is so artificial that all honour is due to him for making it as sympathetic as he did. Mdlle. Even made a distinct impression as Hélène, and was recalled again and again. The gem of the performance was Lambert's sketch of the old broken-down actor. It was but a "silhouette," but it touched the audience deeply.

"MONSIEUR POLICHINELLE."
Spectacular Play, in Four Acts and Twenty-two Tableaux, by MM. Louis Decori and Victor Dorlay, Produced at the Chatelet on Oct. 16.

Pickwick	M. PAUL FUGERE
Paul Bertin	M. POUGAUD
Nina Saïb	M. JEAN DARAGON
Morton, Wickson	M. ETIEVANT
Hamilton	M. LOUIS TESTE
Kalogami	M. GARAY
Maggy	Mdlle. LEONIE DALLET
Lucy	Mdlle. MAUD AMY
Raya	Mdlle. REINALDY
Kitty	Mdlle. FEUGERE

It would be too large an order to describe in detail the plot of a piece comprising no less than twenty-two tableaux. Sufficient to say that Paul Bertin, the hero, is a youth nicknamed Monsieur Polichinelle, on account of his idle and loafing propensities. His father having threatened to disinherit him unless he turns over a new leaf, Paul starts on a life of adventures. Disguised as a girl, he engages himself as lady's maid to a rich American girl, whereupon the fun begins. Fun is perhaps a misnomer, for the authors have created a few dramatic situations, wherein pocket-handkerchiefs come in request. But the sadness is blended with laughter, and everybody is happy, including Paul, who in the end marries the fascinating American. The work is capitally staged, especially the tableau of the Derby Racecourse, where we have the pleasure of beholding the Prince of Wales in a carriage and pair, preceded by eight Horse Guards. Then there is "The Triumph of Shiva" and a grand ballet, with a bevy of pretty girls. The work was capitally acted by M. Pougaud, the young "Polichinelle;" by M. Paul Fugère, always funny, even when in tears; and by Mdlles. Leonie Dallet and Maud Amy.

"LEUR GOURME."
Play, in Four Acts, by M. Maurice Landay, Produced at the Théâtre Molière, Oct. 18.

Trembes	M. CAMIS
Lardens	M. CASTELLI
Henri Lardens	M. BERTHEZ
Rabert	M. RAITER
Madeleine Ramon	Mdlle. HELENE GONDY
Henriette	Mdlle. CLAUDE RITTER
Madame Ordinot	Mdlle. PETIT
Madame Leontine	Madame R. LAUNAY

MM. Clot and Dublay, the new managers of the Théâtre Molière—formerly known as the Bouffes-du-Nord—have inaugurated their tenure of office with a curious work dealing with the unsatisfactory clauses in French law which do not allow a girl to claim redress from the man who seduced her. Henri Lardens and his father, a deputy, are the types of the philistine, bourgeois according to whose grotesque and hypocritical code of morality any intercourse with a demi-mondaine is immoral, whilst it tolerates a secret liaison with a poor workgirl, as a rule too timid, too much lacking in energy to "raise trouble" if her protector deserts her. Henri puts these beautiful theories into practice, and when his little friend Madeleine, whom he seduced, informs him that she soon will become a mother, Henri, not wishing to be "bothered," leaves her to look after herself. Four months elapse, and Madeleine's child is born. Sick and hungry, unable to find work, the wretched girl calls on Lardens, senior, to implore his assistance. The father sends for Henri, and the latter, face to face with his victim, has the audacity of denying his guilt. "The woman is mad," he says, "give her a few sovereigns and let her clear out." And Madeline, exasperated with indignation and grief, seizes a revolver lying on the table and sends a bullet into the heart of the callous villain who ruined her life. The company, although not a first-class one, worked well together, and acquitted themselves creditably of their task.

I WILL not waste any words on the revival of Pitchounette at the Opera-Bouffe. It was a pitiful performance.

M. BRIEUX, a most prolific writer, is busy on no less than four plays—La Foi, which he will read next week to M. Antoine; Les Amoureux, a problem play; Les Rois de France, wherein Froquet is the hero; Papa Courtage, a philo-Semitic work already produced at the Théâtre Libre, but wherein M. Brieux alters the second act.

M. ANTOINE has also received a piece by M. Pierre Veber, and has accepted Papa, a comedy, by Edmond Sée.

A MODERN LEGIONARY.

By JOHN PATRICK LE POER.
Methuen and Co., 36, Essex-street, W.C.

In this volume Mr Le Poer gives an extremely interesting account of his adventures as a young soldier, who at the age of sixteen enlists in the French army. The age limit is eighteen, and accordingly the Irish lad, who had run away from his native land to seek his fortune in a foreign country, had to put on two years when he underwent the usual examination of the doctor.

"He still gazed at me in doubt, but I met his gaze steadily. Suddenly a door opened—not the one through which I had come—and a short, stout, bustling man, dressed in blue coat and red trousers, with a gold-laced cap on his head, came in and, glancing carelessly at me, shook hands warmly with the doctor. In the conversation which ensued it was apparent by their glances and gestures that I had more than my share of their attention. Finally they approached, and the short man asked me my age. I replied as before. Turning sharp round he said with a merry smile, which ended in a short, quick laugh:

"'Oh, my friend, he is eighteen; he says so, and who knows better? Would you destroy the enthusiasm of a volunteer by doubting his word? My fine fellow'—this to me—'you will be eighteen before you leave us.'

"That settled it. I was accepted, sent away to dress, and, as I had said to the sergeant, before noon I was a sworn member of the Foreign Legion, sworn in for five years."

The young soldier and the other recruits, numbering about thirty, were despatched to Algeria, under the orders of a sergeant and two corporals. At Saida a sensational incident occurred, of which the writer furnishes a graphic description. As he spoke English his comrades all agreed he must be an Englishman, and the Englishman, he says, is well hated abroad. Consequently, on the drill ground and in the barrack room he was continually addressed by the expressive sobriquet of "English pig," and he made up his mind that, at least from his equals in rank, such an insult was not to be endured. "There was a big Alsatian in my squad who was most persistent in insulting me, though I had often tried to explain to him that I was neither a pig nor an Englishman. With him, therefore, I resolved to deal, confident that, if I could put a stop to his insolence, the rest would be quiet enough. I determined, as he was my superior in age, strength, weight, and length of arm, that it would be only right to take him unawares and, if possible, finish the business before he could quite understand what I was about. For three or four days after settling this matter in my mind I got no opportunity such as I wished for. Seeing me take the nickname quietly, for I no longer even remonstrated with him, the Alsatian went further than before and raised my anger to boiling point. At last the chance came. As I entered the room one afternoon I noticed lying near the door a rather large billet of wood. The corporal was out, so were most of the men, and those who remained, five or six in number, were lazily lounging in various attitudes about the room. I put aside rifle, belt, and bayonet, for I had just come in from a punishment parade—that is, an extra parade ordered to men for some slight irregularity—and looked straight at the big brute, as if to challenge him.

"'Ah, my fine fellow, how do English pigs like punishment parades in this weather?' he began.

"'As well,' I answered, picking up carelessly, as it were, the billet, 'as Alsatian dogs like this.' And I brought the heavy block down upon his head with all my strength. The cap, though utterly destroyed, saved his head, but still he was so stupefied by the sudden assault and by the force of the blow that I had time to strike him again and again. The others jumped up quickly and seized me, crying out that the Alsatian was dead. And, indeed, he looked as if he were dead, for his head was covered with blood, and one almost imagined that his brains would protrude through the wounds. However, after some time he came to himself again, and truly no one was better pleased than I, for as I cooled down I began to be fearful of consequences."

As a punishment the Alsatian's assailant was ordered extra drills, extra fatigues, and to remain in barracks for a fortnight. As a picture of a soldier's life in a foreign land Mr Le Poer's book is full of interest. His adventures as a "modern legionary" are graphically described, and there is not a dull page from beginning to end.

LICENSING AT WEST HAM.

A special meeting of the West Ham Town Council was held last Tuesday night to deal with some adjourned applications for renewals of licences for music and dancing and stage plays. The Mayor (Councillor G. A. M'Dowell) presided.

THE ROYAL ALBERT MUSIC HALL.

In this case the requirements of the council were (1) that the gallery be licensed to hold not more than 560 persons and the upper circle not more than 540 persons; (2) that a fire-resisting asbestos screen be fitted covering the proscenium opening, which screen shall be lowered and raised once during each performance; (3) that the screen be provided within twelve months; (4) that matters of detail in connection with doors, staircases, &c., and all other alterations and works required, be carried out to the satisfaction of the borough engineer forthwith.

Mr Charles Relf said that the requirements might not appear serious to the councillors, but he would assure them they were serious to him. In the first place he submitted that at his hall there was no necessity whatever for such a screen. He had no performances of any sort where flimsy scenery or dresses were used, and as all the scenes rolled up to the ceiling, and were, moreover, practically fireproof, they were in no danger. On either side of the stage there was a pilot light in case the electric light failed; and no music hall in London had a stage which gave better access to the street than his. He had to complain of the reduction of the accommodation and as to the points with reference to exits. He could clear the place in from two to two and a-half minutes. He had kept the house for twenty-five years, and had never had the slightest hitch in getting the people out. He would ask the Council to relieve him of the responsibilities demanded, and if that night they could not reconsider his case he would ask that they adjourn the matter. He would prefer to be tried, if he was to be tried, by the whole Council rather than by the sub-committee of four who visited the house and made recommendations.

The Mayor announced that the Council had decided that the licence be renewed subject to the carrying out of the recommendations of the Council.

STRATFORD BOROUGH THEATRE.

In this case the Council required, in addition to the fire-resisting screen, and the carrying out of details to the satisfaction of the borough engineer, (1) that a 3ft. gangway be formed through the centre of the pit; (2) that the centre chair be removed from the front four rows of the stalls to form a gangway; (3) that no part of the premises be sublet, and that the paint-rooms and workshops be only used for such work as may be required for the theatre; and (4) that the gallery be licensed to hold not more than 800.

Mr Fred Fredericks, general manager of the theatre, said that Mr Relf had said all really that could be said on the general question. He agreed with the proposal that a fire-resisting screen be provided, and that would be in position very shortly. The house could be cleared in from one to three minutes. There were exits, all over the place—on to three streets were nine exits, four of them being from the pit. He did not approve of the gangways, and he felt they were unnecessary, and that the demand for them and the restriction as to the gallery put the accommodation at two-thirds of what the place would hold.

The Mayor said that the licence would be renewed, and that the clause as to sub-letting and the use of the paint-room be altered to read, "During the time play is in progress the paint-rooms shall not be used."

Mr Fred Fredericks—What difference does that make?

The Mayor—We can't discuss it now.

STRATFORD THEATRE ROYAL.

The Council's demands here merely related to details and the fire-resisting screen, and Mr Fred Fredericks, the general manager, said there were no objections to any of the requirements. The screen would be soon provided.

The borough engineer (Mr J. G. Morley) read a letter from a resident of Leyton complaining that there were no firemen there, nor anyone who knew anything about fire appliances.

Mr Fred Fredericks—We have a man there, but he is not put in uniform to strut up and down to frighten people.

The Mayor said the licence here would be renewed with the removal of the prohibition as to sub-letting of the paint room, and the substitution of "During the time the play is in progress the paint room shall not be used."

THE STRATFORD EMPIRE.

The only point beyond trifling details as to writings over exits, required in connection with the Stratford Empire was that all exits from the gallery and upper circle be left available for use by the first house as well as by the second.

Mr C. H. Rundell, for Mr Oswald Stoll, managing-director of Moss's Empire (Limited), said that the management of the Empire was anxious not only that proper comfort should be provided for the public, but that everything be done for their safety. The hall was built six years ago under the superintendence of the council; it was built on the most modern lines, on the lines on which new theatres were now being built. There were thirteen or fourteen exits, and only one of them could not be used by the first house. This fact was due to a concern for the public convenience; people going into the second house were allowed to stand there, and in cases of inclement weather that was regarded as a convenience. As to the matter of safety, the mere fact that the whole house could be emptied in a minute and a half spoke for itself. The people that were standing naturally would get out first.

In reply to a councillor, Mr Rundell said the minute and a half applied to the first house; it would be less in the second house.

The Mayor said that in this case the licence would be renewed, and the Council had deleted the clause relating to the gallery and upper circle exits entirely. The Council thought it highly undesirable to have any over-crowding in any way, and trusted that the management would take note of it.

PROHIBITION OF LIQUORS.

The Council announced their decision after sitting in camera, and at the close of the sitting the Mayor said all the licences were granted subject to a prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors on the premises.

IN the Court of Bankruptcy on Tuesday, the public examination was heard and closed of Lawrence Hasluck, of 17, Holborn-viaduct, E.C., formerly a Fellow of the Institute of Accountants, but who states that he has resigned his membership of that institute. The debtor has since been acting as the business-manager of the Carl Rosa Opera Company. He has been adjudged bankrupt, and his statement of affairs shows liabilities amounting to £30,724 16s. 4d., of which £28 425 12s. 6d. are expected to rank, and assets £583 12s. 8d. The debtor states that at Aug. 20, 1903, he was deficient to the extent of £25,563 16s. 7d. His business as an accountant was a good one, and his present position was due to his financing outside concerns—in particular, the Belgrave Hotels Company, Limited.

AT the usual weekly meeting of the council of the Actors' Association, held last Tuesday, Frances Waring and Frances H. Sykes were nominated as candidates for election as members. The honorary solicitors reported having advised several members, and were requested to advise others on points submitted, and also to lay a case before counsel to advise as to a claim for damages. The secretary received instructions in connection with unpaid subscriptions. The secretary reported the result of a trial in connection with bogus management.

MUSIC HALL GOSSIP.

The misunderstanding that existed between Mr Dan Leno and Miss Maggie Duggan has now, we are delighted to say, been most amicably arranged by Mr Hugh Astley. Mr Leno has sent Miss Duggan the following apology:—"I hereby express my regret that anything in my conduct towards you on Thursday, the 13th, should have caused you any annoyance. I apologise to you, therefore, and undertake that I will never speak to you again unless spoken to by you.—Dan Leno. Witness, Hugh Astley."

We are given to understand that Mrs Morton, the widow of Mr Charles Morton, has been very inadequately provided for, and that therefore the directors of the Palace Theatre, having already made arrangements for the matinée performance as a farewell testimonial to the late Mr Charles Morton, have decided that the organisation of the matinée shall be proceeded with, and the receipts handed over to Mrs Morton as a tribute of the esteem in which her late husband was held by the public, the profession, and themselves. The matinée will take place on Tuesday, Nov. 8, and already many leading artistes have promised their kind assistance. Further particulars will shortly be announced.

The directors of the Palace have decided to appoint Mr Alfred Butt manager of the popular variety theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue in place of the lamented Mr Charles Morton. Mr Butt, who joined the staff of the Palace five years since as secretary, afterwards became assistant-manager in succession to Mr George Manners, and now formally takes up the duties which in reality he has been performing for quite six months. Shortly before his death Mr Morton stated in a letter he wrote to Mr Butt, "I should have no hesitation in appointing you my successor." Mr Butt was educated at Westminster School, and began life as a chartered accountant. It was in the ordinary course of his business that he met one of the Palace directors, and an engagement as secretary to that house was the result.

A permanent record of the life work of Mr Charles Morton will be found in a comprehensive volume which will be issued shortly by Messrs Gale and Polden under the title of "The Father of the Halls," in which Mr W. H. Morton and Mr H. Chance Newton trace the history of the late manager of the Palace from its start to its finish. The book will contain all sorts of interesting details, dating from 1819 up to the present moment. It is also to be furnished with numerous plates and portraits.

The London Hippodrome is again seeking at the hands of the Licensing Committee a permit to sell intoxicating liquors, a privilege enjoyed by the Alhambra and Empire; and Mr T. Ernest Polden, on behalf of the Palace Theatre directorate, is asking for a removal of the restrictions as to the sale of intoxicating liquors in the auditorium. In reference to these matters the Watch Committee of the Westminster Council have decided that "it is undesirable that the existing restrictions should be removed." The London County Council will be notified to this effect.

We have several excellent vocalists on the variety stage who hail from Australia. Miss Ada Colley is one; Mr Hamilton Hill another; and now a third is appearing at the Alhambra in the person of Miss Violet Elliott, who is somewhat embarrassed at being described as the "lady bass." Miss Elliott is really a deep contralto, with a phenomenal lower range, and can get down to lower D in Loder's song "The Diver," which she has been singing during the week. She is also capable of reaching the high G sharp of the mezzo-soprano. The young vocalist considers that she owes much of her vocal excellence to the healthy outdoor life she led in her native country.

The tower of the London Coliseum which rears its head in St. Martin's-lane is now visible to passers-by, and has been an object of much interest to wayfarers during the last week. It is an architectural feature that does immense credit to Mr Frank Matcham, whose genius for theatre design is everywhere apparent in London's latest and most up-to-date entertainment house, which is to be opened on Dec. 19. The stage will measure from floor to gridiron 70ft., the lofty space affording an immense area for the hanging of scenery, which will be shifted by specially devised mechanical arrangements. The proscenium opening is 55ft. wide.

Three revolving floors—the outer one 70ft. in diameter—will occupy the centre of the Coliseum stage. These can either be turned independently of each other, or, locked together, made to shift scenery out of sight, or to a position where it can be seen by the audience in a few seconds. Every facility that modern science can boast of in stagecraft will be utilised in the spectacular shows which will be one of the staple features of Mr Stoll's programmes. An orchestra, led by Mr Walter Slaughter, and a permanent chorus of fifty voices, who will sing in a special balcony, will form part of the musical scheme which Mr Stoll and his lieutenant, Mr Marshall Moore, are now perfecting. The Coliseum will seat 4,000 people, and four performances are to be given every day.

The new Britannia on the 31st inst. reverts to the dramatic lines, on which the old house made such good returns for the late Mrs Sara Lane. Mr Sydney Hyman is the new lessee, and Mr John M. East, who for so long stage-managed at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, will be the new manager. He will make an excellent commencement with The Flood Tide, Mr Cecil Raleigh's melo-farce, which was the last autumn attraction at Old Drury. The theatre will return to the one-house-a-night system.

Mr Harry Lauder, the Scottish comedian, who has been entertaining at Manchester and other places in the north, returns to the Oxford on Monday, when the M'Naughtons and Miss Alice Lloyd will also revisit the scenes of their former triumphs.

Whilst so much is being written and said regarding the decadence of the modern playhouse, one can hardly fail to note the elevating tendency of the institutions devoted to the lighter side of the people's amusement. Not a few of the "turns" at the modern music halls, for instance, consist of scientific demonstrations that in the old days would have found a home at the Polytechnic, wherein Mr George Grossmith made one of his earliest appearances. It seems strange that we should have to welcome at a popular place of amusement like the London Hippodrome a private demonstration of entirely new discoveries with regard to the application of liquid air by the learned Dr. Maxim Boyd; but such is the fact, and Wednesday afternoon the effects produced were indeed remarkable.

In one experiment Dr Boyd immersed a test-tube full of paraffin oil in a larger tube containing liquid air. The oil quickly solidified, and burnt well on being lighted. Another remarkable effect was produced by passing liquid air under a steam jet, when the instant condensation of the vapour caused the steam to fall to the ground in the form of snow. One of the newest experiments, however, was to have been the burning of steel on ice. This was omitted in consequence of an accident. The vacuum vessel, having been taken to too warm a spot, suddenly exploded, and the liquid air, falling to the carpet, disappeared. Dr. Boyd expressed regret at this unforeseen circumstance, and said he was willing to demonstrate in his laboratory some further uses of liquid air.

The Stratford Empire licence was renewed as formerly, with no restrictions whatever, at the Stratford Town Council's licensing meeting on Tuesday last, and the statement which appeared in a contemporary that the Council would require several important alterations to be made had no foundation.

In 1892, the Empire, Brighton, rose upon the site of the hall popularly known as Botham's, though it was really called the Oxford. This establishment had been carried on for some years by the Botham family, and descended from father to sons. The new Empire was carried on with varying success until it fell upon evil days, and has been closed for some considerable time. An attempt to revive its fortunes is, however, to be made, and it has undergone a complete overhauling, which has included an installation of the electric-light, reupholstering, and redecoration.

It is to be opened on Monday next with three performances. A first-class saloon carriage will leave Victoria at 11·40 to convey special artistes who have kindly consented to appear at the flying matinée which will be given under the patronage and in the presence of the Mayor and Mayoress of Brighton (Alderman and Mrs E. M. Marx), the ex-Mayor (Alderman Buckwell), Sir John and Lady Blaker, Mr and Mrs T. P. O'Connor, Mr and Mrs Sutton Vane, and other distinguished local residents. There will be two entertainments on Monday evening, the house being conducted on the bi-nightly system.

Mr Charlis A. Wilkes, formerly connected with the Cambridge, and well known in association with the Tivoli, Manchester, is the licensee and director of entertainments, and his son, Mr C. Smith Wilkes, has resigned his position at the Victoria Theatre, Broughton, to take up the management. We wish the enterprise every success.

After having been closed for some twelve months, the Britannia in the Trongate, Glasgow, has been reopened this week under new management. The interior has been beautifully painted and decorated, and presented quite an artistic appearance. An admirable programme was presented to the patrons, and the various items were received with the utmost enthusiasm. It may be added that there is only one house each night. The new lessee is Mr James Anderson, and the manager is Mr George Saphrini. Mr William Milne, whose name is inseparably associated with the Britannia, is musical director.

Councillor Alf Mattison, of Middlesbrough, has been elected to the board of directors of the Middlesbrough Empire, Limited, of which company Mr John Brill is the managing-director. Mr Mattison's inclusion in the directorate has given much satisfaction to the Teesside shareholders in the undertaking.

At the Norwich Guildhall Police-court, on Tuesday, before Messrs F. O. Taylor and other magistrates, Mr Edmund Reeve (Mills and Reeve) made application on behalf of Messrs Bostock and Fitt, proprietors of the Norwich Hippodrome, for a theatrical licence and a music, singing, and dancing licence for the new Hippodrome, at present known as the Grand Opera House, in St. Giles's. The application was granted.

Mr Charles Davies, who has held the post of stage-manager at the Palace, Manchester, for the past seven years, terminates his engagement on Saturday next, when the Palace changes to two shows a night under Mr Tom Barrasford's direction. He is now booking Wal Pink's new sketch, The Snake, the latest thing in "creeps," which was produced at the Middlesex by Miss Geraldine Montrose, and duly noticed in our columns at the time. The sketch "bottoms" the bill at the Palace, Manchester, next week, so provincial managers will have a chance to see and book the same.

Miss Edna Cragge, who is busy "working out" some Parisian ideas for pantomime, opens a special week on Monday at Ton-y-Pandy and Pentre, after finishing a most brilliant week at the South London.

The Salambos arrived at Melbourne, after their voyage from the Cape, on Aug. 25, and opened at the Opera House on the 27th. They have been playing to absolutely packed houses, and their electric act has caught on unmistakably, causing a lot of speculation among scientists. Historicus (little Elie Salambo) is also exciting much interest by her wonderful memory feats, and is the recipient of many presents at each performance.

Little Zola writes to say that his little girl has now been taken from the ward and placed in a private department, where she is watched day and night. She is still very bad.

Lynn, the original singing newsboy, has been granted the rights of the late Bessie Bonehill's celebrated "Playmates," which he will produce with full effects shortly.

The Brothers Edgar write from 77, Kennington-road, under date Oct. 21:—"Kindly permit us through your columns to thank those artists who so kindly contributed through us to the late Abe Holt. We trust they will be gratified to know that their kindly aid helped to smooth the poor fellow's last days and prevented him from dying in the workhouse. We are requesting the M.H.B.F. to give the usual burial fees, and have every confidence it will be paid by that excellent institution, and we are endeavouring to obtain a little for the immediate needs of his wife, who is left destitute. The following amounts have already been subscribed:—Leo Dryden, £1 1s.; W. H. Clemart, 5s.; H. Griff, 5s.; and Ted Missouri, 2s. 6d. Any further sums may be sent to us at the above address, and will be gratefully received and acknowledged."

Mr C. Melvin's farewell benefit at the Hippodrome, Sheerness, on Friday, Oct. 14, drew a large attendance. The compliment to Mr Melvin was initiated by Mr Transfield, who thus showed his interest in the welfare of the departing manager, who will be shortly taking up his new duties as the manager of the New Coliseum, Sheerness. Mr Melvin, in the course of the evening, thanked the audience for the way in which they had turned up, and hoped that he would still continue to receive their support when he opened the New Coliseum as a variety hall. Mr Transfield then stepped into the arena and handed his manager a substantial cheque as a token of respect and reward for his past services. Mr Transfield also presented Mr Melvin with a solid gold-mounted umbrella, suitably inscribed, and wished him every success in his new undertaking. The extra turns of the evening consisted of The Brewsters, who kindly gave their services; as also did Mr P. Barnes, baritone vocalist and Mr Williams, solo whistler.

A lady correspondent writes:—"I wish I could go into further details of the performance [at a Paris music hall], but the stage was entirely hidden from me by a trio of women who had adorned themselves with headgear vastly resembling umbrellas. They were two rows in front of me, and I counted five different sets of people take their seats, sit down, gaze in amazement at the prodigality of hat, then leave their places and demand other accommodation. It is a matter of serious complaint in Parisian theatres that ladies invariably choose their most exaggerated hats for theatre. They have not the courtesy of their English neighbours or American cousins, who will always remove a hat which obstructs the view, but here in Paris, in the land of politeness, the men keep on their top hats and refuse to remove them even when courteously asked to do so by ladies sitting behind them."

At Marlborough-street Police-court, on Wednesday, Mr P. J. Rutland, solicitor to the London Entertainments Association, accompanied by Mr Albert Gilmer, manager of the Oxford Music Hall, gave formal notice of appeal against the recent decision of Mr Kennedy, with a fine of £120, against that hall, for having produced an alleged stage play, The Belle of the Orient.

A meeting of the members of the Sketch Artistes Association was held yesterday afternoon at the Hummums Hotel, Covent-garden, to discuss the recent prosecutions for the production of sketches at music halls. As a summons has been issued against the management of the Metropolitan for the production of The Fighting Parson, it was decided to communicate with Mr George Edwardes, as a member of the Theatrical Managers' Association, pointing out that in the recent case of Gray v. Edwardes over the production of High Jinks at the Empire, the summonses were adjourned sine die on the implied understanding that there were to be no further prosecutions. Regarding this as a breach of faith, the Sketch Artistes' Association propose to reopen the case against the Empire management, but, before applying for a date to be fixed, determine to request an explanation from Mr George Edwardes as to the action of the Theatrical Managers' Association.

Mr John Hollingshead was the first theatrical manager to set the example of engaging music-hall turns for the theatre. At the Gaiety, in 1871, he introduced the celebrated Dancing Quakers into the burlesque of Ali Baba, and in the cave scene Mr J. L. Toole and Miss Nellie Farren were silent spectators of the very fine corybantic doings of the clever Ryley and Barnum. Mr Toole was then the Ali Baba and Miss Farren the Ganem. Constance Loseby, who made her debut on the variety stage, was also a valued recruit, whose talents were conspicuously displayed in opera, opera-comique, and burlesque in the old Gaiety days. She remained at the Gaiety for six years, and played the part of Nicenis in the original production of Thespis; or, The Gods Grown Old, in which the Gilbert-Sullivan collaboration first proclaimed to the public the happiness of the partnership.

Mr Hollingshead used to recall his early experiences in the production of entertainments that were held to be "of the stage." Some thirty-eight years ago "Practical John" was prosecuted through the agency of the Common Informer for the staging of a series of comic scenes from pantomime which he called Where's the Police? In this he introduced the butter-slide and the traditional red-hot poker. This came under the definition of a stage play, as it was said to possess a plot, incidents, and situations. He was prosecuted at Marlborough-street and fined £240 and costs. The cruelest cut of all, however, was when the late Mr Montague Williams taunted him with the shaky grammer of his title.

But Mr Charles Morton had even earlier reminiscences than his friend Hollingshead, for no less than fifty-four years ago he was the defendant in a prosecution caused by his production of Hodge Podge, a duologue for which he was fined. The penalty had but little effect upon him; for he was again put into court over his production of The Enchanted Hash. Mr Norton, the police magistrate before whom the case was brought, confessed that he had seen the piece, saying, "I think it is a pantomime, and a very good one too."

The late Mr Morton had a fund of anecdote that has enriched the pages of many a journal. He used to tell of the late Queen Victoria's desire to know the name of any popular tune. While one day listening to the Grenadier Guards band playing a pot-pourri of popular melodies she was struck with the liveliness and rhythm of Charles Coborn's song "Come where the booze is cheaper," and desired its repetition. At the same time she asked the name of the tune. When the reluctant lady-in-waiting had given it, the Queen observed with a smile, "I don't know the meaning of 'booze,' though I can make a guess; but at all events the tune is pretty enough."

Mr Tom Tinsley will take his annual benefit at Gatti's, Westminster-Bridge-road, on Thursday evening, when a crowd of his friends will be drawn to that hall to do honour to a popular manager. The programme will be specially compiled from a large number of volunteers. Mr Tinsley, who made his first appearance in London as a comic singer under the Sweasy management at the Royal, was born at Bursiem about fifty years ago. He has been with the Corazza-Gatti firm for seventeen years, and entered their service as chairman of Gatti's, Charing-cross (now closed), in 1887.

Carl Hertz' Demon Kettles will be boiling furiously next week, being red hot and ice cold, at the Metropolitan, Paragon, Islington Empire, and the Palace, Manchester. New demonstrations and ideas invented by the ingenious Carl are nightly being introduced by Drs. Francis Jerrard and J. Aubrey Wilson, M.D.

The committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association has arranged to present Mr Fred W. Millis with a handsome illuminated address on Tuesday afternoon next at the offices of the Association. The presentation, which is to take place at half-past three, is to mark the good work performed for the Association by Mr Millis, who, by the way, leaves England on Dec. 23 for a tour through Australia.

The Palace, Bristol, it is understood, will see the long-promised production of Mr Todd of London, which Mr John Lawson tells us will be full of illusions and surprises. That ingenious author-actor has obtained possession of a stage coach of the period of the First Napoleon, which will convey Mr Todd on his pilgrimages. His Mr Todd is afflicted with the restless spirit of Vanderdecken. Why not a motor? In the latter vehicle Mr Lawson, who is a born showman, would certainly get the "puff direct."

Chirgwin prefers London audiences above all others. "They are distinctly different from Scotch audiences," he remarks. "They pay their money, and come in prepared to enjoy themselves. They don't visit the halls for the purpose of criticising the performance, which the Scotch audiences are credited with doing. But Scotch people have always been very good to me, and I have no fault to find with them."

The sport of Izaak Walton specially appeals to the music-hall comedian. Mr Wal Pink is a mighty angler; Mr Paul Martinetti has had many a good day during the summer in his punt near Penton Hook; Mr Tom Holmes is a great deep-sea fisherman; and now we hear of the exploits of Mr Ernest Shand. Last week near Newport he fished the Usk, and in three days killed six salmon. The weights were one of 5lb., three of 6lb. each, and two fine fish turning the scale at 12lb. and 17lb. respectively. The river was very low, or Mr Shand would have had even better sport, as he hooked several more.

Miss Quienie Leighton will, at the Oxford, on Monday evening next, produce a most amusing song (suggested by a much-talked-of play), entitled "The dolly began to dance," by Messrs A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott. The audience, of course, will not be "without a smile." The same authors have this week fitted Michael Nolan with an uproarously humorous ditty entitled "The five pounds note they never found." This has been secured for immediate publication by Messrs Francis and Day.

We are requested to inform members of the Music Hall Artistes Railway Association that although, by a printer's error, some of the voting papers for the election of the new committee are marked "1903-4" instead of 1904-5, the papers will nevertheless be admitted as correct.

Mr Horace Marriott has received a cheque for £15 from Mr Fred Warden, of the Theatre Royal, Belfast, as a donation, being a portion of the proceeds of the Belfast Theatrical Charity Gala. The president and committee of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund are very grateful to Mr Warden and the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly assisted in bringing about such a satisfactory result. Thirty-seven sad cases were investigated last week, thirty-five of which were relieved at a cost of £40. Applications for relief are increasing, and the funds are nearly exhausted. More money is badly needed at once to carry on the good work.

On behalf of Mr George Dance, the proprietor of the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Richmond, application was made to the Surrey Licensing Committee at Kingston on Monday for a music and dancing licence for that theatre. Mr J. L. G. Powell, solicitor, who appeared for Mr Dance, said that the application was for a licence to allow variety entertainments of a high-class character to be given at the theatre during the summer months. Many people would not sit out a comedy or play during the hot period of the year, and many were sufficiently demoralised to wish for a smoke after dinner in the auditorium. No smoking, however, would be allowed when the building was used only as a theatre, while in no circumstances whatever would drinking be permitted in the auditorium. No opposition was offered to the application, which was granted, subject to the undertaking given.

Mr Will Spearman, the popular manager of the Islington Empire, and Mr Alfred Bishop have kindly consented to give their services in connection with the stage-management at the performance to be given this afternoon at the Alhambra in aid of the Balaclava heroes. It may be remembered that Mr Spearman performed a similar office at the same function last year.

Few artistes have leapt into popularity with such gigantic strides as Sam Mayo, one of the most promising clients of Messrs Pacey and Reeves. Next week Mr Mayo plays an engagement booked long, long ago, when he had not climbed up many rungs of the ladder of fame. This is shown in the fact that in the week following his engagement he goes to a recently made Pacey and Reeves engagement at exactly fifteeen times his old salary.

There are many lovers of the sport of trotting in the profession, and these should note that the Haverstock Trotting Club hold their next meeting on Monday at Wembley Park. £70 in prize money is offered. Racing commences at one o'clock.

Although Miss Fanny Wentworth's monologue preceding Mr Pinero's new play, at Wyndham's Theatre, has been described as "a decided innovation," it must not be forgotten that some time ago Miss Nellie Ganthony gave a similar turn at a West-end theatre, and that Mr Frank Lincoln, the American humorist, may be said to have well established the idea of engaging a single artist to entertain an audience, before the play of the evening commences, by the long run he has shared with the The Duke of Killicrankie. Miss Wentworth herself has only been prevented by previous contracts from accepting offers long before the present time to appear in place of a curtain-raiser.

Last summer she was touring with Mr Arthur Roberts's concert party, followed by a well-earned rest, when she seized the opportunity of hearing Wagner at Bayreuth, and the Mozart Festival at Munich. Miss Wentworth has always been passionately fond of music, having studied for a professional pianist even before she went on the stage. In her monologue at Wyndham's she gives a clever imitation of a zither, burlesques of French and German songs, and a skit dealing with "praise that is not meant." Her dress is of white crêpe-de-chine, with insertions of écru lace, and embroidered with a bold design of black velvet flowers. She wears a sparkling necklace, and a pink rose in her hair.

Apropos of the new song on Bridge that Miss Wentworth is now preparing, she tells the following little story against herself. Being persuaded the other day to make a fourth, although she does not as a rule care for cards, the popular entertainer flattered herself that her former experience of the game was enabling her to hold her own with the other players very satisfactorily. This idea was confirmed by the gravity with which her partner observed, after a long silence, "Miss Wentworth, I think you must play a very good game—" he paused, and she smiled, well pleased at her success—"of golf," he added. Another story that Miss Wentworth tells with good-natured indifference, although it is again against herself, is of a lady who was convulsed with laughter all through her musical sketch, and then said in a loud tone of voice while the audience was still applauding, "Oh, yes, she can sing a bit, and talk a bit, and play a bit; any fool can do that!"

The Glenroy Troupe, after a three months' absence on the Stoll and Thornton tours, are introducing to London audiences two provincial successes in a new "coon" scena and a fresh patriotic act, Sons of Britannia's Empire, both of which should bring these versatile and up-to-date artists much fame. Mr Sam Glenroy has in active preparation other productions, of which he has the highest expectations.

We regret to announce the death of Professor Wyman, illusionist, which sad event took place rather suddenly on Monday, at his residence, 12, Lugsdale-road, Widnes. He had been ailing a day or two, but no serious results were anticipated. His death will come as a great surprise to his large circle of friends in the profession. He was in his forty-first year, and leaves a widow and two children. The funeral took place on Thursday at the Widnes cemetery.

Mr Fred Earle, who made such a big success with his "Seaweed," song, finishes to-night at Shepherd's Bush. Mr Earle and Miss Alice Ormonde open at Cardiff on Monday, and are away for ten weeks.

Miss Maggie Bowman, one of the talented and versatile Sisters Bowman, and Mr Tom J. Morton, son of Mr W. H. Morton, of Hull, have launched out into the variety theatres with a novel duologue The Butcher and the Slavey. Both are clever in musical comedy, and they so happily unite refinement and fun in their latest novelty that it is certain to be much sought after by variety managers.

Mr Fred Karno, the promoter of sketches and sketch combinations, was fortunate enough to be able to purchase on Wednesday, at Aldridge's, the two gorgeous stage coaches of the late Duke of Cambridge. The auctioneer explained that one of these vehicles had recently been redecorated for the Coronation celebrations at a cost of £500. Originally it cost probably over £1,000.

Mr Charles Windermere and company produced a dramatic episode, entitled The Clown, last week at the Palace, Greenwich, and achieved a great success, receiving three calls at the end. Mr Barnard immediately booked Mr Windermere for an early date at Greenwich. Managers on the look out for a clever novelty should see this latest episode at the Empire, Kilburn, next week.

Mr and Mrs David Day and Mr Chas Day arrived safely at Quebec on the 15th inst., per the Allan liner Tunisian, after a somewhat rough passage from Liverpool.

Miss Lil Hawthorne, after an absence of three years, returns to the Oxford with her highly successful songs "Lucy Loo" and "The Girl of Tennessee," with special scenery painted by Mr Francis H. Bull.

Mr Frederick Maxwell and Company will commence their second tour of Moss's Empires on Monday at the Palace, Bordesley. During their London season, Mr Maxwell's latest sketch, The Girl I Love, has proved so great a success that it has been secured for many London halls on his return soon after Christmas.

Miss Gwennie Hasto, the leg-mania dancer, is now making a series of successful appearances at the Palace, where the frequenters are well versed in the capabilities of the sensational dancers from the Continent and America. They have now an opportunity of appreciating the home-born article, and applaud the lissomeness, the agility, and the endurance of this very attractive young lady, who is "quite English you know."

A clever trio, entitled "The Father, Mother, and the Son," by Albert E. Ellis and Alan Macey, has been secured for many pantomimes, including Brighton, Leeds, Manchester, Birmingham, Dublin, Bradford, Newcastle, Edinburgh, and Glasgow. The music hall rights belong to Mr Arthur Rigby.

The number of applications for Messrs Francis, Day, and Hunter's pantomime song books is this year unprecedented, and the fiercest competition to acquire rights is resulting over certain songs, such as "Navaho," "Blue-bell," "Have you seen my girl?" "Farewell, my little Yo-San," "You are a white little girl," "If I had a girl as nice as you," "Go away, Mr Crocodile," "There goes my soldier boy," "The Gondolier," "The sunshine of love," "I love you," "Honey boy," "You can't stop the sun from shining," "Short Stories," "She cost me seven-and-sixpence," "What's the good of a ten-pound note?" "You can't beat the Old Time girls," "Girls wouldn't be wanted at all," and "By kind permission of the Daily Mail."

One of the most amusing songs ever written, even by Mills and Castling, has been successfully exploited in town recently by Mr Dave O'Toole. It is entitled "We all went into the shop," and will be published by Messrs Francis, Day, and Hunter.

Miss Florrie Forde has produced a new song entitled "My Nell from Camberwell" and from the manner that audiences take up the chorus, it should be as popular as "Flo from Pimlico." It is by the same author, and it is published by Francis and Day.

Telegrams wishing success to the general meeting of the M.H.A.R.A. were received from Messrs George Bandurria, Charles Kitts, Fred Neiman, and Leo Tell.

A singing competition for ladies that is in progress at the Cambridge is attracting considerable interest in the district. Three prizes are offered, with a week's subsequent engagement to the winner of first honours. The final contest was announced to take place on Friday evening.

"BECKY THE BOUNDER."

A Comedietta, in One Act, by Robert Courtneidge, Produced for the First Time in London at the Metropole, Camberwell,
on Monday, Oct. 17

Bob Perkins ..... Mr Norman Partridge
Marmaduke Tomkins .... Mr William Morgan
Emily Tomkins ..... Miss Sylvia Morris
Becky Bounder ..... Miss Ada Blanche

Among the many good things that Mr Jack De Frece has in his bill for the twice-nightly patrons here this week is to be found the above bright little comedietta, produced on Monday. The trifle was received on that evening with marked favour, for in the title-rôle London variety lovers once more welcomed that gifted comedienne, Miss Ada Blanche, who, as Becky the Bounder, has added another to her long list of successful impersonations. The period of the story is the year of Waterloo. Mrs Emily Tomkins, it appears, is somewhat disconcerted at her husband's excess of devotion, and complains of it to her brother Bob Perkins. Marmaduke never fails to kiss her when he goes out, and repeats the process on his return, and his solicitude for her comfort both at home and abroad becomes absolutely embarrassing. Bob is determined to try and cure Marmaduke of this habit, and thinks jealousy will do it. So when Becky, the buxom laundress, brings home the washing, he suggests that she shall make love to Tomkins. This is not at all difficult, for evidently Tomkins is a bit of a flirt, and is well known among the laundry girls. Bob's promise to Becky to set her intended up in a little greengrocer's business makes the little plot quite easy of accomplishment. Tomkins returns, and instead of finding his wife to caress, bestows his attentions on Becky. Bob contrives to bring his sister on the scene, and after a series of recriminations and protestations, Tomkins is forgiven, but his wife is now provided with an effectual weapon with which to check his devotional ardour. Needless to say, Miss Ada Blanche is the life and soul of the whole action, and it will at once be seen what a chance a part like Becky affords her. Her portrait of the buxom, pretty, ever-smiling laundry-girl is delightful. Her merry laughter becomes contagious and she is irresistible. As the perplexed wife, Emily, Miss Sylvia Morris plays with the right appreciation of the character. She is not only pretty, but her impersonation is smart and distinctly clever. As the amorous Tomkins Mr William Morgan conceives the part on broadly comic lines, and makes gaiety and rollicking fun paramount. Mr Norman Partriege as the scheming Bob throws heart and soul into his performance, and contributes not a little to the general success. The costumes are quite in keeping with the period, and the smoothness of the performance is eloquent of patient rehearsal.

HOUNSLOW VARIETIES.

Serpentello, the well-known agent of Wellington-street, has added to his business cares that of lessee and manager of the Temple of Varieties, Hounslow. It is a bright place recently decorated, and holds about 800 people. Mr Serpentello believes that in the garrison town of Hounslow he will be able to fill the hall at each of the two houses a-night. On the evening of our visit he had provided an excellent programme and an efficient orchestra, the pianist being a well-known performer. Mr George Scott, a vocal comedian with a good voice and hearty presence, pleased very much with his songs, "Men" and "The Annual Ball." His comic business with a recalcitrant cuff afforded much amusement. He also added a recitation entitled "Fighting Mac." Mr R. Lomas as Jacko, the man monkey, displayed his acrobatic and balancing agility. Miss Amy Hilton, a dashing serio and dancer, sang a song entitled "Very close," meeting with much applause. Wragg and Wragg, father and son, gave a splendid exhibition of swordsmanship, and the use of the sword, handkerchief, and dagger. The sketch, The Little Survivor, was given by Ashton Roberts and company. This little sketch describes the affection of an old lighthouse keeper for a little survivor from a shipwreck. One of the songs is set to an ear-haunting melody, and long after leaving the hall one finds himself humming over "The Little Survivor." The company excellently supported Mr Ashton Roberts, who has a splendid baritone voice of excellent quality.

THE LONDON MUSIC HALLS.

THE ALHAMBRA.

The Charles Urban Trading Company has brought out another of those extraordinary films which have caused so much interest of late. It is a combination of scientific skill, unlimited enterprise, ingenious invention, careful and spirited stage-management, and effective scene-painting. The first scene shows a meeting of a certain learned Exploring Club. We see the ladies and gentlemen assembled to discuss daring projects in connection with a tour by the aid of the steam-engine, the automobile, the airship, and the submarine. From the lecture-room the members pass to the factory, where the airship is exhibited in the midst of moving pistons and revolving fly-wheels. The idea of the tour is a combination of the four methods of progression. The airship is united with a submarine boat, and the result is placed on a truck on a railway. The train starts; and, eventually, after traversing hill and dale at terrific speed, arrives at a very hot place. By the aid of a glacière, or freezing car, the members of the club are relieved of the heat, but are frozen into a mass of ice. The inventor who is "running" the tour, lights a fire under the car, and the mass melts. The airship traverses the cloudy regions at an immense altitude, while planets, with their satellites, move around it, meteors explode, and comets whizz on their erratic flight. Finally, the "ship" drives right into the mouth of the sun, which ejects them in an effusion of sparks. The explorers then take to motoring, and go up and down Swiss mountains at a break-neck rate, coming to grief, in the end, over a precipice. Nothing, however, can daunt them—not even the little accident of smashing through the wall of a house and nearly killing a number of local inhabitants who are seated at dinner. The last experience of the party is on board a submarine. An immense cuttle-fish has a look in at the window; and then the machinery goes wrong. An explosion takes place, and the adventurous party is thrown on the shore, where the honest fishermen do all they can to make the sufferers comfortable in bed. Mr George Melies deserves great credit for the way in which he has invented and arranged this most fantastic picture series. It is as yet untitled; but the Charles Urban Trading Company offers a reward of ten guineas for the most appropriate name for the film, which is sure to be greatly in demand amongst showmen and exhibitors. A great and most agreeable sensation is being created at the Alhambra by the vocalisation of Miss Violet Elliott, who is described as a "lady bass," though she has in reality a contralto of remarkable range, extending in the lower register to D. What distinguishes Miss Elliott's sounding of that note is that there is no straining or forcing of the voice to attain it, nor is it unduly emphasised in her rendering of "The Midshipmite" and "The Diver." Miss Elliott owes a great deal of the success which she has attained to her handsome and imposing appearance and her frank, bright, and engaging manner. Pierrot's Romance, a pantomime invented by Signor G. Rosi, and acted by him, Miss Julie Reeve, and Signor Frielli, is a tragedy in little. A servant girl is beloved by Pierrot, who worships her at a distance, contemplates marriage with her, and brings her a bouquet of flowers. Her master makes overtures to the maid, and she is either so weak in principle or so much afraid of losing her place that she consents to his proposal. When Pierrot realises this, he flies into a frenzy of rage and jealousy, and stabs the girl to the heart. She falls dead; and then Pierrot puts an end to himself also. The dramatic trifle is acted with poignant intensity by the leading artist, who is a genuine tragedian in dumb show; and he is well supported by his two companions. Mr Sam Cudworth's music illustrates the situations admirably. Reba Kaufman is a dainty and active little dancer, whose radiant smiles win the heart of the audience. Prelle's dogs repeat their marvellous performance; and the feats of Les Perez on the ladder are warmly applauded. The Boccaccio Trio are in the programme, which also includes Les François, with their clever "pot-pourri acrobatique." Some of the best scenes from that popular ballet All the Year Round are included in the entertainment; and The Entente Cordiale is drawing Frenchmen in large numbers to the Alhambra to see the friendship between England and France celebrated most prettily and picturesquely on the stage.

THE TIVOLI.

The appearance of Miss Marie Lloyd at the London halls, and especially at the Tivoli, invariably synchronises with large audiences, and her return to the Tivoli on Monday, drew an immense house. Her tour in the provinces, which was a triumph from beginning to end, has apparently invigorated the queen of comédiennes, who is as bright and beaming and bonnie as ever. Miss Lloyd is not allowed to come on before an ordinary back cloth, but has a special drawing-room scene set for her; and in this her three beautiful gowns are seen to very great advantage. In her first song on Monday she related the adventures of a lady of the smart set, who has much keenness in scenting a millionaire, and entertains an affectionate regard for his cheque-book. She goes to all the fashionable resorts with the best people; she is to be found at Monte Carlo, Rome, and Paris; and her beauty and smartness evoke much generosity from the opposite sex. "Naughty, naughty, naughty" is quite in the Lloyd vein, and this word—to which the Parisians find an equivalent in "choquant"—is used to describe the beneficence of a young suitor who confers the order of the garter upon Maud. "It is the skirt that tells the tale," the third number, displayed the art of Marie Lloyd at its best, and her expressive gestures and comedy business brought down the house. She was the recipient of a very hearty recall, but wisely declined the encore. Mr Harry Randall, another great favourite at the Tivoli, relies upon some excellent patter concerning a boarding-house experiment with a Mrs Leach—a marvellous woman—whose economy is equal to counting the rice for a pudding, and whose "sooty" potatoes do not belie their name. Mr Randall's narrative of the experiences of a hearty, healthy individual who goes for a fortnight's holiday, and becomes gradually attenuated; his description of the struggle for food; and his anecdotic mood generally are much to the tastes of the Tivolians. Mr George Robey's Frantic the Fearless, the gladiator, is the latest success of this prime minister of mirth. He does not carry the glavius obtusus—with which his ancestors used to perform the happy despatch upon the conquered foe at the bidding of an emperor—but an umbrella. He revels in deeds of daring under various circumstances, and would beard the lion rather than face Mrs Frantic, who is a sort of Roman Mrs Caudle. The patter will, no doubt, be improved as time goes on. At present Mr Robey is a little bit laboured in his comedy, and lacks spontaneity. Mr James Fawn appears early in the evening as the sympathetic "peeler," and again proves that his character drawing as a member of the "force" is inimitable. He has some capital patter in his song "Beware of the dress that is full of girl," and is renewing a popularity that extends over a period of thirty years. Miss Nellie Wallace in her stage make-up looks an oddity, and in this guise sings of the sorrows of being left on the shelf. Later she burlesques the lady ballad singer, who implores a lover to "mingle your eyebrows with mine," a genuinely clever bit of burlesque. Miss Amy Clevere, the dainty and pretty comedienne, sings of a coy maiden from the village of Daffy-down-dilly, whose beauty and tact have their reward in an excellent marriage; the Sisters Govell present a lover and his lass, whose quarrel is made up with a clever concluding dance; and Bella and Bijou are responsible for a whimsical trifle in which the former plays an aspirant for stage honours and the latter takes the part of an agent. Mr Wilkie Bard needs nothing funnier than his "O—O—capital O," the chorus is which the delighted Tivolians rattle off with great gusto. Happy Fanny Fields does not belie her name in her Dutch business and her dancing; the Poluskis are responsible for a diverting bit of nonsense; there is much laughter over "The Barmaid's Lament," which is one of Mr Will Evans's wild extravagances; and Little Tich is a very funny "Toreador," an impersonation that he follows with his unique big boot dance, which has been a feature of his entertainment for a quarter of a century. An artistic interlude that comes midway in the programme is presented by Dr. Jules Angelo and company in representations of groups of Sèvres, Meissen, and Dresden china. The realisation of a fan in Watteau-Manier ware, the concluding one of the series, is perhaps the prettiest. The figurantes are well shaped, and the female form divine is liberally displayed. The strong entertainment has other contributors in Miss Maud Esmond and Miss Jessica Grace. The joint acting-management here is proving quite successful, and both Mr James Howell and Mr Arthur Yates are very popular.

THE EUSTON.

The dramatic sketch is still in evidence at the halls, notwithstanding the action of the Theatrical Managers' Association, and that this form of entertainment is popular at the variety theatres has been proved during the current week at the Euston, where Mr Fred M'Avoy has staged a short version of Moths, adapted by Charles Freeman from Ouida's novel. The playlet has been presented by the following cast:—

"MOTHS."

Prince Zouroff	Mr CHARLES FREEMAN
Corrèze	Mr HARRY HILLER
Lord Jura	Mr A. FELLOWS-BASSETT
Vera, Princess Zouroff ..	Miss FLORENCE TENCH
Duchesse De Sonnaz	Miss KATHERINE M. ROMSEY
Princess Nélaguine.....	Miss GERTRUDE STERROLL

When the sketch opens in the drawing-room of the mansion of Prince Zouroff, the young Princess has learnt only too well the character of her husband, and opposes her faith and purity to his brutishness and lust. A short interview with Corrèze indicates the devotion of the young singer, whose passion for the Princess is very broadly hinted at by the unscrupulous Duchess of Sonnaz, the mistress of Zouroff, whose presence is thrust upon the young wife. Zouroff demands of Vera the moth and star ornament worn by her as a necklet—a present made to her by Corrèze in the happy days of her maidenhood at Trouville, and tramples the jewel under his feet. The Prince commits a greater outrage, however, when he strikes her, and she determines to seek the protection of Corrèze. The latter is plugged in the throat by Zouroff, who in his turn is challenged by Lord Jura. Pistol shots are heard without, and the prostrate form of the English nobleman is brought in, mortally wounded. With the villain of the piece triumphant, the hero seriously hurt, and the heroine's staunch friend dead, the outlook for the poor distraught one is certainly not encouraging. Those who have read the book know that Corrèze and Vera—the world forgetting and by the world forgot—live together in the silence of the everlasting hills. It should be quite easy for the author to alter the ending of his sketch so as to make the dénouement accord with the natural desire of an audience for a happy finish. Miss Florence Tench, who makes a most attractive Vera, suggests the stately purity and stainless honour of Ouida's heroine, and the strength of her denunciations of Zouroff's brutality brings down the approval of the house, expressed in no half-hearted way. Mr Chas. Freeman's Zouroff is a part played in the downright fashion demanded. The thin veneer of polish that covers the brutal Tartar nature of the Russian prince is also very effectively assumed by Mr Freeman. Mr Harry Hiller as Corrèze and Mr A. Fellows-Bassett as Lord Jura give the requisite significance to those rôles; Miss Katherine Romsey is effective as the Duchesse De Sonnaz; and the Princess Nélaguine is benevolently represented by Miss G. Sterroll. One could scarcely wish for a greater contrast to the society episode than The Mouth Organ Brigade, the holiday humour of which production is again delighting the Eustonians this week. Miss Kate Carney and her light-hearted companions of the coster persuasion again give a touch of infectious gaiety to their doings, which are loudly applauded, and she leads them in a scena that is still highly popular. Miss Victoria Monks, American comedienne, who comes with good credentials from the Palace Theatre, has an amusing item in "There's a girl inside," and brings the house down when she invites Bill Bailey to come home. Mr Tom Brantford's imitations include a very clever reproduction of a phonographic version of Mr J. W. Rowley's singing of "Going to the Derby." The Sisters Caselli show remarkable agility and grace in their leg mania business. The funny mule Frisco causes much laughter during the pantomimic diversions of Burke and Andrus, in their trifle, After Covent-garden Ball, and the chorus song of Mr Edgar Romaine brings that rapidly-rising artist many compliments. The Sisters Wingrove, and Dezmonti and Mora, triple bar performers, are also entertaining.

THE LATE FRANK LEONARD.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Through the medium of your valuable paper will you kindly insert the following case:—At the Circus, Rochdale, on Monday evening, Oct. 17, a sad accident occurred to Frank Leonard, one of the Woodbee Wonders, acrobats. While performing he had the misfortune to fall and fracture his spine, and, poor fellow, succumbed to his injuries at the Rochdale Infirmary at 12 o'clock noon, Tuesday, the 18th inst.

We, the undersigned, ask if your readers will assist in Mr Harry Jee's rapid held system for the wife and child, left behind totally unprovided for We know the system has been a success in other cases. Our dear brother and sister artists, we ask you to make this deserving case a success also.

Yours faithfully, HARRY BENT,
MILNER VERREN,
FREDERIC MARTINO.

Circus, Rochdale, Oct. 20, 1904.

MRS. ALBERT BARKER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In your issue of Oct. 15, in referring to Mr Granville Barker, you state that he is the son of Mrs Albert Barker, "once well known as a reciter." As this statement appears to me to be prejudicial to Mrs Barker, and give the impression that she has retired from public life, I think it only fair to let you know that she spends five or six months every year at Mentone, where she is busily engaged both in platform work and in giving lessons, and that during her London season she is so busy that I have often found it most difficult to arrange for private lessons. Apologising for troubling you,

Yours faithfully, BERTHA N. GRAHAM.
35, Prince's-gate, S.W., Oct. 17.

In connection with the termination of the season engagement of the Corporation band, a complimentary benefit concert given to Mr Charles Cookson, the manager of the band, took place at the Cambridge Hall, Southport, on Saturday evening, when the popularity of the genial "Charlie" was evidenced by the presence of a large and influential audience. A capital programme was submitted, prominent amongst the artistes being Miss Annie Goodwin, soprano; Miss Emilie Cookson, comedienne; Miss Kathleen Marchant, vocalist; Mr Teddy Whittle, humourist; Mr Tom Barlow, tenor; Mr Ernest Hastings, humourist; and Mr Charles Cookson, who contributed a droll sketch, entitled "The Nomination." Miss Carrie Lumbers was a capital accompanist.

DEATH OF MR. CHARLES MORTON.

The news of the voluntary resignation of Mr Charles Morton as manager of the Palace Theatre has been quickly followed by the much more mournful announcement of his death. He who for so many years has been familiarly known as "the Father of the Music Halls" passed peacefully away early on Tuesday morning, after a brief illness, at his residence, 11, Oval-road, Regent's-park. He was eighty-five years of age. Mr Charles Morton's career is the history of the music hall. As long back as 1848 the deceased gentleman started a sing-song at the Canterbury Tavern in the Lower-marsh, Lambeth, which on May 17, 1852, blossomed into the first Canterbury Music Hall. Here an entertainment consisting chiefly of high-class music—glees, madrigals, and operatic selections—was given. Here, in fact, the first performance in England of Gounod's Faust took place. Many distinguished artists—for instance, Mr Augustus Braham, son of the famous tenor, Mr Chas. Bernard, and Miss Turpin (afterwards Mrs Henry Wallack) assisted in the musical entertainment at the Canterbury. Sam Cowell was intimately allied with its fortunes, a comedian who may be regarded as a link between Evans's and the modern music hall. Mr Morton paid Cowell £4 a-week during his early days at the Canterbury, but eventually £30. Meanwhile the growing success of Weston's, now the Royal, Holborn, led Mr Morton to extend his enterprise to the West-end, where he built the Oxford, which was opened in March, 1861. Mr Charles Santley and Madame Parepa (afterwards Rosa) did not think it derogatory to take part in the opening performance, and Mr Sims Reeves was nearly tempted by an enormous fee to do so. One of Mr Morton's first productions at the Oxford was Stradella, Miss Russell and Mr Herbert taking part in it. The artists used to stand in a semi-circle, and step forward when their turn for a solo arrived. For a long time Mr Morton ran both the Canterbury and the Oxford, utilising many of his artists in both houses, and conveying them backwards and forwards in broughams. Then the Canterbury was abandoned, and the Oxford engrossed his attention. In February, 1868, the Oxford was partially destroyed by fire, and Mr Morton did not continue the enterprise. His next adventure was at the North Woolwich Gardens, where "he made and lost a lot of money," to use his own words. Then, in partnership with Mr Chas. Head, Mr Morton took the Philharmonic Music Hall, Islington, just vacated by the late Mr Sam Adams, and produced a version of Chilperic, which at once provoked litigation, instigated by theatrical managers. In order to regulate their position, Mr Head and Mr Morton turned the Philharmonic into a theatre, and produced an interesting series of opera-bouffes, beginning with Genevieve de Brabant. A subsequent production was La Fille de Madame Angot, which, in partnership with the late Mr John Hollingshead, Mr Morton brought into the Strand. Leaving

THE LATE MR. CHARLES MORTON.

Islington he interested himself in one theatrical adventure and another at the West-end, and went to America in the pursuit of his business. In the autumn of 1877 he was appointed manager of the Alhambra. His first production, in November, 1877, was a revival of La Fille de Madame Angot, with Selina Dolaro for his prima donna. In December, 1882, the Alhambra was burned down. Mr "Bill" Holland had meanwhile become manager, and Mr Morton joined Mr Sefton Parry at the newly built Avenue Theatre, when again opera-bouffe was the attraction. In the following autumn Mr Morton resumed the position of acting-manager at the New Alhambra, and here he remained until 1891, when he undertook the management of the reconstituted Tivoli in the interest of the Newson-Smith Syndicate. His retirement from the Alhambra was the occasion of a gigantic benefit performance at which most of the celebrities in the theatrical and musical professions lent a willing hand.

The appointment of Mr Morton to manage the Palace, on its failure as an English Opera House, was the crowning point of his career. It was also a just tribute to his abilities and character. Under his management the Palace has become an institution quite by itself. The Palace audience is the most thoughtful audience in London. Hence the South African War, which told terribly on other variety houses, was a gold mine to the Palace. Mr Morton did not lose his head. He engaged Mrs Tree to recite "The Absent-Minded Beggar" at £100 a week, and her salary and any contributions made during the evening went to swell the fund for the men at the front. He steered clear of all party questions, and his house was not divided against itself. He reproduced, too, by means of the biograph, the very best films procurable from the front. People who were not going out to the ordinary place of entertainment went to the Palace for information, well knowing that whatever their politics and feelings were they would be respected.

Mr Morton could never have done the work he did without the exercise of care and self-control. He was almost an abstainer, he was almost a vegetarian, and almost, if not quite, a non-smoker. His life was of the simplest. His only indulgence was Ascot. He rarely, if ever, took a cab, and his greatest luxury was the cup of tea or cocoa and the single biscuit, which at half-past nine were always placed on the little table by which he, attired in a neat but rather old-fashioned dress suit, sat in the promenade. His short, spare figure was wonderfully agile up to nearly the end; he thought nothing when eighty-three of running upstairs to the topmost dressing-rooms two or three times in the course of the evening. Almost if not the very last time he was present at the Palace was on Aug. 11. It was the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birthday. All the evening telegrams of congratulation came pouring in; at some which came unexpectedly from friends whom the world once knew but has long forgotten he was visibly affected. He seems to have contracted a chill during that evening. He took to his bed. It was soon manifest that his work was done, and he resigned his post.

The management of the Palace Theatre, having made arrangements for a matinée performance as a farewell testimonial to Mr Morton, has decided that, notwithstanding his lamented death, the performance shall be given and the proceeds presented to Mrs Morton as a testimonial of the esteem and regard in which her husband was held. The matinée will take place early in November, and already many leading artists have promised their assistance.

Mr Morton's resemblance to the Comte De Chambord, the self-styled King of France, once involved him in a rather awkward adventure. He had gone to a Paris theatre to see a popular play. People looked at him in his box with obvious interest. Several bowed, and one enthusiast overstepped the bounds by shouting "Vive le roi!" for which breach of decorum he was promptly put outside. The actors and actresses were equally persistent in directing their gaze upon the perplexed manager.

Presently there came a knock at the door of the box. Enter two policemen in plain clothes. "You must come with us to the Prefecture of Police," they said, and they warned "Monsieur le Comte" that it would be useless to try to escape. It was not until the astonished Mr Morton had been closely examined at the Prefecture and compared with a portrait of the Count that he was able to persuade the police he was not the aspirant to the throne of France. "There was a resemblance in the portrait," he said afterwards, "but I do not consider that I was flattered."

A characteristic story is told of his attitude towards a new "turn," a lady who had been introduced by one of the directors to the theatre Mr Morton was then managing. The lady was—well, not successful, and Mr Morton and the director were the only persons who applauded. Her failure was so obvious to the director that he promptly tackled Mr Morton. "Look here," he said, "you needn't have troubled to applaud Mdlle. ——. I know you thought her very bad all the time, and I only applauded her myself because I thought it was the least I could do." "My dear sir," was Mr Morton's ingenious reply, "I only applauded my orchestra, because it was the most I could do."

Mr Morton was one of those persons who are said to "know everybody." The King, when Prince of Wales, used to greet him cordially, and he has had at least one invitation to dine at Marlborough House.

THE FUNERAL.

That the late Mr Charles Morton was held in great respect, not only by members of the theatrical and music-hall profession, but also by his neighbours in Oval-road, was proved by the blinds being let down at all the windows in the thoroughfare mentioned and the respectful crowd who waited and watched outside Mr Morton's residence. And the interest was not merely localised to Oval-road, for in all the streets through which the funeral procession passed a similar attitude was observed. The two hearses, which were adorned inside and outside with many magnificent wreaths, headed a long line of some twenty carriages containing the mourners and friends of the deceased, the route being by Park-street, Kentish-town-road, and Swain's-lane to Highgate Cemetery. Here a vast concourse of people had assembled both outside the gate and within the beautiful grounds of the cemetery, and as the cortège passed one could not see a head among the men in the crowd that was not uncovered.

In the first carriage were Mr William Morton, brother of the deceased; Mr Frederick Stanley, brother-in-law; Mr Ernest Meade, son-in-law; and Mr Herbert Payne, an old friend of the family. The second carriage contained the four directors of the Palace Theatre—Count Hollander, Mr G. Cremetti, Mr J. L. Graydon, and Mr Ernest Polden. Mr Alfred Butt, the newly appointed manager of the Palace, occupied the third carriage, along with Mr Alfred Beyfus, Dr. Charles Read (the late Mr Morton's medical attendant), and Mr Joseph Watson. Mr Hermann Finck, the musical director of the Palace; Mr T. M. Miller, assistant-manager; and Mr H. Damer, stage-manager, were to be seen in the fourth vehicle while the fifth contained Mr Georges Jacobi Mr C. Ryall, Mr Macqueen, and Mr Philip Yorke. In the carriages that followed were Mr George Adney Payne, Mr Frank Glenister, Mr D. E. Winder, Miss Emily Soldene, Mrs Dawson, Mr E. W. Mackney, Mr H. J. Hitchens, Mr Ben Joseph Davis, Mr Charles Chapman, Mr George Manners, Mr Sydney M. Hyman, Mr Laurie Graydon, Mr — Graydon, Mr W. R. Smith, Mr George Scott, and Mr H. Woodford. Among the ladies and gentlemen who were to be seen clustered round the graveside were many old friends of Mr Morton, as well as former employees. But the general public seemed to be quite as much interested in the proceedings as the theatrical and music hall community, and many were the remarks of genuine regret and appreciation passed both by people who had had not only friendly but business relations with the deceased gentleman.

The funeral service was conducted throughout by the Rev. J. T. Bingley, the chaplain to the cemetery. A number of policemen and their officers were stationed in the grounds to prevent any possible unintentional disorder that might be caused by the mass of people collected in the cemetery. Their services, however, were scarcely required, as the crowd was quiet, orderly, and maintained a respectful attitude throughout the whole proceedings. It was remarked by more than one how well Mr William Morton bore his years as he followed immediately behind the pall bearers to the plot of earth which was to mark the last resting place of the late Mr Charles Morton. There was, too, a universal tone of sadness, which made its magnetic influence felt even by those who had but little in common with the man over whose body the last rites of the Church had been administered. And during the service at the graveside there were not a few who gave way to the depth of their emotions, for it is hardly in human nature not to feel some regret at the passing away of a person whom you had known for what was in several instances a long life-time.

The exact location of Mr Morton's grave is square 114 in the new ground of the cemetery, and not more than a hundred yards from the spot where John Billington lies buried; while at a similar distance may be found a headstone bearing the name of George Honey, a well-known comedian in his day. Mr Morton's coffin is of plain, polished oak, and the brass plate has this inscription:—

CHARLES MORTON,
Born 15 August, 1819,
Died 18 October, 1904.
He died as he lived, the Father of the Halls.

Numerous telegrams of sympathy were dispatched to the sorrow-stricken family. Sir Henry Irving telegraphed an expression of his regret as follows:, "May I offer my deep and respectful sympathy in your sorrow and affliction." Mr George Grossmith wired: "Deeply grieved. Please accept sincerest sympathy All will miss a genial gentleman and faithful friend." Mr H. E. Moss wrote, "Please accept my sincerest sympathy in your sad bereavement;" Mr Chance Newton, "May God console you for the loss of our beloved old friend;" Mrs Hollingshead, "Sincere and deepest sympathy;" Mr Frank Allen, "I sincerely condole with you in your sad loss;" Mons. Alias, "Consternation fills our heart;" Mrs Clement Scott, "My heart's deepest sympathy is with you in your dark hour." Other telegrams came from Miss Nina Martino, the staff of the Hotel d'Italie, Mr and Mrs Robert Crawford, Mr Alfred Otley, Mr Barry Cohen, and Mr Philip Yorke.

Perhaps the prettiest wreath was that from the staff of the Palace Theatre. It was heart-shaped and composed of white lilies and carnations, orchids, stephanotis, lily of the valley, and gardenias. In the centre of the wreath there were the words, made of violets, "In our hearts." The directors of the Palace Theatre sent a lyre, "In affectionate remembrance;" and a wreath came from the Palace orchestra. Mr Alfred Butt, the new manager, sent a cushion, "He lived as he died, the Father of the Halls;" and other floral tributes with inscriptions were as follows:—Mr Thomas Miller and Mr Frank Damer, assistant-manager and stage-manager respectively, an anchor, "At rest;" Mr and Mrs Eugene Cremetti, an anchor, "A rest;" directors of the Empire, "With deep sympathy;" the Oxford management and staff, "Deep regret;" directors of the Alhambra, "In remembrance;" Count and Countess Hollander, "Deepest regret and sympathy;" Mr H. E. Moss, "With sincere sympathy;" Mrs D'Oyly Carte, "Deep regret and sympathy;" International Artists' Lodge, Berlin, "In deepest respect;" Mr George Grossmith, "In remembrance of my old and faithful friend;" Mr Willy Clarkson, "With deep regret;" Mr and Mrs Philip Yorke, "From Vinny and Philip Yorke;" Mr and Mrs Eugene Stratton, "In deepest sympathy;" Mr Edward Swanborough, an anchor of white chrysanthemums and Palma violets, "With sincere regret at the loss of a dear old friend;" Mons. Alias, "Regrets;" George Fuller Golden; F. Stanley and family; Mrs Moss, jun.; Pacey and Reeves, "With last respects;" Hippodrome artistes and stage staff; staff of the Tivoli, "With deepest sympathy;" Miss Ada Reeve, an open Bible, "Peace;" Miss Esmé Beringer, wreath of autumn leaves, "Hélas;" Mr Stuart Connor, "Deepest sympathies;" Mr and Mrs Franks; wreath from the London Pavilion; directors of Drury-lane; Mr and Mrs Carl Hertz; Mr Angelo Asher; Mr Walter Dando, Mrs and Miss Marie Daintor, lovely cluster lilies and heather from the Chevalier G. Dintin Maddick, Rev. Stuart Headlam, Kokin and wife, managers' staff of the Oxford; enormous cluster of white flowers from the Bonfiers Club, London Entertainments Protection Association Mr Bettinson, National Sporting Club; World's Advertising Company, Messrs Alfred and Philip Beyfus Mr J. L. Graydon and Mr Laurie Graydon, Messrs Nathan and Somers, Mr and Mrs Somers Mrs F. Vernon, Mr G. Adney Payne, Mr Joseph Blaiberg, staff of the Hotel d'Italie, Mr Ernest Meads a wreath of berberis and lilies from Mr and Mrs Dreyfus, Mrs Somburini, Mr R. E. Wilson, Madame Jacobi, Maude Courtenay, Mrs Peason, Mrs Sweeney, Mr Ralph Hall, Mr Philip Fothergill, Mdlle. Florence De Dio, Mr and Mrs Joseph Watson, Mr Tom Browne, Mr W. E. Allen, Mr Tom Claxton, Miss Minnie Bell, Miss Mamie Cohn, Mr Fred Brewer, Mr H. B. Marinelli, Mr John Tiller, W. R. Smith and Co., Miss Jessie Hawkin, and Miss Cicely M'Donnell.

STRATFORD EMPIRE.

The amount of patronage commanded by the Stratford Empire at each performance nightly is undoubtedly deserved, for a rich and varied programme is provided, and nothing is left undone to add to the comfort of patrons of this handsome variety theatre by the experienced and genial manager, Mr Sam Gething. The incentive to punctuality induced by the two-houses nightly system is much in evidence here, and early-comers are regaled by the orchestral selection, under Mr Augustus Greco's brisk bâton. This week S. R. Henry's march, "Two-Step Polly Prim," precedes, and is received with acclamation. A prime favourite is that inimitable comedian, R. G. Knowles, and he is in capital form with "The girl, the woman, and the widow," which is followed by an immensely successful effusion, "Saturday Night," the refrain of which calls to mind the ear-haunting "Girlie, Girlie." Of course "R. G." has brought a collection of new stories, which, told in his own pointed and pungent style, make considerable inroads on the risible faculties of the audience, and the applause when he makes his final exit is deafening. Verno and Voyce contribute a turn of considerable merit. Excellent vocalists both, they enact in song of a father and son on the verge of ruin through unsuccessful speculation. The son tries to solace his parent with the knowledge that they still have one friend left who will succour them, and tells him to bear in mind that "every dark cloud has its silver lining." Anon in solitude the elder man desponds, and placing a revolver at his head would soon be where financial troubles are no more, but his son's timely entrance, with the comforting news of a rise in prices, together with a substantial cheque from the faithful friend, sees the avoidance of a tragedy, and the ending of their troubles. Afterwards the younger of the twain dilates in fine declamatory style on "Capital and Labour," the topical verses of which exactly suit the sentiments of the audience, and then both indulge in a duet, "At the Races," which is provocative of great applause. Marie Reeve's piquant rendering of "My pretty Dinah" is warmly applauded, and her agile, graceful, and rhythmical dancing, in which kaleidoscopic lighting effects are utilised, affords the keenest pleasure. Laughter is much in evidence whilst Rezene and Robini occupy the stage, the amusing patter and by-play introduced into their skilful bar act forming a most acceptable mixture. Geo. Brooks quickly wins his way into favour with an eccentric dame song, "The old time girl," which has much originality to recommend it, and he scores heavily with his old favourite, "And his day's work was done." The America Quintet gain many encomiums for their tuneful vocalism, and their spirited and animated dancing proves a pleasing item. Duncan and Godfrey, in their entracte "Me and 'Er," treat of an always popular theme. A young coster, happy in the acquisition of wealth through the demise of a far-distant relative, buys "the missus" a stock of finery with the "sub on account" he has just obtained, and, gorgeously attired, the pair contemplate the good times in store. But their happiness is short-lived, for a lawyer's letter arrives to say there is a subsequent will, and that the money advanced must be refunded. Now it is the wife's turn to act the comforter, and her inspiring words cheer her husband up, and he resolves to work hard, and they will still be happy despite losing their wealth. The blend of comedy and pathos is much to the liking of the audience, and the two parts are played with finesse and power. Princess Pauline renders in sprightly style, "Youdon't know whether to laugh or cry," and afterwards tells in lively and vivacious manner of a damsel who is "a little bit off the top." The Ashers, in "The Dude and the Soubrette," contribute an enjoyable turn; Lizzie Daniels proves herself a comedy soubrette of much merit; and the Florodor Quartette, in their sketch Naughty Nin, are entirely successful in their efforts to amuse.

THE Two Melvernes, who are making their first and most successful appearance in London at the Grand Theatre, Islington, this week in their Living Marionette Act, are engaged for America in March, 1905.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON has made arrangements for the crews of the American fleet, now lying off Gravesend, to pay a visit to the Crystal Palace on Saturday to witness the afternoon performance of Mr and Mrs Calvert Routledge's company in the American comedy A Night Off.

AT the County of London Sessions, on Wednesday, before Mr M'Connell, K.C., Frances Thomas was brought up for sentence on the charge, to which she pleaded guilty last week, of being concerned with a man named Thomas in obtaining money by fraud from persons desirous of taking part in a play A Millionaire's Romance

MUSIC HALL ARTISTES' RAILWAY ASSOCIATION.

(SPECIALLY REPORTED FOR THE ERA.)

The eighth annual meeting of this Association was held on Tuesday at Gatti's Music Hall, Westminster-bridge-road. Mr HARRY MOUNTFORD presided, and on the stage were also the following members of the committee:—Messrs F. W. Millis, Pat Carey, Joe Burnell, H. Griff, Bob Hutt, Joe Lavender, W. H. Clemart, J. C. Jimson, Joe Lawrence, Jean Seul, J. D. Humphreys, Will Edgar, Charles Edgar, C. C. Cornish, and B. Stavordale; Douglas White (hon. treasurer) and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary).

The SECRETARY read the notice convening the meeting, and also the annual report of the executive committee, which was as follows:—

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The Executive Committee, in presenting this, the Seventh Annual Report, to the members of the Association, have great pleasure in stating that the present year has been in every way as successful—indeed, even more so—than in the earlier years of the Society's formation.

The Committee have in every way possible met the views of each and every member as to the manner of voting and general business of the Association, and, with that intent, decided upon a thorough revision of the Rules, which was undertaken with the kind assistance of Mr Eugene Judge, Hon. Solicitor to the Association, and these Rules will be submitted at this meeting to the general members for their approval.

Owing to the yearly increasing number of members, many more than heretofore have been enabled to avail themselves of the concession granted by the Railway Companies, and a greater amount of pecuniary benefit has therefore been derived.

The main object the Committee have, during their years of office, had in view has been to continue and to improve the friendly feeling existing between the Railway Companies and the Association, and they are pleased to think that they have succeeded, for they recognise that the members owe much to the kindness of the Railway Companies, who granted them what has resulted in a most important and beneficial concession. The Committee cannot, and do not, believe that the members desire to in any way prejudice the present amicable understanding by deviating from the original idea of the Association at its formation, viz., to cement and strengthen the good-will of those in whose power it is to grant them, when the opportunity arises, additional benefits and advantages.

On Jan. 31 the Third Dinner and Dance of the Association to celebrate the seventh anniversary was held, and as a matter of compliment all the provincial agents and theatrical managers of the Railway Companies were invited at the expense of the Association. It proved most successful, and resulted in a small profit instead of the large deficit of last year.

The Committee desire to express their deepest thanks to the theatrical managers of the Railway Companies, who in many ways have greatly assisted the members at no slight trouble; to Mr Douglas White, the Hon. Treasurer, whose position is no sinecure, for his work is very considerable; to the numerous provincial agents who have fulfilled their duties so capably that the complaints received have been but few; and to the hon. officers of the Association for their kindly and readily given aid.

The Committee also wish to heartily thank Mr C. Douglas Stuart, the Secretary, for the able manner in which he has fulfilled his most onerous duties during the past twelve months.

The outgoing Committee offer themselves for re-election, and some fifty other members have sent in their names for election. The voting papers can be obtained from any of the provincial agents, at music halls, of the variety agents, or at the London offices, and must be sent in specially addressed envelopes to the scrutineers, care of The Era, 49, Wellington-street, Strand, on or before Tuesday, Nov. 2.

The Committee much regret to have to record the deaths of Mr Herbert Campbell, a Vice-President of the Association, and of Mr Fred Lacey, one of the original Committee.

The Committee have made a point that each year they shall, if possible, arrange some additional benefit for the members of the Association, and this year, after much thought and arrangement, they are glad to be able to announce that an important and substantial advantage has been secured. Several of the leading consulting specialists in London and a large number of doctors in the suburbs and throughout the provinces have generously consented to act as Hon. Medical Officers to the Association, and to give free advice to all members. The Committee feel certain that this additional privilege will be highly appreciated by all the members, and especially by those who, finding themselves alone in an unknown town, will be pleased to know that through being members of this Association they can depend on medical aid in time of need.

The financial condition of the Association still continues to be most satisfactory, the total profit on the year's working being £500 5s. 4d., as against a total profit of £310 7s. 4d. last year. The Committee having during the past twelve months distributed among the Railway and Music Hall charities and the Reserve Funds of the Association the sum of £125, there is left a net balance of £375 5s. 4d. The Committee now advise the payment of donations of £50 each, which is double that given last October, to each of the four charities, viz.:—The Railway Benevolent Institution, the Railway Servants' Orphanage, the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, and the Music Hall Home Fund, making £200 in all, a similar amount—£50—to be placed to the Reserve Fund of the Association, and the balance to be carried over to the present year's account. This arrangement as to the distribution of profits is in accordance with the agreement made with the Railway Companies when the concession was first granted and the Association first formed.

The Committee trust that if the members are satisfied with the progress made during the past year, and agree with their policy that the Association is, and shall continue to be, solely for Railway and kindred matters, they will give them their support at the election for the new Committee.

In conclusion, the Committee, while congratulating the members upon the firm foundation upon which the Association now stands, both financially and numerically, confidently look forward to increasing membership, additional advantages, and continued prosperity.

Mr H. GRIFF, in moving the adoption of the report, said he thought they had every reason to be proud of it.

Mr JOE BURNELL seconded.

The CHAIRMAN then proceeded to give his address in reference to what he termed the excellent and exhaustive report of the work done during the past year. He said he had first to introduce himself to the meeting, as it might be asked why he should occupy the position of chairman. Well, he had the misfortune to belong neither to the Rats nor to the Terriers' Society, but it was on that account he was chosen for the post of chairman, so that he could hold evenly the scales of justice. There was a little friction between the two societies. Perhaps it was only jealousy as to which one was doing the most good for their fellows. The Rats carried on a great work of charity, which was much appreciated by the members of the profession generally; and at the same time the Terriers also deserved credit for a great deal of benevolent work, done in the quietest manner possible. It might well be supposed there was a natural antipathy between the Rats and the Terriers such as existed in the animal world; but he wished to feel he was presiding over a happy family, and to do all he could towards consolidating the two associations. He should then expect to find sitting in one corner Mr George Adney Payne and Mr M'Naughton smoking together, and in another corner Mr Henri Gros and the members of the Theatrical Managers' Association arranging for the next sketch at the Oxford. And now he would come to what the committee had done during the past year, and in doing so he had no desire to make invidious comparisons. The preceding committee was composed of members of the profession who had all the intellect and all the brains, who were going to do something great, and to turn things inside out, but instead of that they themselves got turned out. Their attendances for the year amounted to 675, whereas their successors, who entered office amid a perfect storm of obloquy, made 785 attendances—an increase of 110. The balance-sheet showed, too, that the present committee had given more to charities than its predecessors. They had also obtained the consent of ninety doctors in the provinces to act as hon. medical officers to the Association. Thus, if a member fell ill in a town he could now obtain medical advice gratuitously, while if in London he could, by communicating with the secretary, consult a specialist free of cost. That was one thing the committee had done. They had also revised the rules of the Association, and to these there were only four amendments on the agenda. But the point he wished to specially emphasise was that if the Association had been a limited liability company they would be able to pay a dividend of 35 per cent. Then, again, up to the beginning of the present year the insurance of members was limited to railway travelling, but the committee had got the insurance extended, so that it now included travelling by any vehicle provided that the member was not the driver thereof. This was one of the little things the committee had done for the Association. This, too, was the first committee that had placed the balance-sheet in the hands of members before the actual day of the annual meeting. Previously sufficient time had not been given for its full consideration. In the next place he begged of members to have a little consideration for and to show due courtesy to the railway booking clerks and the society's agents throughout the country. He had heard artists bully the agents because they were not attended to at once, and had heard them speak to booking clerks in such a manner that if a director of the railway company had been present he would probably have torn up the vouchers. Last week fifteen vouchers, representing 162 passengers, were issued by one of their agents, and his weekly average was between 150 and 160. Surely the agents and booking clerks deserved some little courtesy. The speaker next referred to a letter which had appeared in print suggesting that the Association should take some steps in regard to a clause in a new Act of Parliament having reference to the employment of children in theatres. His reply was that the Association could not and must not deal with such a matter. There were other matters, such as the sketch question, syndicates, barring clauses, and agents' commissions, which required threshing out, but it was never intended that the Association should take up questions of this kind. Its object was to obtain concessions from the railway companies for the benefit of the members. The committee were there to give an account of their stewardship for the past year, and he held that they had been faithful servants. He hoped that they would sink all petty jealousies and act only in the interests of the Association. It could not stand still, it must make progress. It was born seven years ago, in a dingy office in Fleet-street, but the tender plant had been carefully nutured by their secretary and treasurer. Indeed, had it not been for Mr Douglas White it would have died a slow death long ago. Now they beheld it flourishing like the cedar tree of Lebanon, with branches spreading throughout the world. It did not matter to what country they belonged or what religion they professed, or no religion at all so long as they were music hall artistes they were welcomed as members. In conclusion the Chairman urgently appealed to all artistes who were not members to join at once, and he urged all who did belong to the Association to work for it both individually and collectively, so that when they had done their five or ten minutes' turn on the stage of life, and the curtain of death was rung down upon them, those who came after could say of them, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." He then read a telegram from Mr G. Bandurria, regretting his inability to be present, and wishing the Association every success.

The CHAIRMAN said he regretted to announce that Mr Charles Morton, the Father of the Music Halls and the doyen of managers, had died that morning.

The announcement was received with a general expression of regret.

Mr VOYCE moved an amendment that the donations to be given to the four charities mentioned in the report be £30 each instead of £50 as recommended, and that the balance, namely £80, shall go towards creating an accident and sick fund for the benefit of members of the association, the rules and regulations of the said fund to be formulated as speedily as possible by specially selected members of the Executive Committee.

The CHAIRMAN said he thought the idea was an excellent one, but they could not turn the Association into a benevolent institution. It was started on the distinct understanding that half the profits were to go to the music hall and railway charities.

Mr ADDERLEY HOWARD seconded the amendment, which, on being put to the meeting, was carried by 29 votes to 21. The report as amended was then carried.

Mr DOUGLAS WHITE then read the revenue account for the past year, which was as follows:—

ALBERT VOYCE
ARTHUR "CARLTON" } Auditors.
GEORGE SHEARD

London, Oct. 6, 1904.

The Committee recommended that the accounts, No. 2 and 3, known as the Legal Purposes Fund and the Sinking Fund, be amalgamated into one Fund, to be known as the Reserve Fund, which shall be added to yearly until it reaches the sum of £1,000, such reserve fund to be invested in the name of three trustees whom the committee leaves in the hands of the incoming committee to appoint.

Mr W. H. CLEMART moved and Mr WILL EDGAR seconded that this recommendation be adopted, and this was carried.

Mr F. W. MILLIS then moved the adoption of the revenue account.

Mr PAT CAREY seconded, and the resolution was carried.

Mr VOYCE said that, as one of the auditors, he should like to bear testimony to the very neat and capable manner in which the secretary kept the books. It made the work of the auditors quite a pleasure.

The next business was to submit the new rules to the meeting.

Mr FRANK GERALD asked why the new rule stating the objects of the Association passed at the last general meeting, had been altered and printed in a new book of rules by the present committee without first receiving the endorsement of a general meeting. He said he considered that this was a matter which struck at the foundations of the Association.

Mr FRED RUSSELL submitted that before they could proceed they must confirm the old rules.

Considerable discussion followed, and Mr GERALD said that up to the last annual meeting the objects of the Association had never been defined, and it had taken an active part in other things besides getting concessions from the railway companies. At a large meeting held at the Canterbury a report from a sub-committee as to the contract question was approved, and sanction was given to continue the work they had started. Now the committee proposed to insert words which would put an end to the good work which the Association could undertake. It was childish to limit the usefulness of the Society. There were a hundred and one things which could be done for their profession, and the committee had no right to act as they were doing. At the last general meeting he and others of his way of thinking were defeated. He would make no comment on the way the election was worked, but the result came as a surprise to him and to those who had worked with him. He was asked to rejoin the committee to carry the work on, but he refused to sneak in at the back entrance after the front door had been slammed in his face. In turning their back upon him they had turned their backs upon the heads of the profession, who had given him encouragement and support and without whom he could have done nothing. The committee had altered the rule in order to save their faces, and for nothing else. Their action he could only describe as paltry to a degree. The Press was right when it said that certain members might wipe the word gratitude out of their vocabulary. The committee wasted its time in dealing with the case of the Brothers Jones or the Sisters Brown while there were countless things to be done for the benefit of the profession, and the Association would be allowed to sink back into its old position of insignificance.

The CHAIRMAN, replying to Mr Gerald's attack, denied that the committee had turned their backs upon that gentleman or that they were introducing a new rule to save their faces. They simply wanted to define the objects of the Association. He desired to remind the meeting that the Association was started for the purpose of getting a concession of one-third fare for travelling artistes. The theatrical managers and the representatives of the railway companies met and agreed on terms which were up to the present of a most amicable character. If any attempt was made to turn the Association into a body to fight the railway companies the latter would withdraw concessions which were as important to the Brothers Jones and the Sisters Limelight as to their richer brethren and sisters of the profession, and the Association would be dead from that day. If they wanted a trade union to fight managers, let them form one, and he was cordially with them, for he was afraid of no one, because managers might come and managers might go, but turns would go on for ever. Let them, however, remember that when Charles Coborn called a meeting to form a trades union four members of the committee of the Association attended. Let them use their strength and income and power for the purpose for which the Association was formed, which was to help the weak, and if they had axes of their own to grind, not to grind them at the Association's expense.

Mr FRED RUSSELL contended that the Chairman in his reply had raised certain controversial points which the meeting was entitled to discuss. He protested against discussion being stifled.

Mr PHIL RAY also indignantly protested, and told a member who interrupted him to "shut up."

On the consideration of rule IV., "That the objects of this Association shall be for obtaining railway and kindred concessions of beneficial interest to its members,"

Mr ADDERLEY HOWARD moved, and Mr FINNEY seconded, the insertion after the words "beneficial interests" the words "and for the amelioration and general advancement of the music hall profession."

The amendment on being put was lost, twenty-nine voting for it and thirty-four against.

A question arose as to the appointment of the secretary, it being proposed by the new rules that he should be elected by the full committee voting by proxy instead of being elected annually.

Mr HOWARD thought that the secretary should be elected annually, but upon the chairman stating that the new rule was in accordance with Mr Stuart's wish he withdrew the amendment he proposed moving.

Mr PHIL RAY complained that at the last election of the committee a certain member got others to sign blank voting papers, to which he afterwards added the names of candidates.

The CHAIRMAN said it was very reprehensible conduct.

Mr VOYCE said that two or three similar cases came under his knowledge, and he proposed that any member so offending again shall have his name struck off the voting list for two years.

Mr MILLIS seconded, and it was agreed that this should be added to the rules.

Mr GRIFF said he had, at the request of a lady, put crosses against names on the voting paper. Had he done wrong?

The CHAIRMAN pointed out that the rule said plainly that the voting paper must be filled up and signed by the voter.

Mr GRIFF said he would see that the voting paper was not sent in.

The CHAIRMAN announced that the Committee had agreed to accept the following amendment of Rule 7 standing in the name of Mr Adderley Howard:—"That four Scrutineers be elected at the General Meeting, and that all voting papers be kept for at least fourteen days after the declaration of ballot; also that any member of the M.H.A.R.A. can, on paying a deposit of £8 8s., demand a fresh scrutiny, and should the original scrutiny be correct he shall forfeit same, but should there be a mistake he should receive his £8 8s. back."

The CHAIRMAN also stated that it had been agreed to omit the following rule:—"That it shall be in the power of the Executive Committee to amend or alter such rules as may be deemed necessary, but that such amendment or alteration shall only be in force until the next ordinary general meeting of the members of the Association." The effect of dropping this rule was that a new committee could not upon entering office alter the rules. The last rule read as follows:—"That the committee shall have power to accept or decline any applicant for membership or to renew his or her renewal of membership without stating their reason for so doing. The committee shall be empowered at their discretion to suspend, expel, or fine any member for breach of these rules."

Mr GERALD proposed as an amendment that the committee should give the applicant a reason for their rejection of a renewal of membership.

Mr LEE seconded, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr EUGENE STRATTON enquired why Mr George Gray was not permitted to renew his card of membership.

The CHAIRMAN said if Mr Stratton had heard the matter discussed in committee, he would not probably have put the question. Mr Gray had entirely disregarded rule eighteen, which read, "That in the case of troupes the annual subscription, as stated in Rule XII., shall be paid for each and every member of such troupe." Besides, Mr Gray had left the Association of his own free will, having allowed his card to run out.

Mr STRATTON expressed himself satisfied with the reply, as did Mr ADDERLEY HOWARD, who had placed a similar question on the agenda. He was sorry, however, that Mr Gray was not allowed to attend the meeting.

Mr W. LEE, referring to some remarks made by the chairman in his address, denied that there was any ill-feeling between the Rats and the Terriers.

The CHAIRMAN said his remarks were only intended in a jocular sense.

The following gentlemen were then elected scrutineers:—Messrs C. Pastor, H. Nation, J. Hart, and Fairbanks.

On the recommendation of the committee the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Hon. President, Mr Dan Leno; Hon. Vice-Presidents, Messrs James Bailey, M.P., G. H. Chirgwin, Charles Coborn, J. W. Cragg, George Gilbert, Albert Le Fre, Harry Lester, Fred W. Millis, W. J. P. Monckton, Harry Randall, Lord John Sanger, and W. Tudor; Hon. Treasurer, Mr Douglas White; two Hon. Auditors, Messrs Voyce and Carlton; Chartered Accountant, Mr George Shead.

Mr DOUGLAS WHITE briefly returned thanks for his re-election.

Mr PAT CAREY moved and Mr JOE LAWRENCE seconded a vote of thanks to Mr Cattaneo for the use of the hall, which was carried.

A vote of thanks was also accorded the Press on the proposition of Mr JEAN SEUL, seconded by Mr F. W. MILLIS.

Mr BOB HUTT proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman for the great ability and strict impartiality he had shown.

Mr GRIFF seconded the motion, which was carried, and the CHAIRMAN having acknowledged the compliment, the meeting, which had lasted four hours, separated.

A FAMOUS NATURALIST.

J. D. HAMLYN.

About the end of last June Mr J. D. Hamlyn, of St. George's-street East, was employed by the Royal Commission on Tuberculosis to collect chimpanzees on the West Coast of Africa. From the Hon. Walter Rothschild and other naturalists Mr Hamlyn also received commissions, and it was hoped that, among other things, he might bring back a pigmy hippopotamus, which has never yet been imported. Provided with introductions and special letters to the Governor of the Congo Free State, Mr Hamlyn arrived in Boma on Aug. 3, and went thence to Matadi, Stanley Pool (or Léopoldsville), and Brazzaville, where he made a collection of skins and skulls of chimpanzees, including some of the n'schiego, and a number of fish, some of which appear to be new. His next point was Loango, where he secured his first chimpanzee—a very good specimen—and thence to Mayumba, the great depot for the trade in grey parrots. His next point was Sette Cama, the port to which gorillas and chimpanzees captured in the immediate hinterland are brought for sale. The Congo Forest borders the river, which runs at the back of the English factory, and it is in the forest that the anthropoids live. Mr Hamlyn is inclined to limit the actual gorilla country to the stretch between Libreseville and Loango, though, of course, chimpanzees extend much farther eastward. The adult animals are killed by native hunters, who sell the young to the agents of the various factories along the coasts. At the factories the young anthropoids are kept till buyers are found for them. The supply is neither abundant nor sure. Adults are seldom caught and soon die, even in the modified captivity they have to endure at a trading station. There appears to be no very great difficulty in keeping the smaller animals at the factories, for some at least of their natural food can be readily procured by the native boys. Mr Hamlyn reports the forest region as being rich in animal life, though the density of the bush prevented captures. Monkeys were abundant; and immense snakes were seen, but the prejudices of the natives saved the reptiles from death or capture. On leaving West Africa he had with him three gorillas and five chimpanzees. Of the larger anthropoids only one arrived alive, and four of the smaller (which have already been sent to their destination). The surviving gorilla, called Gibson, after the agent from whom he was purchased, is about the same size as, but certainly blacker than, the female exhibited in the Zoological Gardens in 1896, to which belongs the record for longevity in this country—something about six months. He has been seen by Dr. P. Chalmers Mitchell, the Secretary of the Zoological Society, and can certainly be described as very tame, making no attempt whatever to use his nails or teeth when handled, and evidently enjoying the luxury of being nursed. One thing, however, will rouse him. There came with him, as there did with Venus and Chloe, a young mandrill. Though Gibson displays no affection for or interest in the little baboon, the slightest threatening movement towards it brings the anthropoid to its feet at once, while the mandrill seeks refuge behind some convenient piece of furniture. It is to be hoped that the public will have an opportunity of seeing this gorilla at the Zoological Gardens, or elsewhere, where it would certainly be a great attraction, for so large a male has never been seen in England before. Other living freight brought back by Mr Hamlyn include nearly a hundred grey parrots, two antelopes (possibly new to science), two pigmy porcupines, two scaly anteaters, two sea eagles, a red river hog, and a collection of land crab. Among the Spirit specimens are two large manatees, and a huge gorilla, said to tape 6ft. 6in. from sole to crown and 6ft. 9in. in armspread.

A SHOCKING accident, which has unfortunately terminated with fatal results, occurred at the Circus of Varieties, Rochdale, on Monday evening. During the second performance the Woodbee Wonders, described on the programme as comedy herculean acrobats, were performing a pyramid when the top man (Mr Frank Leonard, of Birmingham), prior to doing a somersault, failed, it is assumed, to get a proper balance, and alighted on his neck and shoulder on the stage. The curtain was lowered and the poor fellow was carried off the stage. Medical aid was quickly procured; the doctor ordered his removal to the infirmary, where he was taken in the ambulance conveyance. Mr Leonard was not rendered unconscious, and his fellow artistes did not think he had sustained very serious injuries. However, upon examination it was found that his spine was fractured. He did not long survive his fall, and died soon after twelve o'clock on Tuesday. An inquest will be held on the body by the local coroner in due course. Mr Leonard was only twenty-eight years old, and leaves a widow, who was with him, and one child.

AT Marlborough-street Police-court, on Wednesday, Nipper Lupino Lane, accompanied by Mr Frank Glenister, manager of the London Pavilion, and a lady, appeared in the witness-box with the view of obtaining a licence to perform at that place of amusement for a month from Monday next. The boy was stated to be the son of clever parents and a most accomplished dancer. Mr Plowden, remarking "It seems to agree with him," granted the licence.

MR. JESSE SPARROW'S BENEFIT.

Everywhere that Mr Jesse Sparrow has planted the standard of variety the prosperity of the enterprise and his personal popularity have grown side by side, and this was fully borne out on Tuesday, when his annual benefit attracted to the Camberwell Palace an overflowing audience and a crowd of performers that swelled the programme to enormous lengths. Added responsibilities have come to Mr Sparrow since his last bespeak, but there is no diminution in the energy of his administration, which has from the first commanded constant patronage and secured the respect and admiration of all. The esteem in which he was held was given practical proof on Tuesday, when about fifty gentlemen assembled on the stage, and a substantial token of regard, in the form of a cheque, was presented by Mr J. J. Fruin on behalf of subscribers both in the house and out. Mr Fruin said the cheque ran into three figures, and, he understood, established a record so far as the recipient was concerned, Mr Sparrow, who received an ovation when he stepped forward, said his remarks would be very brief, as he expected so many eminent artistes between the hours of eleven and twelve. He thanked most heartily the gentlemen around him, and the subscribers to the testimonial for their generosity and kindness. He did not know what he had done to gain such favour. He did all he could to deserve their appreciation, and he was unable fully to express his gratitude. A friend of his once said he was an excellent manager, but one of the rottenest speakers he knew, and, acting on that hint, he would make his remarks very brief. He thanked the directors of the hall, Mr Bassett and the band, the staff, the Terriers' Association, who were present in such force, the members of the Press—among whom he numbered many valuable friends—the artistes, and the public at large for the generous manner in which they had supported him that night, and he hoped the entertainment was worthy of that support. Loud cheers greeted Mr Sparrow as the curtain descended, the enthusiasm taking the form of musical honours, which were rendered by the whole audience. The programme, as befitted the occasion, was graced by the names of many artists of renown, and for fulf four hours and a half ran its amusing course. The hopes of the audience centred upon Mr Dan Leno, who had promised positively to appear. The celebrated comedian was, however, beaten at the post, for he arrived just after the audience had departed, but not too late to receive a cordial welcome by friends in the adjoining saloon. Mr George Robey was an early contributor to the fun, and the house revelled in his whimsicalities. Laughter was also requisitioned in large quantities by Mr Wilkie Bard, who proved the drollest of the droll in his "soldier" song. A warm welcome was extended to Miss Katie Lawrence, who rendered her latest and most popular effusion; and the artistic comedy of Miss Billie Barlow found the usual quota of admirers. Mr Harry Champion employed his comic activities in his song of "Oo-Er," and was recalled to sing "Ping-Pong." Mr Bob Hutt put all his eccentric energies into his funny song of "Make Haste;" and Mr Edwin Barwick contributed a characteristic item. The Four Estrellas gave a gymnastic performance of surpassing skill; Miss Ethel Ra-Leslie submitted a graceful song; Miss Cissie Dryden won applause for a smart impersonation; a realistic wrestling match between Hackenschmidt and Tom M'Nerney was shown on the Edisonograph; the progress of the sketch, Three of a Kind, by the Ethel Arden and George Abel company, was made to a ceaseless accompaniment of mirth; and the list of artistes was completed by Mr Will Evans, Mr Michael Nolan, the Four Burnells, the Bale Troupe, Mr Fred Clements, Miss Dora Clifford, Mr Henry Bekker, Tots Davis, Mr James Fawn, Mr Hamilton Hill, Mr Wilson Hallett, Mr Clem Myers, Miss Morgan, Mr Arthur Prince, Miss Florrie Robina, Bijou Russell, Mr Fred Storey, Miss Flo Raynor, Miss Jenny Reeve, Mr Harry Weldon, Len Young, Gilberg and May, Mr Fred Cary, Miss Dolly M'Calla, George and Edwards, Miss Connie Williams, the Sisters Tinsley, Barrett and Knowles, and R. W. Bentley. Friends from far and near were numbered among the guests, those who were present to show their goodwill to Mr Sparrow including Mr Arthur W. Bray, Mr E. A. Golding, Mr H. Joyner, directors; Messrs E. V. Page, Tom Tinsley, E. E. Giles, Frank Macnaghten, Walter Gibbons, Fred Higham, Harry Barnard, Tom Pacey, Fred Reeves, E. De Vere, Geo. Peel, Geo. Foster, F. Napoli, Dave Cohen, G. Barclay, H. Masters, H. Burrows Smith, S. Hyman, G. E. Aplin, C. Chapman, R. Cass, Tom Henderson, Geo. Pearson, Will Sergeant, Cory Woodrow, Capt. Woodger, Joe Lawrence, Will Oliver, Sheldon, P. Hart, Geo. Fuller, Tom Claxton, F. Nilen, W. S. Bassett, J. Fortune, E. Edelsten, and W. Edelsten, many of whom formed a strong committee of stewards. Mr Leon A. Barrett and his orchestra coped successfully with their arduous work, and smartness and precision were secured by Mr Geo. Foster and Mr Charles Chapman in their supervision of the stage.

HOCKEY.

BARNSLEY H.C. v. "BETWEEN TWO WOMEN" H.C.

Played on the Darton Ground, Barnsley, on Thursday, Oct. 13, a hardly fought game ending in a win for Barnsley by three goals to one.

Barnsley.—G. Moorhouse, E. Longley, V. Longley, H. Lawrence, M. Krakner, forwards; Miss P. Clifford, T. Jupp, A. Brass, half-backs; W. Wood, W. Hoey, backs; H. Corker, goal.

"Between Two Women."—H. Marlow, F. Morgan, T. Edlin, C. Stewart, F. Rilings, forwards; Miss D. Lorraine, Miss M. Robson, Mr A. Darton, half-backs; Mr G. Woods, Mr F. Sandy, backs; Miss S. Hammersley, goal.

Mr F. Morgan scored for the company. The referee was Mr A. Ward.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—My attention has been called to an advertisement in The Era relating to the Hippodrome in Glasgow, and stating that Mr Hengler had been appointed manager. As "the notice" does "not refer to me, nor to my son," I can only conclude it refers to one of my nephews, probably Albert Henry; but, in any case, it would be obviously better that junior members should give their initials in any business announcement.

Yours faithfully, JOHN M. HENGLER.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at any of Smith and Sons' bookstalls throughout the provinces.

PARIS MUSIC HALL NOTES.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

THE Casino management is to be congratulated on having secured some excellent acts which make up a very agreeable programme. The opening number, the Allesons, two capital acrobats, look very trim and smart in their white costumes, and introduce two entirely new tricks in addition to the regular performance. A genuine success is to be recorded for the Kiesleys, three clever gymnasts, Germans we should say, from their style of work. The woman hangs by her feet and acts as a trapeze for the man and the young girl. To some it is a painful performance, though it is one of a high order. The woman is extraordinarily capable, but her bandaged wrists tells the tale of awful tension and strain. The man is a neat and careful gymnast, evidently thoroughly appreciating the danger and effort involved, and the young girl, a plump and pleasing little person, is enormously strong, with a wonderful development of muscles in her arms, fully demonstrated when she makes a horizontal bar of her sturdy arms and carries off both the man and woman without any visible effort. The Marzahni style themselves musical eccentrics.

MISS BORDEVERRY, in her sensational shooting act, hits the bull's-eye rapidly without a single miss at a distance of eighty mètres. It is rather a disquieting sensation for those in the direct line of vision. The number resembles very much that made so popular years ago by little Annie Oakley with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show. The Hartleys are very successful. Young Hartley is a very good performer. His leaps are finely and neatly executed. He bandages his eyes and ties his feet, then leaps forwards and backwards over seven chairs. He leaps over a candle and extinguishes it; over a watch and opens and closes the spring back; over his sister's pretty face, and leaves a heavy smudge on her piquant little nose; and over a bowl of water, lightly scattering the fluid in transit. Miss Hartley is of great assistance to her brother. She is as busy as a bee and as pretty as a picture. She sets the stage, and throws so much energy and humour into her work that she becomes a pleasing feature of a bright and clever number.

THE most amusing portion of Professor Macart's entertainment is to watch the antics of a tiny monkey which he permits to stray about in the boxes and round the orchestra. The ladies in the boxes coax and pet the weird little beast, and offer him sweets, cigarettes, and other inducements. The other performers on the stage are quite neglected for the interest evinced in this precocious little animal, even though the trained dog-faced baboons and the dogs are really clever, and do credit to their professor's teaching.

HERBERT LLOYD gives us the old Tramp act. He is very funny, but it is difficult to get anything new out of this old number; in fact, many comedians who have made the act so popular in Paris are cutting it out of their return dates. The United States Gatling Guns is a very moving representation of artillery in charge of their guns in time of war. We have some very effective drill to begin with, and then a stirring representation of a battle. The men worked hard, and are well received.

RALPH JOHNSTONE is at last back again in Paris, where he created such a sensation two years ago or more at Olympia. There are cyclists and cyclists, but there is no doubt that Johnstone can justifiably announce himself as the champion trick rider of the world. He has introduced some new tricks since last here. His pirouette on the step is very difficult. His playing of the inevitable Cake Walk on a specially designed piano is also excellent. His ladder has seventeen steps, and then two drops on two other platforms, and then the dead drop to the stage. The crash with which he comes down is sufficient testimony to the force and the jar the rider must experience. He is enthusiastically welcomed.

THE Folies-Bergère is filled nightly by people anxious to see the latest novelty in the shape of a highly amusing sketch entitled "An Evening at a London Music Hall," which is admirably presented by Billy Reeves. Seldom has a better bit of character acting been seen on the legitimate stage than Mr Reeves's impersonation of a swell, in a box, slightly the worse for a good dinner. There is not a trace of exaggeration, and he keeps the house in shouts of laughter from start to finish. The blasé Parisians find themselves roaring as heartily as the few English and Americans present.

THE ballet, from the German, is called The Fairy of the Dolls, and is a very dull affair apart from the exquisite dancing of Morini and Vincenti, from the Scala at Milan. Oterita is a lively young lady who was for some time a favourite at the "Rat Mort," a restaurant in Montmartre, where she danced her Spanish dancers to the delight of the Bohemian and other habitués of that unique restaurant. Now she has provided herself with gay new gowns, and a sad young man to twirl her in her gyrations, and she is kindly received by an audience a bit weary of the eternal Spanish Fandango. The Sleedes give a clever pantomime in their capitally-arranged mysterious house. The illusion is well done, and the water effect is very pretty.

THE Skemka give an old act under a new guise, and very successfully into the bargain. They do not pose as "Acrobats Mondaines," which, being interpreted, means an ordinary acrobatic act with the performers attired in ill-fitting, uneasy evening dress suits. The performers are content to wear that most attractive of all costumes on a well-made man, the glittering tights of the harlequin. The set is prettily arranged, with a practical fountain which emits sparks of multi-colored lights instead of water. The Eight Julians give a capital performance in their Jeux Icariens. Where all are so clever it is hard to particularise, but special mention must be made of the little lad who looks like a Japanese, and who does some magnificent work.

ALL Paris is delighted to welcome Bostock back. The invitation soiree on Saturday was fully attended by all those who wished to do honour to a showman who had succeeded in making a success of a clean show in Paris. In spite of all sorts of annoying accidents, in spite of the fact that rough weather and bad connection only landed the animals in Paris at noon, the show commenced promptly at 8 30. Herman Weedon, a popular favourite with Parisians, opened the programme. He had a long and arduous task with his half score of wild animals. They had barely been uncaged; they were still stiff and sore from travel, and unsettled and uncertain in their new surroundings, yet, with an unparalleled patience, Weedon put them through their tricks. The hyenas gave a lot of trouble, and the sloths exhibited an entirely misplaced amount of ungainly frivolity, but patience conquered all, and Weedon was loudly applauded.

THE new attraction, and one which will I am sure prove one of the most popular on the programme, is Miss Grace, who dances very charmingly while surrounded by four lionesses. She is most daring. It was positively blood-curdling to see the audacious way she flitted up to the ferocious beasts and daintily tossed her skirts and pointed her toes right into the beasts' capacious maw. Hodges and Launchmere are two clever coloured performers, who give amusing imitations of the languishing tones of a couple of amorous cats on the tiles. Buckner gives an illustration of what can be done in the way of balance on a bicycle pitched up into all sorts of impossible places. He is a fine looking young fellow, and does some clever new tricks.

THE Hippodrome has been improved out of all knowledge. There are capacious promenades, convenient and elegant places wherein to take the cup that cheers. The auditorium has comfortable stalls and cosy boxes. The orchestra is located round the arena, the arena itself being provided with a huge cage, which can be drawn up when there are tame performers on the stage. Altogether Bostock is to be highly congratulated on his opening.

ALL Paris seems crazy on the Magic Kettle. There is now one at the Parisiana, for which Monsieur Ruez is credited with having paid 15,000f. This is presented by Professor Zoele. But Mr Barrasford is always first in the field with any real novelty, and no matter how many imitators he may have, he will always be sure of letting his patrons at the Alhambra see the original article. Therefore we all went to see Ralph Dean boil water, light cigars by steam, make ice cream on a kettle, boil eggs and grapes till they crackled. It was all very interesting, and Dean has the advantage of an excellent interpreter who follows all he says very rapidly in French for the benefit of the Parisians.

THE sensational bicycle races seem to excite the gallery, but these acts depend mainly on their danger for their attraction. Each new risky trick has to be more dangerous than the last. Arthur Nelstone is a delightful dancer, with plenty of humour. He also speaks French excellently. The Three Richards are first-class acrobats and equilibrists. One generally notices that the top man is considerably lighter than the second man, but in this case all three are of the same height, thereby enhancing the difficulty of the top balancing. Florizel, a contortionist, performs capitally on a crystal platform; Martinoz, La et Do, appear as street singers; and Dufor, who has a lovely voice, sings some delightful chansonettes with charm and intelligence. Orford presents his elephants to the delight of the public. Boney, the tiny one, is a true low comedian. Lind? who likes to arouse curiosity as to his sex by this manner of styling himself on the programme, dances capitally and sings. He startles the audience when he takes off his wig and speaks in his own deep voice. He is a capital female impersonator, on the same lines as Stewart. The Bioscope, always a favourite at the Alhambra, is very interesting. New pictures include the Grand National Steeplechase and the Longchamps Steeplechase, also the defeat of Pretty Polly. Many celebrities are recognised, especially the genial director of the Alhambra himself, who bashfully essayed, we believe, to avoid the camera, but whose counterfeit presentment is cordially cheered nightly. Mr Brinn gives a strong man act, firing off cannons on his head and lifting weights up to 156lbs. He works hard and successfully.

HACKNEY EMPIRE.

Though it has been said that the labour market in the Hackney district is in a depressed condition, the attendance at the above palatial place of amusement does not seem to have diminished in the least, judging by the appearance of the interior either at the first or the second "house." A well-varied and attractive programme is what the patrons of the Empire have become accustomed to, and they are never disappointed in their expectations. And those who are apt to speak disparagingly of a music hall entertainment might well have their attention called to the fact that high-class music is included in the bill-of-fare. The orchestral selection this week is from Wagner's opera, Lohengrin, and admirably is it played by the band under the very able direction of Mr Walter Johnson, their reward being a hearty round of applause from an appreciative audience. A performance which is in the nature of a novelty to most people is seen in the gymnastic act introduced by Les Burnellys. One of these artists is an extremely clever performer on stilts, balancing himself in a wonderful manner, and, indeed, winning great distinction in an art that is little practised on the stage. Another performance of a novel character is that given by the Nolset troupe of cyclists. On a table which goes round at an exceedingly rapid rate the cyclists take their place, their object being to keep pace with its revolutions. This involves a considerable strain upon the riders, and their exertions are loudly applauded. Miss Winona Winter gives a clever ventriloquial sketch, and also scores with a song entitled "I want to be a leading lady." She has the valuable assistance of Mr William H. Banks, who appears in the character of a tramp, but prefers to call himself "a soldier of fortune." His excellent singing meets with marked approval. Mr Victor Travers is correctly described as a quaint comedian, and eccentricity in the matter of costume accentuates his humorous portrayals. His burlesque coon ditty is quite a speciality in its way, and whether posing as a scarecrow or as the great Napoleon, he is always original and amusing. His dancing, too, is extremely clever, and its merits duly appreciated. Miss Millie Hylton's new song, "I'm the new Suburban Belle," promises to become popular, and she sings it with her usual charm of manner. Mr George Alexander used to recite "If Villon were the King of France" in Mr Justin M'Carthy's play at the St. James's Theatre, and this possibly may have inspired the author of Miss Jessie Belmore's song, "That's what I'd do if I were King." Such a suggestion, for instance, as the better treatment of our old soldiers is, of course, bound to win applause. Werner and Reider make their mark as vocalists, and their imitations of the nightingale and the lark are very good. The Trapnell Family give a graceful acrobatic exhibition, their smart somersaulting being a feature of their performance. Mr Post Mason, American baritone, has a good song in "A Son of the Desert am I," and his turn is a decided success from an artistic point of view. Mr Harry Lawson prospers with a medley song, introducing snatches from most of the popular melodies of the day. The sporting sketch Over the Sticks is, of course, received with shouts of merriment. The race-course scene is distinctly exciting, and the doings of a realistic crowd afford considerable amusement. Mr Joe Elvin repeats his quaintly comical embodiment of Plodder Pilks; and Mr Harry Low is quite at home in the part of the jockey, Arthur Pilks. Miss Amy Ellis does well as Rebecca; and able assistance is given by Messrs Henry Gregory, Geo. Budd, Arthur Drew, and Miss Florence Harcourt. The front of the house is carefully looked after by Mr John Christie and his lieutenant, Mr Kennedy Johnson.

THE many friends of Mr C. E. Pritchard will be pleased to hear of his appointment to be musical director at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, where he will doubtless repeat the success he achieved when holding a similar position at the Chatelet Theatre, Paris. Of his ability as a conductor and for handling large bodies of performers no one who has seen him wielding the bâton has any doubt, as witnessed to by his triumphs at Birmingham and elsewhere. His most unsparing critics have always been unanimous in their praise for this and for the orchestration of his productions. His latest compositions are now in the press, and will shortly be published by Messrs Scott and Co.

AN application was made to the Liverpool magistrates on Wednesday that 2,000 copies of pirated music which were seized the previous Friday in a private house be delivered up by order of Court. The Liverpool agent of the Music Publishers' Protection Association, London, had seen hawkers enter the house and leave with a parcel. The music was all classified. It was stated on behalf of the defendant that he did not resist the application. The music belonged to a lodger, who, upon receiving the summons, decamped. The Bench ordered the music to be delivered up, and the defendant to pay £5 5s. costs incurred by the Association.

DEATH OF WILLIAM TOFT.

We regret to chronicle the death of Mr William Toft, the well-known and respected roundabout proprietor, who died on the 14th inst., at his residence, Oxford Lodge, Oxford-road, Ranelagh, Dublin. The remains were interred at Mount Jerome Cemetery, Dublin, on Monday, and the Rev. Gilbert Mahaffy, M.A., Incumbent of St. Peter's Church, officiated at the graveside. The late Mr William Toft was born at Cardiff on April 9, 1870, and first travelled with his father's roundabouts, going from Scotland to Belfast in Jubilee year, where a fair was organised, and which was continued after his father's demise by the late Mr Toft and his partner, Mr David Turnbull, in the north of Ireland. Mr Toft devoted most of his time to the south of Ireland, making his headquarters at Dublin, and throughout the whole of the country his name was well known, his services being specially requisitioned for all the leading bazaars and festivities.

Proof of the esteem in which the deceased was held is afforded by the appended list of travellers from England and elsewhere and the numerous private friends who also attended the funeral:—The Rev. Gilbert Mahaffy, M.A., Messrs Harry, David, James, and Thomas Toft (sons), Mrs William Toft (widow), Misses Agnes and May Toft (daughters), Mr John Toft and Mr Thomas Toft (brothers), Mrs John Toft and family, Mr David Turnbull (brother-in-law) and Mrs Turnbull, Mrs Emmerson (mother-in-law), Mr F. Loftus Brownrigg (solicitor), Mr H. J. Wallis (Seaforth, Liverpool), Mr William Holmes (Manchester), Mr James and Miss Dewhurst (Preston), Mr William Mitchell (Heywood), Mr John Greene (Preston), Mr Chas. T. W. Freear, Mr Charles G. Freear, Mr John H. Freear (manager), Mr Coll Clarke (manager), Mr George Sutton (manager), Mr and Mrs Lenny Flint, Mr James Knight, Mr and Mrs Charles Rothwell, Misses Jenny and Sarah Rothwell, Mr William Turnbull, Mr Samuel Farrell, Mrs John Toogood, Mr Charles A. Beech and Knight; "With deepest sympathy," from Messrs W. Mitchell and Son, Heywood; "With Mr and Mrs Sam Farrell's deepest sympathy;" from Mr and Mrs David Turnbull, "Thy will be done;" "In loving memory," from his dear wife and family; "With truest sympathy," from Mr and Mrs Geo. Howard; "As a token of respect," from Carlow employees; from Mr and Mrs C. Rothwell and family, "With deepest sympathy; "With great sympathy," from Mr and Mrs J. F. Logan; from the employees, Messrs Toft and Turnbull's switchback (Dungannon); "With deep sympathy," from Mr and Mrs H. J. Wallis (Liverpool); "With deepest sympathy," from Mr and Mrs John Green (Preston); "With sincerest regrets," from Mr and Mrs William Holmes (Manchester); "With deepest sympathy," from Mr and Mrs P. Collins; from Mr John Collins (Hull).

AT the London Sessions on the 14th inst., before Mr M'Connell, K.C., and other justices, Louis Rees appealed against a sentence of six weeks' hard labour ordered him by Mr H. Curtis Bennett, at the Marylebone Police-court, for unlawfully assaulting and beating Miss Nancy Desmond. As will be remembered, the appellant was a hairdresser in Clifton-road, Maida-vale, and Miss Desmond an actress, living at Portsdown-road. A dispute arose in relation to a business transaction, in connection with which the assault took place. Counsel withdrew all the imputations made at the police-court against the ladies, and besides offering the sincerest apology for the unfortunate affair was willing, with the Court's sanction, adequately to compensate the complainant. After deliberation in private, the Bench affirmed the conviction with costs, but directed Rees to be detained for six weeks in the second division instead of with hard labour.

MISS CONSTANCE ELGIN has quite recovered from a bad attack of laryngitis, and has been engaged by Mr Cecil Barth to play Florence Hastings in An Actor's Romance.—Mr Frank Weathersby, who for the past six years has managed John F. Sheridan through Australia and South Africa, is expected to arrive in London about the middle of December from Africa. Mr Sheridan returns to London also.—Mr J. Henry Twyford, for some time associated with Mr Norman V. Norman's and Mr F. R. Benson's management, and with Mr J. H. Leigh's productions at the Court Theatre, has been engaged by Mr Philip Cass for the Mermaid Society productions at the Royalty Theatre, W.

MR N. HIGGINS, in the course of the sensational fight in the third act of A Modern Judas, at the Grand Theatre, Boscombe, on Tuesday last, had the misfortune to break his leg. He received every care and attention from the doctors at Boscombe Hospital, where he is progressing, we are glad to say, as favourably as can be expected.

HULL FAIR.

(SPECIAL TO THE ERA)

Hull, in striking contrast to its great compeer Liverpool, has never lost its municipal grip of its fairs. As a city and maritime port it has moved with the times, but in its eager development and advance its celebrated October Pleasure Fair has moved and improved with it. The fair and its management is an object lesson to all other municipalities.

Seventeen years ago the growth of the town made the holding of the fair on the market ground and in the main streets no longer practicable This fact was recognised, and the extensive Cattle Market ground in Walton-street became the fair ground. Here the fair had room to grow, and its easy access to the teeming multitudes of Hull and its neighbourhood made it an ideal site for the people's annual outdoor carnival. This accessibility has been greatly increased by the advent of the penny electric car service of the Corporation, each year breaking the record of the past in the number of people journeying by car to the fair. Like unto Birmingham and Nottingham, Hull is a fair of pilgrimage—visitors by train from all parts of the kingdom throng the streets. Here, again, the fair ground is admirably placed, for it is near the termini of all the great railway lines. Forty to fifty thousand passengers is the average yearly number of these merry pilgrims to the fair. At once as you enter Walton-street the fair begins—indeed, the street itself is a vast conglomerate bazaar, with scores of stalls and hundreds of novelty vendors stretching right away to the principal entrance to the fair ground itself. The ordinary traffic of the thoroughfare is diverted for the week into other channels, and the vast avenue of stalls and small varieties that Walton-street becomes is an integral feature and charm of the fair. Now we enter the spacious grounds, so admirably arranged and set out by Mr Robert Grace, superintendent of markets and fairs. The division of the ground into parallel streets or avenues keeps the vast crowd of sightseers well distributed, and constantly the stream of life moves along these well-ordered channels.

Roughly speaking, the shows are ranged along three sides of the square. The roundabouts and other machine novelties are in the centre, so fixed that they break the thronging multitudes into the three avenues we have already mentioned. In the glowing light of scores of giant arc lamps and thousands of incandescent lights, these wonderful and artistically beautiful machines drew the crowds into the whirling magic vortex. Gondolas, galloping and jumping horses, revolving wheels, switchbacks or steam tugs, ships in air or yachts on the sea—all were in open and free competition for the patrons of their varied and gloriously bewildering enterprises. Amongst this scene of light and life were found Goldthorpe Marshall's Venetian realisations, W. H. Marshall's galloping horses, W. Shipley's three-abreast gallopers and four-abreast of the same proprietor, Aspland's (Mr Ben Howden) gondolas, George Green's Glasgow roosters, J. Waddington's Venice from Leeds, Waddington and Sons' twin tugs, P. Collins's, Limited, racing cockerels (manager, Mr Summerhayes), P. Collins's, Limited, rolling gondolas (manager, W. Mullett), M. Lieske's gyrating wheel, John Collins's four-abreast gallopers, John Collins's steam yachts, W. Murphy's "Golden Venice," Claude Hamilton's ostrich farms, A. Morley's skyscrapers, and R. Payne's manual swings.

A long line of high-class shooting ranges, bottle batteries, egg-smashing targets, and Morris tubes, all worthy of special mention, were the concerns of Messrs George H. Cornwell, J. Batty, R. Payne, W. Ratcliff, A. Kelly, E. Jameson, M. Lieske, T. Smith, and Mrs Watson.

The excellent photo studios of Mr F. Walton, J. Turner, J. Towler, George Turner, and H. Hammond occupied good positions on the central and main entrances.

A very striking feature of this fair was the great number of toy and fancy bazaars. These stretched in a straight line 800ft. long, the visitors passing from one bazaar to another. The concerns thus joined together were the celebrated bazaars of Messrs A. Seed, F. Seed, T. Haworth, A. Gladstone, and O. Lumb, "a fairy cavern" of delight for the children of Hull.

Bostock and Wombwell's Royal No. 1 aggregation commanded our first attention as we reached the end of the entrance avenue. The collection of wild animals was very complete, and there were also English novelties, such as the midget donkey and pony, the latter fully grown at 24in. high. There were dromedaries and camels, and good-natured elephants, who carried the youngsters on their backs, and there were lions and tigers who went through a performance under the direction of Captain Wombwell, and some leopards and bears, who obeyed the word of command of Captain Rowley. The untamable lions gazed curiously at the visitors, but whilst they suffered their trainer to enter their cage, they will not be taught.

There were novelties in addition to the large congregation of wild creatures, and one of the most prominent of those was Linus, a wonderful horse brought from Oregon. Visitors were struck with amazement on seeing this equine marvel, which has a double mane 17 feet long, and a tail 13 feet in length. Another attraction of an unusual nature was the Patagonian sea lion, which is the only one of its kind, to be seen with its suckling babe. These were only two, however, of the many attractions which Bostock and Wombwell put before the public.

Bailey's Great American Circus (proprietors, R. Fossett and Sons) is another standing feature of this fair. With a stud of 150 horses, and a company of bareback riders, male and female gymnasts, acrobats, trapezists, wire walkers, and a galaxy of clowns, splendid entertainment was given in the vast arena, and crowded audiences rewarded the enterprise of the proprietors. Randall Williams' successors (Monte Brothers), with their Cinématograph theatre, exhibited an unique display of the best and newest animated photography. Messrs Chipperfield's French menagerie maintained its high reputation, and fully satisfied its numerous patrons. Captain Tom Payne's Bioscope, with its excellent range of up-to-date films—coloured—and living pictures, did, as usual, excellent business. G. H. Kemp's Anglo-American show more than sustained its high position as being in the front rank of Cinématograph theatres, the outside parade and the inside show being of the very best. Sahib Leo's Egyptian Hall mysteries have been the talk of the fair, and deservedly so. The mystery man is so unique in all his demonstrations of the white and black magic. J. Hastings' two grand booths, "The Prodigious Lady," and the No. 2 concern, "Diminutive Humanity," headed the list of abnormals, closely followed by Longman's fat baby, and Geo. White, the living human trunk. The animal abnormals and freaks were: Horatio's giant horse, Chas. Relph's midget horse, and John Reph's giant rodents; Prof. Wm. Gibson's capital show of mimicry, imitations of great men; John Relph's No. 2 show, the Mirrors of Mirth; Enoch Farrar's two shows—the Fine Art Salon and the Distorting Mirrors. Another celebrated show headed our second list, Manders' Royal Moving Waxworks, still as big a draw as ever, and deservedly so. The marvellous Hutins in their second-sight and esoteric mysteries; Mons. Le Neve and Norah Sullivan, athletes and wrestlers; Frank Gess's fistiana saloon, Messrs Holdsworth and Powell's fine art academy, and George Campbell's freak show were also on view, the double-bodied calf completing a chronicle of showland but seldom excelled on the fair grounds of England.

The goodly crowd of fair ground caterers with minor novelties, cokers, dart boards, ring boards, in fact, "all the fun of the fair," included the following:—Messrs Fisher, Chapman, Veti, Dearden, Brown, Cooper, White, Ryan, Rhodes, Stewart, Baines, S. Towers, Carroll, A. Barker, Knight, W. Turner, W. Holdsworth, Middlebrook, Geo. Lee, T. Burgwin, G. W. Prior, Dumont Brothers, Messrs Wright and Co., and Mrs Illingworth.

The list of local caterers contained the following, mainly engaged in the food supply and refreshment business:—Messrs Martin Bradley, Wormald, Scott, Ingram, Hughes, Evans, Anderson, Jeffries, Stone, and Collinson.

It was a typical British crowd, with a special naval character. For the mariners of England form a large proportion of the patrons of Hull Fair. It was a thoroughly hearty and good-humoured crowd, and it was good to be there—with it and part of it. From show to show with strict impartiality they crowded, from one joy of life to another the people pressed, the joy of its multiform amusements mirrored in every face the crowd in its good humour a true index of the success of Hull Fair in 1904.

A large measure of the success was due to Mr Robert Grace, the courteous and able superintendent of the fair. During the past nine years—the period covered by Mr Grace's tenure of office—the success of the fair has gone up by leaps and bounds, until to-day it ranks among the best fairs of the kingdom.

Also this year the Corporation will receive the largest sum in tolls yet obtained—£760; yet this is done not by increasing the rents of fair ground entertainers, but by getting more tenants, and thus increasing the drawing power and freshness and variety of attractions, without taxing the people occupying stands at the fair.

We heartily congratulate Mr Grace on his able management, and also join with his hosts of showmen friends in their sincere appreciation of his ceaseless kindness and of that of the official staff of Hull Corporation concerned in the fair.

CHILDREN ON THE STAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—While the profession as a whole shows so little interest in matters which concern it so deeply little can be done. For the past ten years we have been doing our utmost to scotch the snake which has been throwing its coils gradually around the child performer, but we have failed to arouse that general interest and co-operation so necessary to success.

Finding other methods of little or no avail, we have recently tried to move by adopting the time-honoured method of carrying the war into the enemy's quarters; for one has only to keep one's eyes open to see that these monstrous regulations, which treat the professional parent or guardian as an unnatural and brutal monster, are constantly violated by ministers of religion, magistrates, and schoolmasters where it suits their purpose. Only last March a case in point occurred, when the local schoolmaster of Walton-on-Naze gave at the King's Theatre two dramatic performances, under the direct patronage and in the presence of the local J.P., in which children ranging from the tender age of five years to fifteen years appeared, and this occurred in spite of the fact that we had warned those concerned through the police beforehand that in the case of the elder children the proper formal application had not been made at the time required by law, and that with regard to the younger ones even the magistrates themselves were powerless to permit their appearance on licensed premises "under any circumstances whatsoever."

Now, here it seemed to us was a grand opportunity for calling attention to our grievances. The public takes no notice whatever of the few lines devoted by the reporter from time to time to describe how this or that magistrate has arbitrarily used his powers to refuse a licence to the professional child performer, but, if we know anything of human nature, it would have pricked its ears at a charge against magistrates and schoolmaster of breaking the law, not inadvertently, but with their eyes open; and once having caught the Speaker's eye, our case would have to be much weaker than it is, or we much more brainless as a class than we are, if we failed to gain sympathy immediately after gaining attention.

We did what we could in this case by ventilating the matter in the local press, but the police took no further action, after they had notified the parties concerned that they were breaking the law, and though we attempted to gain the ear of the theatrical press, and to move certain other bodies of great weight we were unable to stir general interest at the moment, owing to the fact, that what may be called an internecine war was being waged just at that time between the two rival camps in the entertainment world, and the occasion was therefore not propitious for a coalition of forces against the common enemy.

Something must be done, however, and done soon; for, stringent as the laws are, there is not only a tendency towards increased severity in the application of them, but new regulations are threatened.

It is idle to say that the proposed new L.C.C. regulations, the substance of which is announced this week, are for street traders only. In them is a clause relative to children engaged "in the business of the sale of intoxicating liquors to be consumed on the premises," and in what may be called the studied ambiguity of the phrase there lies a possible danger. May not the child performer whose talent draws the public to theatre or music hall where liquor is sold be held by our grandmotherly authorities to be engaged in the business of the sale of that liquor, and if so, are we not in danger of having a new set of regulations to study and conform to, added to those already in force. Sir, I ask you how much longer we are as a class going to submit to legislation which not only affects us financially, to our great prejudice, but brackets us with the very scum of the earth?

We do not not ask to be free from either legislation or supervision, but let us have distinct regulations for ourselves alone, clear and well defined, and let us see to it that those regulations are not so framed as to render so-called facilities for conducting our business nothing more no less than unsurmountable barriers.

What is the use of a licence which may be granted one week by one magistrate and refused the next on exactly the same evidence by another? The manager of theatre, music hall, or touring company knows the uncertainty of the thing, and must safeguard himself by doing without the child. Where is the sense, again, in an age limit raised so high that the healthy, well-fed, well-developed child can no longer appear in a child's part? Is it not putting a premium on the stunted weakling? If the wiseacres who evolve the regulations doubt this, let them turn to your advertisement columns, Sir, and they will find that the few managers who still require child performers, invariably ask for children of fourteen years of age to look nine. Does not that speak for itself? Does it not show that these regulations are at one and the same time treating the theatrical parent as a brute and penalising him for his care of his offspring?

In conclusion we will say no more than this: we have a right to demand legislation that shall deal with us a separate class. We want a totally new and practicably workable machinery for the granting of licences, and an age limit which is not, as pointed out above, a crying scandal in itself. Therefore, whatever their differences may be on other points, it is the evident duty of those bodies which have the well-being and dignity of the theatrical and music hall professions in their charge, to combine to see that we get these things.

Yours faithfully, H. A LONSDELL,
DORA LANGLOIS.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

(COPYRIGHT.)

(FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

FROM the West of England we have news of Tavistock Fair. The Hancock aggregation of fairground novelties included their known menagerie and cinematograph theatre, the steam horses and switchback, with other novelties by the same firm, made the chief fun of the fair at Old Tavistock. Messrs Hancock generously gave a night's takings of one of their exhibitions to the funds of the Tavistock Cottage Hospital. There were great crowds of visitors, and the usual attendant throng of variety and novelty vendors. The weather was delightfully fine, and brisk business rewarded the efforts of the stall-keepers and amusement caterers.

GLASTONBURY HIRINGS, locally known as "John and Jude" Fair, was held this year in an almost constant downpour of rain, with the result that business was practically spoilt for the shows, &c., at the fair.

WARWICK FAIR had for its entertainers Cordwell, with Cinématograph; Farrell, with Academy of British art; W. Davies, with set of steam galloping horses, and No. 2 set the midget ponies; Chas. Farrell's aggregation, the fine art exhibition, the zoological roundabouts, and juvenile horses; and Mr Herbert, with stalls. The usual throng of minor novelties, vendors with stalls, and throwing games were in attendance.

A RECORD attendance was the note of Winchcombe Mop—or Hiring Fair The shows, roundabouts, stalls, and varieties were located in Queen's-square and Abbey-terrace.

SHIPTON-ON-STOUR FAIR was robbed of a good deal of its usual attractiveness this year by the clashing of dates with the big fair at Stratford-on-Avon. Much disappointment was expressed at the absence of Strickland's galloping horses and other novelties—in attendance at Stratford.

P. COLLINS, LIMITED, are paying a three weeks' visit to Redditch, with one of their superb concerns now on exhibition in the Royal Hotel yard. The great national racers and fox hunters, accompanied by R. Stanley's cocoanut gardens. More side-shows are expected before the end of the visit.

HOLLOWAY'S portable new Empire Theatre commenced a promising short season this week at Astwood Bank. The opening night was a brilliant success, the play being Our Lads in Navy Blue. The laughable farce Wanted, a Servant and Mr W. Redmond in his capital variety entertainment completed a meritorious performance.

THE répertoire for this week at Holloway's included Our Lads in Navy Blue, Driven from Home, The Gipsy Queen, Jane Shore, Brought to Justice, Vice and Virtue, the comedy Weary Willie and Tired Tim, with farces and variety turns. Eagle's photographic studio is still on the ground.

GEORGE MANLEY AND SON'S GRAND CIRCUS is now touring the Evesham Vale district. Pershore, Bidford-on-Avon, Alcester, and Henley-in-Arden have been visited. They give a grand parade and procession in each town they visit, and the excellent performances in the arena are much appreciated. The Evesham Hospital funds benefited to the extent of £25 10s. by entire proceeds of the performance at Wadbrook's Electrograph, briefly referred to in our issue of last week. The hospital committee and the people of Evesham recognise the generosity of the Wadbrooks. Not a penny was deducted for working expenses, and all worked their hardest to make it a success.

AT Bidford-on-Avon for the fair were Manley's circus, above mentioned, Strickland's galloping horses, swing boats and bottle batteries, with coker shies, stalls, and varieties.

AT Houghton-le-Spring there were two fair grounds—one under the auspices of the Urban District Council and another, known as "The Lake" Ground, under the management of Richardson Brothers, Limited. On the Council's ground in the Old Market were W. and B. Murphys' gondolas, Walter Hoadley's electric jumping horses, James Mander's cockerells, and George Pinninger's juvenile steam gallopers, John Cooper's Cinématograph show with up-to-date films, and Professor Moore's assault-at-arms and school of boxers, the high-class shooting ranges, Morris tubes, and rifle galleries of Messrs W. Strand, C. Robson, Geo. Pinninger, and T. O'Brian; the high-fliers and park swings of Messrs Brindle, W. Spencer, and Pinninger; the coker and Emma sheets of Messrs W. J. Firman, J. W. Gray, C. Robson, and T. O'Brian; and novelties and varieties, stalls, &c., by various caterers, amongst whom were Messrs Mitchinson, Wilson, and J. Harrington. Under the banner of Messrs Richardson at the Lake fairground, Mackney's ghost illusion and theatre of varieties, Sedgwick's circus, Geo. Payne's cinématograph, Testo's living pictures, and the fine art galleries of Messrs H. O'Brien and W. J. Bean were the shows. The lessees, Messrs Richardson Bros., Ltd., exhibited two of their high-class machines, the gondola switchback and the electric galloping horses; Mr Caris with superb set, the electric jumping horses, and Mr W. Noble with set of steam horses were the roundabout proprietors on this ground. Shooting ranges by Messrs J. Rosher, W. Testo, H. Caris, J. Robinson, T. Lowther, and H. O'Brian; Emma sheets and coker shies by Messrs H. Show, J. Smith, Coultman, M. Watkins, George Gray, T. Cain, D. Adams, T. Hartshorn, J. Wright, J. Jackson, Blenkinsop, T. Lowther, Johnson; boxes, &c., by Messrs George Gray, sen., Wm. Wilson, and G. Halliday, with photo. studios by Messrs J. Walton and Williams. The streets of the town were lined with stalls and toy bazaars, and Houghton-le-Spring was crowded with a vast throng of holiday-makers from far and near.

WE briefly reviewed last week the earlier stages of the Showmen's Guild work—the Parliamentary defence of its members' interests. We continue the story again, by way of remembrance, to stir up the laggard mind of some few who still hold back their full recognition and support of the work done by the Guild.

THE preparation of a private Bill by the legal experts concerned is a serious and, at all times, costly matter, even when it meets with no opposition. It may cost eight hundred, or even a thousand, pounds before it is through all its stages and becomes law. When, as in the notable cases of Eccles, Mansfield, and Halifax, there is determined opposition, then the costs easily mount up to two thousand pounds. Showmen have been too slow in the past in recognising this important factor of cost. For it stands to reason that a corporation will endeavour to get all the value it can when it enters upon costly work of private Bill legislation, so everything that can be imagined as being possibly useful or profitable to the town is crammed into the Bill. Their real objective may be additional powers for water or gas, electricity or tramway supply. Whatever may be the strong leading motive, the Corporation and its officials in framing their Bill will ask for a dozen or more extra things, on the off-chance of no opposition, or like wise mariners, that they may have somewhat to throw overboard to lighten the ship, and to better weather the storm.

"MODEL CLAUSES" for additional powers to make new bye-laws were in the Legal Text-books, and of course were inserted in nearly all private Bills promoted by public bodies. The greatest service the Van-dwellers' organisation has done was to show the Parliamentary draughtsmen, Corporation officials, and the whole body of Parliamentary agents acting at Westminster for promoters of private Bills that these clauses, whenever introduced, would be opposed and the life of their Bills endangered by the strenuous and well-organised show and fair ground interests.

THE victory over the powerful Corporation of Halifax marked a new stage in Parliamentary work. The Corporation found that the so-called "model clauses" to secure additional powers to make bye-laws to close outdoor entertainments and to restrict show business had been challenged and proved to be ultra vires in excess of the general law, and distinctly in restraint of trade. This the showmen proved in both the Eccles and the Mansfield cases.

HALIFAX, as we have seen, invented a new method of attack on the show business—it asked for a monopoly of fairs within its borders and powers to charge exorbitant tolls. Had the clauses been passed—and without opposition they would have been—a new precedent would have been set up, and the business of the fair been entirely at the mercy of the Corporation.

AFTER the defeat of the Halifax Corporation, and in the next session of Parliament, still another terror was attempted—this time by the District Council of East Ham. This authority sought to obtain in a so-called Improvement Bill most of the objectionable provisions of the defeated public Bill of the late George Smith, of Coalville. A clause in the Bill provided that "Without the approval in writing of the Urban District Council, no van or movable dwelling should be placed upon any ground, private or public, within the district," and gave summary power to the police to remove all such vans or movable dwellings. Had this passed into law a large metropolitan district would have been closed to showmen. The London showmen, however, guided by the Guild, petitioned against it, and at the last moment, when all was ready for a vigorous fight, the Council took fright, and dropped the clause out of their Bill.

THIS brings our rapid review of the Guild's Parliamentary work up to the session of 1903. Last year's work also included the fight with the Corporation of Hyde, the object of the Corporation being to test to the full the showmen's power of persistent defence and to exhaust their resources. Here again the showmen won, and the objectional clauses in the Hyde Bill were withdrawn.

IN 1903 a great amount of important defence work was done without recourse to Parliament. Objectionable clauses in the Bills promoted by Aston (Birmingham), Gateshead, Erith, Leigh, Llandrindrod Wells, and New Hunstanton were dropped after friendly negotiations with these bodies by the Guild's solicitors and its Parliamentary agent.

WE have still to deal with the work of the last session of Parliament (for showmen the most important of all work done in their trade interest), and to that we shall turn next week. Again we say, let showmen remember the splendid work done by the Van-dwellers' Society, and also to see that it is not starved to death for lack of funds.

HULL was this year chosen as the place for the annual meeting of the British Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union, and the gathering took place in the large public room of the Newington Hotel. The president, Mr George Green, of Glasgow, occupied the chair, supported by the following members of the Union:—J. W. Waddington and S. Waddington, Leeds; W. H. Marshall and Goldthorpe Marshall, Bradford; P. Collins, jun., and Mr Terry (for the P. Collins Company, Limited), Walsall; John Collins, Liverpool; T. Harniers, Ratherham; J. Corrigan, Leeds; J. Cooper, Sunderland; Wm. Murphy, Newcastle-on-Tyne; B. Howden, Boston; and T. Hurst, Manchester, secretary.

THE only business of public interest was the election of the executive officials for the ensuing year. The nominations of the Nottingham meeting were confirmed, and the following names communicated to the press:—President, Mr George Green; vice-presidents, Messrs P. Collins and G. T. Tuby; treasurer, Mr John Green; trustees, Messrs Wm. T. Mitchell, sen., Wm. Pedley, and J. Collins; auditors, Messrs Goldthorp, Marshall and H. Hibbert; and secretary, Mr T. Hurst.

SHOWMEN using the market ground at East Retford at its fair or for private business will be sorry to hear of the approaching retirement of Mr John Boulby, the obliging market superintendent and manager of the Town Hall. Mr Boulby retires after twenty-three years' service under the Borough Council. At a recent meeting of the Council his faithful services were referred to in highly appreciative terms, and the hope expressed both Mr and Mrs Boulby would live long in the well-won enjoyment of old age. The principal reason of Mr Boulby's decision to retire is the failing health of Mrs Boulby.

THE new Leicester Fair places the ancient borough in the same category as Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester, and Leeds. Its ancient fair banished from its time-honoured site to new ground, tolerated by the official world, yet still loved of the people, championed by the people, and more than ever a necessity to the tollers who enjoy the fun of the fair.

IT will be well to recall the peculiar circumstances under which the ancient Charter Fair in the picturesque Humberstone-gate was abolished. In 1902 the Corporation made a proposal to abolish the fair. This was condemned in open meeting of the burgesses held on the fair ground. The Rev. T. Horne made a vigorous speech in defence of the showman business, members of the Borough Council and and many influential Leicester gentlemen formed a local Fair Defence Committee, and great enthusiasm prevailed. The work of this committee soon revealed the peculiar conditions and conflicting interests involved in the effort to retain the fair on its ancient ground in the heart of the busy town, the greatest element of weakness in the defence being that the Corporation did not derive any toll or income from the fair. The right to levy tollage being vested in the tenants on the Humberstone-gate, each tenant had a perfect right to let that part of the broad thoroughfare that faced his shop or house. This right to let ground at the annual fair was a valuable asset to the tenant, and hence the determination of the people owning these rights to oppose the removal of the fair.

THE showmen saw the inherent weakness of this position, and whilst sympathising with the tenants and co-operating in public meetings of protest, they carefully avoided tying their case with them. The showmen were anxious above all things to save the ancient fair rights and franchises of the people of Leicester. Whether the town had outgrown the continuance of that fair in its centre was a question the showmen felt they could determine upon its merits. The removal to a more commodious site in the suburbs, yet easy of access from the centre, was to them, as reasonable business men, a possible contingency.

SO the matter stood in 1903, when the Home Secretary, taking the same view of the matter as the executive of the Showmen's Guild, brought the various parties to the dispute into conference at the Home Office. After exhaustive and careful inquiry, the Home Secretary asked the Corporation to provide a new fair ground, and thus conserve the interests of the showmen. This, to the credit of the Corporation of Leicester, be it said, was done, and after consultation with leading local showmen, a site was fixed upon, and all seemed plain sailing for the settlement of the dispute. Then, however, the tenants, face to face with the loss of their vested interests in the fair on its old ground, massed their forces in the Borough Council, and when the proposal to lease the new fair grounds came before the committee concerned with it the friends of the tenants in the gate were strong enough to throw out the proposal, and so defeat the working compromise between the Corporation and the showmen.

OTHER questions arising out of the conflict of vested interests concerned—such as who should have compensation, the tenant or the owner of the property on the gate—became so difficult that the Home Secretary could find no way out of the matter but by acceding to the Corporation's request to abolish the fair; but this he was reluctant to do.

THE lessees of the fair, which began on the 13th inst. and lasted till Monday, were Messrs P. Collins, Limited, J. Collins, jun., and A. Twigdon, who made arrangements in excellent style, and in order to inaugurate the grounds free attractions were provided by them, notably the performances of Aerlan and Ostara on the flying trapeze, a couple of gymnasts of much daring and smartness, and the sensational high-rope walking of Prince Alexander. There was also a display of fireworks by Messrs W. and J. Wilder, of Birmingham, in the evenings.

THE shows were headed by Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie (No. 2 collection), who paraded through the town on the opening day, with band playing, and attracted the attention of thousands of spectators; Mrs F. Collins's cinématograph, Arthur Twigdon's electograph, James Crighton's cinématograph, Buff Bill's menagerie and lion show, Mrs E Baker's circus, Mr R. Buckley's performing birds and hares, Prof. H. Hughes's boxing saloon, Bob Burden's wrestling ladies, S. Reeder's performing snakes and crocodiles and midget horse show, J. Bliss's giant crocodiles from the Nile, Madame Salva's tattooed wonders and the handcuff king, Cordwell's fine art exhibition, and T. Mateon's Coronation bullock. The machines included P. Collins's, Limited, two sets, the No. 1 racing cockerells and four-abreast horses, A. Twigdon's switchbacks and three-abreast horses, Mrs F. Collins's switchback and juvenile roundabout, J. Collins's bikes, P. Collins, jun.'s, steam yachts, F. Holder's "Sea on Land," T. Jarvis's steam swings, Messrs Chaplain, Neale, and Dobson's juvenile roundabouts, the shooting saloons of Messrs Dobson, Hughes, and Neal, the cokernut sheets of Messrs G. Whyatt, J. Humphreys, E. Humphreys, Mercer, and Cordwell, and Warwick's photograph saloon. All the "fun of the fair" was provided by Messrs Chaplain, Neal, Mercers, Cordwell, Pearson, and others. There were also numerous other attractions.

ONE of the echoes of Nottingham Goose Fair is the economic grumble or rumble of some hasty scribe in the local press. Our old friend, who can see no good in what he is pleased to regard as waste of time and money, is to the fore again, so that following the fair we have the usual tirade against it.

A WRITER to the Nottingham Daily Press thus unburdens his economic grief:—

Sir,—Will Nottingham be content to take a back seat behind Leicester and other towns who have had the courage to do away with their so-called fairs, with all their evil concomitants? No; I do not think she will, but will rise up determined to put a stop to an institution that was very useful and profitable in the days when we had no railways and communication between town and country was difficult, and the modes of doing business different, but which now has degenerated into an orgy which is anything but a credit to our good old city. To the tradesmen of the Market-place, who are very large ratepayers, it is a positive and cruel loss, in addition to having an unsettling effect upon our employees. It is much to be wished that public opinion were now ripe enough to allow our City Council to do their duty, and take steps to abolish what has now become a public and costly nuisance. I am, &c.,

ONE OF THE OLDEST AND LARGEST RATEPAYERS IN THE MARKET-PLACE.

SHOULD GOOSE FAIR BE ABOLISHED

The question has been asked for many years past, and will in all probability be asked for an equal number of years to come. In to-day's columns a correspondent enters his strong protest against the continuance of what he bluntly terms "a public and costly nuisance. He lays stress upon the fact that the fair inflicts a heavy loss upon the tradesmen of the Market-place, whose takings during the three days of the annual carnival show a serious falling off. These business people cannot, under the circumstances, be expected to view the fair with any friendly feelings, but they are in the unfortunate position of being in a minority upon this question. They point out rightly enough that though the fair may have been a useful institution in days before there was railway communication between town and country, it has now degenerated into an affair of pleasure pure and simple, and serves no useful purpose. The majority of the inhabitants, however, do not seem disposed to give up the old historic show. It will disappear in time, no doubt, but the time does not appear to have dawned yet. The first step will probably be the transference of the fair from the Market-place to some other site, and when that is done its days will be numbered. After all, it is a matter which the citizens have in their own hands.

OUR immediate reply is, "What will ye, sirs?" The people enjoy the fair with ever-increasing zest. The people you admit have the power to either continue or to abolish fairs. Well, let the voice of the people prevail. Now a word or two as to the economic heresy of "the largest ratepayer in the market-place." The drawing to the town annually of a hundred thousand people on pleasure bent is an economic gain that makes the small losses of individual traders sink into insignificance. The easement of public burdens by the tolls drawn from the shows—£1,500 for three days only—is a complete economic answer to such grumblers.

FOR answer to the other arguments we commend the critics of the fair to the oft-repeated statements in its favour by corporation officials and the city police. These men know—it is their business to know—and their word is for the fair, and not against it.

COLONEL W. F. CODY with his show paid a visit to Barnsley on the 13th inst. The programme contained some wonderful things and the spectacular attractions evoked much satisfaction. The performance of Colonel Cody, at the head of the Rough Riders of the World, is a thing once seen never to be forgotten. In the feats of shooting the Colonel was ably seconded by Johnny Baker, the celebrated young American marksman. There was also a spice of danger in the startling cycle ride of George C. Davis, the cowboy cyclist, in his wonderful leap through space. The side attractions traveling with the big show are worthy of special mention, and the exhibition throughout is carried on in a most business-like manner.

PORTSMOUTH is to have a "panopticon." Messrs Clarke and Rousby have secured a spacious building in the centre of the town, and as soon as the necessary alterations are completed and the electric light installed it will be opened with "twelve hours of continuous amusement."

ONE of the brightest ideas which we have yet heard of in connection with the difficult problem of making the Cinématograph practicable for the lanternist of modern means is that to which Messrs L. Gaumont and Co., the Cinématograph specialists, of Cecil-court, Charing-cross-road, are now giving a trial. The scheme enables the amateur or professional possessor of a Cinématograph projecting apparatus to hire or loan, on reasonable terms, a large number of Messrs Gaumont's numerous selections of film subjects, so that at the outlay of a guinea per night the private exhibitor can command an inexhaustible supply of film subjects. The "Elge" series of film subjects are well known in every music hall and theatre throughout the country, Messrs Gaumont being the pioneers and prolific producers of sensational, realistic, and, above all, comic pictures, while their collection includes subjects taken by their operators in all parts of the world. For those lanternists who do not already possess a Cinématograph, and who would desire to avail themselves of Messrs Gaumont's enterprise, a high-class Chrono Bioscope at a low figure has been placed on sale. Full particulars may be had on applying to Messrs Gaumont.

THE important fairs next week are Cinderford, Skegness, and Market Drayton on the 24th, Gainsborough on the 25th, Ely on the 27th, Exmouth, Great Marlow, Horncastle, Totnes, Warminster, Wellington, and Wigan on the 28th, Falmouth and Rotherham on the 29th, and Selkirk on the 31st.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I should be glad if you can make it known through The Era that I have just sustained a fearful loss. Just before midnight on Saturday our place was discovered on fire, and we barely escaped with our lives. In fact, my wife and baby were injured as she jumped down the stairs through the dense smoke. No time to save a single thing; everything went, clothes, money, exhibition, and my conjuring tricks and apparatus, testimonials, press opinions, and things I have collected, and that were priceless to me. Only time to get out with our lives, and 2s. 3d. in my pocket. The fire spread to other premises, and several other buildings were destroyed, doing nearly £30,000 damage. I am partially covered with insurance, but policies, both fire and life, were destroyed. In the meanwhile, I have not a penny to live on, and we have not a thing to put on, only what we have on, and no money to buy anything. If you can make this known, and my address, perhaps some kind friends will give or send me a little financial help at once. Through the kindness of Mrs Jenkins here we have a shelter. Of course I may have to wait weeks for settlement of insurance, but then I shall lose over £320. Trusting you will do what you can. Not a trace left of my waxwork novelty and exhibition, only a mass of bricks and mortar, as the walls have fallen in. Yours faithfully,

H. FRANK LIND, F.O.S.

Care of Mrs Jenkins, 25, Percy-street,
Blyth, Northumberland.

TOM CRAVEN'S GAG BOOK.

"To gag or not to gag" is not the question at all on the variety stage; for the well-chosen wheeze is an absolute necessity to the irresponsible comedian; it is in most cases the chief factor in his success. No comedian, indeed, who has been raised by the worship of the British public to the position of a star can afford to do without it; and therefore the aspirant will invariably endeavour to win fame by it. Wheezes, too, save the voice and often the song, though it is a waste of material to bolster up a weak number with smart patter. On the theatrical stage gags have often done much for the author's reputation, though Mr W. S. Gilbert has sternly denounced them. As an instance of their usefulness we may give as an example the part of Lurcher in Dorothy. The original lines of the librettist did not give much opportunity to Mr Arthur Williams; but he gradually built up the part, and the success of the opera was largely due to the prominence he gave to it.

Mr Tom Craven is another persistent gagger, and who that has heard him take the "dear readers" into his confidence as an ancient and woebegone washerwoman can help laughing at the recollection of the clever series of gags uttered by that worthy lady. Mr Craven has now published the "dear readers" series and a large number of other gags which he tabulates under the heads of "Things he has said," "Wheezes he has wheezed," and "Old Chestnuts upon which he has put new skins." Most of his jokelets, he tells us in an "author's note" to his unpretentious book, were issued (by voice or print) "by my father or myself; and as my venerable dad [Mr H. T. Craven, author of Meg's Diversion and numerous other plays] will soon be a nonagenarian, and started such little offences at the early age of ten, the man who lays claim to that which I deem mine—by the law of inheritance or invention—must be older than some of the gags herein introduced."

"Some Individuals I Have Met" is a smart and amusing series of monologues to be found in this entertaining book, and they may be highly recommended to the amateur, who will be able to astonish his best friends at a private party by the apparent brilliancy of his imagination. Pantomime comedians should likewise find a wealth of material wherewith to embellish the skeletons of their parts. There are tall stories worthy of Baron Munchausen; there are many droll brevities; and there is doggerel galore. Therefore one may dip into the little volume at any page and discover a laugh. The price of the "gag-book" is one shilling, and it is published by Samuel French, Limited, 26, Southampton-street, Strand, W.C.

SHOWMEN IN COUNCIL.

(SPECIALLY REPORTED FOR THE ERA.)

Advantage was taken of the large gathering of showmen and fair ground amusement caterers at Houghton-le-Spring Feast last week, to hold the annual meeting of the North of England Amalgamated Showmen, Stallholders', and Amusement Caterers' Society. There was a crowded meeting, and great enthusiasm in the good cause of trade defence and organisation. The outgoing officers were heartily thanked for their services, and the following elections took place:—President, Mr Robert Mackney; Vice-President, Mr Geo. Halliday; and with them were elected a new staff of committeemen:—Mr Geo. Gray, Sen., was re-elected treasurer, and Mr Thos. Hartshorn, of Hetton-le-Hole, Co. Durham, was re-elected secretary. On the Sunday evening of the fair week, a public meeting was held in the Miners' Hall, and a crowded attendance of all classes of showmen and their friends was the result. The new President, Mr Robert Mackney, of Mackney's Theatre of Varieties and Ghost Illusion, presided, supported by the members of the Executive Committee. After heartily welcoming those present he called upon their undefatigable secretary Mr Thomas Hartshorn to give his annual report and statement of the society's work.

Mr HARTSHORN, in a cogent and well-reasoned speech, dwelt upon the origination of their trade defence movement in the north of England. He strongly advocated the co-operation and union of all Fairground interests. The very life and well-being of the whole body of open-air amusement caterers depended upon the recognition of the truth that unity is strength. He felt sure that the outcome of that meeting would be good, not only to their own people on the fairgrounds of the North of England, but also to the showman world at large. Referring to the work of the Showman Guild, he pointed out the serious results that must have followed had the Gateshead Corporation obtained the Home Secretary's sanction to the proposed new bye-laws dealing with their business. Only by union and organised vigilance could such dangers be dealt with and averted.

Mr GEO. HALLIDAY, vice-president, was the next speaker, and gave his hearers practical proof, in facts and figures, of the way in which the society had benefited him in reduced ground rents and trade protection.

Mr JOHN HANCOCK, late president, speaking for the executive committee of the past year, detailed the excellent work done in the interests of the people of the fairground and their patrons.

Mr GEO. GRAY, sen., treasurer, followed with a capital speech, covering the same ground as Mr Hartshorn, and urging the claims of the Showmen's Guild for support, not only as being the pioneer society, but also on account of its increasing influence and general usefulness.

After a meeting lasting over two hours a hearty vote of thanks was proposed to the chairman by Mr J. W. GRAY, seconded by Mr A. NEWSOME, and supported by Messrs J. Williams and Walker Hoadley.

Mr W. HOADLEY suggested that the committee should endeavour to practically carry out the policy of united action, so ably advocated by their energetic secretary and the other speakers.

Thus ended one of the finest meetings in the North of England advocating the interests of showmen. We congratulate the president and officers of this vigorous and well-managed society. From all who have been on the Great North Round this year hear nothing but good of its principles and work. Men like George Gray, John Hancock, George Halliday, Geo. Gray, jun., and T. Hartshorn (sec.) have done great labour in the cause of trade union and defence.

THE BRITANNIA.

Important changes are imminent in connection with the management of the Britannia, but in the meantime the variety form of entertainment continues to afford considerable enjoyment to the patrons of the famous house. Half a century ago the Britannia was flourishing as a notable place of entertainment, and it is interesting to refer for a moment to the programme for the corresponding week of 1854 and ascertain what were the attractions then offered to Hoxtonians. The late Mrs Sara Lane was playing the part of Sally Swinton, in a military piece called The Corporal's Daughter, and with her was associated "the celebrated juvenile vocalist and actress, Miss Clara St. Casse." There was also "the astonishing performance of Herr Christoff, from Astley's, on the Cord Elastique;" a popular melodrama called Ankle Jack; or, St. Crispin's Day; and a "divertissement" in which dances were the principal feature. Truly a diversified bill-of-fare, in distinct contrast to the programme which is now submitted twice nightly. The turns are mostly single and double ones; but an exception is the comical sketch played by the troupe consisting of Rice, Rose Davis, and the Half. The fraud practised on a middle-aged householder in mortal dread of burglars is the cause of much hearty merriment. An enterprising but thoroughly unscrupulous individual palms off upon his victim a patent burglar alarm, employing a black boy to blow a horn, manipulate a rattle, and fire off a pistol—all these sounds being supposed to proceed from a small box in which the machinery is concealed. When the fraud is discovered the ingenious vendor of the alarm finds himself in an awkward position. The sketch is received with much favour. The couple known as the Austins give a smart juggling performance, one of them appearing in a grotesque costume, and introducing some capital burlesque business. The clever way in which a lighted lamp is handled is particularly noteworthy. The Two Gems are lady duettists, the subject of whose song is the merits and demerits of their respective husbands. One has the good fortune to have an irreproachable partner, while the other has a "hubby" whose ways are certainly open to severe criticism. Walker and Lane are excellent comedians and patterers, a reference to Dr. Bodie (who was here a few weeks ago) being particularly happy. The Endlos, a lady and gentleman, open with some burlesque conjuring, the former showing, apparently unconsciously, "how it is done." They afterwards give a display of their ability as experts on the swinging rings, finally taking firm hold of each other and revolving in a manner suggestive of a human windmill. The Devonports make their mark as silent magicians and illusionists. The gentleman performs a variety of tricks in dexterous fashion, and the lady is exceedingly skilful in her manipulation of cards, which appear and disappear in the most extraordinary manner to the bewilderment of all beholders. Mr Peter Kelly, comedian, obtains a favourable hearing, and Miss Marie Sennette, a dainty and refined comedienne, sings in excellent style "There's nobody loves little me." Baroux and Bion do well as excellent acrobats, their burlesque boxing being specially effective in exciting the mirth of the audience. Other items in the programme include Nellie Howard and Willie Collinson, in their absurdity The Porter and the Parcel, and an interesting series of animated pictures. Mr A. R Hollands is the resident-manager, and the orchestra is under the direction of Mr J. Bodin.

AT the Theatre Royal, Ton-y-Pandy, Miss Marie Menzies and company are appearing this week in A Rogue's Daughter. As Letty Grey Miss Menzies displays exceptional talent, and is well supported by Mr Wills as Sir George Mynard and Mr Wilfred Blair as Frank Tyler. As Colonel Foster, Mr Richard Ferris proves himself a thoroughly capable actor. Mr Will Wilson and Miss Millie Doris as Ebenezer Dunnem and Priscilla Jenkins keep the house in great merriment

SEAHAM HARBOUR.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr A. C. Harrison.—Mr C. Finch-Hatton's company is occupying the boards here this week in When London Sleeps. David Engleheart is manfully depicted by Mr Tom Ronald; Mr R. S. Trelawney is very successful as Captain Haynes; Sammy Blyth and the Hon. Bertie Broomhead are amusing characters in the hands of Mr D'Arcy Kelway and Mr Charles Digby; Mr Fuller and Bob Jones are parts successfully presented by Mr N. Wheatley, jun., and Mr Paul Graydon; Queenie Carruthers is pleasingly impersonated by Miss Ella Sennett; Hilda Carode receives careful treatment from Miss Grace Baring; and Miss Young as Carrie, Miss Daisy Clifford as Maudie, and Miss Lee as Mrs Jones give capable help.

SHEERNESS.

VICTORIA PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr T. C. Dorling.—Miss Lena Stanton and company opened here on Monday with the musical extravaganza The Belle of Bangalore, which has proved a great attraction. Included also amongst the variety turns are Little Keeno, comedian; Rynfeld, the bender; the Sisters Veli, and the Cecil Troupe of dancers.

TRANSFIELD'S HIPPODROME — Sole Proprietor, Mr T. G. Transfield; Secretary, Mr Tony Transfield.—A capital all-round bill is presented here this week, and includes Mr Alf Barker, with his troupe of performing dogs and ponies. Mr Wm. Tudor and his Miniature Circus are also remaining for another week. A welcome addition to the programme is furnished by Mr Barney Stuart in a variety of impersonations of famous characters. The remaining excellent turns include Mr Geo. Rapley, comedian; Miss Florrie Willmott, vocalist and dancer; and Walter Emmerson, comedian. With his usual generosity the esteemed proprietor set apart Friday evening for the benefit of the Club Union Convalescent Home at Pegwell Bay.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr P. Reymond.—The popular dramatic sketches by the Calden company continue to give general satisfaction to the patrons of this cosy little hall. Amongst others in the bill are Snowdon and Conway, duettists; Miss Marie St. Ives, serio and dancer; Mr Hal Vernon, comedian; and Horner and Fox, comedy artistes.

SHEFFIELD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr F. W. Purcell; Acting-Manager, Mr T. S. Carter.—The amusing musical comedy The Girl from Kay's was again played to a large house on Monday by Mr George Dance's company. Mr H. C. Barry's alert method and abilities as a genuine mirth-provider enabled him to score quite easily in the part of Hoggenheimer. Very funny also was Mr Leslie R. Cathie in the diverting character of Percy Fitzthistle, and Mr Fred Rolph caused amusement as the Hall-porter. Miss Simeta Marsden, a favourite at the Royal, was quite in her element in the title-rôle, and she acted, sang, and danced with her usual grace and vivacity. Miss Alice Russon was a pretty and tuneful Nora Chalmers, and Miss Florence Plunkett sang with taste and expression as Ellen.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr John Hart; General Manager and Treasurer, Mr J. E. B. Beaumont.—Mr George Edwardes's exquisite taste as a producer of refined and beautiful spectacular entertainment was again demonstrated here on Monday, when a crowded and enthusiastic audience welcomed The Cingalee. Mr Frank Danby fairly revelled in the part of Chambhuddy Ram, and the house roared at his verbal mistakes and his eccentric mannerisms. Mr Leedham Bantock acted and sang in his usual quietly humorous manner as the Eastern ruler; and Mr W. J. Manning submitted another amusing society sketch in Sir Peter Loftus. Familiar musical comedy types were the Harry Vereker of Mr Harold Thornley and the Bobbie Wilson of Mr Jack Cannot. Miss Anna Hickisch acted and sang brilliantly as Lady Patricia. Miss Florence Smithson was a beautiful little Nanoya, and captured all hearts. Miss Eva Sandford was a delightful Peggy Sabine.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr C. W. Ramsay.—Mr Charles Lubbock's company opened to a good house on Monday in the Drury-lane spectacular melo-farce, entitled The Flood-Tide. The paddock episode appealed strongly to the Yorkshire sporting instinct, and the exciting Flood scene was loudly applauded. Mr Maitland Marler made a humorous George Washington Clipp.

EMPIRE PALACE.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr A. W. Young.—The accomplished and handsome Miss Winifred Hare is starring here this week, and other artistes billed are Ernest Rees, a funny comedian; the M'Kays, comedians; the Mayvilles, in a novel act; Tatten Hall, comique; Henry Kaiser, the Outlaw Trio, the Max Welson troupe, Mons. Rafayette, Phillips and Terry, F. Lynne, and Miss Myra Stansfield, serio-comedienne.

GRAND PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—The great attraction here this week has been the favourite comedian, Mr Harry Tate, in his screamingly comical Motoring sketch.

SHREWSBURY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Business Manager, Mr W. C. Dornton.—Mr Frederick E. Philpott's strong company is playing The Girl from Japan here this week. Mr S. Lockridge acts and sings well as Lord Allenbury; Mr Alfred Wood merits praise as Sir Mulberry Flippington; Mr Percy Baverstock is amusing as General Baugh; Mr Ernest Spalding is a droll and clever cleric as the Rev. John Smith; Mr Tom E. Sinclair acts with ability as Horatio Blinks; Mr Chas. L. Ludlow infuses plenty of life into the part of Bingle; and Mr H. Benson makes a good Hans Creton. Miss Nellie Valentine is effective and tuneful as Violet Meadows; Miss Madie Scott is attractive as Maud; Miss Nellie Parker Dent makes a capable Lady Flippington; Miss Nellie Jackson as Polly Perkins is vivacious; and Miss Bessie Deane acts creditably the part of the Countess De La Rue. The Sisters Violet are a couple of agile and well-trained dancers, and a clever sand dance by Miss Lillie English is enthusiastically applauded.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr W. Marlow; Manager, Mr W. Marlow, jun.—Mr Robert Arthur's company is here this week in his military drama entitled One of the Best, and the play is supported by about fifty soldiers as supernumeraries. Mr Stanley Bedwell gives a capital impersonation of Dudley Kepple, and is ably supported by Mr E. Bellenden Clarke in the rôle of Philip Elsworth. Mr H. F. Maltby gives prominence to the character of Lieut.-General Coventry, and Mr George Hart's portrayal of Sir Archibald M'Gregor is capital. The Rev. Dr. Penrose finds a good exponent in Mr Wilfred Beckworth; Mr W. Templer Powell as Jules De Gruchy is good; Mr Chas. Medwin gives a neat character sketch of Jason Jupp; Mr Herbert Darnley wins favour as Private Jupp; Miss Helen Haye well represents Esther Coventry; Miss Lilla Norden is amusing as Kitty Spencer; and Mrs Spencer is capitally played by Miss Nellie Gilmore.

SOUTH SHIELDS.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs J. and F. Coulson.—Mr Arnold Bell and company in the evergreen Ben-My-Chree are fulfilling a return visit to delighted audiences. Mr Arnold Bell repeats his excellent exposition of the wayward Dan Mylrea. Miss Francis Campbell proves herself an admirable actress as Mona Mylrea, and Miss Violet Campbell is a sprightly Kitty. Mr Dan Farrough, a local favourite, ably depicts Mr Harcourt; Mr H. M. Clifford deserves more than passing notice as Gilchrist; and a like remark applies to the Davy Fayle of Mr William Reid. Messrs F. C. Robson, Frank C. Robson, and Joe Bardsley appear creditably in their respective parts of Ewan Mylrea, Thorkell Mylrea, and Hommy-Beg. Miss Lilian Earle, as Liza Teare, renders "Mona" effectively. The Shaughraun, with Mr Bell as Conn, was staged on Friday.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Resident Manager, Mr Geo. F. Thompson.—Mr R. H. Douglass, monologue artiste, heads this week's bill, and his clever character sketches prove an enjoyable item. The Tribune Trio, who appear in their laughable sketch, A Cheerful Idiot, are grotesquely amusing. In response to a rousing encore, the Sisters Iris, the popular Jack and Jill of last year's pantomime, render "Bedella" in dainty fashion. The patter and laughing duet of the Brothers Obo are appreciated. An enthusiastic reception greeted Les Voces for their rendition of two pretty ballads and a charming duet. Baker and Balfe, xylophone experts; the Olive Trio, characteristic comediennes; the Sisters Devona, aerial artistes; and Alf Bishop, comedian; furnish the remaining turns.

TIVOLI. — Proprietors, Councillor J. K. Hall and Mr Jos. Sweeney.—An eccentric juggler of more than ordinary ability is Mike Gray, and, assisted by his acrobatic dog Dooley, he is accorded a warm reception. The favourite Tyneside comedian, Harry Nelson, is decidedly funny. Frank Coyne is another praiseworthy comedian. The Yorkshire Mill Girls, ballad vocalists, give a neat entertainment. Violet Wilton is a smart comedienne and dancer. Harry Bancroft's vocal efforts cause all round satisfaction, and Walter Emmerson, comedian, and Will Candlish, styled the black emperor, provide mirth-provoking items.

SMETHWICK.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr C. Barnard; Manager, Mr E. Hewitson.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr Mark Blow's company is delighting audiences here this week with a capital presentation of A Sailor's Sweetheart. Mr Alfred Goddard is an excellent Lieut. Charles Clive. As Grace Mayland Miss Ada Burton acquits herself ably, her sweet manner and earnest and pathetic delivery evoking hearty applause. Mr Charles Stafford and Mr William Stoneham as Admiral Sefton and Captain Mayland are good. Mr C. A. Johnstone is a praiseworth Vicar of St. Faith's, and a capital representative of the unscrupulous and vindictive Philip Pemberton is found in Robert Faulkner. Tim Kelly, A.B., has a most acceptable exponent in Mr Edward Millins, whose drolleries, together with those of Mrs J. W. Braithwaite (Mrs Pembury) are very enjoyable. Miss Evelyn Shaw is well placed as Phoebe Pembury; Mr C. Douglas Carlisle is clever as Stephen Lucas; and Mr Arthur C. Blunt is good as Mr Pinkson.

ST. HELENS.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr M'Leod Loader.— Another welcome reappearance is being made here this week by A Chinese Honeymoon through the medium of one of Mr George Dance's companies. Miss M. Sadie enacts the rôle of Fi-Fi admirably, being full of fun; Miss Marie Adair submits a praiseworthy portrayal of So-So, her singing being greatly appreciated; and as Mrs Pineapple Miss Jose Collins scores a success. Mr Harry Brayne infuses the quintessence of jollity and liveliness into his rendering of Mr Pineapple; Mr Leonard May is equally successful as Hi Lung; Messrs Frank A. Wood, Percy Yorke, and P. A. Turner are capitally cast as the Emperor, Tom Hatherton, and the Lord Chancellor respectively, and a meed of praise is due to Miss Alice Drummond for the excellent manner in which she plays Mrs Brown.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs T. Barrasford, Will Sley, and F. Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr A. V. Carnell.—The leading feature here this week is the Six Brothers Luck, who keep the house in roars with their pantomime Hotel Grande. The Albano Troupe give an exceedingly clever musical turn; Mr Will Saunders is a grotesque comedian; Jack and Evelyn (old favourites) are rapturously received in their singing and nimble dancing; Wilfred is a contortionist of more than average ability; the Lynches (Joe and Nell) give an astounding display with the rifle; Mr Tom Owen scores as a comedian; and Bromley and Fontein give an excellent and amusing turn as operatic humourists.

STOCKPORT.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Wm. Revill.—With Mr George Dance's principal company, in The School Girl, appearing here this week for the first time, it was quite in the order of things for Mr Revill's theatre to be crowded throughout the week with fashionable audiences. Mr Leslie Holland as Sir Ormesby St. Leger, Mr Chas. Adeson as General Marchmont, and Mr Alfred Leslie as Tubby Bedford are a trio who provide genuine amusement. Miss Gracie Sinclaire as Cicely Marchmont sings most charmingly, and Miss Lulu Bonney makes a delightful Miss Remington; whilst Miss Grace Wixon as Mrs Marchmont, and Mits Nell Hope as Saafreda are very pleasing.

OHMY'S CIRCUS.—This establishment is occupied this week by the Harry H. Hamilton's Excursions, showing a series of pictures relative to the Russo-Japanese War, in addition to an excellent variety entertainment.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietress, Mrs Weldon Watts; General Manager, Mr Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr R. G. Elder.—After a long absence we are being visited again by Messrs G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company in the high-class drama The Silver King. As Wilfred Denver Mr Lauderdale Maitland is impressive, and carefully brings forth the pathetic features of the part; Mr E. J. George is still the Daniel Jalkes to the life; and Mr W. V. Garrod makes a very intense villain as Captain Herbert Skinner, the "Spider." Mr Arthur Wright's Elijah Coombe is very cleverly done, and Mr Philip Renout's Henry Corket is also good. Miss Lillian Bethel's Nellie Denver is acted with a simple pathos which is very telling, and Miss Lorna Treherne's Olive Skinner is quite successful. Other characters are all adequately presented.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr John Batty; Manager, Mr W. Batty.—A thoroughly good programme is given at this popular house, and includes Nellie Gannon, character vocalist; H. K. Bradshaw, a capable tenor; Harry Wright, in successful songs; Fatmah Diard, an excellent soprano; Payne's Bioscope, showing "The Stowaway" and other films; Mdlle. Rozi's dog circus, introducing many novel features; Fred Karno's company in that funny pantomime sketch Hilarity; and the Achmed Ibrahim Troupe of Arabs in their wonderfully clever acrobatic show.

STOKE.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr P. Collins; Manager, Mr Frank Egerton.—Mr Collins once more presents to his patrons a fine programme. This week Miss Harriett Vernon heads the bill, and is loudly applauded for her contributions. Miss Vernon is heard to distinct advantage in the pretty ballad "Only to be a child again." Another turn of excellence is Billy Farrell, whose patter causes roars of laughter. Patty Yole dances admirably; Ben Nevis is a comedian worthy of the name; Bliss and Bliss, duettists, contribute a turn of excellence; Mdlle. Luba De Sarema introduces her performing bull, ponies, and dogs, whose training is far above the average; and the Bioscope shows some good pictures. Mr Frank Egerton, the manager here, has gained the confidence of the public with his excellent programmes, and all the stars of the variety firmament are to appear week by week.

SUNDERLAND.

AVENUE, LIMITED. — Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; Business-Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—Mr Tom B. Davis's company, in Florodora, is paying another visit here this week. Mr Edward Lewis as Professor Tweedlepunch causes continued merriment; Mr Leonard Russell is a first-class Frank Abercoed; while Miss Lena Maitland is good as Dolores. Mr Fred Winn as Gilfain, Miss Isabella Dillon as Lady Holyrood, and Miss Hilda Dugdale as Angela Gilfain do their work well.

ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. E. Machin; General Manager, Mr Percival Craig.—Messrs Lingford Carson and Granville's company, in A Modern Adventuress, occupies the boards here this week. Mr Leonard Aardale plays admirably as Pietro. As Harry Delby Mr Charles Stirling's acting is also commendable, and Miss Beatrice M. Anderson sustains the rôle of the adventuress excellently. Miss Alice Defoe as Vivette, Miss Mimi Fisher as Sally Hodges, Mr W. R. Winning as Wallace Danton, and Mr G. P. Lester as a bluff Yorkshireman are all worthy of mention.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—Managing-Directors, Messrs Livermore Bros.; Acting-Manager, Mr George V. Wybrow; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr Alfred Browne.—Arthur Lennard, vocal comedian, renders in pleasing manner his latest songs. The O'Brien Brothers are clever bar performers. Howard and St. Clair submit an amusing sketch. Bob Vokes, favourite comedian; Venie Clements, comedienne; the Four Scandias, gymnasts; Lizzie Fletcher, comedienne; and the Sisters Oswald also contribute.

SWANSEA.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Sons; Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Boyce.—Two Little Vagabonds have been paying us a return visit during the week with Hardie and Von Leer's company, and a capital house on Monday gave them a hearty welcome. Dick and Wally were exceedingly well played by Miss May Hart and Miss Dorothy Marsdin; George and Marion Thornton were admirably represented by Mr J. W. Henson and Miss Laura Hansen; Captain Darville and John Scarth were in the capable hands of Mr Wolston Foster and Mr Basil Hillier; and Barbara Scarth, Bill Mullens the Gaffer, and Biddy Mullens were ably accounted for by Miss Nell Oliver, Mr Alfred Russell, and Miss Marie Pritchard respectively. The drama was admirably staged.

NEW STAR.—Lessee and Manager, Mr T. Morton Powell; Acting-Manager, Mr William Coutts.—Mr Ben Laudeck's stirring military drama A Soldier and a Man has been the attraction at this house during the week, played by Mr A. Clifton Alderson and company.

NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr Albert Mitchell.—An excellent programme is put on here this week with the following artistes:—Tom Costello, an excellent comedian, and a strong favourite here; Jessie Albini, very successful in her descriptive songs; the Two Bees, in their successful scena Hiawatha; Albert Athas and Lizzie Collins, a clever variety pair; Arthur Rigby, a capital and popular comedian; the Wheelers, quaint and clever cyclists; the Baldwin Bros., a trio of smart American acrobats; Frank Maura, remarkable foot equilibrist; and Wal Pink and company, in their well-acted sketch Uncle's Wife.

SWINDON.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Personal Manager, Mr Alfred Manners; Musical Director, Mr F. H. Lucas.—The Girl from Japan concluded a heavy and successful week here on Saturday, and was followed by Messrs Dottridge and Longden's The Midnight Mail company, under the personal direction of Mr James Willard. The piece was adequately staged under the management of Mr Alec Alves, who was also seen to distinct advantage as Leonard Royle. The important part of Harry Steyne gave Mr George Havard many excellent opportunities for displaying his abilities as an actor; Mr Fred G. Evison submitted a particularly strong portrayal of the part of Bill Brewer; and Mr Arthur Gilroy cleverly depicted the despicable schemings of Hassan Padisha. Miss Ada Oakley undertook the part of Harry Steyne's devoted wife with commendable judgment, and Miss Mildred Carr's excellent impersonation of Nancy Brewer fully deserved the applause it gained.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

OPERA HOUSE —Sole Lessee, Captain Welton Dale; Acting-Manager, Mr Edgar Manaton.—To celebrate the second anniversary of this house a revival of Our Boys has been presented here this week with the popular lessee in one of his early rôles as Talbot Champneys. The Captain had a great reception and a magnificent horseshoe was handed across the footlights to wish him good luck on entering his third year of management, while a large basket of flowers was presented Miss Muriel Godfrey-Turner, who in the part of Cousin Mary, thoroughly won the sympathies of the audience. Mr David James as the Butterman was, of course, as successful as ever, while Mr Milroy Cooper gave an excellent study of the aristocratic Sir Geoffrey. Mr James Gelderd was excellent as Middlewick's son, while Miss Nina Herbert as the heiress, and Miss Ethel Greythorpe as the aunt, both contributed clever comedy sketches, and Miss Gertrude De Burgh as the lodging-house slavey in the third act was irresistibly humorous. Mr Edgar Manaton, who made his début on the local stage and had a warm welcome from all parts of the house, and Mr Alfred Harding completed the cast.

WAKEFIELD.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Mr Cecil Barth's company is here in the play An Actor's Romance. Mr Guy Hastings gives a capital portrayal as Harold Davenport; Mr Ernest Ruston is a capable Robert Livingstone; Mr Percy Marmont is successful as Jack Woolford; Mr E. H. Dorrell wins fame as Charlie Cummings; Mr John Detlev is able as Isidore De Valois; Mr Albert Wainwright does well as the detective John Lennon; Lottie Davenport is effectively depicted by Miss Bertha Northam; Miss Constance Elgin submits fine dramatic power as Florence Hastings; Dottie Dillingham is daintily and sweetly played by Miss May Charteris; and Miss Marie Ada Dowsing displays ability as little Phyllis Davenport.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wakefield Hippodrome Company, Limited; Business-Manager, Mr D. G. Mooney.—This place of entertainment reopened on Monday last, when the following company appeared:—Miss Nellie Randall, comedienne; Mr Charles Pleoner, comedian; Clyo and Rochelle, comical comedy couple; Little Uno, boy comedian, who sings well; Messrs Keen and Wallad, smart acrobats; Woolford's miniature circus; Mr Claude Ginnett's highly amusing equestrian sketch, Rejected Remounts; and Professor Barnes's Bioscope.

WARRINGTON.

ROYAL COURT.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter.—Mr Fred Karno's comedians are here this week in the highly diverting musical comedy Saturday to Monday. Mr Charles Dillon as John Willie Jaggs is a comedian of the first water; Mr Douglas Fox as Tom Freeman has a good voice, and is encored for several songs; and Mr Walton Shale as Mr Blake is well placed.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr F. Willmot.—Professor Inman Hocking is creating wonderment amongst the habitués of this house with his wonderful feats of hypnotism; Harrigan and Holt are a clever pair of comedians; and Charles Best scores well in his act, "M'Bunker the Mountebank." Baby Macfarlane is a clever juvenile, and George Mack wins favour with a round of humorous songs. Carr and Rose are humorous duettists, and the Royal Bioscope depicts several good pictures.

WALSALL.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, the Walsall Theatres Co., Limited; General Manager and Secretary, Mr W. H. Westwood.—Messrs W. T. Elworthy and J. Buskley's company is here in The Unforeseen. The Rev. Walter Maxwell won golden opinions as Mr W. T. Elworthy. Mr Leonard Pagden submitted an excellent performance as Henry Traquair. Capt. Richard Haynes as Mr Escott Robson was distinctive, and his effective style well suited the character. Mr Brember Wills played General Sir Archibald Fielding well, and Robert was successfully portrayed by Mr Sam Wilkinson. Miss Kathleen Maitland was charming and vivacious as Beatrice, and Miss Helen Norries was natural and tactful as Miss Campion Parr. As the Maid Miss Ada Heathcote was well cast, and as Margaret Fielding Miss Beth Elliott acted with ability.

GRAND THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager and Secretary, Mr W. H. Westwood.—Mr Penfold Field's company opened here on Monday with Fatal Fortune. Mr Harry Farrell makes an excellent Jack Weston; Mr Elliott Ball is most successful as Captain Seton Desmond; Mr Dalton J. Bosher is well suited to the part of Daniel Salmon; Miss Madeline Clifford is all that can be desired as Mary Weston; and Miss Madge Seton is a capital Elizabeth J. Tintop.

WALTHAMSTOW.

KING'S THEATRE.—Mr William A. Armour's company is appearing this week in Mr F. Marriott-Watson's What a Woman Did. Mr William A. Armour gives a capital account of the young Conrad De L'Orme; Mr Kenneth Smith is a malignant Marquis De Viray; a hearty representative of Fritz Von Hœitheim is found in Mr Will Simpson; Mr Cyril Dundas appears successfully as Peter Pippin; and Mr Owen Edwin is good as Pitou. As Elise De L'Orme Miss Phyllis Hatherleigh acts with alternate passion and pathos, Miss Elsie Day is a handsome Julie Valois, and Miss Emmie Beauclerc an engaging Terese Hervé. Mr Armour's business manager is Mr Hal Cummings, and Mr Victor Gordon is acting-manager.

PALACE. — Managing Director, Mr G. Adney Payne; Manager, Mr Arthur J. Barclay; Acting-Manager, Mr Geo. F. Slatter.—The programme at this handsome house for the present week contains several items of exceptional merit. Miss Kittie Bell gives a Highland dance with great nimbleness and neatness. An immense favourite is Mr Alix Lukos, actor-vocalist, whose song, "Faces in the Fire," introduces imitations and reminiscences. One of the most successful turns on the bill is the Finneys (James and Marie), whose graceful aquatic performance evokes loud and prolonged applause. Miss Rita Resdan, one of the best male impersonators we have, renders her songs in fine style, one of them, in which the artiste "takes off" the vagaries of a certain noble marquis, being especially successful. Dandy George and his dog Rosie repeat to the admiration of the audience a dainty performance. Mr Ian Colquhoun's fine voice is heard to advantage in the ever-welcome "Off to Philadelphia." The programme has a hilarious wind-up in The Bricklayers by the Bolsset Troupe.

WEDNESBURY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr Harry Battersby; Manager, Mr W. J. Cranston.—Mr W. H. Hallatt and company in the romantic drama entitled Two Little Sailor Boys is here this week. Mr W. H. Hallatt plays the important part of Commander Noel Tregarthen in capital style; Mr Leonard Booker as Lieut. Redstone and Mr Edward Warden as Captain Tom Yorke are exceptionally clever in their respective parts; and Admiral Grey is ably rendered by Mr Geo. Cecil Murray. Miss Blanche Steele acts in an admirable manner the rôle of Lola Grey; Miss Marie Daventry as Mildred Grey is warmly applauded; and Miss Hilda Taylor as Lucy Wilson and Miss Dorothy Lennox as Marie Primrose are also very good. Miss May Day as Cyril Grey and Miss Frances as Tom Yorke do excellent work.

WELLINGBOROUGH.

CORN EXCHANGE.—Mr F. R. Benson's North company paid another visit here for three nights, appearing with marked success in The Taming of the Shrew, As You Like It, and Hamlet. In the first-named Mr Henry Herbert was excellent as Petruchio, and Miss Dorothy Green acquitted herself admirably as Katherina. Mr B. Limpus was an attractive Lucentio, and a very good Baptista was found in Mr F. Owen Chambers. Miss Christie Lawes, Bianca; Mr Arthur Fayne, Gremio; Mr R. W. Senior, Grumio, and others were all able interpreters of the text.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.

GRAND.—General Manager (for Mrs Weldon Watts), Mr Sidney Bacon; Resident Manager, Mr Fred Conneaux.—In Dark Siberia is being presented this week by Mr F. Jarman's company. A well-studied picture of the hero, Captain Victor Gordon, is presented by Mr Fred W. Mussett, and Princess Natalie has a capable exponent in Miss Helen M'Cullock. Other artists in the cast who may be singled out for mention are Miss Cecilia Ransome, Miss M. Clements, Miss Kate Osborne, Mr Harry Skinner, and Mr Charles Osborne.

PALACE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr Frank Macnaghten.—The list of artists is headed by Will H. Fox in his clever satire, Paddywhisti. Another specially strong treat in the musical line is the performance given by Edmund Bosanquet in his Musical Séance and Illuminated Excerpts. T. B. Fayme is a Yorkshire comedian of some note, and his popularity here is marked. The Brothers Ashley, in the comedy boxing sketch Next, Please! are also popular favourites. Florence Gwynne, with sweet voice and taking style, renders a scena entitled The Stage-Struck Servant; and other pleasing members in a strong programme are submitted by Johnny Holland and Company in their adsurdity, My Friend the Boots; The Brothers Harlem, expert bâton manipulators and sand dancers; and Harry Albery in amusing comedy.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr W. Payne.—Mr T. Arthur Jones and company are appearing here this week in the sensational drama, Life's Sweetest Sins. Miss Madge Morley looked remarkably handsome as Doreen Rivers, and her impersonation of the character was full of dramatic power and pathos. Mr T. Arthur Jones's interpretation of the hero, Captain Harold Marston, was a truly artistic one. Mr A. Bartlett Garth gave a fine portrayal of the villainous Dr. Colbrook, and Mr G. R. Austin did good work as Kimberley Coutts. Mr Arthur E. Andrews as Bob Tanner and Miss Sara Dudley as Bess Grayson were both extremely humorous performances. Miss Amy Rudd was an excellent Fay Colbrooke, and Mr Charles Sewell (Ernie Wodstone), and Mr C. Vernon Proctor (Rev. Edward Gray) deserve unstinted praise.

WORCESTER.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr Arthur Carlton; General Manager, Mr Louis Karpe; Assistant-Manager, Mr Albert J. Lewis.—Mr Tree's répertoire company is here this week, appearing in The Merry Wives of Windsor, Twelfth Night, and Julius Cæsar. The first-named play was represented on Monday in first-class style before a crowded and enthusiastic house, including the Mayor and Mayoress (Mr and Mrs J. S. Cook), and many other leading citizens. The whole company is a remarkably well-balanced one. The two "merry wives," Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, were admirably impersonated by Miss Constance Collier and Miss Cicely Richards, whose archness and vivacity were superbly displayed, to the discomfiture of Sir John Falstaff (Mr Eardley Turner) and Master Ford (Mr Wm. Haviland). Both these gentlemen were extremely clever in their respective parts, and the same may be said of Miss M. Halstan as Sweet Anne Page, Mr H. Bunston as Master Page, Mr A. Bruce as Dr. Caius, Mr A. Machen as Justice Shallow, and Mr R. I. Penny as Master Slender.

WEST STANLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr Mark H. Lindon.—Mr Alfred B. Cross and company are doing well here this week with The Manxman. Mr A. B. Cross gives a fine exposition of the character of Pete, and as Kate Cregan Miss Minnie Waterford is most pleasing. Mr Richard Vane is an able Philip Christian, and the part of Cæsar Cregan is well filled by Mr Hilton Francis.

WIDNES.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr James Kiddie; Manager, Mr T. Swinton.—Mr J. Gar Kiddie's company, A Chinese Idyl, is the attraction here this week. Mr Fred Danvers is successful in the rôle of the Viceroy, and Mr Dawson Dewick as Tanga Lang proves himself a capable artist. Miss Emmie Milstead as Princess Stephanie sings some pretty coon songs, and Miss Mabel Mainwaring lends considerable charm to the part of Pitti Pat, whose lover, Lieutenant West, has a smart and promising representative in Mr F. H. Dundas. The Henriques give a clever acrobatic performance.

WIGAN.

ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr John Worswick.—The pantomimical farce, His Majesty's Guests, has been presented during the week in the presence of large and highly amused audiences by Mr Fred Karno's company, which includes the celebrated comedian, Mr Dan Rolyat, in the part of Sergeant Lightning. Mr Rolyat is supported by an excellent body of artistes, and the antics of the Karno Troupe in their lively pantomimic business created endless laughter. The musical comedy is above the ordinary, and contains some fine numbers, notably the song, "Six Little Burglars."

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company; Managing-Director, Mr J. Worswick.—The Borghetti Troupe give a marvellous display of head acrobatic work, and Bonnie Goodwin and her Apollo Piccaninnies are very amusing. Vincent, acrobatic table expert and tumbler; Emmie Ames, comedienne; Farley, Rennie, and Farley, in a comedy act; Grace Merton, vocalist, and Gilbert's well-trained dogs and cats, assisted by Mdlle. Blanche, who introduces the high-diving and football dogs, are loudly applauded for their efforts. Sid Bandon, character vocalist and comedian; Jimmy Shields, one-legged comedian and dancer; and Jack Pleasants, vocalist, are also well received.

EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Manager, Mr W. Birchall.—There is again a good all-round company at this place of entertainment this week. Kyoto, the original comedy Jap, fulfils a popular engagement prior to going to Paris; and the Brothers Esdale, comedians, &c., have a capital reception. Sterling and Cashen (Jim and Minnie), American speciality artistes and champion all-round dancers, give an excellent performance, and the Summersons (Will and Maggie) are refined comedy duettists, dancers and pantomime artistes, who pay a return visit. Miss Marie Yorke, burlesque artiste; Mr Dan Noble, comedian and vocalist; Chas. Graydon, comedian and dancer; and Miss Maggie Newton, coon and ballad vocalist, are all acceptable turns. There have been good houses during the week.

WOLVERHAMPTON.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr E. H. Bull and Mr Milton Bode; Acting-Manager, Mr Percy Percival.—Mr George Dance's company is paying a return visit here in A Country Girl, a play which is highly popular and much appreciated by local playgoers. On this occasion the part of Geoffrey Chaloner is taken by Mr Francis Ludlow, whose singing and acting are admirable. Mr H. C. Morton is good as Sir Joseph Verity; Mr Fred W. Pattrick is inimitable as the Rajah of Bhong; and Mr Harry Buss is smart and clever as Barry. The part of Marjory Joy is well taken by Miss Kathryn Comber, whose vocalisation is excellent; Miss Nellie Cozens, though somewhat bolsterous, does splendidly as Nan; Miss Ernestine Desborough is an efficient Princess Melaneh; and Miss Rosie Begarnie is chic and charming as Madame Sophie. Other parts are well filled, and the staging is most effective.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Sole Lessees, Mr Fred Benton and Mr Fred J. Little; Manager, Mr Fred Benton.—This week Her Fatal Past is being produced here by Mr T. Edward Ward's company, which includes Miss Ward.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr Chas. Barnard; General Manager, Mr W. H. Lennon.—The bill this week is headed by the O'Learys, who appear in their Oriental burlesque act; and Benson and Geoffrey are seen to advantage in Spoofed. Phillips and Lorenzi, comedy team, in dinner table sketch; Nellie Navette, vocalist and dancer; Gilbert Girard, instrumental mimic, &c.; Lenora Venn, vocalist; Clarke and Argyle, dancers and pipers; Charles Rose, comedian; and the British Bioscope also appear.

WORKINGTON.

QUEEN'S OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Stanley Rogers.—On the Stroke of Twelve, by F. Darcy and F. J. Little's company, was presented on Monday with success to a large audience. Mr F. Rivers as Jack was a good hero, and commendable also was Mr F. Guiness as George. Mr H. C. Hunt was telling as the villain; Mr H. C. Robinson gave an excellent impersonation of the father; Mr K. H. Edwardes made an amusing Levi; and the broad humour was in the hands of Mr W. F. Little and Mr W. Buss, in the parts of Jasper and Pat, and they ably acquitted themselves. The laughing song of the former was encored. Miss N. Moore was graceful as Jess, Miss B. H. Ruth was sympathetic as Doris, and Miss E. C. Turner was satisfactory as Marie.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr H. Wright.—Mr J. Stillwell's company on Monday successfully presented Queen of the Night to a good house. Miss V. St. Lawrence as Paulina acted with force, and her enunciation was capital; Miss K. Barnett was good as the heroine; Miss P. Denville was lively as Kitty; Miss Irene Tracey as the waif played with effect, securing the affection of her audience; Mr O'Douglas was manly as Frank; as Stoneleigh Mr J. Stillwell was a flint-hearted villain; Mr F. Thorpe-Tracey as Old Briskett was droll and successful; and as Adolphus Mr B. Atherton displayed ability and mirth.

YORK.

ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs Waddington.—The names of Hardie and Von Leer are always a guarantee of money's worth, and this week A Path of Thorns proves no exception to the rule. It is a drama full of strong human interest, and was received on Monday with unbounded enthusiasm. Mr Claude King both looked and played the part of the hero well. Miss Violet Luddington gave a sympathetic rendering of Bessie, getting through her several trying scenes most successfully, and being heartily applauded. Mr Cecil Du Gué as Jonas Deane gave a really high-class impersonation; Mr Alfred Lester was thoroughly amusing as Sam Hallett, creating much amusement; Mr Cyril W. Mackay was particularly successful as the Rev. Frank Selby, Messrs J. H. Booth as Jim Price and Walter L. Rignold as Ratty Gabbitt were responsible for some effective

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1904
"The Era" Annual, 1904, reappears with all the features that to metropolitan and provincial playgoers make it invaluable as a work of reference. It again contains a list of new plays and important revivals at the London and suburban theatres, with dates of production to the end of November; new plays submitted in the provinces; the theatrical, musical, and equestrian obituary for the year; and other stage matters concerning which information is often desired. Each branch is excellently classified. What may, for convenience sake, be termed the "useful" portions of the "Annual" are sandwiched by forty short stories by popular actors and entertainers, the interest of these contributions being increased by autographs and portraits.—Daily Chronicle, Jan. 16th, 1904.

SCALE OF CHARGES FOR MANAGERS WANTING ARTISTES. ARTISTES WANTING ENGAGEMENTS.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I. COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT
Chapter II. PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III. INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV. MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V. INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer, by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as "the Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman, July 31st, 1901

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr Albert A. Strong's new work entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee, July 28th, 1901

THE LIFE OF A RACEHORSE.

A Series of Pictures taken on the Berkshire Downs.

Every Englishman seems to have a love for the horse. Our first scene shows a number of mares and foals grazing, then a closer view of a mare and two foals. These foals, when about eighteen months old, are taken to exercise with the other horses, and several of them are very prettily depicted walking around their trainer; they are afterwards taken to the starting-gate to accustom them to its use, and this forms a somewhat exciting scene, as they show considerable objection to the ordeal at first.

The next portion shows the racecourse, with bookmakers and a large crowd, and the colts taking part in their first real race, concluding with a very animated scene of the dispersal of crowd and drags.

Code word, "Horse." Length, 160 feet.

SEAGULLS AT NEWLYN, CORNWALL.

The fishing-boats in the harbour are always picturesque, and it is this little town which has so often been visited by our greatest artists to obtain "bits" for their pictures. Great numbers of the gulls are seen waiting for the tide to go out in order that they may devour the damaged pilchards which the fishermen have thrown overboard, and our close view reveals thousands of the birds swooping down upon their prey. This is the very finest bird-life picture which has ever been animatographed, and, owing to the fact that it was taken very quickly, every movement of each bird is clearly and sharply shown without any blurring of the photograph.

Code word, "Newlyn." Length, 55 feet.

FUNNIER THAN "OFF FOR THE HOLIDAYS."

MAGNIFICENT PHOTOGRAPHY.

Ye ken well friends that I'd no pay saxpence for to bathe, so I just walks a bit five miles to a lone part o' the shore, and finds a grand rock for to shelter my body from any possible observation. Well, I was no a minute in hopping out o' my bit things, and I was on the point o taking my dip when, Och Hi, what should I see but two wee lassies away the other side of the rock, and it was this way—that Sandy MacGreggor was on the one side o' the rock and his frock and all was on the other side with the two bit lassies. Friends, I'm a modest man, and I was in mind that they lassies should ken I was there, but they soon set een on my clothes, and they takes a peep over the sea, and then, Och Hi, they takes a peep round the rock, and Och, lads, it was just terrible, it was me with nought but my wee towel to my waist must run away round till they canna see me, and in no time we had gone right round and was back where we started from, and I takes a peep over the top of the rock, and I see the lasses a-spreading out my clothes just as they're worn, and they a' taking such liberties with my sporran and dancing about, and in another minute they takes a second look around the old rock, and off I goes and was round beside my frock when, Mon, a great idea came over me, and I lays down on the stone and rolls over and over till I rolls straight into my clothes. Well, I am just getting to my feet when the lassies comes from round the rock, and Mon, ye'll hardly believe it, they lassies had taken my breeks, and the minute I set een on them I kens they're no under my kilt. Well, I just falls o' my knees, and in good time I persuades the bit creatures to give me the breeks, and my breeks was so set on getting home that I'd no sooner stepped into them but they runs up my legs on their own—so it was all over, and I takes the bit lassies for a walk beside the sea. Ah, mon, but it was fell exciting.

FATHER'S HAT; OR, GUY FAWKES DAY.

A TOPICAL COMIC.

NATURAL SCENES.

BRIGHT AND FUNNY.

SCENE 1.—THE BACK GARDEN OF MR JONES'S SUBURBAN RESIDENCE. A guy is seated upon a chair placed upon a table in the foreground. The dear children have stolen father's hat, and they come running from the house carrying the topper with care, and, scrambling on to the table, they arrange the hat on the guy to the best effect. Next they stuff some straw, all ready, round the feet and run off to fetch some paraffin to make a good blaze.

Father, however, is on their track, and turns up just as the children have gone and, having rescued his hat, he thinks of a plan to catch the children on the hop. First he removes the guy—then slips the mask on to his own face, and, jumping on to the table, he takes the chair and waits.

SCENE 2.—The dear children are gathered round a huge barrel from which they are drawing a bucketful of paraffin; presently they run off.

SCENE 3.—Shows father seated as we left him, and the children, carrying the bucket, come hurrying in. Father waits for them to light the straw, not knowing of the paraffin which is behind him. Little Mary does not know that the guy has changed into father, and she throws the paraffin right over him—screams, fire! fire!—father in flames—off run the children—father scrambles out of the flames and gives chase.

A TRIP TO PARIS.

SCENE I. THE TRIPPER PACKS his portmanteau with the few things requisite and necessary for a trip to the "gay city."

SCENE II. OUTSIDE CHARING-CROSS RAILWAY STATION.—The Tripper is late for the train, and is hurrying as fast as he can for the booking-office.

SCENE III. AT THE BOOKING-OFFICE.—A very stout lady is taking her ticket, while a string of impatient passengers wait behind her. She insists upon going out the wrong way and so delays everybody. The Tripper just manages to get his ticket and jump into the train before it starts.

SCENE IV. ON THE RAILWAY BRIDGE.—The Continental Train starts, and the Tripper waves farewell to his friends.

SCENE V. VARIOUS VIEWS FROM THE WINDOW of the train as it speeds on its way to Dover. The Tripper is too excited to sit still, and constantly leans out of the window in front.

SCENE VI. AT DOVER.—The Continental Train arrives, and the Tripper hastens to the steamer.

SCENE VII. THE STEAMER ALONGSIDE THE ADMIRALTY PIER.—The tripper goes on board.

SCENE VIII. THE STEAMER UNDER WAY.—The foamy water behind the paddle box.

SCENE IX. VIEW ON DECK OF THE STEAMER.—The Tripper is offered a cigarette, but is not feeling inclined for luxuries at the time.

SCENE X. ARRIVAL AT CALAIS.—After a short dispute about his ticket the Tripper goes ashore.

SCENE XI. THE ARRIVAL AT PARIS.—Panoramic View of the Place de l'Opera. The Tripper buys picture postcards.

SCENE XII. THE PLACE DE LA CONCORDE.—If you want to know the way ask a gendarme.

SCENE XIII. THE ARC DE TRIUMPHE.

SCENE XIV. THE CHAMPS ELYSEES ON SUNDAY.—The Tripper buys a gas balloon, but unfortunately loses it.

SCENE XV. AT A CAFE.

This is a Film of continued and sustained interest, being a complete representation of a trip abroad linked up into one harmonious whole in a new and quite original manner. Every scene is of splendid photographic quality, and the whole subject forms a picture of unusual beauty and interest.

Length, 500ft. Price, 6d. per foot—£12 10s.

LADY PLUMPTON'S MOTOR.

When Lady Plumpton bought her motor car she forgot to take her huge bulk into consideration, and the car, although a powerful one, proved to be inadequate to the demands made upon it, for her ladyship weighs 19 stone. After she had, with great difficulty, been squeezed through the narrow doorway at the back of the car, the machine refused to budge an inch, so out she comes again, and the car starts off immediately. The chauffeur drives it back to the place where her ladyship is waiting, and once again she is helped and squeezed into the vehicle. With the kind help of several passers-by, who put all their strength into the job, the car is at last started on its way, and once started it sails off merrily and drops the kind pushers on to the road. All goes well until it becomes necessary to pass through a water-splash, and, in the very middle of the water, the car sticks fast and cannot be moved. What is to be done? The chauffeur, for all his efforts, cannot make his car move. Lady Plumpton gets very excited, but she can do nothing, because they are surrounded on all sides by water. She is just handing the baby to her fellow traveller in order that she may the more vigorously adjure the motor man, when the whole thing goes off in a violent explosion. As the smoke clears away it is seen that a terrible catastrophe has occurred; the motor is nothing but a heap of wreckage; the chauffeur is a mangled corpse; her Ladyship's friend and baby are both blown to bits; her Ladyship herself alone is saved, for even the explosion could not move her. Alone she stands on the wreckage of her property, helpless, in the middle of the water, while bits of motor car, bits of baby, and bits of every description drop from the air on all sides. At last the friendly policeman comes into sight and wades out to the rescue. Helped by a passer-by, he tries to clear the wreckage, and, in fact, anything rather than tackle the job of rescuing her Ladyship. At last, however, he can avoid it no longer, and taking her up in his arms, he staggers a few feet and then drops her into the deepest part of the water. Her terror and anger combined are beyond description, but at last she gets safely to land, just as the petrol tank catches fire, and the last of the motor car is consumed in a sheet of flame.

PANTOMIME ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1904-5.

We are prepared to abide by Last Year's Exceptionally Low Offer for Cleaning Pantomime Costumes in Quantities, being determined not to be beaten either in Price or Quality of Work.

XMAS PANTOMIMES.

WE ARE NOW GETTING BUSY CLEANING DRESSES FOR THE ABOVE,
but have plenty of room, and, like Oliver Twist, WE ASK FOR MORE.

We are still Cleaning and Renovating Tableaux Curtains and Draperies from London and Country Theatres and Music Halls.

We continue to hold the field as Cleaners and Dyers to the Theatrical and Music Hall Professions. This fact is clearly proved by the unsolicited testimonials we are continually receiving.

Professional Work takes Precedence over all other orders.

By Special Arrangement,

TOURING MANAGERS

can have their Wardrobes Cleaned between Shows, when in or near London.

Phone wire, or write to T. HARRIS.

T. HARRIS, Manager.

DELAYS ARE DANGEROUS.
Look out your Pantomime Dresses at once.

LAST UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL.

Rotunda, Liverpool,
Oct. 19, 1904.

Dear Sir,—
Have received my dress safely. It looks beautiful. Many thanks.

Yours sincerely,

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT).

BERLIN, THURSDAY, Oct. 27.—A well-merited success was accorded to the revival of this time-worn little work, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent. The cast was so good, the mounting so tasteful, and the pleasing music so excellently rendered that the operetta—which was known to few—will certainly have a long run. A few words will be sufficient to detail the plot. Badurel, a caricature of a learned professor, has a couple of finishing scholars, Prince Christian of Illyrien and Fifrelin Grobichon, merry good-for-nothings of nineteen and twenty. Over the way dwells Fräulein Emeraldine Mouton, head of a pension of fair maidens who are nicknamed "the little lambs." The girls are brought up in strict seclusion, never having seen a man, the chaste Emeraldine impressing on them the evil qualities of the genus. Emeraldine herself, nevertheless, is in love with Badurel, and he with her, and this gives rise to a good deal of buffoonery. The boys, of course, soon discover their master's weakness; they themselves, watching the little lambs at play, lose their hearts, and determine to make the closer acquaintance of their neighbours. The second act shows the dormitory of the schoolgirls; it was a very pretty scene, and drew forth applause by open stage. We see them, under Fräulein Mouton's direction, prepare for the night's repose, and hear them sing their evening prayer—a charming bit of composition. That the boys come in when all is still is a matter of course, also that the professor comes to find his Emeraldine. After some laughable nonsense—the boys pretending to the startled girls that they are their guardian angels—all comes to a happy and, musically-speaking, highly satisfactory conclusion. Christian and Fifrelin find their cousins Alice and Fanny—the brides desired for them by their parents—among the schoolgirls, so that three happy pairs of lovers are the result. Herr Wellhof and Fräulein Gaston played with delicious humour, and Herren Hansen, Below, and Ziegler, as well as Fräuleins Doninger and Linda, acted and sang admirably. The audience testified to their appreciation of Herr Intendant Prasch's well-chosen production by "calling" the popular author-manager and heartily applauding him. Die Tante Schläft, Henri Casper's melodious one-act operetta, now precedes Die Kleinen Lämmer, and meets with much appreciation. Die Hugenotten is announced at the Theatre des Westens for Friday evening, being performed there for the first time.

THE Deutsches produced a three-act drama recently by a new and youthful author, named Heinrich Lilienfein. The piece—Maria Friedhammer entitled—met with a cordial reception, and is still being given once or twice in the week. It is a serious play, and the characters are mostly fanatics or prigs; they indulge largely in monologues and tall talk. At present there is little trace of anything like dramatic talent in Herr Lilienfein's production; later, perhaps, his capabilities will develop. Maria is the daughter of a so-called mixed marriage—that of a Lutheran schoolmaster with a Catholic. Frau Friedhammer's brother is a priest, full of zeal, fanaticism, and malice, who cannot forgive his sister her choice of a husband. Maria is beloved by a young Protestant clergyman; she loves him in return, and this complicates matters and worries Ignaz—the fanatic uncle—excessively. But the young pastor knows he cannot well marry Maria, so he gets himself transferred to another parish—a step which Herr Friedhammer considers mean and unworthy. Maria's brother dies and she herself is seriously ill, both of which misfortunes are termed judgments of the Almighty by the cheerful Ignaz, who now tries to save further judgments by placing his niece in a convent. She, poor girl, has no wish to take the veil, and she forgets herself for a moment so far as to allow the embraces of her pastor-lover. Ignaz now declares her to be a sinner past recall, not even fit for a convent, and Maria—eager for rest of any kind—throws herself into a watery grave. She is landed in a dying state, and manages to whisper her love to the young pastor—who comes up opportunely—before she gives up the ghost. A good cast atoned in great measure for the weaknesses of the play. Fräulein Hannemann gave the title-rôle with much feeling. Fräulein Arnold rendered the part of Frau Friedhammer very sympathetically and Herr Sommerstorff gave an excellent account of the young pastor. The part of the wicked uncle was played with discretion by Herr Lands.

AT the Belle Alliance Die Tugendglocke, three-act vaudeville by P. Ferrier, has made a hit. It is a nonsensical, but amusing, pot-pourri, arranged for the demands of their stage by the manager-playwrights Herren Kren and Schoenfeld. All kinds of local points are pressed into service—such as, for instance, a skit upon Miss Duncan—the charming American dancer. This was the hit of the evening, being cleverly executed by Fräulein Bradsky. Other rôles were vivaciously taken by Fräuleins Bijoco and Wanovius, and the incidental music is very effective.

FRAU AGNES SORMA, who broke her arm during rehearsal at the Neues Theatre some weeks ago, is recovering the use of the limb, and will be able to resume her duties some time during November. The management of the Neues, by the way, announces a new comedy—Die Morgenröte, by J. Rüderer—for production next week.

SIGNOR ALESSANDRO BONCI has finished his season at the National, and both he and the management may be well satisfied with the success thereof. Bonci's voice is not so robust as Caruso's, but it is particularly pleasing, and he has, perhaps, as many admirers as his rival. The theatre was crowded each night the popular tenor sang, and his departure was the signal for all kinds of ovations. It is hoped by the management that Signor Bonci may return, just as Signor Caruso has promised to come back to us in November to finish his engagements at the Theatre des Westens.

THE Royal Opera has revived Mozart's Zauberflöte, the part of the Queen of the Night being taken by Fräulein Siems, from Prague. It was not, on the whole, a very happy evening. Fräulein Siems' voice—as I have said before—is not equal to the demands our opera house makes upon it, and several of the soloists appeared to be indisposed. Fräulein Destinn, however, sang the rôle of Panina splendidly, proving herself as good an exponent of Mozart as she is of Wagner. Dr. Muck conducted in his usual excellent manner.

MADAME CALVÉ commences her first tour through Germany this week, appearing in the Stadt Theatre at Leipsig first. To-morrow (Friday) evening the famous artist makes her début at our Royal Opera as Carmen.

ANOTHER pillar of the Royal opera company of the past generation has just died, Herr Theodor Betz, who retired into private life with a handsome State pension some years ago. Herr Betz possessed one of the most sympathetic baritone voices ever heard, and was a most finished singer. His rendering of Hans Sachs will never be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to hear it.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

ABERDEEN.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; General Manager, Mr Eade Montefiore; Acting-Manager, Mr H. C. Cavanah.—The sensational drama The Convict's Daughter is drawing good houses this week. Mr Frank Bertram plays the many-sided part of Michael Graham with admirable skill, and he is ably supported by Mr G. Moreton-Williams as the schemer, Jasper Thorr. Miss Edith M. Savery acts well as Edith; and Messrs J. K. Walton and T. W. Hurst sustain their respective rôles most creditably. Miss Julie Alexander as the maidservant and Mr Alfred Terris as the First Constable are responsible for the comedy side of the drama.

PALACE THEATRE, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Ernest Sheldon.—O'Gust, with his marvellous imitations, secures an enthusiastic welcome this week; and the performance of Signor Permane's bears are followed with as keen excitement as last week. The Vance Brothers give a very pleasing instrumental turn; Cinizelli provides a unique and original speciality act; and among the other artists are Mr J. G. Aitkin, with some smart songs and stories; Miss Flo Challis, the popular contralto; the Four Jumels, in their excellent musical comedy turn; and Harry Glynn and company in a humorous sketch. The Palace Bioscope pictures continue popular.

ABERTILLERY.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessees, Messrs Arthur Carlton and Sam Duckworth; General and Resident-Manager, Mr Geo. W. Ventom.—Mrs Bandmann-Palmer and company are here in a répertoire of historical plays. On Monday the piece selected was Mary, Queen of Scots. In the title-rôle Mrs Bandmann-Palmer was enthusiastically received, her fine impersonation appealing with eloquent force to those present; as the Earl of Leicester and the Earl of Shrewsbury respectively Mr F. Skein and Mr Boyd Pearson were very effective; and Mr Sydney Bland as Lord Burleigh acquitted himself admirably. Mr William Trant in manner and appearance was seen to advantage as Sir Edward Mortimer. As Elizabeth, Queen of England, Miss Katharine Herbert exerted herself to the utmost in the emotional phase of the part and won admiration. East Lynne, Sapho, Hamlet, Nell Gwynn, and Jane Shore are also in the répertoire.

ACCRINGTON.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr J. E. Barnes.—Messrs Carson and Granville's company opened here on Monday with Defending His Honour. Mr John Davidson gave a good rendering of Douglas Bryce; Mr John Hignett must be complimented on his clever impersonation of Irish character; Steven Gerald was well played by Mr Clifton Boyne; Mr Charles H. Herbert cleverly depicted George Duncan; the Richard Verison of Mr Willie Black was very diverting; Mr Thompson Carruthers gave an artistic portrayal of David Peller; Miss F. Melrose Millet scored as Ethel Bryce; Miss Trixie Lucien was ably played by Miss Lillian Mathews; Mrs Edmond Lyons carefully depicted Mrs Verison; and Miss May Sharp, who is a smart little actress, was capital as Harry Bryce.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr J. Mill; Assistant-Manager, Mr T. W. Moyes.—Mr John Marx tops the bill here with his very smart show as a strong man. A clever turn is Zenora and Foden, who rank amongst the best in their line as hand equilibrists. Mr Tom Basset, comedian, works hard, and is well rewarded with applause. Miss Flo Deighton fairly brings the house down by her well-rendered numbers. Miss Lilly Le Breton is a smart gymnast; and Loudoun Cameron is a clever conjuror. Miss Baby Macfarlane is a capital little comedienne.

ALDERSHOT.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr George E. Williams.—Although San Toy has been presented here before, Mr George Edwardes's company is entirely a new one. From the start Miss Don Harradine charms the audience with her clever and successful portrayal of San Toy. Mr Edmund Sherras's is a good conception of Bobby Preston, and his fine, well-trained voice is heard to advantage in "The Motherland." Mr Alfred Beers is a good successor to Mr Statham Staples as Li, his irresistible humour as the kleptomaniatic Chinee being particularly good. Mr Alfred W. Clark is clever as Yen How. Mr G. J. Williams as the "explosive" Sir Bingo Preston is excellent; and a capital enactment of the Emperor comes from Mr Cliffe Davies. Mr Adam Gordon's Sing Hi is ably portrayed, and Mr Walter P. Wright (Harvey Tucker) and Mr Clinton Reynald (Fo Hop) are acceptable. Miss Mabel Lavelle gives a meritorious portrayal of Poppy, and Miss Florence Arnold's Dudley is excellent. Miss Beatrice Gradella (Rose Tucker) is also encored for her graceful pas de seul in the second act.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr Armstrong Fairbairn.—A Country Girl is here this week, presented by Mr George Dance's well-organised company. Miss May Glen is well placed as Nan. Her song, "Molly the Marchioness," is deservedly applauded; indeed, her singing and acting throughout are of the most admirable kind. Miss Nina Carlton as the Princess Melaneh possesses a powerful soprano voice, and her style is highly dramatic. The character of Marjory Joy is played with great charm of manner by Miss Maud Harvey, who has a contralto voice of rich quality. Miss Veronica Brady as Sophie is pert and chic, and sings and dances to the evident delight of all. Mr Cyril Thompson sings and acts well as the naval officer Challoner. Mr Johnny Osborne as Barry is chiefly responsible for the humorous element, and he causes much laughter as the naval officer's servant. Miss Edna Knollys and other ladies of the cast are pleasing performers of minor parts. The chorus is numerous and attractive and vocally strong.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr Chas. Revill; Director of Entertainments, Mr F. Willmot.—The company here includes the Attilla Brothers, athletes, and the audience watches with astonishment their feats of strength and agility. Other artistes who do well are La Belle Shannon, the trained coloured comedienne and dancer; the Cullane Troupe, in their new humorous act, The Dude's Dilemma; Mr Herbert Betts, the versatile eccentric comedian; the Three Henriques, comedy acrobats; and Edie Gray and coons in their novel singing act. Sinclair and Whiteford, vocal comedians, also gain much favour in their laughter-provoking duologue. The cinématograph concludes the programme.

ATTERCLIFFE.

AYR.

NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry W. Day.—Mr Arnold Bell and his company opened a three nights' engagement on Monday with Mr Wilson Barrett's beautiful drama Ben-my-Chree. Mr Arnold Bell appeared in the part of Dan Mylres, and gave a rare interpretation of a very trying part, never failing to carry the sympathy of the audience with him. Miss Frances Campbell made an admirable Mona, acting with a rare charm and winsome tenderness. The Ewan Mylres of Mr Cuthbert Imrie was admirable, while the parts of the Deemster and the Bishop of Man were in the able hands of Mr Frank C. Robson and Mr H. M. Clifford respectively. Mr Harcourt, the Governor of the Island, was well played by Mr Dan Farrough, while Davie, the fisher lad, could not have had a better exponent than Mr Wm. Reid.

BACUP.

NEW COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Frank Denman-Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr Richard Nightingale.—A bright and amusing entertainment is provided for patrons of this house by Mr Harry Swinerd's No. 1 company with Dare-Devil Dorothy, under the experienced direction of Mr J. W. Cordiner. Miss Marjorie Cecil is seen to advantage in the title-rôle, her fine acting winning for her much applause; and the Ruth of Miss Kathleen Garnon is prettily conceived and carried out. As Capt. George Fielding Mr Henry C. Ward submits an admirable portrayal, his vocalisation also meeting with much applause. As Silas Crump Mr Arthur Verne gives a really amusing performance, and is ably supported in his efforts by Miss Harcourt (Judith), who sings and dances in a pleasing manner. Mr Wilfred Carr depicts the rôle of Featherstone Haugh in a creditable manner, and Hawkins finds an able exponent in Mr A. Stretton

BARNSLEY.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr A. C. Mitchell.—His Majesty's Guests, by Mr Fred Karno's company is here this week. Sergeant Lightning is smartly represented by Mr Harry Boxbury; Mr Frank Morton is admirable as Lord Easem, alias Flash Jack; Miss Florence Burns is a very able Lady Maud, her vocal numbers being well received; Mr Gus Le Clerq is highly amusing as Mr Minks; and Messrs Wallace, Howe, Sterling, and M'Culloch claim notice for their knockabout business, which is cleverly done.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.

ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr George Stone.—A Message from Mars is paying a return visit here this week. Mr Rawson Buckley's interpretation of Horace Parker is undoubtedly clever; Mr William Brougham has a fine stage presence and an excellent voice, and is a pronounced success as the Messenger; Mr Bruce Lindley gives an interesting impersonation of the Tramp; the Miss Parker of Miss Flora Hastings is particularly good; and Miss May Saker as Minnie Templar delineates the character in a charming manner.

TIVOLI THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr Tom Whiting.—Ross and Grayson top the bill here this week. Their comedy is of a high order, and keeps the audience in roars of laughter. The Dauntons-Shaw Troupe of trick cyclists are exceedingly clever; Mr Harry Weldon has a style peculiarly his own; Miss Ada Fawn is a charming burlesque actress; the singing of the Sisters Terry is a real treat; and the Great Duncan gives a novel and enjoyable club juggling act.

BATH.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr Lewis A. Long.—Mr Tom B. Davis's company in the bright musical comedy, The Medal and the Maid, is here. Mr Tom Fancourt as Simon Pentweazle is very mirth provoking. Another clever comedian is Mr Tom Graves as Levanter, whose broken English and quaint appearance cause irrepressible laughter. Mr Campbell Bishop makes a capital Admiral Belton, Allen being well enacted by Mr Cecil Kingsley. The brigand Darlan has a commanding representative in Mr William Bland. Miss Rita Leonhardt as Merva Sunningdale is one of the brightest and most gifted young artists we have seen for many a day. Miss Maude Lake as Josephine is also a charming vocalist and graceful actress. Miss Edith Blanche is well suited to the requirements of Mrs Habbicombe, and Miss Cissie Sephton is a tactful and winning Miss Ventnor.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr W. Trussell.—The big letter turn this week is the Imperial Russian Troupe of vocalists and dancers, and they are very warmly received. Chas F. Best arrayed as an old-time showman does some original comedy juggling; Les Valdos in their eccentric acrobatic turn secure loud applause; the Bros. Ashley in their boisterous boxing sketch, Next, Please, create plenty of hilarity; the St. Johns in their musical act and speciality step dancing give a decidedly artistic and pleasing turn; the Marples, speciality dancers, put life and vigour into their work; Kydd and Kydd, comedians and dancers, go well; and Lily Sharplin, mimic; and the Paragon Trio, vocalists, return to gain further admirers by their refined efforts to amuse. On Wednesday the two performances were set aside to benefit the funds of R.A.O.B. Orphanage, when the usual programme was supplemented by several local amateurs.

BEDFORD.

ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr Walter R. Wilson.—The first three nights of this week Mr J. F. Preston's company occupied the boards in the successful play Nell Gwynne. The piece is produced under the direction of Mr F. B. Woulfe. Miss Grace Lester undertook the title-rôle and did full justice to this difficult part. Mr Dan F. Roe soon established himself a favourite as Bellicose Betterton; Mr Lewis Leslie as King Charles played admirably, and Miss Nina Westerleigh acted cleverly as Louise De Querouailles. Mr Edward Beecher as Rochester, Mr James Duncan as Roland Græme, and Mr Hardy Macrow as Doublechick sustained their respective rôles with marked ability. Monsieur Beaucaire is announced for production the latter end of the week.

BLACKBURN.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr Harry Yorke; Business-Manager, Mr Reginald Yorke.—Mr J. W. Turner with his well-known English opera company is paying his annual visit here this week. On Monday night Mr Turner, who is a great favourite in Blackburn, appeared as the Earl of Rochester in Balfe's opera, The Puritan's Daughter, and sang with great effect. He was supported by Miss Constant Bellamy as May Wolff, Mr John Ridding as Clifford, and Colonel Wolff was played by Mr Clifford. On Tuesday The Lily of Kilarney was given, and Mr Turner appeared as Myles-na-Coppaleon. The other operas performed during the week were Faust, The Waterman, and an act of The Daughter of the Regiment, The Bohemian Girl, and Maritana. The band and chorus are excellent.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr E. H. Page.—This week Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company is appearing in the drama entitled A Woman's Pluck. The piece is from the pen of Mr James Willard, who appears in his original part of Dick Darrell, and gives a powerful impersonation. Miss East Robertson acts forcibly as Grace Daremont; Mr J. P. Dryden represents Mark Scanlan and Jim Daremont, and plays them with great judgment. Much amusement is caused by Mr Harry Emmerson as Roger Pippin and Miss Agnese D'Aragon as Ophelia Pippin.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr Frank Macnaghten; General Manager, Mr Will Murray; Acting-Manager, Mr Harry Drury.—Harry Tate's skit on "Motoring" and Alf Gibson, the quaint comedian, are the principal attractions this week. Good turns are also given by Bert Lytton, society comique; Allis and Cassati, Mignon Tremaine, comedienne and dancer; Grell and Grey; the Bransbys, duettists; George Hyam, comedian; and a sketch, Our Lodger, by J. Alexander's company.

BELFAST.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr James M'Cann.—A capital house on Monday greeted with much pleasure a return visit of the ever-popular musical comedy San Toy, produced by Mr Geo. Edwardes's company. In the rôle of Li Mr E. Statham Staples was entirely successful. In the title-rôle Miss Fanny Dango was decidedly charming, her sweet and cultured voice being heard with infinite pleasure. A decidedly captivating performance of Dudley was submitted by Miss Maud Darling. As Captain Bobby Preston Mr Reginald Kenneth was a very capable exponent, his voice giving great effect to his songs, and Mr John Humphries scored a great success as Yen How. Another capital impersonation was that of Mr Stratton Mills as Sir Bingo Preston. The part of the Emperor was excellently sustained by Mr Colin Coop, and as Fo Hop Mr Henry Cluff made an unmistakable hit. Miss May Francis was a delightful representative of Poppy, and Mr F. Jocelyn Hope was quite successful in the part of Sing Hi. Mr Arthur Soames sustained the rôle of Lieut. Harvey Tucker with great ability.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr John P. Beardmore.—The chief attraction here is provided by Captain Woodward, whose performing seals execute some marvellous feats. The Selbinis have been accorded a deserving ovation for their clever acrobatic and cycle act; the Sisters Maginel-Mullini furnish a unique musical performance; Zanfretto and Napio appear in their entertaining musical knife-grinding act; Young Igo is a capital clog-dancer; Miss Ethel Loftus is a charming comedienne; and Tray and Rich, the well-known black and white-faced comedy team, are a host in themselves. Beanland and Bath, comedians and cartoonists, take well, and the programme is completed by the Palace pictures, which are a big attraction.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LIMITED.—General Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Brock.—A splendid bill has been presented here, the leading attraction being the astounding conjuring performance of Chung Ling Soo, his remarkable feats creating quite a sensation. Mr Mark Sheridan—who made such a hit on his last visit—returns with his original patter and witty songs, which have been accorded a terrific reception. Mr Sheridan is unquestionably in the front rank of comedians. Smythson's comedy company is producing a humorous sketch, The Lie Alarm, and the sweet vocalism of Miss Florence Esdaile commands the success it deserves. Miss Edie King is a charming comedian with good songs; and Calile and Walker are a funny duo. Also appearing with success are Miss Annie Casey, comedienne; and Mr Charles Chard, a first class comedian.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General Manager, Mr Henry T. Downs.—Mr Downs's bill is always up to the highest standard, and this week much interest is evinced in the novel act presented by the Spanish Moor Zaid, assisted by the beautiful Orienta, which has been entirely successful. Hill, Barry, and Lang, eccentric comedians, create a fund of amusement with their act, A Hot Reception. Mr George Steeley and Miss Jenny Dowton appear to much advantage, their singing and dancing being quite a treat. A novel performance is submitted by Mr Victor Newman, a clever mimic, with his living pictures. Meisker Brothers' Bioscope presents some new pictures this week, which form quite a feature of the bill. Mr Dan Thomas's eccentric songs have been well received, and the cultured vocalism of Miss Lillian Neville wins deserved admiration. The Falcons, in their clever comedy act, and Mr Will Letters, character comedian, are appearing.

BILSTON.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr Harry Battersby; Manageress, Miss Grace Battersby.—Mr W. H. Hallatt and company are giving a good representation of Two Little Sailor Boys. Commander Tregarthen is excellently played by Mr Hallatt himself. Able assistance is given by Miss Marie Daventry in her well-studied impersonation of Mildred Grey; and the sailor boys, Cyril Grey and Tom York, are presented in interesting fashion by the Misses May Day and Ethel Francess. As Lola Grey Miss Blanche Steele proves herself to be a capable actress. Mr Leonard Booker is a good Lieutenant Redstone, Mr Sid Cotterell a funny Ben Baxter, and Miss Hilda Taylor an amusing Lucy Wilson.

BIRKENHEAD.

THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—Mr Eugene C. Stafford's company is presenting the ever-popular comedy, The Private Secretary, with much success. The rendering of the central rôle of the Rev. Robert Spalding by Mr Geoffrey Guise will compare favourably with the traditions of the part. Cattermole, a fine performance, is still enacted by Mr William Hargreaves and Gibson, the tailor, is humorously treated by Mr Wilfrid Compton. Edith Marsland is charmingly impersonated by Miss Dora Grey, her friend, Eva Webster, is cleverly embodied by Miss Mary E. Deverell, and Mrs Alfred Davies is well suited as Miss Ashford. Mr Raymond Chester as Mr Marsland, Mr Vivian Gilbert as Harry Marsland, and Mr A. Austin Leigh as Douglas Cattermole are most efficient. Good for Nothing serves as a curtain-raiser.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Pell.—An interesting drama, entitled In the Shadow of Night, supported by Mr James Willard's capable company, attracts numerous audiences. Mr Beresford J. Lovett is a good exponent of the racing Gordon Allington. Mr Hamilton Deane distinguishes himself as Clifford Yorke, and Mr Fred Worburn scores heavily as Jack Grudgeveller. Miss May Richardson wins general approval by a careful performance of Violet Kingston, and other parts are in good hands. The piece is carefully staged.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr D. J. Clarke.—Miss Florrie Gallimore, the popular comedienne, is on a welcome return visit, and is received with accustomed cordiality. The Six Brothers Luck in their pantomimic sketch, Demon of the Cellar, afford a fund of amusement, and Mr Arthur Lennard, comedian and descriptive vocalist, is a pronounced success. Miss Lily Langtry, a vivacious comedienne, is again fulfilling a highly successful engagement here. Mr Neil Kenyon, a capital Scotch comedian, remains from last week, and conspicuous turns are also contributed by Mr J. W. Rickaby, a comic vocalist of resource; Miss Georgie May, comedienne; Howard and St. Clair, American comedians; the Three Prestons, in an amusing sketch; and Miss Lizzie Fletcher, comedienne. Mr Ernest Denney is musical director.

BOURNEMOUTH.

THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs David Allen and Sons; Lessee, Mr Mouillot; Manager, Mr Rowland Stewart.—The Moody-Manners opera company is with us this week. Lovers of grand opera are experiencing a musical treat of which full appreciation is manifested nightly. The extensive répertoire includes Tannhauser, Mignon, Pagliacci, Cavalleria Rusticana, Lohengrin, Faust, Il Trovatore, and Carmen. The first-named opera was produced on Monday. Mr Edward Arthur's vocal and histrionic efforts were heard and seen to advantage in the title-rôle. Mr G. Rhodes distinguished himself as Heinrich; Miss Enriqueta Crichton sang with expression, charm, and taste as Elizabeth; Miss Nedda Morrison was highly effective as Venus; Mr Walter Barrett did well as Wolfram; and Mr R. Brookes as Walther and Mr Charles Tilbury as Hermann contributed to the general success. The choruses were all that could be desired. On Tuesday Mignon proved very attractive.

BIRMINGHAM.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs Rodgers, Limited; Manager, Mr J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr Henry Johnston. — The Fairy's Dilemma was received in precisely the spirit in which it is presented, namely the true Gilbertian spirit of topsy-turvydom. Thus the members of Messrs Dauncey and Leveaux's well-directed company find their "lines" cast in pleasant places this week. Miss Elise Cooke has proved a most captivating Fairy Rosebud, enchanting everyone with her arch ways. Mr C. Herbert Hewetson expounds the humours of the Demon Alcohol with excellent effect. Mr Charles V. France as Sir Trevor Mauleverer acts throughout in a capital manner. Mr Frank Stanmore as the reverend and much-embarrassed gentlemen, Aloysius Parfitt, M.A., is a constant support, and a never-ending source of merriment in others; and Miss Ada Homer as the Lady Angela, Miss Gertrude Hope as Clarissa, and Mr Frank Collins as Mr Justice Whortle are in complete accord with their parts. The Conversion of Nat Sturge has occupied the early portion of the menu, and in this Mr C. V. France, Miss Eva Turnour, Mr Frank Collins, and Mr Morris Harvey shine.

GRAND THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr J. W. Turner; Manager, Mr Victor Turner.—Madame Sherry possesses all the sparkle that good music, clever wit, and handsome stage decoration can afford, and its success here has been instant and unequivocal. Mr George Dance's company is engaged in the presentation, and Mr J. Robert Hale's well-known talents are employed to advantage as Andrew MacSherry. Miss Georgina Delmar as Catarina satisfies the exigencies of her exacting rôle to the utmost degree, Miss Lily Elsie acts and sings charmingly as Barbara, Miss Ada Binning shines as Susanne, and Miss Nellie Dade plays the part of Maud in rare low-comedy style. Mr F. W. Ford accentuates the character of Colonel MacSherry well, Mr Fred Walton adds to the diversion as Joseph, and Mr Ivan Berlyn presents a capital study of the Gendarme. The principals are allotted a number of excellent songs, which they render in the most telling manner, and the chorus is most adequate.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr Lester Collingwood.—The 10 30 Down Express is running successfully nightly, and enjoys a capital representation at the hands of Mr Horace Stanley and company. Mr Stanley is himself most successful and humorous as Sam Wagstaff, and derives much assistance from Miss Kate Kilpack, who shines as Peggy Potts. Miss Evelyn M. Walton as "the maiden of fifty," Letitia Leigh, is also a source of humour. Miss Adelaide Clare gives a sweet and sympathetic impersonation of Bessie Leigh. Miss Fanny Corbett as the abandoned woman, Olive Coombes, realises her part to the full. Mr Harry T. Wood acts the rôle of Jack O'Malley in a pleasant, breezy manner; Mr Scott Leighton as James Inderwick imparts distinction to the rôle; and Mr Fred C. Roper wins approval as Seth Coombes. The railway sensation proves most successful.

METROPOLE THEATRE. — Manager, Mr Walter Melville; Resident-Manager, Mr J. Hindle Taylor. — Her Forbidden Marriage has been the subject and cause of much interest and excitement this week, the downfall of vice and the vindication of virtue being attended with the utmost enthusiasm. The motor incident is stage-managed to the best advantage, while the Church scene is spoken of with bated breath, and the entire play smacks of the real. Mr Horace Hunter as that maligned hero, George Madison, is admired for his manly bearing; Miss Isla Garnet Vayne acts sympathetically as the heroine; Mr Clarence Hague plays his original part, Charles Devereux, with much ability; and Miss Doris Brookes as his fair accomplice in crime, Lady Lucretia, is likewise successful. Miss Emily Hughes acts finely as the Mother Superior; and Messrs J. A. Wilson, Chas. Carte, E. L. Hocking, Harry Elliston, Miss Marie Kildare, and Little Alice render valuable support.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Owner and Manager, Mr Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr Ben Sydney.—The Fatal Wedding once more presents itself under Mr Bert Coote's well-known direction. The company as at present constituted is eminently qualified, and a most successful representation is therefore gained. Miss Idi Valli continues her great success as the Little Mother; Miss Marie Houseley gains the suffrages of the house as Mabel Wilson; Mr Wilfred Payne is meritorious as Howard Wilson; Mr Leyton Cancellor makes much of the part of Robert Curtis; and Miss Beatrix De Burgh limns the characteristics of the villainess, Cora Williams, admirably. Mr Fred Dobell as Peter Schwartz is able and droll; Mr C. H. Kenny is successful as Toto; and Miss Harriet Clifton as Bridget is another source of diversion. The trained chorus is also in requisition.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr Charles Barnard; Manager, Mr Dan Barnard.—The Midnight Mail has won the appreciation of crowded houses nightly. Messrs Dottridge and Longden's company is concerned, and among those who lend distinction to their parts may be mentioned Mr George Harvard for his excellent acting as the heroic engine-driver, Harry Steyne, also Miss Ada Oakley for her sympathetic rendering of the part of Mary Steyne, Miss Millie Stevenson as Lady Phyllis Eustace, Mr Arthur Gilroy for his well-acted part of Hassan Padisha, Mr Alec Alves as Leonard Royle, Mr Chas. M'Cann as Donald Craig, Mr Fred G. Evison for a most diverting study of Billy Brewer, the drunken stoker, and Miss Mildred Carr as his help and support, Nancy Brewer. The scene of the Midnight Mail is most vividly presented, and evokes thunders of applause.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr A. W. Matcham.—Vesta Tilley, who is causing quite a furore here this week, twice nightly renders four songs, which are loudly applauded. Some amusing conjuring is presented by Silent Tate; the Mayvilles have a novel Lilliputian act; the St. James Quintette come in for a good share of applause; and other items in the long programme include Phillips and Terry, Selma Brantz, Frank Lynne, James Grant, Nellie Coleman, Dome, and Tatten Hall.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr Albert Bushell.—The diversified and well-arranged bill this week includes the Morton Trio, in their smart operetta The Dandy Bandits, which goes well. The popular comedian Harry Ford provides many opportunities for laughter, as also do Booker and Narbis and Clown Zertho with his dogs. The Lynches, song illustrators; Lily Flexmore, danseuse; Martha, lady gymnast; Eva Kelland, comedienne; and the Northern Troupe of speciality dancers are all worthy of special mention.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—Richard Sawade, with his marvellous animal act, is here for another week. An interesting event took place on Sunday, when a tigress belonging to the trainer gave birth to three cubs. Unfortunately one died. The Four Merkel Sisters present a clever gymnastic turn. Carola's Miniature Circus is more entertaining than ever. Percy Honri's concertina selections are of a high order of artistic merit. The De Breans, Phillips Brothers, Troba, the phenomenal juggler; and the Legay Quartet of Parisian dancers add to the success of the bill.

BORDESLEY PALACE.—Resident Manager, Mr Edw. Foster.—The melodramatic episode, Lord Harkaway, is proving a big draw here, the glove fight being watched with intense excitement. Life's Reverie is enacted by Vivian's vaudeville company; Ruth Lytton has some good character songs; the dancing of My Fancy is far above the average; Doody and Wright are as humorous as ever; Cecil Lidden and Elsie Hayward, in their musical travesty A Quiet Rehearsal, are most entertaining; and Paul Pelham and Hall and Earle also do well.

BLACKPOOL.

HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General Manager, Mr J. R. Huddlestone.—Glittering Gloria is again the attraction here, the company this time being under the direction of Messrs Charles Williams and Phillip Glyn. The important part of Colonel Pasgnall Gallegher finds a capable exponent in Mr J. Wordley Hulse, and Mr Houghton Macaulay causes much mirth as Zebedee Poskett. Messrs John Campbell as Jack James and Mr Stanley Arthur as Archie Toddleby ably fill their respective tasks; whilst Mr Gerald Clark finds a suitable part in Algernon Entwistle. Miss Stanley Ronalds sustains the title-role in the most charming manner, and Miss Lilian Williams plays Mrs Jack James and Miss Peggy Harrington Dorothy Kenworthy.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr T. Sergenson.—Mr Lawrence Brough and company are here this week with The Saucy Sally. Mr Brough's portrayal of Herbert Jocelyn is a meritorious performance, and Rosie Jocelyn receives the cleverest interpretation at the hands of Miss Kate Milford. Mr Harry Hampson makes a good Captain Jocelyn, and Mr Percy Marshall sustains with credit the part of Jack Buncombe. Miss Eleanor Gilbert scores as Mrs Lambert, and other small parts are in efficient hands. The Lady of Ostend is also in the week's bill.

PALACE.—General Manager, Mr G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred Waller.—There are some very clever turns here this week, chief of which is the one supplied by the mysterious Lilith, who gives an extraordinary performance in mid-air without any visible support. Vasco, the mad musician, repeats his clever musical show, and Lilian Warren's illustrated songs, are also well received. Stella Stanley is an acceptable comedienne; Fred Harcourt is a wonderful magician; George D'Albert is a versatile comedian; and Barton and Ashley are clever sketch artists, all of whom win approval from the audience. Onda and Leon, bar performers, also give a capital turn. Sam Mayo and Fred Terrey are clever comedians.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Signor Pepi and company; Manager, Mr T. P. Dulgnan.—The Eugeno Family of aerial gymnasts head a big programme here this week. The Arthur Lloyd Trio give a pleasing drawing-room entertainment, and Johnson and Bert contribute an amusing sketch. Clive Watts, raconteur and dancer; Chas. Somers, comedian; Sisters Clive, vocalists; Charles Serra equilibrist; Fox and Melville, vocalists; and Ivy Dawn, vocalist, are also in the bill.

BOLTON.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIMITED.—Managing-Director, Mr J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr Charles Hermann.—Mr George Dance's company opened here on Monday with the first visit to Bolton of The Girl from Kay's. Miss Lillie Lingard, who has a fine stage presence, gave a thoroughly good impersonation of Winnie Harborough, her singing being much appreciated. Miss May Marton as Norah Chalmers gave full effect to her songs, and in the duet "Semi-Detached" with Mr Garnett Wilson (Harry Gordon) gained much applause. The drolleries of Mr Johnnie Schofield as Hoggenheimer kept the house in continual laughter; Mr Tom Shelford created much fun as the Hon. Percy Fitzthistle; and Mr Charles Gould was good as Joseph, the hall porter.

BOSCOMBE.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr F. Mouillot; Manager, Mr Rowland Stewart.—A welcome change after a series of melodramas is the visit paid here this week by Mr Frank Wilson's company in The Marriage of Kitty. Mr Wilson takes the rôle of Sir Reginald Belsize in good style, and is successful in giving to it the requisite tinge of self-complacency. Mr Sidney Orton is excellent as John Travers, the solicitor, and Mr J. F. Leighton contrives to raise many a hearty laugh with his capital impersonation of Norbury. The rôle of Madame De Semiano finds a thoroughly capable exponent in Miss Kate Harwood, and Miss Vera Fordyce's rendering of Miss Katherine Silverton, besides being aided with considerable charm of manner, often gives evidence of real ability. The general management is in the hands of Mr Whalley Shields.

BRADFORD.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr John Hart; General Manager, Mr T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Richardson.—The large audience which assembled here on Monday, and the applause which greeted My Lady Molly, furnished ample proof of the continued popularity of the comic opera. Mr Frederick Mouillot's company is an excellent one, and a largely augmented orchestra and full chorus, under the direction of Mr W. D. J. Damant, give full effect to Mr Sidney Jones's concerted music. There is plenty of dash in Miss Beatrice Edwards's assumption of Lady Molly Martingale, and Miss Decima Moore is charmingly coquettish and graceful as Alice Coverdale. As Hester Miss Lottie Crawford is excellent. There is a delightful humour in Mr John T. M'Callum's impersonation of Mickey O'Dowd, and the Captain Harry Romney of Mr Harry T. Davies, the Lionel Bland of Mr Ernest Mozar, and the Sir Miles Coverdale of Mr Augustus Cramer are other impersonations which merit special recognition. The opera is beautifully staged.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr Francis Laidler.—We are having a return visit here this week from The King of Crime, and the powerful drama, which is again capitally represented by Messrs Dottridge and Longden's capable company, is commanding large audiences. Mr William Clayton is the desperado Captain Hercules, a striking figure vigorously portrayed; and Miss Marion Turner wins appreciation and sympathy as his blind wife, Henriette. Mr W. H. Porter is distinctly effective in the part of Simon. The Old Hag is a clever character impersonation on the part of Miss Ada King. Manly vigour marks Mr Herbert Evelyn's acting as the hero Louis Mascarot. Mr Val W. Gully as Toto and Miss E. Turner-Elliott as Matilda contribute to the interest, and Mr Walter Dale as the professor of mesmerism introduces a rich vein of comedy. The scenic effects are excellent.
